

The Calcutta Monthly Journal

Sas.
Librarian

Uttarpara Joykrishna Public Library
Govt. of West Bengal

THE CALCUTTA MONTHLY JOURNAL.

1839.

ASIATIC NEWS.

THE FANCY BALL.

"There was a sound of revelry by night" on Thursday last at the Town Hall, and fancy and fantastic costumes were the order of the evening. At the commencement of the Ball the character dresses were very rare indeed, and the few who shone conspicuous in their spangled habiliments, were stared at like wild beasts by the surrounding crowd, but as the night advanced a sufficiently abundant variety of outré costumes made their appearance, and mimic specimens of every nation and country under the sun stalked to and fro, or treaded the mazes of the dance. We regret that it is not in our power to describe for the benefit of our Mofussil readers, each particular fancy dress whose rainbow colours dazzled our admiring gaze, and to explain with critical accuracy, the precise character which each was intended by its gratified wearer to represent. Unfortunately our knowledge of the science of costumology is somewhat limited, and we preferred remaining unenlightened in our ignorance to incurring the risk of insulting our acquaintances by proposing the blunt and homely question—"Pray who are you?" We can conceive nothing more mortifying, more harrowing to the feeling,—nothing, indeed, more calculated to cloud the most beaming and radiant countenance, than the unfeeling announcement to the complacent wearer of some gorgeous and complicated garment, (the design and manufacture whereof hath cost him hours of anxious study), that the whole thing is, to every one except himself, an unintelligible mystery, which nothing but a label on his back could satisfactorily explain! Now it may be that our impressions are altogether erroneous, and that they result entirely from our deplorable ignorance of the whole subject;—but, nevertheless, we honestly confess that some of the dresses on the evening in question did appear to us to fall within the category of the nondescript or miscellaneous class. One while might ye have seen a spruce cavalier, whose gay look of curialed proportions, thrown obliquely over his shoulder, plainly indicated the Spanish Don, but whose lower drapery corresponded but indifferently with his superior adornments, and cast some doubt upon the question of his nationality:—anon, your attention might have been attracted by a striking figure, with moustachios somewhat longer than the beard of a he goat, whose robe affected the simple elegance of the Grecian costume, but whose legs were encased in something resembling Hessian boots, and whose head-piece might have done duty for a jockey's cap. But far be it from us to aver that there were not some dresses at once conspicuous for their elegance, and in admirable taste and keeping. The only Group which we observed was a Circassian Group, with costumes singularly handsome, if not perfectly appropriate and correct. This party consisted of Mesdames P——p, H——r——d D——w——d, and B——y, and Messieurs H——n, H——r——d and G——d——no. We were so much struck with the exceeding elegance and taste of the dresses of these Circassians and a Greek lady, that we were induced to enquire what priestess of Fashion had presided over their toilettes, and learnt that the Costumes were made by Madame Frederick, at heremporium of fashion—The Magazin de Modes. The only two whom we observed attempting to art the character which they assumed, were an itinerant pedlar, who looked and acted vulgarly à merveille, and an Irish gipsy or crone, who made a faint attempt to tell fortunes, but whose non national modesty stood very much in the way. Mr. W——y appeared in a very quaint dress as Gil Blas, and Mr. B——t——t, we believe, figured in a second edition of the same, differently bound. The three Mesdemoiselles S——h——e, attracted attention in very becoming Albanian costumes, and the Misses D——, appeared in the simple but pretty dress of "Scottish lassies." Mr. B——v——y looked majestically solemn in the sombre but imposing habiliments of the "Master of Ravenswood." Mr. and Mrs. H. M. P——r wore superb dresses of the French Count in Louis Quatorze's day. There was a gentleman too (initials unknown) very appropriately bedizened, with buckled shoes and powdered wig, as an English gentleman of the olden time. Mrs. I——p——t wore a very graceful Greek dress; and Mr. G——, we were fortunately informed, was intended to represent a Jain lady, though our own private impression had previously been, that he was a Chinese Mandarin. A Scotch reel was danced with great spirit by the Misses D——, in their costumes as Highland lassies, and the Messieurs C——p——lls in their braw tartan plaids. As soon as the sprightly reel was commenced, a rush was made to the spot by the whole population of the ample room, even like unto the rush (often fatal in its consequences) which invariably takes place whenever an unhappy skater is submerged through an aperture of the treacherous ice whereon he was previously displaying his graceful evolutions:—and we felt by no means certified that similar disastrous consequences might not ensue here when we beheld half a thousand gazing folk wedged together in a space about five yards square, when we called to mind too the "rotten beam" of the Town Hall, and when our troubled eye distinctly discerned the massy planks of the floor undulating beneath the ponderous superincumbent load! But no such mischance interrupted rudely the harmony of the evening;—all was merrily as a marriage ball." Perhaps the dresses were not quite so well "got up" as the Victoria Fancy Ball last year; but everybody and his wife seemed very well pleased with themselves and all the world, and the only troubled countenances which we beheld, were those of the fiddlers, whose wearied wrists had no cessation until cockcrow. The music was good and the ices were good, and the company separated not until the Cathedral clock tolled the hour of four.

Dulce est desipere in loco.—Hark, Jan. 12.

MR. LINTON'S CONCERT.

Indisposition, unfortunately, prevented us from having the pleasure of attending the performance of the Creation on Thursday night, at the Town Hall, for the benefit of our worthy organist, Mr. Linton. But we learn with exceeding satisfaction, from others more fortunate than ourselves, that it went off with the greatest spirit and effect; and what is of more solid importance on such an occasion, that it was extremely well attended, and, therefore, likely to prove of that class of benefits which are called remunerative, in contradistinction to those usually designated In situ benefits, after the way of a Belfast Actor, mentioned by the Historian Josephus Miller, who gained a loss on a like occasion.

Every body describes the Chorusses in the Creation as having been effective and powerful, beyond any thing we have been used to in Calcutta. A new Amateur Tenor of finest quality, is particularly spoken of, who, with Madame Ventura and Mr. Linton, ably sustained the beautiful Solo parts of the Oratorio. In the miscellaneous (second) Act, the Ryckmans are said to have surpassed themselves, and Madame Ventura's Recitative and air from Pacini, is described as the most finished morceau, in her Italian style, with which she has yet regaled the ears of our pensive public. We sincerely rejoice in the brilliant success which seems to have attended Mr. Linton's labours. We hope Delmar the younger will be encouraged to "try his luck" in the same line, during the ensuing month.—Hurkaru, January 21.

THE CALCUTTA MECHANIC'S INSTITUTION AND SCHOOL OF ARTS.

An institution under the above designation, is about to be established, and a provisional committee, consisting of the undermentioned gentlemen, has already been formed to carry into effect the preliminary measures towards the formation of the Society, viz. the Rev. Mr. T. Boaz, the Rev. Mr. W. Motion, the Rev. Mr. Thomson, and the Rev. Mr. Campbell, F. Corbryn, H. H. Spry, M. Crox, W. H. Perkins, W. Rushton, G. Grant, L. Woolleston, J. M. Vos, G. Grant, and J. Morris, Esquires. Wale Byrn, Esq., Secretary.

Three meetings of this provisional committee have been held at the Parental Academic Institution, at the last of which, held on Saturday, a prospectus, written by Mr. G. Grant, was read and approved. It set forth the usefulness and success of similar institutions in Europe, America, and other parts of the world, and the desirableness of establishing one in Calcutta, by which the value of mechanical science in a practical point of view, would be appreciated. It then entered into the state of moral and intellectual education among the East Indians, their attention being hitherto devoted almost exclusively to the pen, whilst Europe and America provided various other fields for the employment of their people. The prejudice which in this country exists against mechanical pursuits, was also noticed, and this institution, it was said, would tend to remedy these evils, which attempt was likely now to be crowned with success, in consequence of the interest which the East Indians had commenced to take in the subject. The objects of the institution were the instruction of mechanics in the principles of the arts they practice, the general diffusion of scientific and useful knowledge amongst the members of the institution, and by their influence amongst all classes of society. The means of carrying these objects into effect, were the establishment of lectureships on the different arts and sciences. Distinct classes for scientific communication, and arguing on the subjects of the lectures, or on given subjects, the formation of a library of reference and circulation, a reading-room, a museum of models, a school of design, and ultimately the establishment of an experimental work-shop and laboratory, provided with instruments and apparatus. The terms of admission are to be at as low a standard as possible, to suit all. The prospectus then enumerated the Sinners which should be appointed. The institution, although denominated the Mechanics, would not be exclusively confined to any distinct or separate body; it would be perfectly Catholic in its design and application—it would be neither partial nor limited. It would be open to all, and all desirous of acquiring knowledge, are invited to partake of the benefits offered with an equal hand.

A Sub-committee has likewise been appointed to draw up a code of rules for the Society, which, as well as the prospectus, is to be submitted for the consideration of a public meeting, intended to be convened at the Town Hall on some convenient day, to be hereafter fixed upon; when the Society will be formally instituted.

It has also been considered desirable, that in the infancy of the institution, a course of popular lectures on the following subjects, be commenced with, viz.,

1st—Introductory Lecture on the objects and advantages of Science, 2d—Practical Mechanics, 3d—Electricity, 4th—Steam Engine, 5th—Astronomy, 6th—Chemistry, 7th—Natural History, 8th—Geology, 9th—Physics.

Another Sub-committee has been formed for the purpose of obtaining the aid of gentlemen to deliver lectures, and we understand that the introductory, and some of the other lectures, will be open to all, without any charge of subscription, in order to enable the public to form a due estimate of the objects and character of the institution.—Hurkaru, Jan. 14.

EXAMINATION OF THE BORAL SEMINARY.

Our readers are not, perhaps, aware of the existence of an English School, at the village of Boral, a few miles from Colly Ghant. It was established about a couple of years ago, by some of the students of the Hindoo College. This seminary gives education to about 70 boys, and is supported by subscription, entirely raised amongst natives. On Saturday morning last, an examination of the pupils took place at the Bishop's palace. The proceedings of the day were conducted by his Lordship, the Archdeacon, the Revd. Mr. Allan the Revd. Mr. McQueen, and Rajah Kalikissen Bahadur. His Lordship expressed himself highly gratified that the native gentlemen, who founded and conducted it, took so much interest in the cause of education which will make those, who received the benefits of it, obedient to God and dutiful to man. The examination broke up at one o'clock p.m.—Hurkaru, January 21.

ADDRESS TO MR. ROSS.

To the Hon'ble A. Ross, Esq., &c. &c. &c.

Sir—On the occasion of your departure from India, the Chamber of Commerce desires to convey to you the expression of the respect for your official conduct, which it so strongly feels.

It would be beyond its province, to enter into the merits of your Government in its political relations, however cordially it concurs in the high estimate, entertained thereof by the community; but in regard to the commercial relations, of which the Chamber may, without arrogance, be permitted to speak, it bears a warm and a grateful testimony to the wisdom and vigor of your administration.

You, Sir, have invariably accorded immediate attention to every suggestion for the attainment of any public good, connected with this important branch of our local policy. Shrinkng from no official difficulty, where a general benefit was to be effected, showing indulgence to no abuse, however ancient its standing, or high the quarter where it may have been found to exist; measures of improvements and redress of grievances following each other in rapid succession.

Industrious and unobtrusive, the possession of a distinguished station seemed with you to be held, less as an object of personal ambition, than submitted to, for the sake of the opportunity it afforded of doing extensive good, and the admiration, which was justly due to the Government, was even surpassed by esteem for the man.

There is one executive measure, to which the Chamber cannot refrain from advertng. When Lieutenant Governor of Agra, where men of less decision would have faltered, you seized the earliest moment boldly and judiciously to abolish the odious burden of the Transit Duties, an act of honest and enlightened policy, the beneficent precursor, if not the cause, of the prompt abandonment of the system at this Presidency.

Freed from these vexatious trammels, the trade of the country will now pursue its course with fresh energy, and we will long dwell with gratitude on the remembrance of one, who has accomplished so much to ensure its prosperity.

With our earnest wishes for a pleasant and speedy passage to your native land, I have the honor to be,

(on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce,)

Sir, your most obedient servant,

K. R. MACKENZIE, President.

To K. R. MACKENZIE, Esq.,

President of the Chamber of Commerce
Calcutta.

Sir,—I cannot but feel much gratified by receiving, before my departure from India, the expression, which you have conveyed to me, of the favorable opinion of my official conduct entertained by so independent and so intelligent a body of Merchants, as that of which you are the President.

I have long been of opinion, that an increasing commerce and intercourse with foreign countries, is necessary to the improvement of the condition of the people of India; and that, without such intercourse and the knowledge which it is calculated to diffuse amongst them, the best efforts to promote their civilization, will be but slow in operation.

Holding this opinion, I have availed myself of every opportunity I have had, to advance the interests of the productive and mercantile classes, and it is satisfactory to me to know, that my endeavours have been approved by a body, so competent to appreciate them as the Chamber of Commerce.

The terms in which the Chamber has adverted to the part which I took in the abolition of the Transit Duties, and the testimony which it has borne to the good policy of that measure, are particularly gratifying to me. Convinced as I was of the very pernicious effect of those duties, not only upon the trade, but also upon the agriculture of the country, I should have ill performed my duty, when the Government of Agra devolved upon me, had I not abolished them in that Presidency, by removing the Inland Custom Houses to the frontier of our Territories. I rejoice that the measure caused not only the immediate abolition of the same pernicious duties in the Bengal Presidency, but the abandonment also of the equally pernicious system of Town Duties throughout the Provinces, both of Bengal and of Agra; and I earnestly hope, that the same full measure of relief will soon be extended to the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay.

I shall continue to feel a deep interest in the commerce of India, and it will always give me pleasure to learn, that it is flourishing. With my cordial wishes for the prosperity and happiness of yourself and of other members of the Chamber,

I am, Sir, your most obdt. servant,

(Signed)

A. Ross.

Calcutta, January 17, 1839.

[Hunt., Jan. 25.]

BOMBAY LAUDABLE SOCIETY.

A general meeting of the subscribers to the second Bombay Laudable Society, was held yesterday, at the office of the Secretaries, when it was determined to establish a third Laudable Society, to commence on the 1st January, in succession to the present one about to close on 31st instant. It was agreed to adopt the Regulations of the second Society, with some modifications, the most important of which are the reduction of the maximum number of shares that can be held on any life from six to four, and the increase of the amount to be carried in the third to credit of the fourth Society, from ten to twelve per cent. on the amount of Subscriptions received during the term of the Society.—A final dividend of the fund of the present society, is to be declared payable on the 20th February 1839. The following gentlemen were unanimously elected Directors of the Third Society:—Messrs. Lewis Grant, F. M. Davidson, J. G. Frith, R. Smith, and T. W. Henderson. A proposition was submitted from one of the Subscribers, suggesting a reduction in the rates of Subscription, but it was not deemed advisable by the meeting to make any alteration.

The present value of a share in the Society, about to close, after carrying Rs. 31,677 to the credit of the next one, is about Rs. 7,470, subject, however, to any variation that may take place in the price of Government securities when the accounts are finally made up, and also to be reduced by any lapse of lives subscribed on, that may occur before midnight of 31st instant, and which shall be ascertained before the 15th February next. Those ascertained after that date are at the risk of the next or third Laudable Society.

On the whole, the affairs of the Society are in a flourishing state, and the principles on which it was established, have now been satisfactorily tested by the experience of ten years. The value of a lapsed share on the winding up of the affairs of the First Society, was Rs. 7460, but in that case only Rs. 990, were transferred from it to the credit of the second, while the amount transferred from the present to the succeeding society, amounts, as has been already stated, to Rs. 31,677.—Bombay Times, Dec. 22.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND MEETING.

A meeting of the Civil Service Annuity Fund was held yesterday, at the Town Hall, and was very fully attended, JAMES PATTIE, Esq., in the Chair. The chairman read the requisition for convening the Meeting, as advertised in the newspapers; the accounts were passed; and the Managers of the past year were re-elected, but in place of Messrs. T. H. Maddock and Pierce Taylor, who are absent from the Presidency. Messrs. John Trotter and J. H. Young, were elected.

The business of the General Meeting being now concluded, it was made Special, for the purpose of considering the propriety of memorializing the Court of Directors, that "the indulgence of retiring upon reduced Annuities now granted to Subscribers, who have been more than ten and upwards of fifteen years in the country, upon certified inability from ill health to remain here, may be extended to all subscribers of that period of actual residence respectively who may wish, from whatever cause, to retire." The Chairman read the proposition of the eleven subscribers; after which Ross D. Mangles, Esq., rose and directed the attention of the Meeting to the rough draft of a memorial he held in his hand, which he would read to them. After which it was proposed by him, seconded by C. Tucker, Esq., that the principle of the requisition be approved by this Meeting, and that a Committee be appointed to draw up a memorial thereon to the Honorable Court.

Aber. Dick, Esq., strongly opposed the proposition of the eleven subscribers for memorializing the Honorable Court, on the grounds that it would be of no benefit to the Service, and decidedly injurious to the interests of the public. He therefore proposed, as an amendment to the above, seconded by F. C. Smith, Esq.—That the proposition before the Meeting be at once rejected.—This amendment was lost by a small majority.

H. M. Parker, Esq., also addressed the Meeting to the same effect, opposing Mr. Mangles's proposition.

A second Amendment was then moved by J. A. Donn, Esq., seconded by—Ciacroft, Esq., and lost by a majority of one.—That before forwarding any further representations to the Honorable Court of Directors, we respectfully ask for replies to those which have already been submitted to them.

J. Trotter, Esq., proposed another Amendment, which not being seconded, was not put.

H. M. Parker, Esq., then put the following proposition, seconded by D. Pringle, Esq., which was lost by a majority of one again:—That a Committee be nominated to determine whether the present proposition is compatible with the prayer of the Memorial addressed to the Honorable the Court of Directors on the 7th April, 1838.

The original motion of R. D. Mangles, Esq., was then again put by the Chairman, but lost, it not having the requisite three-fourths of votes in its favor, as prescribed by the rules.

Ross D. Mangles, Esq., then proposed, seconded by J. H. Young, Esq.—That the question of the Requisitionists be referred to the Service at large. This proposition was lost, by the same rule as the preceding.

Thanks were then voted to the Chair and the Meeting dissolved.—Calcutta Courier, January 2.

THE REGATTA.

The Regatta last night came off with considerable eclat. The evening was good, and both amateurs and jacks did their best.

The "Mary Ann Snooks" (such a vulgar looking wench we have not seen since the morning we embarked from the piscatory emporium of Great Britain, some quarter of a century ago) won the first race, closely followed by the "Viceroy," the exertion of whose crew (part of whom were amateurs) were highly credible, and as they pulled the race under the impression that they were far overmatched, their good humour was highly commendable.

The "Grand Turk" and "Cutty Sark" were well matched, the one a six oared Gig, the other a six oared whale boat, they came in very close together, the former winning by a few lengths, and the time good.

The 2d Race was well contested, and was won by "Louth," followed closely by "Chow Chow," the "Melina" last. We consider the "Melina" was no match for the "Louth," which looked more like a gig than a cutter, and indeed the knowing ones were at a loss to decide which she ought to be called. The "Cheerful" did not make her appearance.

The 3d Race was won by "Dusty Bob," a worthy companion of Mrs. Snooks, heading Jack by two or three lengths only. The "London" and "Weather Bell" followed at about half a cable's length.

The 4th Race between "Greenwich Pensioner" and "Black Diamond," was excellent, the former winning by three lengths only. The veteran would have beaten the "Diamond" farther, had not his propensity for grog tempted him to grasp at the bottle of strong waters which was suspended from the Madagascar's jib boom.

The old gentleman pulled at it hard, but, alas it was too well secured, and after stopping the boat and unslipping his hat and wig, and being nearly dragged over-board, "Black Diamond" was so close to him, that he was reluctantly compelled to let it go or loose the race.

As soon as the Race was won, he returned to look for the dear bottle, but, alas, it was gone, and the Racers had dipped deeply into its contents.

The 5th Race was pulled by four dingies for the prize of a new dingy, upon an improved plan, to be given by the Club, the Richmond's dingy winning by three feet. The London's, however, disputes the point on the score of foul play having been committed by the former in not rounding the station boats. This has yet to be decided.

The 6th class was a public challenge by "Jubberdustee" to the winning boat of the first class, viz. the "Mary Ann Snooks," which was won by the latter in prime style—two of the "Water Lilies" crew volunteered their assistance in pulling her.—Hurkaru, January 3.

MEETING OF THE OCEAN MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY.

The Meeting of the Ocean Marine Insurance Company, was held this morning at the office of Messrs. Bruce, Seward and Co., and was very respectably attended. Mr. Kelall, in the chair. The accounts of the Company for the past six months were approved and passed as satisfactory. The following is an abstract:

Amount of Premiums,.....	Rs. 1,15,445 8 10
• Deduct,—Charges, &c.....	19,998 4 9
	<hr/> 95,447 4 1
Deposits,.....	50,000 0 0
	<hr/> 1,45,447 4 2
Assets of the Office.....	1,45,447 4 2
Loss on account of "Duke of Northumberland" wrecked at the Cape.....	37,300 0 0
Charges,.....	13,545 2 6
	<hr/> 50,845 2 6

Risk outstanding.....	31,48,730 4 7
Premiums thereon.....	80,037 15 7
Leaving the Office below par.....	15,437 9 3

It is moved by Capt. Vint, and seconded by Mr Patrick, that further leave be given for the deposits not paid until next account day. Interest at 8 per cent. to be charged to the date of payment.

The Committee were then thanked for their past services and requested to continue them for another six months. Agents were appointed at Colombo and Liverpool. Thanks were voted to the chair and the meeting separated.

Great indignation was expressed by the members present at the meeting, at the lubberly manner in which the Captain of the "Duke of Northumberland" had run his ship on shore some time ago, at the Cape: this office had a considerable risk on the vessel, and the unfortunate occurrence of the wreck now prevented the office making its usual half yearly dividend at the present time. The ship, the Northumberland, has been a great loss to three or four Insurance offices in this city, and we trust due enquiry will be made into the conduct of the Captain on his arrival in England, with respect to the wreck. Calcutta Courier, Jan. 5.

CALCUTTA BIBLE ASSOCIATION.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Calcutta Bible Association, was held at the Town Hall on last Friday night, when the Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry presided. After the report, containing a very interesting detail of the extent to which the scriptures and portions of the scriptures were distributed during the year, amounting to 50,000, had been read by the Secretary, the following resolutions were put and carried.

Moved by the Rev. Mr. Boyer, seconded by J. W. Alexander, Esq., "That the report which has been read be received, and that it be circulated in the hope that it may be instrumental in exciting among the Christians of this presidency, earnest endeavours to communicate the volume of divine inspiration to all such individuals as may be found desirous of reading the same.

Moved by the Rev. Mr. Piffard, and seconded by the Rev. Krishna Mohon Banerjee. That this meeting desires to record its thankfulness to Almighty God in having enabled the Association to proceed thus far in its labours, and would be encouraged to persevere in diffusing the holy scriptures among the various classes of the population in this city and its vicinity.

The Rev. Banerjee, in seconding this resolution, dwelt on the utility of the institution, and in support of his position, related the following anecdote as an example that the dissemination of the word of God in the mode pursued by the Bible Society is calculated to lead to serious reflection, at once remarkable and when least expected. While on a visit to one of his friends a native came up to the Rev. Gentleman with two books in his hand, which, from the impoverished and ignorant appearance of the man, he concluded were for sale. But to his utter surprise these books proved to be, one the acts of the Apostles and the other one, of the Gospels, about which the poor man had come for instructions; and in the course of conversation evinced a great deal of well arranged reflections on the doctrine of redemption.

The Rev. Banerjee of course most readily cordially satisfied this thirsty soul and concluded his speech by remarking, that through the Calcutta Bible Society, even a poor despised coolie was brought to sober thought.

Moved by the Rev. Mr. Boaz, seconded by Col. Powney, that this meeting feeling that all its labours, unaccompanied by the divine blessing, will be totally unavailing to promote the extension of the Redeemer's Kingdom, earnestly entreats the prayer of their fellow Christians that the influence of the Holy spirit may descend and cause the sacred scriptures which have been or may be hereafter disseminated by this and every kindred institution, to be instrumental in opening the minds of all such individuals as received them, to attend to the things which belong to their everlasting peace.

The Rev. Mr. Boaz, delivered himself with his wonted energy and aptness of expressions, and among other points, dwelt with considerable emphasis on the causes that retard in some measure, the success in the dissemination of the scriptures, the chief of which he enumerated to be over much anxiety on the part of Christians; a comparative disregard to preserving in prayer, &c. want of entire reliance on Him who has promised and will perform.

Moved by W. Byrn, Esq., seconded by the Rev. Mr. Piffard, That the following gentleman be the Committee and office bearers for the ensuing year.

President, Venerable Archdeacon—Vice President, the Committee of the Calcutta Auxiliary Bible Society. Committee—Geo. Alexander Esq.; Rev. C. C. Arathoon; A. Balston, Esq.; Rev. Krishna Mohon Banerjee; J. T. D. Cameron, Esq.; W. Byrn, Esq.; Revd J. Campbell; J. F. Hawkins, Esq.; G. Henwood, Esq.; R. S. Humphrey, Esq.; P. Lindeeman, Esq.; C. Kerr, Esq.; D. W. Madge Esq.; J. Richardson, Esq.; W. H. Perkins, Esq.; M. Deltozani, Esq.; T. W. Smyth, Esq.; W. Ryland Esq.; H. Woollaston, Esq.; and Revd. T. Boaz.

Bible Secretary,..... Revd. T. Sandys.
Cash Ditto,..... J. M. Voss, Esq.
Minute Ditto,..... Rev. R. Boyer.

Moved by the Rev. T. Sandys, seconded by the Rev. Mr. Boyer, That the thank of the meeting be presented to the Chairman for kindly presiding on the occasion.

A hymn was then sung, while a collection, at the special recommendation of the Revd. Sandys, was made, after which the meeting broke up.—Hurk. Jan. 7.

UNION BANK.

The General Half Yearly Meeting of Proprietors was held this day at the Union Bank, for the inspection of accounts and transaction of general business, and was numerously attended.

R. WALKER, Esq., was requested to take CHAIR.

The acting Secretary having read the following Report of the Bank's transactions for the Half Year, ending 31st December, 1838.

REPORT

By the Acting Secretary, of the transactions of the Union Bank for the Half Year, from 1st July to 31st Dec. 1838.

I have to congratulate the Proprietors, on the prosperity which continues to attend the transactions of the Bank. The Accounts on the table, consisting of the Trustees' account Balance sheet, and statement of Profit and loss, exhibit a full and satisfactory view of its operations, for the last Half Year. However, although during that period, a large business has been done, yet, in consequence of the necessary reductions made in the rates of discount, and the division of profits over a doubled number of Shares, the dividend is less than it has been for several preceding years.

The next amount of profit realized for that period is..... Co's Rs. 3,21, 990 14 7
And the undivided Surplus of the previous half year, 22,613 12 9

Give Co's Rs. 3,44,604 11 4

which divided on a paid up capital of Co.'s rs. 71,32,676 affords a dividend of ten per cent. (which is the same rate now paying by the Bank of Bengal) leaving a reserved Fund of Co.'s Rs. 31,902-1-0. Eleven per cent. might now be divided, leaving a small surplus of Rs. 631; but the Directors recommended a dividend of ten per cent. or fifty (50) Co.'s Rs. per share, to be made at present.

The whole of the augmented capital of January 1838, has been taken up; and of the forty lacks declared in July last, little more than eight lacks remain unpaid; which amount is applicable principally to distant Proprietors, who have been allowed sufficient time for completing their contributions.

A considerable increase has taken place in the number of Proprietors who now amount to four hundred and ten.

It is satisfactory to observe, that the circulation of the notes of the Bank, has become more extended; the highest amount during the last half year being 6,98,884 and the lowest 3,00,192.

The Directors have appointed Mr. G. S. Dick to the Office of the Bank's Agent at Mirzapore, and will forthwith make the necessary arrangements for his proceeding thither.

JOHN STONM, Acting Secretary U. Bank,

15th January, 1839.

The following Resolutions were unanimously passed:—

Moved by Mr. Vint, and seconded by Mr. Shaw,—That the secretary's Report just read, be approved and published.

Moved by Mr. A. F. Smith, and seconded by Mr. Treberk,—That the accounts now submitted are approved and passed by this Meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly.

Moved by Mr. J. W. Cragge, and seconded by Mr. K. R. Mackenzie,—That a Half Yearly dividend at the rate of Ten per cent., or Co.'s Rs. 50 per share, be now declared.

Moved by Mr. H. M. Parker, and seconded by Mr. F. Dickens,—That the Resolution to divide Ten per cent., be reconsidered by this Meeting.

When Mr. Bagshaw moved, seconded by Mr. J. W. Cragge,—That the original Resolution to divide ten per cent., should stand; to which Mr. H. M. Parker moved the following amendment, which was seconded by Mr. T. Dickens—That the dividend be eleven per cent. This was carried by a large majority.

The Meeting was then made Special for the purpose considering certain alterations in the Bank Deed, proposed by the Directors, and also for the purpose of submitting for confirmation the new rules regarding the Shares and Dividends of Proprietors in England, &c.

The Chairman read the new Rules regarding the Shares and Dividends of Proprietors in England, approved of at the special General Meeting of 15th December, when it was moved by Colonel Young, and seconded by Mr. Parker,—That the same be confirmed.

Moved by Colonel Young, and seconded by Mr. Bagshaw,—That the proposed alterations in the deed be printed, and that a Meeting be called specially for the purpose of considering the same.

Thanks were voted to the Chairman and the Meeting separated.—Hark. Jan. 16.

MEETING OF THE CATHOLICS.

Yesterday morning, a public meeting of Catholics was held at the rooms of the Calcutta Catholic Free School, on the premises attached to the Church of N. S. D'Rosario, for the election of Wardens. Agreeably to the decretal order of the Supreme Court, a committee of 40 parishioners had been previously elected, who selected twelve qualified persons as candidates for the Office of Wardens in succession to Messrs. W. R. Lackeisteen and J. Heberlet, who go out of office in rotation, and it was to select two out of these twelve candidates, that the meeting of yesterday morning was held. It was very thinly attended. At half after eight, being half an hour later than the appointed time, the Reverend Vicar of the Church took the chair, and proceeded to the business of the day, by reading the notice which had been posted on the Church doors, calling the meeting. The names of the twelve candidates were then read by Mr. Heberlet, and the voting commenced immediately, the result of which was the election of Messrs. M. Crow and T. Gregory, to the office of Wardens.

The Revd. Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to the outgoing wardens, and observed, that although few had attended to join him in performing that duty towards those gentlemen for their disinterested labours, they would reap the full reward of their meritorious exertions in the world to come.

Mr. Crow, in rising to second the resolution, observed, that the meritorious labours of Messrs. Lackeisteen and Heberlet for the two past years, would not only be rewarded in heaven, where every good act meets its desert; but that the Catholic community, whom these gentlemen had faithfully served, fully appreciated the value of their disinterested labours, and all, whether present or absent, would, he had no doubt, join him in tendering to them their thanks. The smallness of the number of those who attended this meeting, Mr. Crow thought, arose in a great measure from the confidence which the community at large had in the management of those who were at the helm of affairs. He recollected very large crowded meetings on former similar occasions, when the peace of this Church was distracted by contenting factions. The times, he was happy to say, had since changed, and the quiet untroubled manner in which the current of business now flowed, was a proof of the confidence which the people had in their representatives and public office bearers. He, therefore, thought, that the gentlemen to whom thanks were about to be voted, might feel assured, that notwithstanding the smallness of the meeting, the whole community would unite in the compliment to them. The resolution was then carried unanimously.

Mr. Crow would detain the meeting with a few further remarks, which he thought it necessary to make on this occasion. He accepted the office of warden, with thankfulness for the good opinion which the Catholic community entertained of him and of his labours in that capacity, during the period he had before had the honor of holding office, and which was owing by his election, a second time to the same office. Ever since he had taken a part in the public affairs of the Catholic community, which was some seven years since, he had looked upon this Church, as the only one that could be properly considered the Church of the people. This was the only Church in which officers were elected by popular suffrage, and therefore the only one which could be properly called the property of the Catholic community of Calcutta. Under this conviction, he had with pleasure joined those who petitioned the Holy See for British pastors, and had had the satisfaction of living to see them sent out to this country, with Dr. St. Leger at their head, to whom the community owed the quashing of their discord, and the removal of other scandals. He had, under the same conviction, adhered to the interests of this church, and had endeavoured, during his past wardenship, to carry into effect such measures of reform as he thought conducive to the decency of public worship, and to the removal of scandals which had previously existed. He had been, he was aware, censured by some few for his measures of reform; but he had acted under the conviction that he was doing good, and his present election afforded him a satisfactory demonstration that his former labours were appreciated by the community. He was sorry that Mr. Gregory, who stood in the same position as himself, was not present, to participate in the sentiments he had expressed; and he likewise felt it his duty to observe, that he firmly believed that Mr. John Lackeirsteen, who had been his colleague in the wardenship, and who had, with distinguished zeal, given the lead in all matters of reform, had not on this occasion been neglected in preference to himself, only because that gentleman had decidedly declined to accept the office. He would now conclude; but not without again endeavouring to impress upon the mind of his hearers, and through them on the minds of those who were absent, the fact that this was the only church which the people can call their own, that this their own church, stood in need of their zealous support, and that it was to be hoped, that those whom they had put in office to represent them, and to conduct its affairs, would experience the support and co-operation of the whole community.

The Chairman expressed his concurrence in the sentiments of Mr. Crow, observing, that he (the Chairman) had not heard any person complain of anything done by Mr. Crow, and that he believed it was the general opinion that whatever that gentleman had done, had been dictated by the best of motives and had produced much good.

The meeting then broke up. The installation of the Wardens elect, we believe, will take place next Sunday, during high mass.—Hurkaru, January 16.

ATLAS INSURANCE OFFICE.

Abstract from the statement of affairs of the Atlas Insurance Office for the past six months, as submitted to the meeting of Proprietors this 23d January, 1839.

Amount of premiums realized from,
1st July to 31st Dec. 1838.. Co.'s Rs.	1,35,307 9 1
Interest on Government Securities, ..	5,999 7 3
Cash in Union Bank, 1st July, 1838..	4,490 8 9
Ditto in hands, ditto.....	1,671 11 2
	<hr/>
	1,47,469 4 3
Government Securities purchased..	49,306 0 6
Cash in Union Bank and in hands	6
31st December, 1838.....	13,760 5 5
In the hands of Agents.....	64,092 13 6
Paid return of premium, losses and averages, and all other charges,
&c. &c.....	20,310 0 10
	<hr/>
	1,47,469 4 3

ASSETS.

Invested in Government Securities..	2,97,378 4 7
Cash in the Union Bank, and in hand and notes, and bills unpaid to 31st
December 1838.....	25,864 14 7
Balance of Agent's accounts.....	2,14,274 2 2
	<hr/>
Co.'s Rs.	5,37,517 4 10

Amount to be reserved on Shareholders' deposit, acct. et.
Co.'s Rs.....	2,00,000 0 0
Amount of protested
Bills of Exchange doubtful of realization,.....	6,835 5 4
Secretaries' commission on premium realized from 1st July to 31st
December, 1838.....	8,859 14 3
Amount of outstanding risks amounting to 3,094, 122-7 4 and premiums
therein.....	80,913 11 0
	<hr/>
	2,93,608 14 7
Co.'s Rs.	2,43,908 6 3
Amount to be received for losses unpaid.....	1,00,000 10 0
Available surplus.....	1,05,821 11 7

Resolution 1st—That the several statements submitted by the Secretaries, be approved of and passed as correct and satisfactory.

Resolved 2d—That one lac of rupees be appropriated for a dividend, but the Secretaries not to divide the same until the safety of some current risks be ascertained.

Resolved 3d—That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Directors for their past services, and that they be requested to continue their services for the ensuing half year.

COCKENELL AND CO., Secretaries,
Calcutta, Jan'y 23, 1839. Atlas Insurance Office.
[Hurkaru, January 24.]

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

Report of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, have much pleasure in communicating to the subscribers and the public, that they have received very gratifying dispatches from Captain Barber. The papers of the Presidency have published a report of the proceedings of a public meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House on the 12th October 1838, Sir Robert Wilmot Horton in the chair, at which Lord William Bentinck, Mr. Timothy Curtis, the Governor of the Bank of England, Sir John Rea Reid, Mr. James McKillop and many other influential gentlemen attended, when a Committee was appointed to investigate certain propositions of Captain Barber as well as those of any other persons, having for their object the establishment of a Comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea.

Captain Barber has previously communicated to this committee the readiness which Sir Wilmot Horton had shown from the moment of his arrival in England to promote this great object, having immediately entered into communication with Captain Barber, with a view to take part in any proceedings which might seem calculated to have that effect.

It would appear that it was arranged with Sir Wilmot Horton, that a private meeting should take place with a view to measures being adopted to secure a full and efficient public one; but, on Captain Barber communicating to some of the leading gentlemen in the city of London, he found the feeling to be so general in favour of some measure being forthwith adopted, that, Sir Wilmot Horton not being in town, he took on himself the responsibility of converting the private into a public meeting; and although only two days' notice of such meeting was given, Captain Barber states that there were more than two hundred persons present. That result of the meeting fully bears Captain Barber's judgment out.

It does not appear to have been at all necessary to solicit attendance. Mr. Timothy Curtis himself voluntarily offered to move one of the Resolutions—and he, is chairman of the investigating Committee. That the Committee are determined to prove the whole question to the bottom, is sufficiently shown by the fact, that from the date of their appointment they had sat twice a week for six hours each day; and, Capt. Barber having forwarded to the Calcutta Committee reports of their proceedings during two days, taken by a short-hand writer, the Calcutta Committee are able to state that the investigation is of the most searching character. The two days' proceedings comprise Captain Barber's examination, and the questions and answers evince on the one hand a clearness and aptitude of enquiry which offered a sufficient warranty that whatever that Committee may recommend, will merit the support of all interested in establishing the desired communication; while on the other hand, the replies of Captain Barber denote a thorough knowledge of the whole subject and a devotion to the general interests of India.

Captain Barber's plans, estimates and arrangements are very full and complete; as, however, they were under the consideration of the London Committee, where they will most likely undergo some modification, if they should be received as the basis of a future Company, the Committee do not consider it to be necessary to cause their present publication here.

They cannot, however, refrain from declaring, that they evince, on the part of Captain Barber, a thorough knowledge of the subject, and are most creditable to his zeal and intelligence.

Captain Barber reports, that when he determined to have the public meeting, Lord William Bentinck was not in London, but hearing, on the day prior to the meeting, that His Lordship was expected to arrive that afternoon, Captain Barber wrote his Lordship, making known the intended meeting, and soliciting his Lordship's presence; and the Indian public will recognize in His Lordship so readily acceding to the request at such short notice, the continued redemption of his parting pledge.

Captain Barber further reports, that Lord William Bentinck laid before the committee, the correspondence which had passed between His Lordship and the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors, and that the reply of the latter was to the effect, that they declined His Lordship's proposal on the ground that "the measure in their hands had not yet had time to arrive at maturity."

Lord William Bentinck, however, has not forwarded copy of the reply, and the committee, therefore, can offer no remark on it. They have no doubt they will receive copy by the next mail. The Committee congratulate the Indian public on the present state of things. They, however, regret to see that influential parties are endeavouring to decry the communication by the Red Sea altogether, with reference to the late improvements in Ocean Steam Navigation.

The Committee have no hesitation in declaring, that the improvement in Steam Navigation developed in the rapid voyages of the Great Western, only confirm them in their conviction of the indispensable necessity for persevering in obtaining the establishment of the comprehensive scheme by way of the Red Sea; and they renew their pledge to their constituents and the Indian public, to leave nothing in their power undone to secure it.

It is, however, by no means the object of this Committee to impugn the value of a Steam Communication by the Cape of Good Hope. On the contrary, that by the Red Sea once established on the most comprehensive scale, they would readily, if so instructed by their constituents, collectively and individually promote that by the Cape. India needs both,—the first is at once the most important, because under every improvement in Steam Machinery it will still remain the shortest, and the most difficult of attainment; to it, therefore, should the undivided attention of India be directed until it is secured.

In conclusion, the Committee cannot close this report without recording their continued sense of the zeal and exertions of Lord William Bentinck. They have also much satisfaction in expressing the high estimation in which they hold the accession to the cause of Sir Robert Wilmot Horton and Mr. Timothy Curtis, the Governor of the Bank of England. They propose to communicate their thanks to those gentlemen as well as to Lord William Bentinck; and they trust the subscribers to the fund and petitions will not separate at the forthcoming meeting, without a similar expression of thanks to them as well as to Captain Barber, to whose well directed judgment it is owing, that the cause has been at length taken up at home as it ought to be.

The Committee repeat their earnest request, for a full attendance at the forthcoming Half Yearly Meeting, to be held on the 18th proximo.

By order, &c.

CHARLES B. GREENLAW.

Secy to the New Bengal Steam Fund.

Hurkaru, January 28.]

THE NEW LAUDABLE SOCIETY.

A general meeting of the New Laudable Society was held on Saturday morning, Mr. T. Dickens in the chair. The following resolutions were offered to the Meeting.

Proposed by Ed. Harding, Esq., seconded by Capt. Forbes.—That the accounts and statements for the last half-year now submitted, be passed as correct and satisfactory.—Carried.

Proposed by W. Bruce, Esq., seconded by J. Cochrane, Esq.—That the Secretary be directed to publish an abstract of the funds and accounts of the Society now laid before the meeting for the information of Subscribers.—Carried.

Proposed by Alex. Grant, Esq., seconded by W. Bruce Esq.—That Mr. R. H. Cockerell be appointed Director to the Society in the room of Mr. W. Martin resigned.—Carried.

Proposed by O. B. Greenlaw, Esq., seconded by W. Bruce, Esq.—That H. J. Leighton, Esq., be appointed Director to the Society in the room of Mr. Horoyd resigned.—Carried.

Proposed by G. J. Gordon, Esq., and seconded Wm. Smalley, Esq.—That the remaining Directors be requested to continue their services for the ensuing six months, viz. W. Bruce, C. B. Greenlaw, Capt. W. N. Forbes, W. G. Smith, Rustomjee Cowasjee, W. J.

Twentyman, Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore and J. Cochrane.—Carried.

The ordinary business of the General Meeting having been concluded, the special matters were then taken into consideration.

Mr. Greenlaw moved the following resolution.

Proposed by C. B. Greenlaw, Esq., seconded by J. Cochrane, Esq.—That the propositions of Mr. Greenlaw, for remodelling the new Calcutta Laudable Society, which have been circulated to every individual shareholder in India be adopted.

Mr. Gordon agreed to the general principles of Mr. Greenlaw's proposition, but objected to several parts of the new rules, and proposed, as an amendment, that the several propositions be considered separately, which amendment was negatived by a shew of hands.

Mr. Greenlaw's original motion was then put, when the members voting on either side being equal, two scrutineers, Messrs. Cochrane and Harding, were appointed to take the votes of the members present and ex proxies.

The result was 138 votes in favour of Mr. Greenlaw's propositions, and 114 against it, majority 24, the total votes 252, being 10 over the 2-3rds of the Society required to pass the propositions. —Hark, Jan. 28.

FREE SCHOOL REPORT.

PRESENT.—Rev. H. Fisher, and H. T. Fisher, D. M. Farlan, Esq., Major Henderson, Capt. Birch, F. Corbyn, Esq., Captain Vint, C. K. Robison, Esq., A. H. Sim, Esq., Dr. J. G. Voss, W. Byrn, Esq., and Messrs. C. F. Byrn, P. Sutherland, C. I. Sutherland, A. Aldwell, D. Barons, C. Gould, N. Cheek and D. Clark.

The Rev. H. Fisher was elected chairman.

After the report had been read of the last year's proceedings, C. K. Robison, Esq., moved, that the report now read be approved and adopted, and printed for general information.

Captain Vint seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

The meeting then proceeded to appoint the governors for the present year, and Dr. F. Corbyn and Wale Byrn, Esq., were re-elected, and Messrs J. Hawkins, and C. K. Robison, were elected to fill the 2 existing vacancies.

Rev. H. J. Fisher then proposed, that in the event of any vacancy occurring during the year, the governors may be empowered to fill up their numbers for the time being, i. e. until the following general meeting; it having been remarked at the time, that this practice had existed until the close of the year 1833, when the general meeting in January 1834 voted against its further continuance, and that during the past year 2 directors had quitted the country. This motion was, therefore, suggested in order to make a proviso for any similar contingency in future; as last year it appears, that after the departure of the 2 governors of that year, their vacancies were not filled up, but that the other 2 governors acted solely.

After a slight discussion on the subject between Capt. Birch and Mr. McFarlan, by which it appeared that the measure now proposed was adopted in similar cases in the Military Fund, but not in the Military Orphan Fund, this motion was seconded by Captain Vint and carried.

Captain Vint then moved, that an application be respectfully made to the Court of Directors, through the proper authorities, to take into their favorable consideration the propriety of relieving this institution from the expenses connected with the Church attached to it.

Captain Vint remarked, that a similar resolution had been moved by him during the meeting of January 1838, for the application to be made to the Government here; this resolution had been carried unanimously, and the application submitted to the Government, who declined to comply with the request; therefore Capt. Vint now moved that it be submitted to the Court of Directors in London.

Dr. Corbyn seconded the motion, and it was carried.

Captain Vint then brought to the notice of the meeting, that he had, during the last meeting, noticed a nuisance which exists in the neighbourhood of the Free School, and Mr. McFarlan had seen the nuisance, and after investigating the matter, he informed Captain Vint that there were ample proofs of its being such; but he declined sending the matter up to the Supreme Court, unless some person became the prosecutor. Now Captain Vint opined, that it was the duty of the governors to see this nuisance removed, and if they did not soon take active measures to remove it, he, as a member to the institution, would move for another meeting of the members, and propose to them to remove the present governors for neglect of duty, and elect others in their stead.

Mr. C. K. Robison, in Mr. McFarlan's absence, replied, that no magistrate can prosecute for any nuisance unless a complaint is made before him, supported by the evidence of two witnesses of the existence of the nuisance; he then may send the case to be tried before a jury. If any person, Mr. Robison added, had in the above stated manner brought the matter before the Chief Magistrate, no doubt he would have taken effectual measures to have the nuisance removed.

After a slight conversation between Captain Vint and Mr. Robison, it was agreed that Dr. Corbyn would officially report to the meeting the existence of this nuisance, when Mr. Robison said, that he would make the necessary complaint before the magistrate of the division.

Captain Vint further remarked, that the Lottery Committee had made a road partially, but stop it near a piece of ground which is now in Mr. Dickens's hands. This ground Mr. Dickens had refused to give up to prolong the road, and thus partially remove the nuisance which is detrimental to the healthiness of the Free School and its neighbourhood.

Mr. Robison said, that if the Lottery Committee would advance the money, then the Magistrates could, if the opening of the road would remove a public nuisance, compel Mr. Dickens to sell the land at the assessed rate, but not otherwise.

The Free School Report.—The Free School has now existed for 49 years; during that period of time the institution has steadily kept in view the important objects which it was designed to accomplish. It has been an Asylum to the Orphans; it has nurtured up in the principles of Christian morality, those who would otherwise be subject to the pernicious influence of heathen vice; and it has implanted in the minds of many, who would most probably have for ever remained in gross ignorance, the elements of useful knowledge.

The above is the nature of the claims which the Free School of Calcutta, has upon the sympathy of the Christian public: these claims have been frequently urged through the medium of the periodical reports of the institution upon the attention of the public, and the appeal has, in times past, been answered in a manner which encourages the Governors of the Free School, again in presenting a report of the proceedings for the year 1838, to make fresh and renewed appeal in behalf of this, the oldest charity in Calcutta.

The Christian population of Calcutta is daily increasing, pauperism to a great extent exists, and in consequence the claims of the poor upon the charity, are daily accumulating. The off-spring of the destitute and the wretched, are continually presented to the Governors of the Free School as objects of compassionate assistance; but the means of the institution, narrowed and circumscribed as they have been by the falling off in the subscriptions, are barely sufficient to keep up the present strength of the establishment, much less to admit of that greater degree of usefulness, which more flourishing circumstances would enable the governors of the Free School to promote.

The Governors of the Free School trust, that a consideration of what the institution has done, of what it is still doing, and of what it can still further accomplish, will lead to such a measure of support as may strengthen their hands in the work of Christian benevolence in which they are engaged.

It is gratifying to report, that though the small pox ran through the school in the early part of the year, and almost all the children caught it, only three deaths occurred in consequence. These took place in the female department, and together with two amongst the boys, from cholera, and dysentery, all that happened in the course of the year. In other respects, the health of the children has been excellent on the whole, the average number of sick each day amounting to twelve, inclusive of small pox patients, and the greater portion of the others affected, being merely slight cases of eruption.

With regard to the progress made by the respective classes as far as the examination proceeded, the advance made by the children was found to be very satisfactory.

The Lord Bishop kindly presided at the last Christmas examination, and was assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Fisher, Parish, and Allan, Mr. D. McFarlan, Captain Birch, Mr. C. K. Robison and others.

It would prove highly gratifying to the governors of the Free School, to find the half-yearly examinations better attended than they usually are. The presence of the subscribers and of the public, would be taken as an indication of good feeling on behalf of the institution, and would be highly encouraging both to the teachers and the children.

In the last report mention was made of the necessity which existed for effecting the usual general repairs of the school premises. The governors have now to report, that that object is in the course of being effected. The execution of the repairs has been entrusted to Messrs. Sheriff and Co., whose estimate of the work amounts to Rs. 4,500. The governors have no doubt, that the repairs will be executed with due efficiency under the superintendence of the sub-committee. In this place the governors may mention, that the church was put in repair at the commencement of last year, and that the expences amount to 1,452 14, the great proportion of which amount was raised by a separate contribution for that purpose, by means of a sermon kindly preached by the Lord Bishop in the Free School Church. The sum collected on this occasion was 796 rupees.

The governors have for some time past, had under their consideration, a code of rules, specifying the duties and offices of the governors, visiting governors, and other office bearers of the institution; and bringing into one condensed view collated from the mass of the school records, the general principles and precedents which regulate the details and working of the institution.

The governors have only to express their hope in conclusion, that so valuable an institution may not be allowed to decline in usefulness for want of such aid in addition to its funds as it requires and deserves; but that with increased support from all who acknowledge its usefulness, and all capable of adding to its resources, it may, by God's blessing, prove more and more a means of imparting light and truth to the country in which it has been established.

Annual Abstract.

MALE DEPARTMENT.
	On the Foundation	Boarders.	Day Scholars.
			Total.
State of the School on the 1st January 1838.....	219	6	4
Admitted during 1838.....	69	2	4
Total.....	281	7	8
Stock off—Apprenticed by the Governors.....	17	—	—
Died in the Hospital.....	2	—	—
Withdrawn on application to the Governors.....	17	—	—
Absent, detained by their friends	15	—	—
Eloped.....	6	1	—
Transferred to the List of Boarders.....	—	—	2
Ditto ditto Day-Scholars.....	3	—	—
Total....	60	1	2
State of the School on the 1st January 1839.....	221	6	6
FEMALE DEPARTMENT.
	On the Foundation	Boarders.	Day Scholars.
			Total.
State of the School on the 1st January 1838.....	136	—	2
Admitted during.....	37	1	4
Total....	173	1	6
Stock off—Apprenticed.....	9	—	—
Died in Hospital.....	3	—	—
Withdrawn.....	15	—	—
Total....	27	—	—
State of the School in January 1839.....	146	1	6

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

The monthly Meeting of the Asiatic Society took place on Wednesday evening, the Lord Bishop presiding. The attendance was but thin, owing to the too attractive festivities of this merry month. The election of Office-bearers was first proceeded with, when the following gentlemen were chosen.

President.—Sir Edward Ryan.

Vice Presidents.—The Lord Bishop, Sir J. P. Grant, Colonel Macleod and Mr. H. T. Prinsep.

Committee of Papers.—Captain Forbes, Mr. Crocroft, Dr. Wallich, Mr. W. Grant, Drs. McClelland, Evans, Stewart, and Mr. David Hare.

The Secretary announced the arrival of a fine collection of the best French Works on Natural History, purchased for the Society from the proceeds of sale in Paris of their oriental publications. Among the volumes displayed, we noticed a splendid edition of Cuvier, the Dictionnaire des Sciences Naturelles; the works of Laireille, Lacepede, &c. &c. Several works on subjects of Antiquarian and Philological interest were also presented by Members of the Asiatic Society of Paris, and on the part of the American Academy of Philadelphia and other eminent institutions. Letters were read from Government, announcing that measures had been taken to protect the Black Pagoda of Kanarah from further demolition, and Mr. H. T. Prinsep announced a final contribution of 1000 rupees towards the Cochin Chinese and Latin Dictionary, just published by the R. O. Bishop of Bengal.

Dr. Goodeve and Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy were elected Members, and Mr. A. Porteous and Mr. J. Cowie, proposed for ballot at the next Meeting.

The Secretary communicated a letter from the Pundit Madhusadana Gupto, respecting the illustrations required for the Sarirya Vidya (or in the profane tongue, Hooper's Anatomist's Vade Mecum) when it was unanimously resolved to solicit the co-operation of Dr. Paxton and Mr. Quain, towards procuring copies or casts of their admirable plates for the illustration of this and similar works in the native languages. The publication of the Sarirya Vidya is consequently postponed pending this communication.

The roof of the Society's apartment having been reported in a dangerous state, Colonel Macleod was invited to survey the premises and report on the practicability of their economical extension.

A letter was read from Major Hay, relative to his magnificent collection of objects of Natural History, now partially exhibited at the sale rooms of Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co. The value of the collection is estimated at 20,000 rupees, a sum manifestly beyond the resources of the Society or of any number of individuals in this country. The Society having considered the very favourable report of the Special Committee they had deputed to report on the collection, offered Major Hay the gratuitous use of their rooms and establishment for its preservation, pending a reference to Government, setting forth the national value of the collection, and stating it to be worthy of the munificence of the State. Such a reference is due to Major Hay's extraordinary zeal in the promotion of natural science, but the best authority, we lament to say, are of opinion that no adequate support can be anticipated from Government on this occasion. We fear the Museum must fall to pieces before the auctioneer's hammer in Calcutta. Mr. Swainson too clearly shews, that such articles meet no remunerating sale in England. Here they are of at least double value and, nevertheless, we fear, will prove only a source of great pecuniary loss to their zealous and able proprietor.

The annual Report was presented by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, and will be published in the December number of the Society's Journal. The Society's funds exhibit a balance at the right side of 15 000 Co.'s Rs.

We should not omit to notice a very extensive collection of coins in all metals "of that ilk" from the times of Manikhyala, &c. accumulated by Mr. Masson and sent by Government for classification previous to transmission to the Court of Directors. The illness of Professor Malan, and the absence of Colonel Stacy, Captain Cunningham and other Numismatologists of the Society, led to a resolution, that the examination should be confided to their respected Secretary, Mr. James Prinsep, now on his way to Europe.—Calcutta Courier, January 3.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

The Anniversary Meeting of this Society was held at the Town Hall, on Wednesday the 9th January 1839.

Mr. C. K. Robison, Vice President, in the chair.

President.—Messrs. W. Crocroft, W. Storm, N. Alexander, W. F. Gibbon, T. Brac and A. Grant; Capt. W. N. Forbes; Col. D. McLeod; Lieut. Abercrombie; the Rev. T. Boaz; Drs. O'Shaughnessy and H. H. Goodeve; Messrs. A. Beattie, W. Mackenzie, M. Staunton, W. Farle and H. M. Parker; Dr. B. Burt Egerton and Corby; Nawaub Tohowerjung; Messrs. James Colquhoun, D. E. Shuttleworth, N. Hudson, R. S. Strickland and T. Bracken; Dr. Spry; Majors, Carter and R. Becher; Messrs. C. R. Prinsep, N. B. E. Baillie, Thomas Palmer, P. Sutherland, D. W. H. Speed and T. H. Gardiner; Dr. James Hutchinson, Messrs. Colin Campbell, C. M. Hunter, W. Byrne, C. Haffneger, E. L. Beaufort, D. Hare, John Allan, W. Patrick, Joseph Willis, G. T. F. Speed, C. Trebeck, J. W. Masters, W. C. Hurry, H. C. Kemp, and D. C. Low; Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore; Messrs. T. S. Kelsall, W. W. Kettwell, A. H. Sim, E. Preston, A. Holmes, T. Dickens, E. S. Hodges, T. Leach, A. Porteous, W. G. Rose and G. U. Adam; Drs. D. Stewart and Wallich.

The proceedings of the last meeting were read.

The following gentlemen, proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the Society: viz.

Messrs. J. Gilmore French, G. Buckland, J. Marquis, Joshua Athanass, Gilson Rowe, and Charles Duburdieaux.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members.

T. P. B. Biscoe, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Strong and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Charles Scott, Esq., 27th N. I., proposed by Captain T. Jenkins, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Jas. Wood, Esq., proposed by Mr. Thomas Brae, and seconded by Mr. C. M. Hunter.

Dr. R. H. Bain, proposed by Dr. H. Goodeve, and seconded by Dr. O'Shaugnessy.

•R. Woolridge, Esq., (Duddamtohall Factory; Jessore) proposed by Mr. E. S. Hodges, and seconded by Mr. A. Porteous.

The Vice President stated, that this being the anniversary meeting of the Society, the subject that would first claim the attention of members, was the election of office-bearers for the present year, and as a preliminary measure, he begged to bring to their notice, the several applications which had been received for the office of Secretary, vacant by the demise of Mr. Bell, viz., from Mr. H. Piddington, Dr. Spry, Messrs. J. W. Masters, D. W. Speed, and T. F. Speed.

Mr Robison further stated, in connection with this subject, that he would at this stage of the proceedings, read to the meeting, a proposition from the President, which he had been requested to bring forward,—Sir E. Ryan himself being unable to preside from the pressure of judicial business. The proposition which was seconded by Mr. Wallich, was as follows:—

"That the office of Collector to the Agricultural Society, be hereafter detached from that of Secretary, as was the case before the late Mr. Bell undertook them conjointly; and that the said office of collector be placed under the control of a special Committee of Finance, who, upon being named, will take into consideration, and report upon the subject of the Society's accounts, and at the same time, recommend, who in their opinion will be a fit person to be chosen Collector, at the next meeting of the Society, when the various standing committees will also be chosen."—And it was further suggested, "That the following five gentlemen be the Members of the Finance committee, viz., Messrs. W. F. Gibbon, G. A. Prinsep, W. E. Ewart, W. Storm, and M. Staunton.

On being put to the vote, the above proposition was carried.

The meeting then proceeded to the ballot, Messrs. Storm and Gibbon being appointed Scrutineers, when the following Members were declared to be office bearers for the current year, viz.

President.—The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan.

Vice President.—Dr. Wallich, Mr. C. K. Robison, Nawab Tohowejung, and Rajah Radhakant Deb.

Secretary.—Dr. H. H. Spry.

The Vice President read a report of the Committee, appointed at the last general meeting, to examine into the state of the Society's Funds. He also drew attention to an account accompanying the report, which exhibits the state of the finances of the society to be in the following condition, viz.

Amount in Government Securities,.....	20,400
Balance of Interest on the same,.....	416
Balance left by Mr. Bell, in the Bank of Bengal,.....	894

Total amounting to the credit of the Society, on 15th Nov. 1836, $ 21,710

The report of the Committee stated the balance remaining in the hands of the late Collector, to be Rs. 503. • Read a letter from Major H. J. Wood, (a relative of the late Secretary,) intimating that this sum was held to be paid into the hands of the Society's Treasurer.

A statement was submitted by the Acting Secretaries, detailing the particulars of their receipts and disbursements during the period that they had charge of the Collector's office.

Motion of which notice was given by the President, at the last meeting.

"That the sum accruing in the hands of the Treasurer to the Society, from the period of the death of our late lamented Secretary to the appointment of a successor, be presented to the widow of the late Mr. John Bell as a slight token of the deep sense which the Society entertains of the indefatigable exertions of its late Secretary to promote the interests and prosperity of the society."

The above motion was put to vote, and carried unanimously.

NOTICE OF MOTIONS.

No. 1. Moved by Mr. H. M. Parker, seconded by Mr. N. Alexander:—

"That taking into consideration the duties expected to be performed by the Secretary of the Society, the salary be fixed at three hundred rupees per month."

No. 2., Moved by Dr. O'Shaugnessy, seconded by Dr. Wallich:—

"That in addition to the sum already voted a sum equal to twelve months' salary be presented by the Society to the widow and orphan daughter of the lamented Secretary, the late Mr. Bell."

Proposed by Mr. Storm, seconded by Mr. Thomas Brae, and carried unanimously:—

That a vote of thanks be recorded by the Society to Messrs. Robison and Wallich, for having undertaken, conjointly, the duty of Secretary, till the appointment of a successor to the late Mr. Bell.

From the length of time occupied in deciding the previous business of the meeting, and in consideration of the lateness of the hour, it was proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Mr. Willis, and resolved:—

That this meeting be adjourned to Wednesday next, the 16th January, at half past 9 o'clock, for the consideration of the questions and papers of importance which remain to be brought forward.

Public notice to be given of the adjourned meeting,

N. WALLICH, M. D., V. P.

Acting Joint Secretary.

Murkara, January 12.]

At an adjourned General Meeting held in the Society's Apartment, Town Hall, on Wednesday, Jan. 16, 1839.

N. Wallich, M. D., V. P., in the chair.

PRESENT.

Messrs. G. A. Prinsep; W. F. Gibbon; M. Staunton; C. Trebeck, P. Sutherland; A. Harris; D. E. Shuttleworth; D. W. Speed; D. C. Low, and F. L. Beaufort; Drs. R. H. Goodeve and H. H. Spry.

The Vice-President prefaced the business of the day, by mentioning that at the last General Meeting, the consideration of many questions and papers of importance it, was settled, should stand over for discussion at an adjourned meeting, in consequence of the lateness of the hour, and that they had now to dispose of such arrears of business merely. Dr. Wallich then stated to the meeting, that the subject that would first engage their attention, was the annual election of members to act upon the several standing committees of the Society. The meeting accordingly proceeded to the consideration of this matter, and submitted the following resolution

Not of members for committees (10 in number) for the year 1839, viz. :—

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Sugar.—Messrs. N. Alexander, W. F. Fergusson*, Dwaikanauth Tagore, D. Hare, A. Muller, G. U. Adam, A. Muller, J. Allan, W. Storm, J. W. Masters and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Cotton.—Messrs. Jas. Willis, Chas. Hufnagle, W. K. Ewart,† G. A. Prinsep, W. Storm, D. B. Syers, W. Earle, G. U. Adam, and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Silk, hemp, and flax.—Dr. O'Skaughnessy; Messrs. R. Watson, C. K. Robinson, Ramcomul Sen, J. Willis, D. W. H. Speed, G. T. F. Speed, W. Storm, and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Coffee and tobacco.—Drs. Strong and Wallich; Messrs. G. A. Prinsep, C. Trebeek,§ Thos. Leach, D. W. H. Speed, D. Hare, and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Implements of husbandry and machinery.—Col. D. McLeod, Capt. W. N. Forbes,|| Messrs. W. Cracroft, Ramcomul Sen, C. K. Robinson, Rajah Radhakant Deb, Chas. Hufnagle, D. Hare and Dr. Spry.

Cadutchone and oil seeds.—Dr. Wallich and O'Skaughnessy; Messrs. Ramcomul Sen; Rajah Radhakant Deb, J. P. Marcus, Drs. Corbyn and H. H. Spry.

Improvement of cattle.—Messrs. N. Alexander, C. K. Robinson, Dr. Wallich; Messrs. Chas. Hufnagle, W. Storm, W. P. Grant, C. R. Prinsep, W. F. Gibbon, A. Harris¶ and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Committee of papers.—Dr. Wallich; Messrs. W. Cracroft, W. Storm, W. K. Ewart, M. A. Bignell and Dr. H. H. Spry.

Agricultural committee.—Dr. Wallich; Messrs. W. Storm, Chas. Hufnagle, W. F. Gibbon, Thos. Leach and Dr. Spry.

General committee.—Dr. Strong; Messrs. Jos. Willis, Dr. Hare, Radamadub Banerjee, Wm. Storm and Dr. H. H. Spry.

The name of Mr. H. M. Low has been withdrawn, at that gentleman's request, from the General Committee, the silk committee and coffee and tobacco committee. Messrs. Edward Sterling and J. Dongal have been withdrawn in consequence of the former gentleman having quitted Calcutta for the interior, and the latter gone to England.

In all other respects the Members of these several Committees remain as before, and were requested to give the Society the benefit of their individual services.

The Vice President next called attention to the annual exhibition of Vegetables, the Anniversary Dinner, and the Gentle Shew. Dr. Wallich mentioned that, as a time had been already fixed for the latter, viz. the 1st of February, he would beg to propose that the Exhibition and Dinner take place on the same day, and that the details connected with this arrangement be left to the General Committee.

This proposition was carried unanimously.

The Secretary then called the attention of the Society to a Special Report, which had been given in by the Committee appointed at the last General Meeting for the purpose of suggesting the best mode of carrying into effect the contents of a Despatch from the Court of Directors to the Bengal Government, touching the productions and prices of articles of Agricultural produce at the Chief Mart, and an obscure Village in, each District in the Empire of Hindoostan, which had been solicited of them by the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and further suggesting the returns be so arranged as to shew, as far as they possibly could, the course of trade geographically, both internal and external.

The following is a copy of the letter which accompanied the communication from the Secretary to Government in the General Department.

TO THE AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

General Department.

Gentlemen,—I am directed* by the Hon'ble the President in Council, to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a letter No. 10 of 1838, from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the Public Department, dated the 17th August, and of its enclosures, and to request that the Government may be favoured with your suggestion, as to the best mode of meeting the wishes of the Committee of the Royal Asiatic Society in the matter referred to.

I have, &c.

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP.

Secy. to the Govt. of India

Council Chamber, Nov 28th, 1838.

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT,—No. 10 OF 1838.

Our Governor-General of India in Council.

We transmit, as a number in the Packet, the copy of a letter from the Secretary to the Asiatic Society, with enclosures, applying for information respecting the prices, &c. of the most ordinary productions of India in various Districts, and we desire that you will furnish this information, if it can be procured without much inconvenience.

(Signed by the two Chairs and eleven of the Court of Directors)

REPORT OF A SPECIAL COMMITTEE—No. 5.

Report of a Special Committee appointed by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, to consider the best mode of carrying into effect the contents of a despatch from the Court of Directors to the Bengal Government, Calcutta, January 7th, 1839.

In accordance with the wishes expressed by our President and Members, at the last ordinary monthly meeting, we have met and considered the subject referred to us for report.

2d. The execution of the very desirable scheme of the Committee of Agriculture, and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, which has been submitted, in the dispatch of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, is one that every true friend to the interests of India, must desire to see carried into effect. By enquiries into the nature of the commercial resources of the country, by every possible means, can the Agricultural wealth of British India alone be properly developed.

3rd. In the practical fulfilment, however, of this very useful measure; circumstances occur, that demand serious consideration. Formal enquiries, whatever their character, are never made in this country without entailing much real mischief on the people.

* In the room of Mr. Colvin gone to Europe.

† Ex officio member of each committee in the room of the late Secretary.

‡ In the room of Mr. Speir, gone to Europe.

§ In the room of Mr. H. Walter gone to Europe.

|| In the room of Mr. James Prinsep gone to Europe.

¶ In the room of Dr. Jackson gone to Europe.

caution, therefore, will be requisite in carrying the wishes of the Committee of Agriculture and commerce into effect; for the known avidity with which native officials seize on delegated authority, however slight it may be, to impose and extort from their weak and passive countrymen, makes your committee loath to recommend the adoption of the course that, at first, would naturally suggest itself; namely, that of seeking to procure the necessary local information through the Collector or Magistrate of the District.

4th. The object may be attained, your Committee think, by less exceptionable means, and it has occurred to them, that, from their well known habits of industry, their greater leisure,—and, generally, the love which they bear to science, the Medical officers attached to the Political and Civil Arms of the service, might be induced, if so solicited, to impose on themselves a task the completion of which would be attended with so much unmixed good. The researches, if made by them, would be carried on without exposing the people to the risk of extortion, and at the same time, the end in view be most efficiently attained.

5th. Your committee, therefore, would beg to suggest this mode of procedure as the one best calculated to effect the object desired with the least possible inconvenience to the people: and would propose that the Medical Gentlemen at Agency and zillah stations, should be invited to favour the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, with the best information that they can procure.

6th. A single form of table your Committee consider ill adapted for the conveyance of the information sought, and they have consequently ventured to deviate from the prescribed model, proposing to substitute separate tables for the three great staples of silk, rice, and indigo, and a modified form for the remaining articles. These alterations your Committee now beg to transmit with this report.

7th In conclusion, your Committee have further to suggest, that, as great practical inconvenience may be felt by the officers preparing statements in turning the customary measures and weights of the different Districts into pounds avoirdupois, the seer of the District from which the return is made, be adopted in such return, and subsequently converted in Calcutta or in England into avoirdupois.

G. A. Prinsep R. Walker.
H. M. Parker Henry H. Spry, M. D.

Establishment of a Branch Agricultural Society at Dacca.

The Secretary next called the attention of the meeting to a highly gratifying communication which had been received from Colonel Stacy, stating that he had, while at Dacca, purchased a piece of ground, and laid the same out for the propagation of cultures of various kinds; but that being recently honored by the Commander-in-Chief, with the command of a regiment of the Army of the Indus, he had signified his desire to the principal European residents at Dacca, of making the above garden over to them in perpetuity, should they be disposed to undertake the management of it, and form themselves into "a Branch Society of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India." This proposition had been most willingly acceded to by Mr. Cooke, (Judge of Dacca), George Lamb, Esq; (Civil Service) James Grant, Esq., (Magistrate) and J. P. Wise, Esq., (Indigo Planter) who have constituted themselves a committee and received charge of the title deeds, seeds, pumps, tools, &c.

*Resolved—That a special vote of thanks be given to Colonel Stacy for his great personal exertions in the cause of Agricultural Science.

Mulberry Tree, on the culture the standard for silkworms.—Signor, Mutti who has recently been appointed Superintendent of silk culture at Dacca, by the Bombay Government, has transmitted two highly interesting statements, calling the attention of the Society to the principal faults in the mode of conducting the culture of silk in Bengal, and the great advantage to be expected in substituting the standard mulberry tree, in the place of the bush system. "The three principal faults in the Bengal silk culture," Signor Mutti states to be, "1st. The system of training the Mulberry as a bush or shrub 2d. In the rearing of the silk-worm. 3rd. In the reeling of the silk. And I would respectfully remark, that in Bengal several prejudicial opinions exist regarding the method of training the mulberry as a standard tree, viz.

1st. It is said, that by feeding the worm with the leaf of the tree, the silk becomes coarse.

This is plainly contradicted by the fact, that in Italy, where the finest silk in the world is made, the worms are fed only with the standard leaf. I myself here find; that by following the same Italian plan, I get the best cocoons and finest silk.

2d. It is said that the leaf of the tree being hard, the worms do not eat it.

This clearly shews, that as the worms are not properly reared, they become weak, and therefore have not strength enough to subsist upon hard leaves.

In Italy not only are the worms fed with the leaf of the tree, but we make there also a difference and distinction in the leaves, paying more for those of an older tree and hard ones, and it is also to be borne in mind, that in this climate, this insect, for a part of the year, ought to be more healthy and stronger than there, where, we are only by artificial means and precautions, able to keep it up.

3rd. It is said, that the standard mulberry does not succeed in Bengal, it having been tried but without success.

The very same thing was said here some year ago, regarding the Deccan and Conkan, but experience has now proved the contrary.

It was just for the sake of removing the prejudice which existed on the subject, that I undertook to train fourteen species of mulberries as standards, among which there were several of very base descriptions and bushy, including the China divided leaf, and every one has astonishingly succeeded, five standard trees, with large stems, branches, &c.

The only inconvenience I had, was, that they gave me a great deal more to do than the other good species. They succeeded not only in the Deccan, but in Bombay and Sateetee, where the climate in some places is approaching to the Bengal, but with this disadvantage, that it is not so moist and damp as in Bengal, which is a grand thing.

It is said, that with the bush system, silk can be made five or six times a year, whereas with the tree only three or four.

True it is, but it is also a fact that—1st. The result of the worm fed with the bush leaf, will not produce so much as that fed with the standard leaf.

2d. With the best system a person is engaged all the year round in rearing worms and winding silk, and after all does not make so much silk as the other, who uses the tree.

3d. The bush requires for ever expense and trouble, which is not the case with the tree, as after a few years nothing is required for the latter, except pruning and thinning, which labour is simply repaid by the wood obtained, and this certainly is a very great subject, saving money and labor. For the proprietor of the land having standards in his ground, the place is a valuable one, it is actually a capital that he has got, and the income which he yearly derives from such estate, is far superior than if it is planted with bush."

Mysore. An exceedingly encouraging document was read by the Secretary, from Lieutenant Munro, dated Bangalore, Nov. 3, detailing the progress that had been made by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Mysore. Many of the experiments made in the introduction of new, and the improvement of old cultures, had surpassed the expectations of the most sanguine of the friends of Agricultural science. One or two of the more striking items among the many which fill the report, are these. "In the fruit department, the principal cause has been to teach the native gardeners how to prune. No new fruits or varieties have been introduced, but the good ones have been increased. That the apple is deserving of cultivation in a lucrative point of view, is evident from the fact, mentioned at a former meeting, of Sergeant Masters having realized in nine months, by apples, upwards of seven hundred rupees."

"Mauritius sugar cane has thriven remarkable well, and is the admiration of all the natives who see it. Experiments have been tried with various manners, which already prove that sheep's dung is by far the best."

"The manufacture of vinegar from the juice of the cane, is likely to be a great source of profit."

"Coffee has succeeded admirably."

"I have derived great benefit from the use of the hot bed, as I scarcely ever fail in raising seeds from England which in former times seldom if ever vegetated in greater proportion than one in twenty."

Experiments have been made in boiling seeds, which have greatly quickened their vegetating powers."

"I made during last season some curious experiments with mercury. Many of the apple trees were infested with a black disease, which destroyed the trees rapidly. I bored holes through the wood as far as the pith, and filled them with mercury. In no single instance did it fail to stop the disease."

The special thanks of the Meeting was voted to Lieut. Munro, for his highly interesting communication, which was ordered to be made over to the committee of papers.

Cotton in Assam.—Captain Jenkins, the Governor-General's Agent for the affairs of Assam, drew the attention of the society to the increasing importance of cotton cultivation in Assam, and requesting that as the foreign varieties of seed which had been furnished to him, did not appear to succeed, he might be furnished with the better kinds of country seed. The cotton committee were requested to give the society the benefit of their earliest consideration, in order that Captain Jenkins's communication may meet with the best attention.

A new culture.—The meeting were favoured by Miss Davy, with specimens of a thread prepared from the pine apple plant, which grows wild in some parts of Assam, and drawing the attention of the members of the society to the value which the beautiful texture of the thread was likely to prove in the manufacture of the finest fabrics. Along with the unmanufactured thread were specimens of the finest French cambric, to shew that in no respect did the texture of the thread of the latter surpass that of the former. The exhibition of these specimens excited great interest, and it was resolved that the whole should be transmitted to the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, in order that the same may be submitted to the inspection of manufacturers, and the intrinsic value of thread obtained.

The Secretary was directed to convey to Miss Davy, the best acknowledgments of the Society for her valuable communication.

Resources of the Tenasserim Provinces.—Two valuable papers, by Mr. Riley, pointing out the great agricultural capabilities of Amherst and Moulmien for the production of coffee and other valuable staple articles of commerce, was next read by the Secretary, and two models of mills for the preparation of the coffee seed of commerce, were also shewn. The first was for crushing the ripe berry, and was capable of grinding nearly 8,000lbs. of coffee daily. The second was for detaching the husk, and was stated to be capable of turning out 10,000lbs. of coffee fit for the market daily. Each mile worked by one or two buffaloes.

The Secretary also read letters from Mr. Belesin, forwarding a sample of Murravado sugar, to be entered for competition for the Society's sugar prize.

From Messrs. G. T. F. Speed and D. W. H. Speed, the former communicating some interesting particulars connected with the Flora of Darjeeling, and forwarding for the Society's museum, specimens of the acorn of the Indian oak and ears of Indian corn, which he had brought from that settlement, and the latter presenting to the Society a jar of arrow-root, prepared from the third season's bulbs of the Maranta Arundinacea, brought to India by Lord Auckland. The thanks of the meeting were duly accorded to these two gentlemen for their respective contributions.

A letter from C. B. Greenlaw, Esq., Secretary to the Marine Board, was read by the Secretary, forwarding specimens of hemp made from the "Scutellaria Zelanica," the "Moorha" or "Moorva" of the natives, and mentioning that orders had been given to try the strength of rope made from this substance, which, if successful, would be manufactured for the use of Government on a large scale.

A letter from Professor Royle, Secretary to the Committee of Agriculture Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society, forwarding, for presentation to the Society, a few samples of South American Maize, received by their Committee from Dr. Lindley, Secretary to the Horticultural Society of London, was next read by the Secretary.

From Jeffrey Finch, Esq., Shahpore Oondee, Tirhoot, dated November 19th, presenting more grafts of apple trees for the Society's fruit tree nursery. Dr. Wallich here took occasion to remark, that the nursery had flourished so well, that the Committee would be prepared to furnish grafts to members requiring them.

From Charles Cardew, Esq. presenting a parcel containing an assortment of grass seeds, which he had just brought from England.

From Colonel Stacy, forwarding a quantity of African grain, alluded to in a former letter.

For all these communications, the best thanks of the Meeting were offered.

Letters were read from the Secretaries of the Branch Societies of Gowhatti, Azimghur, Mhowshedabad, enquiring after the silver medals which had been placed at their disposal for distribution. The Secretary informed the meeting, that he had seen Mr. Curnis, who had told him that the medals were in course of perfection, and that no effort should be spared to have the whole ready for delivery on the night of the Anniversary Dinner. A copy of the sixth Report of the Royal Horticultural Society of Cornwall, was presented by Dr. Wallich, on the part of Capt. Jenkins. The Madras Journal of Literature and Science, No 21, was also laid on the table.

HENRY H. SEAY, M. D., Secy.

Hurk, Jan. (19.)

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 5th January, 1839.

PRESIDENT.

C. C. Egerton (in the chair) H. Chapman, and R. O'Shaughnessy, Esqrs. Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy, J. Esdaile, D. Stewart, J. G. Voss, H. H. Spiv, J. C. Brown, H. H. Goodeve, R. H. Bain, H. Wallich.

J. Estelle Esq, M. D., G. Wallich, Esq. M. D., P. H. Baddeley, Esq., proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the Society.

The following gentleman were proposed, G. Evens Esq., of Calcutta, by Dr Gondeve, seconded by Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy, J. C. Brown Esq. Assist. Surgeon 67th Regt. N. I. proposed by Mr. Egerton, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

Letters were read from Thos. Russel, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, Harrowtee, stating his wish to re-enter the society provided that he was furnished with some equivalent for his subscription in the shape of a quarterly Journal or selections from medical works.

From J. Menzies, Esq., Surgeon 62d Regiment Native Infantry, stating his wish to become a member of the society. He was accordingly proposed by Dr. Goodwin secondly by Mr Egerton.

These letters were in reply to the President's circular.
From E. V. Davies, Esq., thanking the society for his election.

Drs. Stewart and Chapman were then requested by the president to examine the votes received from the Resident members upon the election of Office bearers for the ensuing year. The result of the examination showed the following gentlemen to be chosen.

Dr. Wallich,.....Vice President.
Dr Goodeve.....Secretary and Treasurer.
Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy Foreign Secretary.
Dr. R. O'Shaughnessy...Asst. Secty. and Treasurer

Committee of Management Messrs. Egerton, Stewart, Chapman, and Spry. The Secretary brought forward his financial statement shewing, Cr. MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY IN A. C. with H. H. GOODEVE, TREASURER, Dr.

By Balance 1st January 1838, viz. Cash deposited in Union Bank bearing Interest.....	3000					to Paid in 1838 as per account rendered.....	6564
„ Cash in ditto.....	2071		5071			„ Balance earned to 1839....	3316		9880
„ Cash in hand.....			33	5104		Co.'s Rs.			9880
„ Received in 1838....				4776
Co.'s Rs				9880		Co.'s Rs.			9880

Cr.	SKETCH OF DEPENDENCIES.	Dt.
-----	-------------------------	-----

[illegible]

It appears from this statement, that nearly two thousand rupees have been received in the past year above the sum collected in 1837, but in consequence of the debts paid during this year, amounting to nearly four thousand rupees, the balance in hand is only 3,534; on the Dr. side, however, there stands only 700 rupees of liabilities, while the amount due to the Society is 9,140, a great part of which may be considered good.

With reference to this election, Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy stated, that he wished no longer to retain the office of foreign secretary, as his many arduous duties would prevent him from doing justice to any office of the kind, if there were really any labour to perform. But he considered the appointment a sinecure, and that the duties of a foreign secretary could in future be fulfilled without any additional labour, by the secretary himself, who had always performed the work of the office in question, with very little aid from the nominal incumbent. He proposed, therefore, that the situation be abolished as unnecessary.

This motion was opposed by Drs. Spry and Voss, who made the following amendment.

• It is proposed that the office of foreign secretary be retained, for although only a few foreign communications have been received within the past years, yet the abolition of the appointment might lessen the dignity of the society in the estimation of European Foreign Scientific bodies.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy subsequently stated his willingness to continue in the office if the society still considered the appointment to be useful, his motive for resigning was solely to disencumber the society of what he considered an unnecessary office and his unwillingness to stand in the way of its abolition.

The question remained for discussion at the next meeting.

Mr. Chapman also stated his wish to resign the office of the Member of the Committee of management, because he looked upon that Committee as a sinecure. Some conversation took place upon this point, wherein it appeared that very few questions had arisen during the past year, which required a reference, that these had all of necessity been decided at the monthly meetings or referred to a special committee for their report, but that subjects might occur which would be regulated by the committee of management as a matter of course.

The Madras Journal of Literature and Science, was presented on the part of the Editor.

The Secretary presented a very interesting specimen of distorted sternum, which he received from the late Mr. J. W. Knight, just before the lamented disease of that gentleman.

A very beautiful specimen of calculus, successfully removed, by Dr. F. Jackson of Ghazepore, was also presented for the museum.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy called the attention of the meeting to his experiment on the active principle and the effects on disease of the Indian hemp.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy communicated the details of three cases of traumatic tetanus, one treated by himself and two by Mr. O'Brien, of the Native Hospital, two of which were cured by a remedy which had never before been tried by modern physicians, namely the preparation above alluded to, the active principle of "Indian hemp."

Dr. O'Shaughnessy stated, that in consequence of the extensive popular use of hemp in India, as an intoxicating drug, he was led to examine into the literary history, the chemical properties and the effects on animals and man in the health and disease of various preparations of this powerful narcotic. The results he promised to communicate immediately, in a paper he was preparing on the subject. His present object was to state the very interesting fact of two out of three cases of the severest form of lock-jaw proceeding from wounds, having been cured by the use of this remedy, the form of preparation employed was a resin made by acting on the dried Hemp plant (Bang of the bazars) with spirit of wine, and evaporating the solution to dryness. Of this resin three grain doses dissolved in a small quantity of spirit, were given every 3d hour. Under its influence in all the cases, the spasms completely disappeared in from 24 to 36 hours. In the case which terminated fatally, the tetanus was entirely cured, but the patient died eight days afterwards of dysentery, under which he had been labouring before the injury which brought on the lock jaw.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy described the symptoms produced on man by the active principle of the hemp, as being entirely different from those which any other known remedy or poison is capable of producing; the characteristic effect of the Hemp being to bring on perfect catalepsy, that curious state so very rarely seen as a natural disease, and in which the limbs retain firmly whatever attitude they may be placed in, independently of the will of the patient.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy further stated, that he had used this drug in a case of hydrophobia, with the effect of mitigating all the horrible symptoms, though not of preventing the death of the patient. He appealed to Dr. Goodeve for the results of his experience of the effects of his remedy in cholera, in which he had seen it save many apparently hopeless cases. He added, that its administration demanded great caution for occasions he would afterwards point out, and expressed his willingness to supply medical gentlemen with the preparation for trial in the cases of tetanus they so frequently met with.

The subject will again be brought forward at the next meeting. Specimens of the hemp plant, its active principle, and of the native preparations, bang, sidhee, churus and majoom, were exhibited on the table.

Dr. Goodeve read a letter which he had lately received from a friend at Gorrackpore, detailing a case of hydrophobia, where the patient had been materially relieved, though not finally cured, by a vapour bath. The man had been laboring under the disease for three days; he sight even at a distance of a lotah which he supposed might contain water, threw the patient into violent convulsions. He was placed in a powerful steam bath for two hours, at the end of which period a lotah of water was given to him at his earnest request. He drank off the whole of it, and expressed himself to be very much relieved. He became quite tranquil for some time, and hopes were entertained of his recovery, but the convulsions, shortly returned, and he died in the night. It is not impossible that this unfortunate man might have been saved if the remedy had been employed earlier and had been persevered in for some time. The partial success here witnessed, at any rate encourages attempts of a similar nature, and it is a strong confirmation of Magendie's report upon the success which attended the treatment in Paris under his management.

A letter was read from Dr. O'Shaughnessy upon the subject of Mr. Irvine's paper, in the 3d No. of the Society's journal.

Report of some cases of secondary syphilis, treated successfully with hydriodate of Potash, by Dr. McNab, was presented by the Medical Board.

Mr. Batsun's paper upon cholera, presented at a former meeting, was then read and discussed.

H. H. GOODEVE, M. D., Secretary.

Hurk., Jan. 14.] Medical and Physical Society.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceedings of the First Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, for the year 1839.

At a Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on Monday the 14th January, 1839, at four o'clock in the afternoon.

N. WALLICH, Esq., M. D. and F. R. S. in the Chair, PRESENT.

Thomas Smith, Esq., Medical Board; Fred. Corbyn, Esq., Garrison Surgeon; A. Garden, Esq., M. D., Presidency Surgeon; H. S. Mercer, Esq., Marine Surgeon; Geo. Angus, Esq., 7th B. Artillery; Jas. Hutchinson, Esq., Secy., Medical Board; H. Ch...

Esq., and W. Raleigh, Esq., General Hospital; H. H. Spry, Esq.; M. D., Asst. Garrison Surgeon; J. G. Vos, Esq., M. D., Asst. Marine Surgeon; H. H. Goodlove, Esq., M. D., Prof. Med. College; Geo. C. Wallich, Esq., M. D., Assistant Surgeon.

The Secretary not being well, Dr. H. H. Spry read the proceedings of the last Quarter General Meeting, held on Monday, the 22d October 1838 and the following Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management for the past quarter.

Report of the Committee of Management, Medical Registering Fund Office, Calcutta, 14th January, 1839.

The Committee of Management beg to notice, that conformably to the Resolution passed at the last Quarterly General Meeting, the maximum rates of subscriptions on the scale laid down in Section V. of the Rules, will come into operation from the present month, to which effect the necessary Orders have been given by the Supreme Government on the requisition of the Committee.

Messrs. Daniel Harding, (No. 5 of 1834,) Thomas Eld Baker, (No. 6 of 1834) Thomas Inglis, M. D., (No. 1 of 1835,) and Kenneth McQueen, (No. 2 of 1835,) have been admitted to four of the nine Annuities declared at the Quarterly Meeting, held on the 9th July 1838, and Mr. Ewen McDonald, (No. 4 of 1834,) has obtained the Annuity reserved for Mr. T. Tweedie, as it would be inconvenient to leave a hiatus in the numbering of Annuity Certificates; and Mr. Grime will be admitted to No. 3 of 1835, on his resignation of the service appearing in General Orders, so that four Annuities, exclusive of Dr. Tweedie's, are available to any subscriber duly qualified from his period of service, and will be granted according to seniority of application until the Quarterly Meeting of July 1839, when any undispensed Annuity will be added to the numbers to be then declared.

With reference to their Quarterly Report of the 8th January 1838, the Committee beg to notify, that they have received intimation, in Officiating Secretary Lieutenant Colonel Stuart's letter, of the 5th November last, that the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, in their Military letter of the 29th August 1838, had been pleased to accede to the Committee's request to effect deduction on account of subscription to this Fund, from subscribers in Europe in the same manner as is done in respect to subscription to the Military and Orphan Funds; but the Committee, conceiving that the payment of the maximum rates of subscription from fullough pay, would be oppressive on the fortunes of those who may have no other income in Europe, propose to solicit that the application of this Rule be confined to such only as may be disposed to pay their subscriptions whilst in Europe.

There is now in circulation for the votes of Subscribers, a letter from Mr. Neil Maxwell, (an Annuitant of this Fund) dated the 2nd July last, proposing that the future payments of Annuities be made Quarterly instead of Half Yearly, so as to accord with the dates of payment of Pensions of the India House.

The two or Members of the Committee of Management going out by rotation this year, are Messrs. John Sowers and A. Garden, and Messrs. Thomas Smith and Henry Chapman, who came into the Management in the course of last year, to fill up vacancies, likewise go out under Rule XV. The Subscribers have been called upon to vote either for their re-election, or for any other resident Subscriber.

In their last Quarterly Report the Committee noticed that the undermentioned two Resolutions had been circulated for the approval of the Subscribers, and they have the pleasure to submit the state of the poll, from which it will be seen that both Resolutions have been Resolved,—That Rule XXXII. appearing not to be founded on liberal or just principles towards the class of subscribers it particularly regards, is inexpedient; and, that its tendency to accelerate promotion being questionable while its direct effect in keeping back from joining the Fund several of the seniors of the Medical list who would otherwise probably join it, is very obvious; and, moreover, the resolution not having been included in the original scheme of the fund submitted for the approval of the Honorable the Court of Directors, the said Rule be rescinded from the Regulations of the Fund.

Resolved.—That considerable inconvenience having accrued from the Proviso of Rule XII. requiring five members of the Committee of Management always to form a quorum, and that several times within the last three months, Meetings of the Committee having proved inoperative from there not being enough Members present to form the prescribed quorum, the word "five" in the Rule specified be rescinded, and the word "three" be inserted instead, and the proceeding of such quorum of three to be circulated for the approbation, or otherwise, of a majority of the Committee.

State of the Poll on the 1st of the above Resolutions.

To cancel Rule XXXII.....	144
Against.....	41

Majority to cancel Rule XXXII.....	103
------------------------------------	-----

State of the Poll on the 2nd Resolution.

To constitute three instead of five as a quorum and Rule XII. to be altered accordingly...	121
Against.....	33

Majority for three as a Quorum.	88
---------------------------------	----

Mr. Assistant surgeon John Baker, whose application to become a subscriber, was noticed in last Quarterly Report, has been elected a subscriber, and the following is the state of the Poll:

For Mr. Baker's admission.....	145
Against.....	11

Majority for admission,.	134
--------------------------	-----

With reference to the cancellation of section XXXII. of the Rules which prescribes certain conditions under which members of the Medical Board are admitted Annuitants, the Committee beg to notice that as Dr. Swiney retired, paying the penalty as laid down in that Rule, he is the only Annuitant retired under its penalty; his case will be brought specially for the consideration of the subscribers with a view to determine whether he is to have the benefit of the alteration, and have the amount paid by him beyond his half value of Annuity refunded to him.

Assubscribers in India, who may fall into arrears with the Fund, are required under Rule III. to furnish the guarantee of a Life Insurance if such arrears is to be under gradual liquidation, the committee have deemed it expedient to seek the same indemnity from subscribers failing into arrears from absence on fullough, in addition to the other conditions prescribed in Rule IX.

By order of the committee of Management,

Geo. Hull, Secretary.

Proposed by H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D., seconded by J. G. Vos, Esq., M. D., and carried—

• Resolved —That the Report for the last quarter, ending, 14th January, 1839, of the committee of Management, just read, be received and adopted.

Proposed by John Grant, Esq., seconded by Walter Raleigh, Esq., and carried—

That Rule XXXII. of the Fund Regulations having been rescinded as not founded on liberal and just principles towards the class of subscribers it particularly regards; it would be neither liberal nor just to make Dr. Swiney (who is the only Annuitant under that Regulation) the exception to the more enlarged and generous clause now in force respecting Members of the Medical Board.

Resolved, therefore, subject to the decision of a majority of the subscribers, that the balance of Rs. , being the difference between the full price of an Annuity paid by parties affected by that Rule and the rate now payable, be returned to Dr. Swiney, or his legal representatives, at the earliest possible opportunity.

Proposed by James Hutchinson, Esq., and seconded by H. H. Spry, Esq.—

That instead of an arbitrary penalty, equal to one-half of the arrears of subscription due, being imposed on Medical Officers who were in India at the time of the original establishment of the Fund, and who may now be desirous of joining it, the penalty to be so paid, be fixed at the exact amount of Tontine risk, which may be found to have been incurred.

Proposed by Walter Raleigh, Esq., seconded by Fred. Corbyn, Esq., as an Amendment to Mr. Hutchinson's proposition, and carried —

Resolved.—That as the question of penalty on the admission of Members who have not before joined the Fund, has already been considered and decided on by subscribers at large, no alteration shall be made.

Resolved.—That the thanks of this Meeting are due to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair.

N. WALLICH, M.D., Chairman.

Town Hall.

[Harkaru, January 19.

SUPREME COURT.

DECEMBER 29, 1838.

(Present Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF HURRO HAUZ PERSUS
S. DESILVA AND J. GOMES.

The defendants were indicted on a charge of rape.

The prosecutrix in her evidence detailed the nature and particulars of the charge, but her evidence being contradictory to her deposition given at the Police before Mr. Robinson, the Magistrate, the jury doubted her testimony, as to which only one other witness confirmed her but in part, viz. that she had cried for help, and had been maltreated by the prisoners before the Police came to aid and rescue her, the prosecutrix.

Mr. Barwell conducted the defence, and cross-examined the prosecutrix, and her witness, with great acrimony.

The prisoner, Gomes, put in a paper containing his and the other prisoner's defence, which was read by the Clerk of the Crown. The prisoners denied the charge in toto, alleging the matter to have been just the reverse, of what it was represented to be, the prosecutrix being a woman of loose character, and that she gains her livelihood by prostitution.

Three witnesses were called for the defence, two of whom proved that the prosecutrix had made overtures to compound the charge if she were paid 32 rupees. The other witness proved the prosecutrix to be a woman of ill-fame, and in reply to a question from one of the Jurymen, he said that he gave the prosecutrix that character from personal knowledge. This excited great general laughter, and Sir John reprimanded the audience for such levity. His Lordship then delivered his charge to the jury very minutely, and at great length, and the jury returned a verdict of "Not Guilty." The prisoners were discharged.

Mr. Crow, one of the jurors, applied for and obtained leave to exempt the jurors, who are of the Roman Catholic faith, from attending on the New Year's day, on which day the Court will sit, and the Jurors of the Protestant faith must attend, except Mr. Patrick, Junior, who, it would seem, applied for leave for that day on the ground that Divine Service would be performed on New Year's day, according to the rites of the Church of England.

The Sessions are pretty nigh at a close, about half dozen of the minor cases only remain to be tried, and the unfortunate murder case.

31st December, 1838.—The trial of Mr. Ogilvy's case is fixed for next Wednesday week.—Hark. Jan. 1-

3D JANUARY, 1839.

Chunga Misser, an up country Bramin, was charged with having robbed from the person of Dhunputty Roy, a boy about ten years old, a gold tumbee mala or necklace. It appeared, that about two years ago, this boy was in the habit of frequenting a school kept by the prisoner, where his the boy's, younger brother, used to attend and receive instruction. One day, the prisoner having at the usual hour dismissed all the children, desired Dhunputty to tarry a while, which the latter accordingly did, when the school-master taking his opportunity and seeing no body in the way, asked the boy to give him his tumbee mala. The youngster refused; the other applying a cloth on the mouth of the child to prevent his crying out, tore the ornament off his neck, and then dismissed him with the threat that he would stab him if he mentioned the circumstance to any body. The boy came home crying, and told his father, upon being questioned, of what had happened. The father sent for Chunga, and after much persuasion and remonstrance, obtained from him a confession of his offence, and of what he subsequently did with the ornament. He had got it melted down at the shop of a goldsmith; this man was sent for, and as much of its equivalent, as could be got from either of them in gold, silver and moony, was given to the father. A balance of 8 Rs. 6 annas remained, to pay which, Chunga executed a tumsook to the parent. This deed was produced in court and identified. The matter was thus compromised, the more especially as the father and mother of the prisoner had much interceded in behalf of their son with the father and relations of the boy, and it was not at all the intention of the latter people to bring the matter to the notice of the police authorities, were it not for some subpoenas which they received, to appear before one of the Magistrates; before whom the circumstance had been incidentally mentioned in the course of an investigation which he held, concerning a charge against the same prisoner of having stolen a boy, professed by the boy's father, who, to strengthen the charge, brought to light the above mentioned circumstance, which was to Dhunput Roy and his relations, being cited before the Magistrate. In regard to this matter, the Judge remarked to the Jury, that Dhunput's father had done wrong in compromising a felony, but that, nevertheless, could not indemnify the prisoner against punishment, if he were found guilty of the crime for which he was indicted. The Jury, without hesitation, found the prisoner guilty of robbery.

Chunga Misser was next charged with enticing and stealing away a boy named Juggon, the son of one Ajab Sing, with a view to deprive the father of his son. The circumstances in this case were briefly these: Juggon the son, about 8 years and a few months old, used to attend at the School of Chunga. On the 25th of August last, he returned from school at 11, in the forenoon of the same day he was missed, much search was made after him, but without success. As the boy had valuable gold rings on his wrists, the prisoner was suspected and sent for. He was interrogated on the subject, but he denied all knowledge of the boy after he had left school. He was at last prevailed upon to give some account of the boy, which he did, saying he had taken the boy to see an avaiy and had left him in the house of a woman named Bishnee. To this woman's house the relations of the boy immediately repaired, but did not find him there, the woman declaring she had not seen Chunga that day nor any boy in his company.

Two witnesses proved before his lordship, that they had seen Chunga that day, taking the boy in the direction of Churebagan and returning about an hour after, without the boy. They further stated the boy had rings round his wrists.

The Judge as usual charged the Jury, and the latter almost immediately delivered in a verdict of guilty against the prisoner.

The prisoner was, for both the crimes of which he had been found guilty this day, sentenced by the Judge to be transported for the term of his natural life; his lordship remarking that his offence was of a most heinous nature.—Herk. Jan. 5.

*JANUARY 4, 1839.

THE QUEEN VERSUS CHARLES DE CRUZ.

For Murder.

The prisoner was arraigned for his trial, charged with the wilful murder of Caroline Isaac.

The first witness called was Mary Ann Isaac, the mother of the deceased; who being sworn, deposed, that she knew the prisoner much longer than her daughter, the deceased, did; that the prisoner had been transported for 7 years and until after his return he did not visit the witness, and in consequence of his assumed improper conduct towards the witness's daughter, the deceased, he, the prisoner, was told to discontinue his visits; but he, being a relative, and saying that he intended no harm, persisted in repeating his visits, and on the day he committed the horrid crime, he called twice, first at 8 a. m. This was on Sunday, the 16th of the English month of Assin, when he pulled about the deceased, talking loudly and attempting liberties. The deceased reminded the prisoner of their relationship, and seriously opposed his conduct, reasoning with him at the same time and telling him, that he might find many other women in Calcutta for his object. The prisoner went away, saying he was going to Dum-Dum for 4 or 5 days. The witness did not see the prisoner until after his arrest for murder. The witness went out at about 12 o'clock that day, and returned immediately, having heard that the deceased, her daughter, had been murdered or stabbed by the prisoner. On the witness's return home, she heard that the rumour was correct, but she neither saw the deceased, nor the prisoner, the former having been removed, previous to the return of the witness, and the prisoner had escaped. The deceased was a single woman, living with an officer of a ship, by whom she had a daughter, now alive, and this ship officer is at sea. The witness added, that the improper conduct towards the deceased, on the part of the prisoner, had been such that the deceased in her lifetime was obliged to have complained once against the prisoner at the Calcutta Police.

Elizabeth Pereira was the next witness called. She is the landlady of the house in which the deceased, her mother, the last witness, and others lived. This witness stated, that the prisoner called twice on the day of the murder, at 8 a. m. first, then at about 1 o'clock p. m. when the witness heard the deceased cry out for help, saying, that Charles, meaning the prisoner, had stabbed her, the deceased. The witness, E. Pereira, ran out immediately and laid hold of the prisoner, who was in the act of running off with a knife in his hand, full of blood. The prisoner on being laid hold of by this witness, struggled to get away, with an exclamation, saying his action to his words seemingly, and offering to stab the witness if he was not allowed to escape, and in the struggle the witness fell against a mat wall or partition, and the prisoner escaped. Witness then went to the Thannah of the division and procured the Police aid. The deceased in the mean time dropped in the verandah of her house exhausted from loss of blood, caused by the wounds inflicted on her, and the deceased, although not in fact dead, was all but lifeless.

This witness on her cross-examination by the prisoner said, that she did not see the prisoner stab the deceased, and that the fact of her having seized the prisoner with a bloody knife in his hand, his threat to her, and his consequent escape, could be corroborated by other witnesses. The witness in reply to the jury-men said, that the occurrence in question took place at about 1 o'clock of that day, and she described the knife to be a black handled one. She added, that there existed no chance or probability of the prisoner not being the identical person who perpetrated the murder. That the deceased said no more than giving the alarm that "Charles," meaning the prisoner, had stabbed her, and she, bleeding and dropping, saw the witness lay hold of the prisoner, who, and the deceased were not two cubits distant from one and another, facing each other, the deceased in the open verandah of her dwelling and the prisoner in the act of moving out of the house, and another step would have carried him out. This witness also deposed that she gave her evidence before the Coroner.

Magdaline Merceir sworn, said, she knew Mary Ann Isaac for a short time. She is dead. She died on Sunday the 16th day of the English month which is in Bengally called Assin. Looks at and knows the prisoner and also the last witness, whose tenant this witness has been for 2 years and 5 months. On that day I saw the prisoner call in the morning, and again at about 1 o'clock, whilst we were (I for myself) cooking our victuals. Caroline's room is nearer the gate door than mine. When the prisoner entered the second time, I do not know. I heard no noise, disturbance or quarrel. I heard the deceased call out to the landlady, saying that Charles had wounded her, the deceased, and requesting her mother to be called to her. The landlady ran and took hold of the prisoner, and then this witness, confirmed the testimony of the last witness to the seizure and flight of the prisoner. The prisoner used to come to our compound. I know him and I saw him, when laid hold of as above. I also saw the deceased seated at her verandah door, which door leads to the compound. She was seated groaning and eventually dropped upon the floor of the verandah. She had a shift and a petticoat on, and from her several wounds they were all bloody. The first wound was across the mouth, the second over the joints of both her arms, and she had other wounds. I being an old woman, unaccustomed to such scenes, was in a dreadful alarm. The prisoner told the landlady, when she had hold of him, "let me go, landlady, or I will strike you," lifting the arm with the knife in his hand. After this the landlady let go her hold and ran off. She went towards the thannah. I did nothing. I was about the distance of across this table from the deceased, (pointing to the bar table from the witness box,) and I could do nothing by going nearer to her, and I did not go nearer. The police men came in and a great crowd gathered. The deceased was removed in a palkee, as I understood. I did not see the actual removal owing to the crowd, but she was removed. I afterwards saw the spot where she dropped, covered with blood. The prisoner held a large black handled knife covered all over with blood. I would know it again if I saw it.

Julian O'Hanlon, wife of James O'Hanlon, knows the witness E. Pereira and her house. She did live there. Knew the deceased, who lived at little distance. Knows the prisoner, and repeats what the other witness said as to the cries of the deceased after the wound.

Louisa D'Silva. Witness was in the cookroom at the time. Bobee Pereira was also there, and she came out upon the noise and laid hold of the prisoner. Witness remained there and did nothing. The deceased dropped groaning. Witness said nothing.

Sew Doss Tewarry, thanader of Chunam Gully, remembers having been, on a Sunday, about the middle of September, called on the occasion of a murder. Knows Anna Maria Isaac. Went to her house on that occasion, and saw the deceased almost lifeless, bloody, and wounded in the middle part of her body; laying on the brink of a verandah and her head hanging out of it, downwards, reaching the ground. The deceased could not reply to the questions which I put to her as to who wounded her. The people of the compound named Chules to be the murderer. I did not then find him but went in search of him and returned to the compound. I got a palkee and accompanied it with the deceased in it to the Chandney Hospital, where I met the Doctor whose name I do not know. It's the Doctor who is in constant attendance there, and who examined the deceased. She was all but dead, and immediately expired in the witness's presence. By the Doctor's orders the body was removed to the Police Hospital, where I found the Deputy Doctor who resides there. I left the corpse at the Police Hospital in charge of one of the Police, viz. Dursun Naib. I proceeded to look after the person accused of the murder, accompanied by Sham and a Chowkeydar, also Choitan and Abdulim Chowkeydars. We went partly on foot and on reaching Entally, hired a garry and went to Paddopookur, in the suburbs, where, on a road branching different ways, we saw the prisoner, while we were turning to the road on the right, coming towards us from the middle road. We alighted from the garry and apprehended him. He acknowledged having (cautioned from the Bench to be precise) killed the deceased and said he would willingly proceed to prison, and there would be no occasion to lay hold of him. This confession was just as he was laid hold of, and without any thing being said to him. I subsequently asked him for the knife which he said he had thrown away. We took him into the garry and brought him away. The prisoner enquired if the deceased had expired. This was after the knife had been asked for of him. I told him that she was not dead, as at that time, the evening had closed in, and it was dark, and I was apprehensive that he might have friends thereabouts, who might attempt to rescue him, to prevent which I made that answer. He offered no resistance, nor did he call out for any aid or assistance. He was brought to Mr. McCann.

I asked him further about the knife on the way to Mr. McCann, and he said that he had thrown it in a tank. (He had previously stated, that he had thrown away the knife. He now mentioned the tank (not by name) to be a small tank in the neighbourhood where the murder had occurred, into which he had thrown the knife. In consequence of this, I informed Mr. McCann, and took the prisoner the next day to the tank, and found the knife. The prisoner, when brought to Mr. McCann, was locked up in the Town Guard. The prisoner when taken to the tank, took up a small piece of broken tile and threw it in, pointing out the spot where it fell to be the part of the tank where the knife had been thrown. By Mr. McCann's orders, I went into the tank in neck deep water and stooped and found the knife, which I brought out. Nothing was done with the knife at that time, further than that I showed it to the prisoner and he said that that was the knife, and it remained in my hands, and we (witness, Mr. McCann and prisoner) proceeded to the deceased's house, where was found a cap belonging to the prisoner, laying on a cot there. This cap I had seen there on my first visit to the deceased's house, when she was murdered, and on enquiry then, was told it was the prisoner's cap, but he was not there then. On this occasion Mr. McCann asked the prisoner about the cap, and he owned it. This was when in the deceased's house after the discovery of the knife. The prisoner himself looked for some paper of his in the cap, which I held in my hand, and I could perceive there was some paper by searching it, and I with the cap and the prisoner proceeded. The paper in it was taken out at Mr. Greenlaw's, where the prisoner said that the paper contained certain Divine prayers. The Saibs and Jury at Mr. Greenlaw's, inspected the paper. The prisoner said something to the like effect as to the contents of the paper in the cap, which he stated at the deceased's house. I produced the knife to the jurors at the Coroner's, and it has ever since been in my charge. I produce it now. (Knife produced). This is the knife. I also produce the cap - this is it. The Jurors inspected the knife.

Mr. McCann was next called, and he corroborated the last witness from the period of his statement as to the prisoner being brought to Mr. McCann, except that the latter could not speak with certainty as to who picked up the knife from inside the tank before spoken of.

Deaur Sing, a Naib of the Police, was next called and he corroborated the testimony of the other native Police officer.

Dr. Baine was the last witness who described the wounds on the body of the deceased, which was the person brought to him by the Policemen as before spoken of, and the Doctor said that the deceased died of those wounds, after the infliction of which the Doctor thought she could not have survived half an hour, and in fact could not have retained her senses and speech for many a minutes, although for a few minutes, even after the worst of the wounds (which the doctor described) the deceased certainly could have spoken and retained her senses too; and it appeared, in all probability to be true, in Dr. Baine's opinion, that the deceased might have cried out between the time she is alleged to have been wounded, and to have dropped senseless, according to the evidence this day, the whole of which evidence, the Doctor said, he had heard and attended to. This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner on being called upon for his defence, denied the charge altogether, repeating, as he had before done at the close of the examination of each witness, that the whole of the prosecution was founded on conspiracy and perjury, to take away his life; but he had no witnesses to call.

Sir John Grant then charged the Jury, stating, that the wounds as laid in the indictment were proved by the doctor to have been precisely those of which the deceased died, and this was a necessary point which was proved in accordance to the laws, and his Lordship did not enter into the evidence minutely, unless the jurors so desired, for all that remained was to leave the case to the jury with one or two slight remarks, viz., no ocular proof had certainly been established of the charge against the prisoner, but every thing else sufficiently proved it to all rational minds. The only difference, if it can be so termed, was as to the evidence of Mr. McCann and the thanadar, as to who discovered the knife in the tank spoken of, but it was nevertheless certain, that this knife was found in that tank as pointed out by the prisoner himself, and this knife is identified and corresponds with its description, by all the witness for the prosecution, as to whose testimony or any thing else, if any doubt existed, the prisoner should have the full benefit of those doubts. Unordinary as this case seemed to be; yet there could be no accounting for human mind or frailty, considering the object of the whole of this occurrence. The jurors instantly returned a verdict of "Guilty."

Sir John addressed the prisoner. "Charles D'Cruz; you have received the greatest attention and care throughout your trial, on a charge of the most heinous, atrocious and heinous of all crimes—to which you have no defence to make, no witnesses to call for any thing that might, it possible, mitigate for your crime; added to that, your confessions are in evidence, and those confessions to officers of Justice, all which, except your idle attempt to insinuate conspiracy and perjury against your life, coupled with the verdict just recorded by the jury who tried you, leave no doubt of your guilt, and, in conclusion, a painful duty remains to be performed, as to which to enter into any explanation, or exhortation, would almost be useless now. You are a Christian, to your God account for the horrid crime of which you are convicted, and for the short time you have to live, make peace with Him; and to that Great God, your are recommended, as whose people, and for the peace and protection of Society, nothing remains but to pronounce the painful duty and sentence of the law, viz., that you be taken from hence to whence you came, from there to be kept until next Monday, when, between the hours of six and nine o'clock in the morning, you be hanged by the neck until you be dead, and may the Great God of all mercy have mercy on your soul."

THE QUEEN VERSUS KURRUM AND NINETEEN OTHERS.

Who were arraigned on a bill found for having while at sea, on board a long boat of the late Ship Ruby, practically stolen, 21 packages of gold leaf, of the value of 50,000 Rs.

The Commander of the Ruby called and sworn. He said the property in question belonged to certain Merchants at Calcutta, who entrusted the same to the Commander, and the latter had given them bills of lading accordingly. Who these owners were, the Commander could not state; but he had written to the agents and would ascertain their names and designations. The Court informed the jurors, that the case could not be proceeded with, as it was laid in the indictment, which the Court read, that the alleged stolen property belonged to certain persons to the Jurors unknown (and no doubt to them unknown); but it appearing to the Court by the Captain's evidence, that the owners could be known, nothing remained but for the Court to direct the Jury to return a verdict of acquittal, which they accordingly did, and the prisoners were discharged. The Sessions stand over to next Wednesday, when Ogilvy's trial comes on.—Hurkaru, January 7,

MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1839.

This was the first day of the Term, and the Court met at eleven o'clock, but rose almost immediately after disposing of a few motions.

IN THE MATTER OF DA COSTA.

The Advocate General moved for Probate of the Will of the Testator under the following circumstances. It appeared that Mr. Da Costa had made a will, and formally executed it some months before his death, which took place last November. His Attorney, after the execution, marked a few alterations and marginal observations in pencil, which the testator at first approved of; but he afterwards said, that they were of little consequence, and the document might remain as it was originally drawn. Nothing further was done, although the draft of a letter, addressed to his Counsel, for the purpose of getting the altered instrument properly settled, was found among the testator's papers after his death, and the pencil marks, erasures and interlineations still remained. The learned Council accordingly moved for probate of the will as it was originally drawn up and executed. The executors appointed under it, were the Ecclesiastical Registrar and Mr. J. Allan.

The Court granted probate of the will as it originally stood.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1839.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and H. W. Seton.

JOHN RIVELEY V. BENJAMIN HARDING AND OTHERS.

In this case, which is an action upon a policy of Insurance, the depositions of witnesses for the plaintiff were taken de bene esse.

W. C. HENRY AND OTHERS, ASSINFES, & C. V. DABY-FLERAUD DUIT AND OTHERS.

This cause, which is a remanet from the Equity board of last sittings, was allowed to stand over upon the application of counsel.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF W. D. SHAW V. J. D. OGILVY.

THE SAME V. THE SAME.

These two cases, which were traversed from the Sessions after the Third Term of last year, stand specially for to morrow, Wednesday, (this day.)

The indictment in the first case charges an assault upon the prosecutor at Culna on the 2d of May; and in the second case, the indictment is for an alleged assault and false imprisonment at Burdwan, on the 23d of the same month.—Hurkaru, January 9.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 9, 1839.

ADJOURNED SESSIONS.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Chief Justice, and a Common Jury.)

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF W. D. SHAW VERSUS J. D. OGILVY, & C.

This was an indictment for an assault and false imprisonment, traversed from the third Sessions of last year. The prosecutor is an Attorney of the Supreme Court, and the defendant was the Magistrate of the Zillah Burdwan.

Counsel for the prosecution, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith. (Attorneys, Messrs. Hedger and Smalley.)

Counsel for the defence, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton. (Attorney, Mr. T. B. Swinhoe.)

Mr. Clarke stated the case to the Jury. The indictment contained six counts. The first count set forth, that J. B. Ogilvy, in May 1838, was Acting Magistrate of Burdwan, and by colour of his office, falsely charged W. D. Shaw with sedition, and wrongfully and illegally imprisoned him, not being qualified as a Justice of the Peace, and not having become vested with the powers required by certain Acts of Parliament, and not having had any information or charge laid before him on oath, and having refused to make summary enquiry or to accept bail, and having denied him the use of pen, ink and paper, and kept him in confinement for a great space of time, &c. The other counts were more general.

Joynarain Chunder, examined by Mr. Leith. I am the head native clerk in Mr. Shaw's office. I was sent up by the orders of my master in the month of April last to Culna, where Rajah Pertab Chund was staying with his boats, on his progress to Burdwan, to be identified by the Rannees. My master followed afterwards. In the evening the darogah came on board with a perwannah. The darogah gave orders to disperse the assemblage. Mr. Shaw said, that there was no assemblage, but if he would then point out who it was he wished to send away, they should be dismissed. The darogah said that the nazir had come and was on the bank, and that he was the person to apply to. Somebody then was sent for the nazir, and brought back word that he was gone away. The darogah then brought out a perwannah, and read it, and then went away. Mr. Shaw advised Pertab to send a duteakast to the nazir, offering to send away any person that he might direct. Mr. Shaw left directions with me to see that this was done, saying that he was going to Pygatchee. I followed his instructions. I drew up a Persian letter accordingly, and sent it. I did not see Mr. Shaw that night again. Previous to his departure, Mr. Shaw wrote a letter in English to the Magistrate of Burdwan, which he gave me to transmit.

Mr. Clarke here said, that this letter had not reached Mr. Ogilvy until after the arrest, and they should not therefore attempt to put it in or make any use of it.

Examination resumed.—Mr. Shaw went at 7 or 8 in the morning to Pygatchee, which is 3 or 4 coas from Culna. I cannot speak positively to the Persian letter (marked A.) I left Culna on the 2nd of May about noon. I saw no riot or disturbance, except the firing of the musketry.

Cross examined by Mr. Prinsep.—(Perwannah marked No. 1 put in.) I never heard this read before. When I went on board the boat in the morning, I saw the darogah, but I do not recollect seeing the nazir there. I did not hear any paper read by them. Pertab did not say that he had sent for me on account of receiving a perwannah from the nazir. I knew nothing of a perwannah brought by the nazir, either when I was on board in the morning or in the evening. I have said that the perwannah brought by the darogah was read in the afternoon. I never heard that that perwannah was brought by the nazir. The perwannah No. 1 is not to the same purport as that then read. I do not know how many men Pertab had with him, but there were kidnatgars and bukendassers. At Hooghly I saw 300 persons and more in custody, but many said they were taken wrongfully. I do not recollect Pertab mentioning that 300 or 350 persons were with him. I understood that the reason of Mr. Shaw joining Pertab, was that Pertab was going to Burdwan to be identified, and Mr. Shaw accompanied him as vakeel. I have heard that there were bonds in the boat. I did see bonds which had been executed by Pertab. I do not understand English perfectly. Yes, I was examined in English at Hooghly, before Mr. Samuells.

Re-examined.—Of the people in custody in Hooghly Jail, the greater part have since been liberated. I was arrested and afterwards discharged.

John Allan proved the jurisdiction.

W. D. Shaw, Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke.—I have been an Attorney of this Court since 1830 I have been the attorney of Pertab since May 1837. I went to Culna in May last. I was requested to go by Radakissen Bysack, who was a security for costs in the action of ejectment. I left Calcutta on Sunday the 29th April. I had previously sent on some of my servants, and among them my head native (the last witness.) The whole of Culna appeared to me perfectly quiet when I arrived. I saw no disturbance or large assemblage. I saw Pertab on the evening of my arrival. I did not see the darogah until I sent for him. He then came in a boat to Pertab's boat, with a large body of armed people. I sent to say that if he came on board, he must come unaccompanied with so many people. The darogah then came on board with a bundle of papers, and taking out one said, that it was a perwannah. This was read in Bengallee. I understood it, but I do not know whether I should know it again. I understood it came from the Burdwan Magistrate, ordering the Darogah to disperse the people. I said that I did not understand such an order, as there was no unusual assemblage, but nevertheless if required, it would be obeyed, and I asked what people he wished to be dispersed. The darogah said that he had no complaint to make, and that the nazir was the proper person. The nazir did not come. When the darogah was going away, I said that he must understand that Pertab was ready to obey any order however unreasonable. I afterwards advised Pertab to write a letter to this effect. The next morning I went to Pygatchee, Mr. A. Lyall's factory, which is six or eight miles from Culna. I saw no disturbance whatever. I saw a crowd of spectators on the bank, but nothing very unusual. There was no disturbance in Pertab's boat. Mr. Lyall is a client and friend of mine. I was then engaged in law business of his. I returned to Culna as soon as I heard of the proceedings which took place there on the 2nd of May. As I was passing Mr. Alexander's bungalow in a palkee. I saw a native running after me and calling out. I got out, and saw a European gentleman standing near the bungalow, who asked me my name. Upon giving it, he said that I was under arrest for "sedition." I did not know the gentleman at the time, but I now know that he was the defendant, Mr. Ogilvy, the Acting Magistrate of Burdwan. I received no other explanation of the nature of the offence with which I was charged. I asked if I might be held to bail, but he refused. He said that there was no warrant, but that he had arrested me himself. When I asked who was my accuser, he said that he would not be cross-examined. It was a very hot day, but he refused to allow me to stand in the shade of the bungalow. He told me to go into my palkee, and said that when the police arrived, I should be arrested. I remained an hour in the sun, wiping up and down. Mr. O. went into the bungalow. An order was brought verbally that I was to be conveyed to Burdwan. As it was in Bengallee, I refused to obey it, and said that the Magistrate ought to come himself and give it in English. The Magistrate came, and ordered me to go to Culna under arrest. I was taken to a native house there, and put into a single small room built above some godowns. It was unfurnished, but an old chair was brought afterwards. No refreshment was given to me except a serai of water. About sunset I received a message from the Magistrate, ordering me to get into my boat. I refused, but he said that he should compel me, and I went. He went on board himself, and began opening my boxes. Against this I protested, saying that they belonged to my clients. This remonstrance, however, did not prevent him from opening the boxes and reading the papers. While there, the dák peon brought a letter and a newspaper, which I was about to take, but the Magistrate took them. He afterwards gave them to me, and told me to read the letter in his presence, to which I objected. He insisted on that being done, when I became irritated and threw it down. He took it and locked it up in a box. The next day I read it in his presence. He refused to allow me to write a letter the next day to Mrs. Shaw, and he also refused permission to Mr. Lyall to visit me. I wished to go on board the boats for the night, but he did not permit me, and I slept in a room on the ground. The next morning I was taken to the boats. I remained until sunset on Friday. Upon the receipt of a packet of letters for me, Mr. Ogilvy said it looked suspicious, and insisted on my opening it in his presence. One of the letters was from Mrs. Shaw. He did not read any of my letters, but he opened and read two addressed to the last witness. On Friday evening, he told me, I must go to Burdwan. This I said would be a great hardship, as I knew no one there who could bail me, and there were two persons, Mr. Lyall and Mr. Blake, at Culna, whom I knew, and who I thought would become bail for me. He said it was too late. I was never once examined while I was at Culna, nor any one else in my presence. Upon arriving at Burdwan, I was taken at first to the house of Mr. Meilish, a joint magistrate. I believe the order was to take me to the Fouzdar's jail. Mr. Meilish said he thought it a great hardship, and advised me to apply to Mr. Ballow, the Judge. The distance from Culna to Burdwan is upwards of 40 miles. I believe the distance from Culna to Hooghly is much less. I applied at Mr. Ballow's enclery, but he was not there. I was taken to the Fouzdar's jail on the Saturday, and remained until the following Wednesday, the 9th of May. I was confined in a tent there by Mr. Ogilvy's order. I was released on the Wednesday, when Mr. Hedger brought up a writ of habeas corpus from the Supreme Court. Mr. Ogilvy then said that he was ready to take bail (the bail was put in, and marked B.) The bail was in Rs. 5,000. I am a Scotchman, and so, I believe is Mr. Ogilvy. I never learn from him that he was a Justice of the Peace. I never saw any warrant.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—At the time I saw Mr. Ogilvy, I was personally a stranger to him. I had corresponded with him about a year before on the subject of Pottab's going to Burdwan. I first saw Pottab in Bancomah jail. He was afterwards tried by Mr. Elliott, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. I have heard that charge also was for assembling people tumultuously. I never abandoned Pottab's cause on the supposition that his identity was doubtful. I had some doubts then, but none now. I had bonds with me at Culna from Pottab. I cannot precisely say why I took them. There were crowds of spectators at Culna, and there always are wherever he goes. I cannot tell what you call "excitement;" people are always anxious to see him. I do not think that he had so many men with him as 350. I never saw the darogah before he came on board the Rajah's boat. When I was arrested, all the others had been already arrested. Burdwan is a very populous district. Culna is within that jurisdiction; but I do not know that the nullan is. I am told it is in the Naduath district. I knew nothing of a perwannah brought by the nazir, until after the arrival on board of the darogah. I believe I asked to be held to bail, and not to be released on my recognizances. I do not know whether any body actually offered to become bail. The house in which I was confined, was a pucka upper-roomed house; I should say it was not the best in Culna. Pottab was taken to Hooghly by the order of F. C. Smith, the Police Superintendent.

E. A. Samuella, examined by Mr. Leith.—I have been Magistrate of Hooghly for about three years. I know Mr. Ogilvy, the Magistrate of Burdwan. (Proves A.) I have heard from Mr. Ogilvy, that he was not a Justice of the Peace.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton.—The reason why Pottab was removed to Hooghly for trial, was that he might be out of the jurisdiction of Mr. Ogilvy, who had to attend the proceedings at Calcutta. Several of the persons arrested have since been tried before me. The trial of Pottab and 5 others, is still pending; 140 of them are discharged, as I considered they had been sufficiently punished; and 160 are still awaiting their sentence.

Q. Was not this charge the same as the charge upon which Mr. Shaw was arrested? [This was objected to and not put.] The darogah, nazir and subordinate officers make their reports from personal observation or other credible information, and these are transmitted under seal of the thannah to the Magistrate. The Magistrate acts upon these, when authenticated by seal, who ever may have written them. Perwannahs or orders are sent accordingly. When a perwannah cannot be executed, a further report is sent, and another perwannah issues. [Several documents were here put in and proved, consisting of perwannahs, reports, &c.] These documents are all produced by me officially, from the original proceedings in a case now before me at Hooghly. About 340 or 350 men were taken at Culna, and handed over to my charge. Of these 170 were fighting men, or armed burkendoes. The arms taken on the occasion were also delivered over to me officially; they were guns and pistols, lances, swords, lathes, &c., in all perhaps 390 weapons of different descriptions.

Re-examined. The 140 prisoners were released on signing an acknowledgment, that they had been concerned in a June at bust. Their release was not conditional upon signing this.

Harruchunder Moonissee, examined by Mr. Clarke. I am in the service of Pottab; I was with him while he was at Culna. The letter marked A was written by me at the Rajah's desire. I was on board when the darogah came. I accompanied Joynarain to the thannah with the letter, to get it conveyed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton. There were other perwannahs before the one of which I spoke. The Rajah promised to obey the perwannahs, but he did not disperse any of his followers. The Rajah went on shore once in a tonjohn, accompanied by some people; a few were armed. The Rajah himself carried a sword in his hand; the sword was drawn. It came out of its sheath by accident. There were several spectators accompanying the Rajah in his progress.

W. N. Hedger, examined by Mr. Leith. I proceeded to Burdwan in May last upon business. On the 5th I obtained a habeas corpus from the Supreme Court, directing the Magistrate of Burdwan to produce the body of Mr. Shaw. I became bail, and executed a bail-bond (B.) I saw Mr. Shaw, when I went to Burdwan, confined in the criminal jail. I had heard from Mr. Ogilvy, that he was not a Justice of the Peace.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—It was in a tent in the outer premises of the jail, but within the wall, that I saw Mr. Shaw confined.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Prinsep addressed the Jury for the defence. No person was more anxious than Mr. Ogilvy himself to subject his conduct throughout this matter to trial, confident as he was that the result would clearly shew that he had done nothing more than his position required. The defendant was the Magistrate of a large and populous district; the person calling himself Rajah Pertab Chund had assembled with boats and a numerous band of armed followers, setting up an extraordinary claim. This person had remained twenty days, refusing to disperse his followers, and setting the police authorities at defiance, although perwannah after perwannah had been issued to him; could it be said that this was not a case sufficiently suspicious to justify a Magistrate in taking strong measures? It had been attempted to be shown, that no actual disturbance or riot had been committed; but it was not the duty of the Magistrate to wait until an actual insurrection occurred, but to prevent it in time. It was true Mr. Shaw was an attorney of this Court, but that was no ground for exempting him from the treatment which was extended to others, when he was found with questionable companions and under suspicious circumstances. The Jury were not to confine their attention to the circumstances which actually occurred, but they were also to consider what was the information upon which the Magistrate acted. These reports of the darogah and nazir, whether true or not, were sufficient to justify the Magistrate, if he conscientiously believed them and bona fide acted upon them. It would be found that these reports did not give quite such a tame description of the excited state of the country, and the consequences that might probably ensue; and it was nothing even to say that the description given was exaggerated or even altogether false, if the Magistrate were ignorant of the falsehood. It might be, that Mr. Shaw, did not know that he was making himself a party to an illegal assembly; but this did affect the conduct of the Magistrate, who acted upon inferences reasonably drawn from circumstances undoubtedly suspicious. It must be recollected too, that the very person, calling himself Pertab, had previously been convicted on a similar charge, and had thus excited the suspicion and alarm even of the Government, who had accordingly given special directions to Mr. Ogilvy, to be particularly vigilant in preventing a recurrence of such proceedings. Did not all this fully justify the Magistrate in law? But even if he had acted indiscreetly or even illegally, the Jury could not give a verdict against the defendant, unless they were satisfied that he had acted with malice, and the learned counsel put it to the jury whether there were any circumstances here whatever to raise the improbable presumption that the defendant entertained malicious feelings towards the prosecutor, with whom he was then personally altogether unacquainted. [He then cited Regulation IX. of 1807, to shew that a Magistrate is not only justified but compelled to act upon the reports of his officers. That regulation also relates to the discretionary power in Magistrates, of taking or refusing bail. The learned counsel also cited Regulation XX. of 1817, relating to the guidance of darogahs and other officers of police.]

F. C. Smith, cross-examined by Mr. Morton. Said he was the superintendent of Police and deposed to having written a letter to Mr. Ogilvy, on the subject of the insolent Rajah. He also spoke to the excited state of the districts of Alughly and Bacoorah.

Asad Ali, Nazir, cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. I was sent to Culna by Mr. Ogilvy, in the end of last April, to compel the followers of Pertab to disperse. Previous to my going others had been sent. (The witness provided the receipt of two reports, and the sending of two purwannahs.) I saw Pertab, and shewed the purwannah to disperse. It was read to him by Hurochunder Moonshee. I told him if he wanted to go to Burdwan, he must go with ten people, or so, and not with such a multitude. He said that he was willing to disperse his people, but he did not do so, and I thought this was a mere put off, and I reported accordingly. I took evidence at Culna before I made my report. (The depositions of certain witnesses examined by the Nazir, were put in.) When Mr. Shaw was arrested, the Magistrate told us to confine him in a good house, apart from the rest.

It was as good a house as could be procured. Mr. Ogilvy remained until the 7th or 8th of May, as he was examining witnesses upon this matter. I remained with him, and about two or three days after, more were examined at Burdwan.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke.—I did not read the purwannahs to all the 300 people; I thought it sufficient to read to the head persons. The depositions I took before making my report, were not taken on oath; but the witnesses were sworn afterwards. I arrived at Culna on the morning of the 30th April, and Mr. Ogilvy came on the night of the 1st of May.

Anundchander Chukurbutty, cross-examined by Mr. Morton.—I am a Mohurrir in the Burdwan Foujdarly Court. I recollect a report from the Nazir arriving on the 30th of April. I read it to Mr. Ogilvy myself, late at night, and he left Burdwan for Culna in consequence of it, two or three hours afterwards.

Meurick A. G. Shaw c. s., proved, that he saw a letter from Captain Hanyington in Mr. Ogilvy's hands, which determined Mr. Ogilvy on going to Culna. Witness accompanied him officially.

The letter of Captain Hanyington was objected to, as not proved. Mr. Prinsep contended that for his purpose it would be sufficient if the letter merely purported to come from Captain Hanyington. Mr. Clarke supported his objection and the learned Judge, allowed it. Mr. Clarke afterwards wished to withdraw the objection, as he had since learned that his attorney had agreed to admit handwriting, but the Judge said he could not take admissions in criminal cases. The signature, whoever, was afterwards proved and the letter was put in, and objected to by Mr. Clarke, but received by the Judge.

The Rev. A. Alexander, cross-examined by Mr. Morton.—I am a Catechist of Culna. I recollect the circumstance of Mr. Shaw's arrest. Mr. Ogilvy wished to bring him into my bungalow, but I objected, as the house was already full. I wrote a letter to Dr. Cheek, and another to Mr. Ogilvy, upon the subject of the insolent Pertab (letters put in). I recommended the house in Culna Gunge, in which he was afterwards placed. It was a good brick house. There was much confusion and excitement in Culna about Pertab. I saw a great concourse of people on two occasions.

Dr. G. N. Cheek, cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I wrote a letter to Mr. Alexander, by Mr. Ogilvy's desire and received an answer (letter put in). When Mr. Shaw was arrested, I was standing by, and I recollect distinctly that Mr. Shaw applied to be discharged on his own recognizances. I did not hear the word used at all. Mr. Shaw walked in the sun for half an hour opposite Mr. Alexander's bungalow. Mr. Ogilvy said that he could enter his palanquin. I myself brought Mr. Shaw a glass of water. I saw no harshness used.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. I do not think Mr. Ogilvy had a chalta. I am not sure whether Mr. Shaw had or not.

The documentary evidence was put in, and this closed the defence.

Mr. Clarke then replied. He said that he had looked in vain for any evidence, throughout the whole case for the defence, to impugn the conduct of Mr. Shaw, or to justify the proceedings of Mr. Ogilvy. It was not sufficient to proceed against an unoffending party on the mere fortuitous circumstance of his presence near the spot. Any man might be arrested at the caprice of a Magistrate, if this proceeding were legal and justifiable by the laws of England, and by their own Regulations.

Magistrates were bound to inquire, and examine witnesses on oath, and take other precautionary steps, instead of acting so rashly and precipitately. It had been assumed by his learned friend, that Pertab Chund was an impostor. This he considered altogether gratuitous, and he should take the liberty of assuming precisely the contrary. He admitted that he had once entertained great doubts, considering the improbability of the story; but evidence so strong had latterly been adduced, that his own opinion was changed, and he believed that of others had been also. However, he was not there to argue the case of this person. All that he relied upon was that it was admitted by the other side, that no actual disturbance had occurred, and there was nothing in the evidence to shew that the assembly was illegal. The regulations which had been read were not applicable to the case, because they only referred to natives and not to British subjects. Again, Mr. Ogilvy was not a Justice of the Peace, and he had only authority therefore, under the act of 53 Geo. III., which related to Magistrates not being Justices of the Peace. It had been asserted on the other side, that malice must be proved; now on this he took issue. Malice need not be proved in a criminal prosecution for assault and false imprisonment; for it would be inferred if the act were shewn to be illegal. In civil actions, it ought to be proved; but here, at all events, there was quite sufficient to warrant the inference, that the conduct of the defendant was malicious in the extreme. Not content with illegally and causelessly apprehending an innocent man, he had heaped indignities and insults upon him gratuitously; he had allowed him to remain exposed to the sun in a hot day of the hottest season; refused to allow him the indulgence of remaining in his own boat; ransacked his papers and boxes, and refused to permit him to open private letters even from his own wife, except under his own surveillance. Under all these circumstances he felt confident that the Jury could have no hesitation in returning a verdict against the defendant.

Sir Edward Ryan. This trial has occupied the Court several hours, and the remarks of the counsel on both sides have extended to considerable length, but the real points for your consideration, gentlemen of the jury, are very simple. Although the evidence may have appeared irrelevant, and, under other circumstances, I might have checked it; but I thought it advisable to allow all the transactions connected with this matter to be brought fully before the Court, as it might be necessary to give them some consideration hereafter. With the alleged circumstances of aggravation or of mitigation, however, you, gentlemen, have nothing to do:—you have only to pronounce the defendant either guilty or not guilty.

There are two points for your consideration:—first, whether the prosecutor, Mr. Shaw, was arrested and detained by the defendant, Mr. Ogilvy, or by his order and authority:—secondly, whether such arrest and detention was or was not authorized by law. On the first point there can be no doubt whatever, and it is unnecessary for me to recapitulate the evidence. Upon the second point, which is the main question, you will take the direction from me, gentlemen; and if the learned Counsel for the defence have any objections to urge against my view of the law, which I shall presently state to you, they can take their objections hereafter.

It appears that both the parties here are British subjects; and, fortunately, the rights of a British subject to liberty of person, are not involved in very complicated or doubtful law. The defendant is a Magistrate in the Company's service, but it has been proved that he was not qualified as a justice of the Peace. He must be taken, therefore, to have arrested the prosecutor solely in his capacity as Magistrate, and in my opinion no legal authority whatever has been shewn for that arrest. Had he been a Justice of the Peace, he might have acted under English law, but even then, the arrest and imprisonment, under the circumstances in evidence before us, would not have been justifiable. There was no warrant here, and no information laid or evidence taken on oath. It is laid down in the books, that a Justice of the Peace may apprehend or cause to be apprehended, by a verbal order merely, any person committing an offence in his presence; but there is no clear proof here of any offence committed at all, and still less of an offence being committed by the prosecutor or in the presence of the Magistrate. The trial of Pertab Chund and his followers at Hooghly, is before us in a very distinct manner, and we have nothing to shew clearly that any charge has been substantiated against any of them, and even if they had been guilty of some offence, the question would still remain whether Mr. Shaw was a party to their illegal acts. It is to his own acts to which we are to look. Now the letters which were written by his direction, tended to shew the reverse of any disposition to act contrary to the orders of the Magistrate, and there is no subsequent act of his which can be laid hold of as implicating him in any offence. Before the happening of the unfortunate affair at Culna, (formerly investigated in this Court, and which has become so notorious that I may allude to it although it is not evidenced here) Mr. Shaw, it appears, had gone to the house of a friend at some distance, and on his return, after the arrest of Pertab Chund and his followers, he is suddenly arrested and confined on a charge of "sedition." I am bound to tell you, gentlemen, that there is not a tittle of proof of any such charge.

The magistrate may have thought, and I have no doubt that he did think, that he was acting within his province and authority; but that is not the question:—the question is, whether he was or not acting according to law.

The regulation IX of 1807, I consider altogether inapplicable to this case; in that reference to natives only. The 53 Geo. III. c. 155, 165 and the Regulation II. of 1798 are the only enactments which give any power or authority to the Company's Magistrates, not being Justices of the Peace, over British subjects; and neither of these protect the defendant's acts in this instance. The latter Regulation, points out the course which ought to be adopted by the Magistrate where an offence has been committed by a British subject in the Mofussil; but there is nothing to prove here, and, moreover, the course directed is not to be pursued. I am of opinion, therefore, that nothing has been shewn to justify the arrest and detention by the defendant of the complaining party, and if you form your opinion, gentlemen, from my direction, you will at once find a verdict of guilty.

The Jury then retired for a few minutes, and pronounced a verdict of guilty.

The Chief Justice said, that he supposed the Counsel for the prosecution would not consider it necessary to press the second indictment. Mr. Clarke replied, that he would let his Lordship know on the following morning. The Chief Justice mentioned, that he should name a future day and hour over the defendant, in his own recognizances, to attend and abide the judgment of the Court on that day.

The trial did not terminate until 8 o'clock.—Hark.
January 11.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10TH.

THE QUEEN V. J. B. OGILVY.

Mr. Clarke intimated, that as they considered that the ends of justice had been sufficiently answered by the first conviction, it was not their intention to press the second indictment against the defendant.

Mr. Ogilvy appeared in court this morning, and was bound over in his own recognizances, to abide the judgment at the court on a future day.

We believe that notice will be given for Monday next.

THE QUEEN V. JOYCOOMAR OHOSE AND OTHERS.

The prisoners (nine in number) were indicted for assault upon Dookeram Dutt and Ramsoonder Day, in November 1837. This case was traversed over from last sessions.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Nott appeared as Counsel for the prosecution. The prisoners were not defended by Counsel. Two witnesses were called for the crown, but they failed to make out the case, and the Jury returned a verdict of not guilty.—[Ibid.]

FRIDAY, JANUARY 11.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton).

W. C. HURRY AND OTHERS, ASSIGNEES, &C. V. DABEYPER- SAUD DUTT AND OTHERS.

The bill was filed to carry into effect a decree of the 9th of April 1829, and to declare and decree the rights of all the parties, and for a partition and sale of the joint property of the Dutt family, and for an account. There were very many different parties to this suit whose interests were represented by different counsel. A decree was taken by consent for a reference to the Master, for a partition of the property and for an account.

Decree accordingly.

HURRY DOSS AND ANOTHER V. GUNNEESERAM AND ANOTHER

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case. It was an action between merchants to recover the balance of account upon an account stated.

Mr. Cochrane for the defence.

The plaintiffs obtained a verdict.

IN EQUITY.

SETABO BEEBER, WIDOW, &C. V. PERTAB SING DOOARE.

In this suit a decree was taken by consent.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the complainant.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Nott for the defence.

Decree by consent - Hukara January 12.

THE QUEEN V. J. B. OGILVY.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton addressed the Court. They referred to Regulation 11. of 1796, XV. of 1806, IX. of 1807, and XX. of 1817 and 53 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 105, upon the question of jurisdiction; and also the case of Berkwich v. Hilly 5 Barnwell and Creswell's Reports, p. 35, to shew, that an arrest may be justified without a warrant on a reasonable charge of felony, though it should ultimately appear that no offence at all was committed. They also contended that even if a British subject was not amenable to the same law of arrest as a native, it must be clearly shown, that the British subject upon the arrest being attempted, had distinctly informed the Magistrate that he was such British subject and had claimed the benefit of his exemption. How otherwise could the Magistrate be certified, that the party was a British subject and not amenable to his jurisdiction? Now, in the present case, it did not appear in evidence, that Mr. Shaw had even distinctly told the Magistrate that he was a British subject; and for all that the Magistrate knew to the contrary, he might have been a Frenchman or a Greek. The learned Counsel then commented upon the circumstances which appeared in mitigation, and urged, that the defendant had been guilty, at the utmost, of a mistake on a dubious point of law, and that it was out of the question to attribute motives of personal animosity where the parties appeared to have been previously actually unacquainted personally with each other, and they relied upon the admission of the Chief Justice, in his summing up to the Jury, that the defendant doubtless imagined that he was acting within the scope of his duty and authority. These observations were not addressed to the Court with a view to obtain a new trial, as the defendant himself was altogether unwilling that a repetition of this lengthened investigation should take place, but to shew to the Court, under what circumstances the defendant acted, and that he was influenced by no improper motives.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith, contra, said, that it had not been their intention to speak in aggravation, unless their learned friends on the other side addressed the Court in mitigation, and they had understood that it had been decided upon to abstain from making any such comments, but as that intention had been departed from, they felt it their duty, on the other hand, to make some observations upon the subject. The learned counsel were then proceeding to argue the question of law, whether the Magistrate had jurisdiction or not, but they were stopped by the Chief Justice, who said that the Court had no doubt upon that question. The counsel then confined their remarks to the evidence on the trial, to shew that there were circumstances of aggravation instead of extenuation.

The Court deliberated for about a quarter of an hour, when their Lordships' unanimous judgment was thus pronounced by the Chief Justice.

Sir Edward Ryan.—As some doubt and confusion appear to prevail upon the question of law, I shall again state the opinion of the Court, although the ground of application for a new trial has been abandoned by the defendant's counsel. It was my opinion at the trial, and I state it again, that the common law of England is the law applicable here, except where it has been altered, by Statute Law or Regulations, registered in this court previously to 3 and 4 W. IV., or by acts of the Legislative Council subsequently to that statute. Now the course to be adopted is fully pointed out by Reg. 11. of 1796,* which relates especially to the arrest or apprehension of British subjects by Magistrates in the Mofussil, part being applicable to Magistrates qualified as Justices of the Peace, and part to Magistrates not so qualified. This is in some degree modified by Reg. XV. of 1806, but not in any respect material by here. These are the only two Regulations applicable, and under neither of these has the defendant acted, nor, if he had, could his acts be justified, for these Reg. are merely directory of our common law. The statute 53 Geo. III. c. 155. s. 105, also relates to Magistrates not Justices of the Peace, and gives them power to take cognizance of certain offences committed by British subjects, upon the complaint of natives; but it is not pretended that Mr. Ogilvy acted under this statute. The other Regulations cited, the Reg. IX. of 1807, and XX. of 1817, are inapplicable altogether, having reference to natives only and not to British subjects. I say, therefore, now, as I said before, that the defendant has shewn no authority whatsoever for making the arrest. There is quite sufficient evidence for a Jury to infer (if necessary) that Mr. Ogilvy was aware that Mr. Shaw was a British subject, but the Court are of opinion, that this was unnecessary. It is not for the party to apprize the Magistrate, that he is a British subject, and not amenable to the Magistrate's authority; the onus is upon the Magistrate himself, who is to take proper precautions that he does not exceed his powers. In this very Court, the Judges take especial care every day in trials, civil and criminal, that they act within their jurisdiction.

* His Lordship observed, that this Regulation contained a curious misrecital which ran through the whole of it, the statute cited being 21 Geo. III. c. 63, instead of 33 Geo. III. which it ought to be.

The Chief Justice then addressed the defendant, and pronounced sentence as follows:

"James Balfour Ogilvy. It is now my duty, and an extremely painful one, to pass upon you the sentence of the Court. You have been found guilty of the offence called false imprisonment, which means the restraint of personal liberty without lawful cause. The facts of the case are extremely few, when divested of all irrelevant matter. It appears in evidence, that Mr. Shaw arrived at Culna on the 29th of April and that he had been a native as the legal adviser of Pertab Chund. It appears that Pertab Chund had been previously some days at Culna with his houts and his followers and attendants in considerable numbers, that he was proceeding to Burdwan, and that he was waiting at Culna, to consult with Mr. Shaw on his arrival, (as he had a perfect right to do) upon the subject of the property to which he laid claim. While Pertab Chund and Mr. Shaw were together in the box of the former, the Durogah comes on board—some joking remarks pass—a perwannah from you is read, the Naze is sent for but refuses to come, and the Durogah voluntarily goes away without any resistance whatever having been offered to him. Pertab Chund then writes a very proper letter under the express advice of Mr. Shaw stating his reasons for coming, declaring that there is no tumultuous assemblage, yet offering to disperse any of his followers who might be pointed out as objectionable. Mr. Shaw has stated in his examination, that he knew of no other persons at all, and it seems that his conduct was perfectly proper, regular and judicious. It further appears, that Mr. Shaw proceeded the next morning to Pragatchee, the house of a friend, and that he was very urgent that the letter should be despatched before his departure. It is proved that this letter was in the possession of the Naze, who did not deliver it to you, but mentioned it, adding that he considered it a mere evasion. You arrived at Culna it seems, on the Tuesday night, and it appears that you set out from Burdwan early in consequence of the letter received from Captain Hanyington. On Wednesday morning the unfortunate Culna affair took place. At noon on that day, Mr. Shaw arrived from Pragatchee, on hearing of the disturbance, and while he was in his palanquin, he was arrested by you on a charge of "sedition." I said at the trial, and I repeat it now, that there is no title of foundation for any such charge; nor can I see how Mr. Shaw could be in the least degree implicated in raising an unlawful assemblage, even if such there had been,—on the contrary, he appears throughout to have given proper and judicious advice. After his arrest, he is detained three days at Culna, when he is sent by an order of your Foujdary Court to Burdwan, where he remains in imprisonment until released by a writ of habeas corpus from this Court. Now for all this arrest and imprisonment, there was no justification at all in point of law or fact, and I regret too to say, that your conduct was marked by some degree of unnecessary harshness. You certainly did not act with the caution and forbearance which you ought to have exercised.—The imprisonment of the complaining party was most unwarrantable, and the only circumstance which influenced us and induces us to abstain from pronouncing a sentence of imprisonment upon you, is our belief, that you were actuated only by an anxious desire to preserve the public peace, and that your mistaken apprehension of the danger to be apprehended from the Culna assembly, and your supposition that Mr. Shaw might be in some way implicated in the supposed disturbance, arose from the letters written by Captain Hanyington, Mr. Alexander and Dr. Cheek. These letters appear to have excited considerable alarm in your mind, but they ought to have led you to institute a regular inquiry, the result of which would have shewn, that the exaggerated statements contained in these letters, were not borne out by fact; that there had been no riot, affray or disturbance whatsoever; and that there was nothing to implicate Mr. Shaw in any offence, even if any had been committed. I hope that this case will be a caution to all armed with similar powers not to use them rashly, but to exercise due discretion before they deprive any person, Native or European, of personal liberty, equally dear to all. For the reasons which I have stated, we forbear to pronounce a sentence of imprisonment; but we cannot allow this case to pass with impunity, and our sentence is that you pay a fine of two thousand rupees to the Queen, and that upon payment of the same you be discharged.

ODOYCHURN MOOKERJEE versus LUCKYNARAIN MUNDLE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep, on behalf of the plaintiff, moved for an order, that the Collector of the Twenty-four Pergannahs do pay over the sum of Company's rupees 21,043, now in his hands, to the Sheriff of this Court.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith opposed the motion on behalf of different parties.

The Court said, that they should make an order upon the Collector to pay over to the Sheriff and that he could come in afterwards to oppose its being paid out of the hands of the Sheriff.

BONNERJIE D. BONNERJIE.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, opposed the petition for an appeal in the Privy Council in this case, which had been filed by a creditor, Rajah Bejoychund Sing, on the ground that the appellant was not sufficiently a party to exercise the right of appeal.

Mr. Clarke was heard on behalf of his client, Rajah Bejoychund Sing.

The Court considered that the party had a right to try the question on appeal, and allowed the petition.

KISTNOOHUNDER GHOSK v. KISTNOOHORUR GHOSK.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that the sum of Rs. 5,000, which was payable out of a sum 60,000 in Court, standing to the credit of the Court, might be paid out, according to the directions contained in the will of Rajah Rajkissen Banadoor, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the shroud of Rajah Kallikissen's grandmother. It appeared that the lady was not actually dead, but she had been taken to the banks of Ganges for the performance of the last ceremonies, and the learned Counsel said there was no doubt that she would die.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this was a very curious application in the present stage of matters, and that it would be considerably more satisfactory to the Court to wait until the lady's decease had actually occurred.

Refused.

The case of Gopcomahun Deb, v. The East India Company, which stood for hearing to-morrow (Tuesday) has been postponed until Wednesday, on account of the temporary indisposition of the Advocate-General. The Court also intimated, that for the same reason they should not take any contested motions to-morrow (this day) in which the learned Advocate was engaged as counsel.—Hurkaru, January 15.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1839.

RAJAH GOPAUL INDRONARAIN ROY VERSUS ISWERCUNDEN PAUL CHOWDRI AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

Mr. Prinsep moved to make an order absolute that the sum of Rs. 42,595 in the hands of the Accountant-General, standing to the credit of the above causes, be paid over to Sreemutty Unhoopoorah Dabee, the sole Executrix, under the will of the late Rajah Gopaul Indronarain Roy, to whom probate of the said will had been granted by this Court.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause on behalf of Rajah Goluck Indronarain Roy, the adopted son and heir at law, and Rannee Rajessary Dabee (the younger widow of Rajah Gopaul, and the adopted mother and natural guardian of Rajah Goluck), by whom a libel had been filed on the Ecclesiastical side of the Court, for the purpose of calling in and cancelling the probate of the instruments purporting to be the last will and testament of the said Rajah Gopaul, alleged to be a forged document. The learned Counsel urged, that it was quite impossible to grant the present application, until the question relating to the validity of the instrument raised by the libel filed, should be solemnly determined.

Mr. Prinsep apprehended that something more ought to be done than merely to bring in a certificate of the libel being filed. He was given to understand that the libel merely contested the question of adoption, and not the validity of the will. His learned friend ought to have filed a cross-bill, and so tried the question.

Mr. Clarke hoped he was rather too old a practitioner in this Court to file a libel on the Ecclesiastical side for the purpose of contesting a question of adoption. He would now make the same offer, which he had made before, at least a month ago; that, upon the complainant undertaking to amend his supplemental bill, and to make Rajah Goluck Indronarain Roy and Rannee Rajessary parties to the supplemental and revived suit, he, as counsel for these parties, would undertake to enter an appearance for them, and to consent to an issue without going into the Examiner's Office, the costs to abide the event of the cause.

The Court acquiesced in this, and Mr. Prinsep consented accordingly.

Order, discharged upon the above terms.

(The Rannee's securities, under the order of Court, giving her leave to file the libel on the Ecclesiastical side, were James Pattie, Charles Tucker and Ros-Donnelly Mangler, Esquires, the Members of the Sudder Board of Revenue.)—Hurkaru, Jan. 18.

MONDAY, JANUARY 21.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir H. W. Seton.)

AMEERUN BEKER AND OTHERS V. SHAICK YFER ALLY.

Mr. Prinsep shewed cause against a rule nisi for making absolute an attachment for non-performance of an award, directing the payment of a sum of money by the defendant. He took several objections:—first that it did not appear from the affidavit that the original award had been shewn to the defendant; secondly, that it did not appear that any demand had been made by the plaintiff, or on their behalf, at the time when the money became payable by the terms of the award; and lastly, that the award directed the plaintiffs also to perform something on their part, which it did not appear distinctly had been performed by them, and until performance on their own part they could not call on the other side. He cited Caldwell on Awards.

Mr. Leith supported the rule and contended, that it was unnecessary to shew that the original award had been formerly served on the defendant, as it distinctly appeared that he had attended before the arbitrator and was aware of its having been made. He also urged, that it was quite unnecessary for the plaintiffs to make any demand of payment of the sums found due, and directed to be paid, by the award; for as time and place were specified, the mere omission to pay after the expiration of the limited period, constituted, ipso facto, disobedience of the terms of the award, and made the defendants liable to an attachment. With respect to the third objection, it might have some weight, if performance on the part of the plaintiffs had been made a condition precedent to performance on the part of the defendants; but in the present case these were made substantive and independent matters, and it was unnecessary, therefore, for the plaintiff to shew performance.

The Court were of opinion that there was nothing in any of the objections taken, and the rule was made absolute.

R. A. MACNAGHTEN V. SAMUEL SMITH.

Mr. Clarke moved for judgment, as in case of a non-suit against the plaintiff, for not proceeding to trial.

Rule Absolute.

R. A. MACNAGHTEN V. F. O'BORNE.

Mr. Clarke made a similar motion in this case.

Rule Absolute.

A common law cause, which stood for to-morrow, is postponed on account of the absence of the Advocate-General. The learned Advocate, we regret to say, is extremely indisposed, and intends to proceed this week to the Sandheads for a few days, for the benefit of his health. Sir J. P. Grant and Mr. Leith are also going down the river to-morrow with the Hardwicke (not from ill-health however) and will be absent a day or two.—Hurkaru January 22.

GUNONARAIN DUTT V. UNHOOPORNAH DOSSEE, AND THE CROSS CAUSE.

Mr. Prinsep (in the absence of his leader, the Advocate-General) appeared alone for the complainant in the original suit, and prayed for a decree by consent. The case had been filed to try the validity of a will, alleged to have revoked a former genuine will, and an issue upon the point had been directed and actually tried.

Mr. Clarke had been counsel on the other side in the trial of the issue, but he was instructed not to make any opposition now.

Sir E. Ryan said, that as there appeared to have been no general advertisement for creditors to come in, the decree should be without prejudice to their claims, if any.

Decree by consent.—Hurkaru, January 23.

Admiralty Side.

A. MCPHAIL V. THE BARK OR SHIP CALLED THE ROBOUNG.

Mr. Prinsep moved, on behalf of the promovent, who was a seaman suing for wages, that proclamation might be made by the Cryer in open Court, for all persons in general having, or pretending to have, any right, title or interest in the abovementioned ship or bark, to appear and answer, and if no person should appear, that the Court, upon petition, might pronounce them in contempt, and in pain of their contumacy, decree the first default to have incurred. (The learned L. L. D. cited 2 Brown's Admiralty Law, p. 399 for the practice on this point, which appeared altogether a sealed book to most of the Court!)

Proclamation was then thrice made, and upon the non appearance of any proctor on behalf of the impugnant, the Court decreed the first default to have incurred.

[Mrs.—This step, (according to the practice at home) is to be repeated four times on four successive Court days, and upon the four defaults being incurred, the proctor of the promovent exhibits a summary petition, called the articulus ex primo decreto, reciting the cause of suit, the parties cited having been called and not appearing, and standing in contempt by having incurred four defaults, whereupon the oath of the debt having been made, the proctor of the promovent prays right and justice, and to be put in possession of the ship, the tackle, apparel and furniture. In the Supreme Court, it seems there is this difference, that the summary petition ought to be exhibited in the first instance, as on the plea side the plaint is filed before the writ issues, by reason of the requisite exemption of jurisdiction.]

The Court accordingly decreed the first default.

DOM ON THE DEMISE OF FREE KHEVARAIN MOOKERJEE
V. EDWARD HILDER.

This was an ex parte ejectment case, which was postponed on account of the non-attendance of witnesses, it having been understood that no causes would be heard to day.

The Chief Justice intimated, that a single Judge would sit tomorrow, Wednesday, (this day) and common motions only be taken—Ibid.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24.

IN THE MATTER OF RUSSEL,

Mr. Clarke moved in this case. The Court had granted last term a rule absolute for a certiorari to remove into this Court the conviction and all the proceeding had before Mr. Allen the Magistrate of Pubna, against the applicant, Mr. Russel—for error apparent on the face of the judicial records or records of conviction, (see the Hurkaru of November 6th.) It appeared that under the certiorari, "office-copies" only of the proceedings had been returned out of the Judge's (cutcherry, and of these translations had been made by the interpreter of the Supreme Court. The "originals" had since been returned out of the cutcherry, and the object of this motion was that the translations might be annexed to the originals in order to save the very unnecessary expense of re-translation.

Mr. Smith, the interpreter, mentioned, that he had himself compared the office copies with the originals, and found them to correspond.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the documents could not be allowed to leave the office of the clerk of the crown, but the interpreter might attend therein and the translations could then be dis-annexed from the office-copies, and annexed to the originals.

Motion granted.

MUDDOORODDUN SANDAL V. RADSMONEY DOSEER.

A motion was made in this case on a former day, on behalf of the complainant, to clear his contempt for non-compliance with an order of Court, and released on account of defective grounds. (See the Hurkaru of Wednesday January 16th.)

Mr. Prinsep now renewed his motion, to make absolute the order to clear the contempt, and that the complainant be at liberty to proceed in the reference before the Master. The grounds had been amended, and the necessary certificate obtained from the Master, that the complainant had duly complied with the order requiring him to bring all books, vouchers, &c., into the Master's Office.

Mr. Clarke took an objection that the time limited in the order of reference had expired, and the complainant had omitted to apply to the Court to keep the reference alive.

Mr. Prinsep said, that the time had certainly expired, but the fact was that they had made several unsuccessful attempts to clear their contempt, and until that was done, they could not revive the reference. He apprehended, however, that the Court would now allow the contempt to be cleared at all events, and if necessary a distinct motion would be made to revive.

Mr. Clarke said, there was this difficulty, that the defendant would have no opportunity of doing what they were entitled to do, if dissatisfied with the Master's Report, namely to examine witnesses on interrogatories before the Master.

Sir E. Ryan.—If you consent to the reference standing revived the order of course be drawn up without prejudice to your right to file interrogatories.

Mr. Clarke then said, that he would consent upon condition of the other side paying all costs incurred, including the costs of this opposition. His learned friend was clearly irregular; and this would not of course be constrained into a precedent in practice.

Rule absolute on terms.

IN THE GOODS OF HORNET.

Mr. Prinsep moved for probate of the will of the Testator. The whole instrument was written in the Testator's own handwriting, but the signature was not added, and the attestation clause was incomplete, blanks, being left for the names. The learned counsel observed that in Cubbold v. Buas (4 Ves Jun, 200) note the Court of Delegates held such a will good although he admitted that some subsequent authorities, especially Walker v. Walker 1 Merivale, 503, held that the presumption of law was against such a testamentary paper.

Sir E. Ryan said, that it was impossible for the Court to hold otherwise than that such a testamentary paper was incomplete in the apprehension of the testator, unless it appeared that he was prevented from finishing it by the act of God, as sudden death or the like.

Probate refused.

A single Judge will sit tomorrow and Saturday, as there are no causes to be taken this week.

Rajah Gopemohun Deb's case will not be taken, until after the common law causes (two or three short ones) standing over. It is understood that the learned Advocate-General will be able to attend upon Monday.—Hurkaru, Jan. 25

MONDAY, JANUARY 28.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

Mr. Clarke shewed cause against an order for a commission directed to three European gentlemen at Burdwan, to take the answer of the defendant, one of the widows of Rajah Luchunder. The original bill had been filed by the lady against the complainant in the cross cause, who was the collector of her rents, and upon the filing of the cross-bill, the commission to take her answer had been applied for. The ground of objection was that the complainant swore in his belief that it would tend to degrade the family, if the answer were sworn in the manner required by the order, and he suggested that the commission ought to be directed to members of the family.

The Advocate-General showed cause. This was the most curious objection within his experience. The objection to the mode of taking the answer, was not the party to be degraded thereby (if degradation there were), but the person who would incur the risk of the answer being taken in an improper manner, but the complainant himself, the very party who required the answer and who alone was to benefit by its being taken at all!

Sir E. Ryan.—You do not object to the commission. I suppose!

The Advocate-General.—Object to it, my Lord! why it is our own application, and it is the other party who object the mode upon this officious suggestion. It will be within the recollection of the Court, that the oath of a Hindoo lady of much higher rank has been taken in a similar manner. I allude to the Grandmother of the present claimant of the throne of Oude, who was sworn to a writ of habeas corpus before a European commissioner, under an order of this Court.

Sir E. Ryan.—You are clearly entitled to the order. The complainant of course is entitled to come in and join in the commission.

Order absolute.

Mr Clarke (with whom was Mr. Sandes) moved to set aside an order, that an attachment do issue for want of an answer to the amended bill, and also to discharge the order to amend for irregularity. Exceptions had been filed to the answer, which exceptions had been overruled, and the complainant had obtained an order to amend the bill, but there had been no fresh subpoena to answer, and there was no direction contained in the order to answer the amendments. Now how was the defendant to take notice that a further answer was required at all, for there might be an amendment of the bill without any necessity for a further answer? The learned counsel admitted, that according to the 8th Equity rule there was no fresh subpoena to answer required, but he said it was clear there was an irregularity in moving an attachment for disobedience to the order of the court, when there was no direction in the order which the defendant could have disobeyed!

The Court stopped Mr. Clarke on his point and called on the other side.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep contra contended, that it was invariably the practice in this court to answer an amended bill without either fresh subpoena or order, other than the mere order (as in this case) that complainant have leave to amend his bill.

Sir E. Ryan.—When exceptions to the answer are allowed, is it not the usual order that the defendant do answer the amendments and exceptions together? It is impossible that you can get an attachment without shewing that the defendant has disobeyed some order of the court.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep. The original subpoena to appear and answer must be taken to extend to the amended bill by implication, and it is this that the defendant has disobeyed.

Sir E. Ryan.—That has been obeyed by putting in a full answer to the original bill, the exceptions to which answer were overruled. This attachment must clearly be set aside, with costs, for irregularity. We think the order to amend should stand, however, and that the complainant should have leave to add the order to answer the amended bill.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes then further urged, that the order itself was irregular under the 8th Equity rule, inasmuch as it ought to have expressed that the order to amend should become void, unless the complainant should amend her bill in three weeks, and also on the ground that the amended bill had been freshly engrossed, and where the amendment required a re-engrossment, the order ought to contain an undertaking on the part of the complainant to pay the costs incurred.

The Court, after some deliberation, held the order regular, on the ground that the 8th Equity rule had been substantially complied with, for although the order did not mention it, the complainant had in fact amended his bill within the three weeks; and with respect to the undertaking to pay the costs incurred, the only costs would be the costs of the re-engrossed bill, which had actually been delivered and accepted gratis (See Cox v. Chapman 6 Maddock's Reports p 314).

Order absolute to set aside the attachment.

IREMUTTY COMULMONY DORSEY v. SRIEMUTTY SESCOONDERY DORSEY.

Mr. Clarke moved that the petition of appeal in this case be allowed. An issue had been directed from the equity side, and the Court had found a verdict for the defendant at law. Now the plaintiff could not appeal against the finding of the issue, and the course adopted, therefore, for the purpose of bringing the evidence in the issue before the Privy Council at home, had been to move for an order on the Equity side for a new trial, and upon the order refusing such new trial, to move the appeal. (See Clarke's Rules and Orders 172 n.)

Sir E. Ryan intimated an opinion, that the appellant could not move for the order of appeal under the Charter until the decree. The whole of the proceedings would then be brought before the Court at home.

Mr. Clarke apprehended that the proper mode was to apply for the order of appeal on the refusal of the motion to grant a new trial. The party was at liberty to appeal under the Charter against any interlocutory order of the Court.

Sir J. P. Grant suggested, that the issue was directed from the Equity side merely to satisfy the conscience of the Court, and the Court only found upon the verdict that they remained nothing further to satisfy their own consciences upon the point referred.

Mr. Clarke urged that there was this difficulty, that if he waited for the decree, it might be more than six months, from the trial of the issue, and he would then be precluded from questioning the verdict at law.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that six months was certainly a limited time if he appealed against the order alone, but if the appeal were against a final order or decree, it would of course open up all the former proceedings, whatever length of time might have elapsed.

Mr. Clarke said he would mention the matter again, and make a formal application for notice, but he believed there was no opposition.

Mr. Leith rose and said, that he believed there certainly would be opposition. The Attorney for the defendant at law was suffering from temporary indisposition, and he understood that this had been mentioned to the other side, and that a request had been made to postpone the matter until Thursday.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the application had better be renewed on some future day.

Stood over.

Common law causes stand for to-morrow and Tuesday, and a demurrer is also down for hearing. On Thursday there are contested Equity motions coming on, Gopeemohun Deb's case is, therefore, definitively fixed for Monday next, the first day of the Sittings.—Hur., January 29.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 29.

NARAIN SINGH V. NAWAB RUMUN UDDOWLA.

Mr. Lieth opened the pleadings.

Mr. Clarke stated the case.

This was an action on the common assumpsit counts for the sum of Co. Rs. 2,369, the price and value of certain goods and chattels, consisting of a horse, double and single-barrelled guns, jewellery and miscellaneous property sold by the plaintiff to the defendant, the Nawab of Moorshedabad. The learned counsel stated, that not only would the sale be proved, but the defendant would be shown to have been present at a settlement of accounts and to have admitted the sums due.

The sale and delivery of the goods were proved, and a written account stated, was proposed to be read, signed by a gomastah on behalf of the defendant.

Mr. Prinsep, (who was alone for the defence) objected to this being put in as evidence to bind his client, on the ground that it contained a promise to pay, and there was very loose evidence indeed of authority.

Sir E. Ryan, did not see why the plaintiff wished to put in this written acknowledgment, for it appeared to the Court, that the case was quite sufficiently made out.

Mr. Clarke, urged that it was receivable in evidence, but he had no wish to press it unless (as he anticipated) his learned friend had some case behind.

Mr. Prinsep declared, that he had no case whatever either before or behind!

Verdict for the plaintiff for Co.'s Rs. 2,369.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF LUCKERNARAIN MOOKERJEE V. EDWARD HILDER.

This was an action of Ejectment for the recovery of certain premises situated in the Leil Bazar Road in the town of Calcutta. The case came on ex parte against the casual ejector. The title of the lessor of the plaintiff was derived under a sale by the Sheriff by virtue of a writ of execution, and vendition exponas.

The writ of feri facias in Lucksunaruin Mookerjee and another v. Issur Chunder Mookhopadhyay was put in, and the vendition exponas, with the levy indorsed and the Sheriff's return thereto.

The Court gave a verdict for the premises sought to be recovered.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith appeared on behalf of the lessor of the plaintiff.

Verdict for the lessor of the plaintiff.

GUNGAPERSAD GOSAIN V. RICHARD HOWE COCKERELL AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case. This was an action of assumpsit against Messrs. Cockerell and Co., on a special agreement to return with interest on a certain day (November 1st 1839) certain Company's paper (described as thirty four promissory notes) of the amount of Rs. Rs. 94,200, deposited by the plaintiff with the defendants. The plaintiff had taken an acknowledgment and undertaking to return the deposited paper, signed on behalf of Messrs. Cockerell by Mr. William Martin, one of the partners of the house. The defendant had pleaded the general issue, and the learned counsel said he was quite ignorant what defence was intended to be set up under this plea.

Mr. Beckwith was called to prove the signature of the partner, Mr. W. Martin.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defendants, admitted that he had no defence on this side of the Court. (The undertaking to return the paper was unconditional, and it did not appear, therefore, under what circumstances it was deposited.)

Verdict for the plaintiff for Rs. Rs. 95,400.—Hur. karu 30.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1839.

DOE B. BUDDINAUTH GHOSAL V. J. A. DEVERELL.

Mr. Clarke moved to postpone the trial of this ejectment on the ground of the absence of a material witness and consented, if the rule were granted, that the lessor of the plaintiff might shew cause tomorrow.

Rule granted.

KISTNO CHUNDER GHOSE, V. KISTNOSHOKUR GHOSE.

Mr. Prinsep renewed his motion that the sum payable out of the fund standing in Court to the credit of the above cause, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the shroud of Rajah Kalikissen's grandmother, might be paid out of Court, according to the directions in Rajah Kalikissen's Will. This motion was refused on the former occasion, as it appeared that the lady was then not dead, although taken to the banks of the Ganges and momentarily expected to die. (See the Hurkaru of January 16th.) The learned Counsel stated that the lady was now actually dead, and he had an affidavit to that effect.

Order granted.

SURROOFCHUNDER GHOSE AND OTHERS V. RAMNARAIN DOSS AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings. The plaint was in ejectment.

The Advocate-General stated the case. The action was brought to recover certain premises, the joint property of a Hindoo family, which had been mortgaged by certain members of the family as a security for money lent, under a Bengallee instrument of mortgage, and assigned to the lessors of the plaintiff by bills of sale from the Sheriff. The learned Counsel stated, that it would appear in evidence, that the money had been advanced for the purpose of the joint family, and although all of the representatives of the family had not joined in the conveyance, he apprehended that it would be quite sufficient to bind all, if it were shown that the money had been received by the managing members for the use and behoof of all, and that the property had been assigned by them in the name of all. The learned counsel went into a detail of the pedigree, but it appeared that upon this part of the case there was no dispute on the other side. The ancestor was one Bhejoyram Doss, who died several years ago, leaving three sons, two of whom were now represented by certain of the defendants respectively, but with respect to the share of the third of whom no defence had been taken in the action. Three person had joined in the conveyance of the property.—Dunpo money Dosses, a widow, entitled to a life-interest in one-third, Rajchunder, entitled to one-sixth, and Nabikisto entitled to one-ninth absolutely. The learned counsel contended that these parties had executed the conveyances on behalf of the whole family, and that they had thus assigned not only their own shares, but the entire family estate.

The bills of sale were then put in, and witnesses were called to prove that the loan was for family purposes.

Mr. Leith appeared on behalf of the defendants. The defence that was set up was that the act of some only of the members of the family could not bind the whole estate. It appeared, moreover, from the terms of the bills of sale themselves, that the three members only professed to convey their own shares. The learned Counsel was further instructed, that with respect to five outfalls of the land, the property would be shown to have been separately held by Bissonauth Dass, a grandson of the propositus, and one of the defendants in the action.

One witness was called, but he failed to prove the separate property.

Sir E. Ryan. There must be judgment for the lessors of the plaintiff for the shares of the three members of the family who joined in the assignment. The question of Hindoo law does not arise whether the act of the managing member can bind the whole estate, for, even if the money lent had been distinctly shown to have been applied for the benefit of the joint family, we find, on looking into these bills of sale, (which are your own title-deeds, Mr. Advocate, and by which you must be bound), that the assignment only purported to extend to the shares of the three members who joined in the conveyance. Their shares amount to eleven-eighteenth parts of the whole.

Verdict for the lessors of the plaintiff for eleven eighteenths.—Hukuru, January 31.

BOMBAY SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.

Saturday, 15th December, 1838 10 A. M.

TRIAL OF WILLIAM M'CALLUM, THE EDITOR OF THE BOMBAY GAZETTE, FOR LIBEL.

This Prosecution was instituted by Rear Admiral Sir Charles Malcolm, late superintendent of the Indian Navy.

Upon the 7th day of September last, the Judges made absolute a rule previously obtained by Mr. Howard, for leave to file a criminal information against the Defendant, and this day being appointed for the trial, the clerk of the crown proceeded to call the Special Jurors who had been summoned for the purpose; upon which Mr. Campbell, the Defendant's counsel, rose and stated, that he had several objections to urge against the Special Jury—some conversation took place between the Judge Sir John Awdry and counsel; and the former decided that he could not at that stage of the proceedings entertain Mr. Campbell's objection. Mr. Campbell then stated, that as he was prevented taking the objections in the form he was intended, he was compelled to adopt the only course now open to him, which was to move to postpone the trial upon the ground of an affidavit of the defendant. Sir John Awdry intimated his opinion, that except by consent, he could not now hear such a motion; upon that Mr. Howard, counsel for the prosecution observed, that there was no wish on the part of the prosecution to deprive the defendant of any fair advantage; and that he should not object to the affidavit being read. The affidavit was then put in and read. It was of considerable length—its chief object and effect appeared to be to verify certain amended exhibits—one of them a letter which appeared in the Bombay Gazette shortly after the publication of one of the libels complained of in the Gazette newspaper, of July last, under the signature of "Censor", and subscribed by several of the principal residents of Bombay, expressing their disapproval of that publication. The affidavit stated these gentlemen to be on the grand jury list, also that the whole of the special jurors summoned were on that list, [although it did not appear that any of them had signed the letter.] It stated also that about the same time a meeting of the friends of Sir Charles Malcolm was held by several gentlemen, also upon the Grand Jury list, for the purpose of testifying their esteem for that officer upon his leaving the presidency; and that a subscription for a piece of plate had been raised in consequence. The other exhibits were certain printed letters, signed "Free Press", which the defendant swore he believed to have been written by one of the subscribers to the letter of disapproval, and which had been extensively circulated, being left in the night time at the dwellings of the principal inhabitants of Bombay and the suburbs. These letters appeared to be replies to several correspondents of the Gazette newspaper who had answered a letter of "Free Press" published in that Paper, in answer to and commenting on the letter of "Censor." They (the letter of Free Press) appeared to have been written under circumstances of irritation caused by the refusal of the Gazette to publish a communication of the writer, and were in substance an appeal to the community against "Censor," the Editor, and the correspondents who had attacked Free Press.

A certificate of the sheriff was read, that no special Jury list was kept in his office.

Mr. Campbell contended that the court had no power to grant a special Jury; and was proceeding to support his argument, when he was interrupted by Sir John Awdry, who said that at that stage of the proceedings, he could not hear that question argued that the defendant might have moved to rescind the order for a special Jury, but he (Sir John Awdry) well knew it had been the constant practice at Calcutta to grant special juries; and that it had also been done in the Recorder's Court here. Moreover, that Sir Edward West, who was a great master of Practice, had, when the act for allowance of native Jurors first came into operation, recognized the power of the Court to grant a special Jury—that with reference to this particular case it was a very proper course; indeed he did not think an instance could be found of a criminal information being tried before a common jury. Mr. Campbell then urged the probable bias occasioned by the circumstances detailed in the affidavit, as a reason for postponing the trial to give an opportunity of bringing his objections to the special Jury regularly to the notice of the court. This was not a special but a Grand Jury, and it was well known that the public expressions of opinion referred to in the affidavit, were intended to express collectively the sense of that portion of the community, from which the Grand Jurors, and this Jury, were selected. They could not, therefore, be considered impartial: and the question for the court was whether a possible bias could exist. There was no reason why this should not be tried by those who were the ordinary tribunal, and against whom there could be no possible imputation, who were not in the least likely to have been influenced by the publications mentioned in the affidavit.

The learned Gentleman, quoted some authorities; and in particular relied upon the judgment of Lord Kenyon in the case of the Dean of St. Asaph and other cases reported in the state trials. Mr. Howard, on behalf of the prosecution, made some general remarks upon the observations of the counsel for the defendant, and relied upon the case of Rex v. Elmonds and Barnwell and Alderson, in proof that his learned friend had not accurately stated the law. It was in that case distinctly laid down by the late Lord Tenterden, that the strongest expression of mere opinion uninfluenced by malice or ill-will, did not effect the competency of a juror. Against this the loose obiter dicta of Lord Kenyon, reported in the state trials, could have no weight.

After hearing Mr. Campbell in reply, who expressed in very emphatic terms his earnest hope, that in this case no bias existed elsewhere than in the jury; as the most honorable minds were often—and that, when they themselves least suspected,—the most prejudiced and influenced by unintentional bias, Sir John Awdry said he thought that the motive for the postponement was not sufficiently supported. It was brought forward at the latest possible period, and without any notice to the party prosecuting. Had it been in the power of the court to change the venue, it might, perhaps, be advisable, to take that course in order to avoid the possible imputation of bias. But if the phrase, possibility of 'bias', were to be construed as contended for by the counsel for the defence; all he (Sir John Awdry) could say, was that, in this country, public crimes not merely political, to which the argument more strongly applied, must remain unpunished. Here the matters, which he supposed to have created the bias, occurred anti litera motum, and could not have been with reference to any trial. It was said, that the grand and special jurors only could be biased; but this was not to be inferred. With respect to the letter of disapproval, it would rather appear to have been the exclusive act of the subscribers to that letter, and even had it been shewn that the conduct of the defendant had been such as to have excited general indignation, that was no ground for such a motion as this, which, if granted, would impose a hardship on the prosecutor. His Lordship distinguished the cases cited by Mr. Campbell from the present. The Clerk of the Crown then proceeded calling the Jurors. Upon the name of ——— being called, Mr. Campbell intimated that Europeans would be preferred. The learned Judge directed that the Europeans should first be called. He wished it to be clearly understood, that he intended no reflection upon the native jurors, but a case of libel required a peculiar acquaintance with the language and manners of the parties in such a case; therefore, there was some reason for giving the preference to Europeans, if there happened to be a sufficient number summoned. Upon the 3d Juror, Mr. Boutehier, coming to the book to be sworn, Mr. Campbell said he had some questions to put to that gentleman. Some conversation then ensued between Sir John Awdry and the counsel on both sides. The Judge decided that the case, already quoted of Rex v. Elmonds, was conclusive against the course attempted by Mr. Campbell.

The following were the Jury sworn.

Richd. F. Barra, Esq.	J. J. Falconer, Esq.
Alex. Bell, "	T. W. Henderson, "
F. Boutehier, "	G. S. King, "
W. Baxter, "	S. D. Murray, "
H. F. Gaden, "	H. F. Owen, "
A. Ferquharson, "	A. B. Orlebar, "

Mr. Montriou then opened the information, which consisted of four counts.

The first Count charged, after some explanatory allegations, that William McCullam; late of Bombay aforesaid, gentleman, well knowing the premises, and unlawfully and maliciously devising and intending to traduce, vilify and defame the said Sir Charles Malcolm, in respect of his conduct during the time of the said, Sir Charles Malcolm, holding and exercising in his said office of Superintendent at aforesaid, and to traduce vilify and defame the said Sir Charles Malcolm, an Officer in her Majesty's Navy, and to bring him, the said Sir Charles Malcolm into public discredit, hatred and contempt, and to cause it to be generally believed that the said Sir Charles Malcolm exercised his said Office of Superintendent in an oppressive, unjust, unbecoming and improper manner, did, on the third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty eight, at Bombay aforesaid, unlawfully, wickedly and maliciously print and publish a certain false and scandalous libel, of and concerning the said Sir Charles Malcolm, and of and concerning the conduct of the said Sir Charles Malcolm, during the period of his holding, and in his said office of Superintendent, one period of which said libels is in the form of a letter addressed to the Editor of a certain newspaper, called the Bombay Gazette. And after setting that out, the information proceeded, and another portion of which libel is in the form of a letter composed and written by an officer of Navy, signing and calling himself 'Censor', and which is headed and addressed to an Ex-commander, the said Sir Charles Malcolm, and contains, &c.

Mr. Montriou read the whole of the libel out in each of the counts—the 2nd and 3rd counts charged the defendant with the publication in the Bombay Gazette newspaper, the letter of censor, and the 4th count set out part of one additional article subsequently published in that paper in answer to a correspondent.

According to the tenor following, to wit, with regard to the individual (meaning the said Sir Charles Malcolm) in whose behalf X. Y. (meaning the author or writer of the said letter signed X. Y.) stands up a champion, let our correspondent (meaning the author or writer of the said letter signed X. Y.) beware of urging the contest to an extremity, we (meaning the said William McCullam) shall be able to answer him (meaning the author or writer of the said letter signed X. Y.) even should he (again meaning the said author or writer) refer to matters of much graver import than those mentioned in the letter (meaning the said publication mentioned and complained of in the said 2nd count of this information, to the great scandal, &c., &c.).

George FREDERICK BONN, called and examined by Mr. Montriou, I am clerk to the Superintendent of the India Navy. I was so in July last. I know McCullam the defendant in this information. I believe he is an assistant in Pollexton, Milne and Co.'s Office, and Editor of the Gazette. I have always heard him called so, (some printed slips or proofs being shewn). I have seen these before. I saw them in the middle of July last. They were given to me by Mr. McCullam. I think in Pollexton, Milne and Co.'s Office, but I do not exactly recollect where. I asked him for them. I told him I wanted to shew them to Mr. Roberts. He did not make any objections, but told me to keep them close, and cautioned me against Sir Charles Malcolm's seeing them, because mischief might ensue, as he did not intend to publish the letter. I do not recollect any thing more that passed. I gave it to Mr. Roberts and requested he would not let Sir Charles see it. I received it from him again in 3 or 4 days. He afterwards asked me for it a second time. I gave it to him, but without making any remarks. I next found it in Sir Charles Malcolm's possession. Sir Charles shewed it to me at his house, when I went there about 10 days after I had given it to Mr. Roberts. Sir Charles Malcolm exercised the office of Superintendent of the Indian Navy up to the — I have been in the office since December last. From the 2nd July, Captain Oliver exercised the office of Superintendent. I believe the address on this paper to an Ex Com and lower down, to the R. A. E. S. to refer to Sir Charles Malcolm. The defendant gave me the proofs about the 15th, 16th, or 17th July I am not sure on which day, but am sure it was he that gave me them. I think I recollect defendant's hand writing. I have seen it several times. I have been in correspondence with him. I have received notes from him. (A receipt from the Defendant as Editor of the Bombay Gazette shown.) This is his writing.

Cross examined by Mrs. Campbell. I was clerk to Sir Charles Malcolm for a month; the month of June. I knew Mr. McCallum for about 3 months and I was intimate with him during that period. I dined with him several times. I have also gone up to his office during the day, and taken a glass of beer often. I did not send for this paper by any body's direction, no body told me to send for it. Mr. Roberts told me it was printed, and it was the general talk in the office—Mr. Roberts told me there were several of them about and asked if I had one, as I was intimate with Mr. McCallum. I said I had not but would write to him for one. I wrote but received no answer. I did not understand Mr. Roberts as ordering me to do so. I dined with defendant, and asked him then. I do not know whether he knew that Mr. Roberts is Sir Charles Malcolm's son-in-law, but I suppose he did as it is very well known. When I asked him for it I did not get it, because he was at his house, and the paper was at his office. I do not know that any one heard me ask for it. I took him aside. I do not recollect all the trivial circumstances. I next saw him a few (2 or 5) days after, I think at Pollexfen and Co.'s office. I am not aware that any one was present when I received the papers. I called on him for them. I do not think that I had any conversation with Mr. Roberts further than saying I had written for the papers and received no answer—nothing further. I cannot recollect the exact words spoken when I received the paper, only the purport of them. I told Mr. McCallum, that Mr. Roberts wanted to see it, I am positive I told him so. He told me to keep it close. I believed he signified his assent to my shewing it to Mr. Roberts. I did not state this in my affidavit. I do not know why. I did not draw up the affidavit. I suppose Mr. Patch did. I did not tell him what to put in it. I only swore to the contents of the affidavit. I do swear distinctly that I told him I should shew it to Mr. Roberts. I did not return the paper to Mr. McCallum. I did not think it requisite to give it back. He said he did not intend to publish it. Mr. Roberts gave it to Sir Charles Malcolm. When I gave it to him the second time—I did not give him any caution. I mentioned my having given it to Mr. Roberts several times after to Mr. McCallum Re-examined. I once also wrote so to him. I received an answer—here it is (produces it). It is read by the clerk of the crown and is a letter from defendant to witness, dated 12th August 1838, making application for the proof paper under legal advice, and remunerating with witness for having given it to Mr. Roberts.

Dhoonnoo Wiswanath, called and examined by Mr. Howard. I am clerk in Mr. Patch's office. I have seen these papers (Nos. of the Bombay Gazette of the 16th & 23rd July last). I saw them when I purchased them at the Gazette Office. I purchased them all. Letter shewn to witness. (This is a copy of a letter from Mr. Patch to Mr. McCallum. I delivered it to him. It was served on defendant on the 15th of August. Defendant received it, read it and said "very well." This (another) is copy of one sent on the 17th. I took it also, defendant was sitting with Mr. Sutherland, he received it, opened the wafer and read it, but said it was not his name. He also said Mr. McCallum is gone to Poonah, gave me the letter back and desired me to take it away. I told them Mr. M. was sitting there. I took the letter back and related the circumstances to Mr. Patch, he desired me to return to the place. I did so and gave the letter to Mr. McCallum.

John Willington Young, called and examined by Mr. Montrieu. I am a Lieutenant in the Indian Navy. I was Lieutenant on board of the Steamer Semiramis in July last. (Papers shown to witness.) I saw a paper similar to this between the 15th and 25th July last. I only read part of it, not word for word. I also read part of a letter signed "Cannon" in the Gazette—I mean that I saw papers similar to these proof slips. I left Bombay on the 15th. It was during the voyage that I saw them. It was read publicly on board the vessel. The Semiramis came back to Bombay on the 26th. This is not the same paper as I saw. That was brought on deck by Mr. Adam, who was a passenger on board and it belonged to him.

The Bombay Government Gazette and the London Gazette were then put in; the first to prove the recognition of Sir Charles Malcolm's rank by this Government—his holding office 10 years, and published at the time of his retirement with the thanks of the Government—the second proved a late increase of the rank of Sir Charles Malcolm, viz. to Rear Admiral of the white, as stated in the information.

Mr. Campbell made an energetic appeal to the Jury on behalf of the Defendant. The question of malice was not, as had been argued by his learned friend, an inference of Law. That had long ago been settled by Mr. Fox's act. The whole question was for the Jury; and the material point for them to consider was, had Mr. McCallum acted maliciously? It was immaterial what had been actually done if the defendant had not in fact been actuated by a malicious motive. Did it not then appear, that the Editor intended the publication in the Gazette to be, and believed that it was, a fair, an honest, though indeed a severe, a most severe, criticism upon the public acts of a public officer? Had he not shown an anxiety to render it fit for the eye of the public.

With respect to the printed slips, how improbable was the story told by Mr. Bone. And let it be borne in mind, that this person was a personal and intimate friend of the man whom he betrayed. At the very time that he was enjoying the hospitality of his friend, did he contemplate and devise the proof now adduced. Is it probable that Mr. McCallum, who was so anxious to keep the proof sheet, which was a mere printed memorandum for his own use, from the eye of Sir Charles Malcolm,—that copy which it is admitted was never intended to find its way into the newspaper—is it probable that he should have given it to Bone, with the intention or knowledge of its being exhibited to the son-in-law of Sir Charles Malcolm? The learned counsel cited some authorities in proof of the discretion of the jury, in finding the motive of the publisher of a libel, and amongst the rest the case of R. Reeves from the state trials. No witnesses were called for the defence.

Mr. Howard in reply, merely observed, that he had been misunderstood. He had stated that the intent might be drawn, as an inference of fact, not of law, from the nature and composition of the libels themselves; but he had also drawn the attention of the jury to intrinsic facts which afforded independent evidence of malice.

Sir John Awdry then charged the jury. The question of guilt upon a trial for libel, was as upon trial for murder, a question of intention; but it was necessary to beware lest it should become, as it was very apt to do, a question of words rather than of things. The act done is in a certain sense not proof of the intent; but in a certain sense also, it is evidence of intent. The intention is an inference to be drawn from the whole act done, and the circumstance connected with it.

In Reeve's case, which has been cited to you, the defendant had (I speak from memory) merely published an over-loyal pamphlet. The verdict was a political verdict; The jury examined the whole work; and upon comparing the part charged as libellous, with the remainder, considered that, upon the whole, it was not written by an enemy to the constitution. If a man of sound mind does what has an obvious tendency to insult and injure another's character, without sufficient legal excuse, he must be taken to be malicious. If you believe that the person who wrote the matter laid as libellous, with an honest intent and believing it to have been a fair and honest criticism, although a severe and unjust one; so far the publication was without malice. But here are many other attendant circumstances (the judge recapitulated part of the evidence commented on by Mr. Howard). It is for you to consider what is a fair criticism—what is insulting—what is defamatory—what publication does tend to produce a breach of the peace by an English gentleman, or by others on his behalf. It is said that the proceeding by information is oppressive. That is not correct.

A criminal information is a peculiar mode of proceeding, the chief object of which is to give the defendant an opportunity which otherwise he could not have, of shewing the truth of his aspersions if he can—it is the most complete mode that a prosecutor can adopt to clear his character.

If from the libel itself you infer, that any man in his senses who published it must have known that an obvious tendency was to traduce, vilify, and defame Sir Charles Malcolm as a naval officer, and a member of society, in the inner lam in this information, you must believe that the publisher intended that effect to be produced. The question is for you; it is for you to consider also whether this defendant could have had any sufficient excuse for his act. If I were to fire a pistol into that crowd; could I excuse myself from intending the consequence of so rash an act, by the declaration or proof that I intended merely to shew my skill by striking the turban of a person standing there? The natural effect of my act was dangerous and fatal.

This I must say. If a man who undertakes the serious duty of editing a newspaper, deliberately encourages or allows the insertion of abusive articles in his paper, he obviously intends to lend his paper for purposes of defamation and abuse.

That cannot be a fair comment on a man's public conduct, which does not give him an opportunity of answering it. Was it not the direct and immediate purpose of this writer or publisher to accuse Sir Charles Malcolm of misconduct, in such language and in such manner that he should be incapable of answering and refuting the calumny, if calumny it was?

With respect to the printed slips which were privately circulated, nothing could justify their being so carelessly printed or dealt with as to get abroad. If you were to do, what I see no ground whatever for your doing, I mean, discredit Mr. Bone, and believe that the defendant when he gave the paper to that gentleman, was not aware that it would be given to Mr. Roberts, even then the giving it to him at all, was a publication, and, as far as I can see, without excuse. If the intentions of the defendant were what he asks you to believe, would he have let the paper get out of his hands, so that it might be circulated at all? Then there are the notices in the Gazette, shewing the careful revision—the deliberation. Gentleman, the entire question is for you. The Judge may give his opinion, but I do not think it necessary in this case to do so.

The Jury retired for about ten minutes, and were permitted to take the information with them. Upon their return, they delivered the following verdict:

GUILTY UPON ALL THE COUNTS.

Judgement postponed until Tuesday the 18th instant. The defendant was left at a large, without bail, by consent of the counsel for the prosecution. On Tuesday last, at 10 A. M., Mr. McCallum appeared in court to hear judgment. He handed in an affidavit which was read by the clerk of the crown, and stated that the defendant was sole assistant in the firm of Pollexfen, Milnes & Co., the members of which were now absent from the presidency; and that if he were incarcerated, it would be very injurious to the interests of his employers. Upon being asked if he had any cause to assign why the judgment and sentence of the court should not be passed upon him, the defendant answered, that he had no cause to state.

Sir John Awdry then delivered the judgment of the court in the following words.

I am sorry that your employers should suffer; but while their interests might have been a further reason for abstaining from a breach of the law, there can be no ground for not visiting the breach with punishment.

This is a case of no common atrocity. You have with the utmost deliberation, published against a Flag Officer, on his retirement, with the thanks of the Government, from the command of the Indian Navy, such aspersions as you must if you have any understanding of the English language, and of the first principles of Honour, have known, could not be credited without his total ruin in point of character. Yet you have declared upon oath, that you had no malice towards him. Your Attorney ought to have told you that the determination to do mischief is just as much malice, whether hatred to the individual is the ultimate motive or whether you seek his ruin for some other purpose. The hired assassin is never regarded as less guilty than his employer, and he whose angry passions may have blinded his judgment, is not so degraded a character as he who for lucre lends himself to the destruction of those against whom he has no quarrel.

You make the wretched excuse that the principle libel was written by others. It may be so; but it was secretly circulated in all its original scurrility by yourselves, though behind the back of the person attacked; and if that had not been the object, care would have been taken that what was printed in the slips should not have got abroad. But the repeated announcement, the parade of revision, which had not impaired its severity; the black attempt to gain credit without the possibility of contradiction, by offering to disclose instances of guilt confidentially; the assumption that this foul abuse spoke the sentiments of the India Navy; coupled with the refusal to admit the word of Captain Brucke to the contrary, as to certain individuals; and the concluding threat to publish graver calumnies, were all your own. I have said calumnies; and they might well be called such, on a mere inspection of the libels. In the extreme care to avoid every thing capable of definite contradiction, is a proof of wilful falsehood; but there is this further proof, that the truth might have been shown in answer to the criminal information; it was not even attempted, and yet you had not the honesty to make any amends for this undisputed falsehood.

As to the work itself, the long and laboured malignity of so many columns of the foulest abuse, without one tangible charge it would look more like the monomania of a person who had lost his reason in brooding over imaginary grievance; but insanity has no accomplices, and if this were true of the writer, what must be the publisher, who laboured to remove what the considered objections, without removing any of the venom.

Such are some of the characters of the publication, as regards the prosecutor only; but in a public point of view it is not less atrocious. If so shameless an outrage on military subordination were tolerated, the protection of the Queen's dominions would become impossible. If the service, which you have insulted, by imputing to it such an execrable spirit, were believed to be tainted with it, that service would certainly not be permitted to continue in existence. To have published under any circumstances, without their names, an invective which they durst not publish with them, would be incompatible with discipline and with their character of officers and gentlemen. What then would be this long tissue of imputations, of every thing degrading to an officer a gentleman and a man, with so cowardly a circumspection, not to let a single sentence be such as the injured party could bring to the proof?

I have been cautioned, in very decorous language, by a gentleman who I am sure must have acutely felt the pain of being compelled, by his professional duty, to advocate such a case to beware lest I might not myself be indifferent. It is necessary to beware of law, or he who thinks he stands may fall. But though the prosecutor is a friend, and the defendant a stranger to me, I am sure that had the parties been reversed, my sense of the fact would have been the same; except, indeed, as embittered by regret at my good opinion having been so misplaced. Between the parties, therefore, I am indifferent; but if an indifference to right and wrong, or indifference to the deep guilt of deliberately traducing personal character, public and private, and labouring to excite military insubordination, be expected of me, such an indifference I neither can feel nor will affect.

It is your case that you are the instrument of others. Your sentence ought, therefore, to comprehend something from which they cannot indemnify you. Something which, unless they complete their baseness by deserting you in the difficulties in which your joint guilt has involved you, may give them, as well as yourself, a motive to restrain you, from such crimes in future.

The sentence of the Court is, that you be confined in the common goal for the period of three months; that you pay a fine to the Queen of rupees 1000—and find security, yourself in rupees 20,000, and two sureties, in rupees 10,000 each, to keep the peace towards all the Queen's subjects for a year.

The liability of the sureties has been fixed at this, as the lowest appealable amount, in order that if any question should ever arise upon it, the judgment may not be liable to observation, as tainted with local prejudice.

Further imprisonment until the fine be paid and sureties given.

We are obliged, for want of space, to postpone the speeches of Counsel to our next.—Bombay Times, Dec 22.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JANUARY 5, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and Sir H. W. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF G. A. W. HIGGINSON, AN INSOLVENT.

Higginson, who was not opposed nor in custody, was declared entitled to the benefit of the act after the usual oath.

IN THE MATTER OF SHAIK GHOWSEY.

This insolvent, who was in jail, was discharged after the usual oath. No opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF JOHN BROWN.

The like as in the first matter.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

The Chief Clerk reported that an additional schedule had been filed in this matter, as directed on the last hearing. Mr. Leith applied to oppose the insolvent on behalf of some creditors to the estate of one Fowles deceased. Mr. Clarke opposed the insolvent on behalf of Messrs. Bruce Shand and Co.

Mr. Leith stated to the Court, that by the schedules, large sums of money appeared to have been paid, which had not been verified, and the payments were unnecessary.

The Court remarked, that different houses were alleged to have been purchased out of these sums, and a portion of it, lost with McKintosh and Co. Mr. Leith pointed out, that the two Schedules contained contradictory accounts as to these sums, the larger portion whereof is alleged in the one, to have been lost with McKintosh and Co. and in the other, to have been appropriated in the purchase of landed estates; and the Court concurred, that one of the two must be an untrue statement. Mr. Leith suggested to the Court, that however otherwise the Court might deal with the insolvent, in regard to his applying for the benefit of the act, or otherwise for any criminality, that the insolvent should be excluded from the benefit of the act as to the trust funds of the estate of Fowles, and pointed out also two inconsistencies as to the settlement made on the marriage of the insolvent, whereby no more than 3 or 4,000 rupees had been secured to Mrs. Jacobs, and the insolvent borrowed money from the late firm of Alexander and Co to build a house on a spot of ground purchased with the 3 or 400 rupees of the marriage settlement, which property, was even at present valued at 16,000 rupees, 4000 out of which, at the most, could be the portion of the marriage settlement, that being the sum originally and in fact secured by that Deed; and Alexander and Co.'s advances to the insolvent would form a part of his general estate, Alexander and Co. being of course his creditors to the extent of the advances. The Court observed to Mr. Leith, that the wife's fortune seemed to have been in the hand of Alexander and Co., and Mr. Strettell on the part of the insolvent added, that Alexander and Co. were the Trustees, who took a mortgage of the premises in question, as such to secure the advances, for non-payment of which, the property has been conveyed to them as such Trustees.

Mr. Jacobs was sworn and examined by Mr. Leith. The insolvent said, that he purchased the property in question in December 1826, with "the estate money" received from Alexander and Co.; the money of the marriage settlement. The present value of the property was from 10 to 12,000 rupees. The Court enquired as to the extent of the insolvent's debt to Alexander and Co., and if the house stood at the time of the conveyance to them. The insolvent stated the debt to have been 3000 and odd hundred rupees, and that the house had subsequently been built by Mrs. Jacobs from monies she received as bequests, from her mother 6000 rupees, from her godmother 2000, from Mrs. Willis 4000. The will of the latter was filed in the Supreme Court in 1823.

Mr. Leith resumed his examination. The property on the west of the other, the insolvent said, did belong to him. He held it on a perpetual lease, on rent, on a common agreement, at 12 rupees per month. This house is used as a shop, and the building of it cost 3000 rupees and 12,000 for the building of the whole of the premises. No consideration passed for the perpetual lease to the owner, further than the paying the 12 rupees a month. The owner is not a creditor of the insolvent. The insolvent was questioned as to another property contiguous to the one before alluded to, which he said belongs to Mr. Lackersteen, and the insolvent had in January or February 1838, purchased it of Mr. Lackersteen for 6,000 rupees, not paid, but secured by a mortgage of the same property, which was afterwards redeemed in June last, owing to the insolvent's inability to redeem the mortgage, or in fact to pay the amount of purchase of which nothing had been paid, except that of interest (on the mortgage) for one quarter. The insolvent had actual possession of this property up to June last, and had let out a portion of it, for which he realized rent from one Mr. Gould; and another part was appropriated as a garden. Mr. Lackersteen had allowed three years time for payment, which is not yet expired. The insolvent explained his reason for cancelling this purchase to be, that Mr. Lackersteen feared the insolvency and made the proposition, to which the insolvent acceded. The cancelled deeds were in insolvent's house, as he thought them unnecessary to be produced. Knew Mr. Vandenberg, Mr. Lackersteen's son-in-law. It was a joint affair of theirs, this house and mortgage, and transfer. Insolvent had no joint trade with them or either of them. The insolvent was minutely examined as to a native woman, and if from her he purchased certain land which he denied in toto, and that he made no other purchases of land since 1826, except as already stated; and the ground originally spoken of, he said to have been purchased from Mr. Lamen's estate, through Mr. W. Prinsep. He added, that he has no other transactions about land nor in the shape of mortgage.

The Insolvent's examination continued. He said his stock had been sold off by his assignee for mere nothing; his selling value of it would be 70,000 rupees. His son, who had been an assistant with him on pay, has set up for himself since February last. He commenced with goods supplied by the Insolvent of the value of 10,000 rupees, all which have again been returned to the insolvent by his son, none having been sold. The son's shop was taken in February last by the insolvent, and the young man in April received the goods before spoken of, and commenced. These goods were carried by coolies in the day time, direct from the insolvent's house to his son's shop, 13, Court House Street. The son entered his 21st year last February. His name is Charles Blizard Melville Jacobs. A part of these goods were sold to the extent of about 70 rupees, which has been credited in account. The goods were made a present of to the son, when he set up in April last. About this time Insolvent was pressed by Mackintyre and Co, for monies due to Gould and Dalemair of London, for supplies of articles in the way of the Insolvent's trade. The goods sold by the son for about 70 rupees did not appear on the Schedule, it might be in the day book. The money was to come to the Insolvent—the 70 rupees which has been found.

The son is not now a debtor to the Insolvent

Mr. Leith asked that the son be out of the Court during the examination, and he was accordingly removed into another room, and the examination being resumed, the insolvent said, that the son continues to carry on his business. He has some goods, but none belonging to the insolvent. All the goods that were made over were those for sale on commission, belonging to Hodgkinson, Schlatter and Co., and others, consisting of different pianos, &c., of which there are entries in the commission book, which has been left in the Insolvent's house. A pen has been run through it. Opposite each article, the making over to the son is written. He said nothing of this to the assignee. Mr. Strickell knows all, and has advised the Insolvent. The son had no other goods. Could not say the value of those for sale on commission, the profit of which was to be derived by the son, although it was not a bona fide gift to him. It was a mere division of stock, and of the locality of the shop, as one may have more than one shop, and in different places, the profits and produce of all to belong to one person, as in the present case. The rent for the son's shop is now paid by him, at first the bills were in the name of the insolvent. He could not say to what extent exactly the son had been selling, since him, the Insolvent's, arrest, further than barely hearing it now and then from the son, that some goods had been sold once for 64 rupees, and then for 60 or 70 rupees. As to these proceeds, no directions were given to the son, who has no other means, and is living with his mother. The Insolvent said he could answer no more.

The Court said, it was impossible to discharge the insolvent. A reference was ordered to the Examiner to enquire into the truth of the two schedules, and of all matters, and as to the 57th and 58th Sections of the insolvent Act. and all questions arising thereon, in the matter where there appeared to have been great breach of trust, and loss unsatisfactory, and, to say the least, suspicious accounts of every thing, into all which, it would be impossible for the Court to enter, considering how the time of the Court is committed.

Mr. Clarke then addressed the Court. That the party he represented were the agents of a creditor, and therefore anxious that the course of the proceeding should be as little expensive as possible; that if the assignee acted upon information and aid to be rendered him, expenses might be in a great measure avoided; and Mr. Clarke remarked, that the Insolvent, with the full knowledge and contemplation of his Insolvency, made over property to Mr. Lackersteen, and to his own son.

Mr. Clarke then proceeded to examine the insolvent.

He said he never kept a book of his stock but knew it from invoices; and about the time of his arrest he gave these invoices to his sircar, Seboon, to copy, whose house is near the Salt Water Lake, and he has not since been heard of, although sent for by Mrs. Jacobs, through a bearer, who is also absent. The insolvent could not speak as to his Stock for the last two years.

The insolvent was next questioned specially and particularly as to several musical instruments, all which instruments he spoke of specially and particularly as questioned, and said they were all sold, mostly in May and June last, but could not say to whom sold, the sales being for cash, as entered in his books, copied at nights by his son before spoken of; and the books being produced, Mr. Clarke observed, that these were the only "cash" entries throughout the whole of the books, and that evidently something had been erased, and the cash entry substituted.

The insolvent denied having mentioned to Mr. Morgan (who was present) in the hearing of Mr. Burkinyoung, that he, the insolvent, had given away to his friends many musical instruments. Some flutes belonging to Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co., the insolvent said, were sent for sale to Benares, Dinapore and other places, to Charles Tuttle, and others. The insolvent's son was next examined.

He confirmed his father's statement as to Seboon Sircar being in his employment and absent at present at his house in the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, and could not be made to come, although sent for, and also as to the false entries for cash sales, at which sales the witness was not present, and, therefore, could say no more than the making of the entry by him at his father's desire. As to the erasure in it he accounted for that, by saying that ink had fallen (and being cautioned, that writing appeared to have been erased, and the ink of the substituted writing appeared to be different) he said that he went into the room to get a ruler to erase the ink that had fallen, and some body stirred the ink, he could not say who, before his coming back, which made the ink appear different. He denied having any goods removed to his shop from his father's at night. Those from his shop, when taken back to the father's, were taken at night, after gun fire. The witness spoke of another Sircar or writer who had been employed with the father, and kept the books and accounts for four or five years, but of his name or residence, the witness knew nothing. He had been dismissed.

The matter stands until the 23d of February, referred to the Examiner to enquire and report as above mentioned, and the Assignee to conduct the proceedings to save expence; he, the Assignee, of course, to be aided with information and all other aid as may be necessary, by the parties concerned, and all books and papers are directed to be filed in the course of to-morrow.

The Insolvent asked for an earlier date for his rehearing, which, if the Court granted, could be no other than the 19th instant, and as that would be too soon for the Examiner and other parties to get through the business, the insolvent was remanded to prison until the 23d of February next.

IN THE MATTER OF KISTNO SENDER SET.

This Insolvent was brought up to-day. Mr. Strettell, who appears on the part of an opposing creditor against this Insolvent, stated to the Court, that at the last hearing he applied for further time for the examiner to make report, as the Insolvent's Attorney, Mr. Jackson, was dead, and the insolvent had no Attorney. The Examiner stated that his report was not ready.

No Attorney represented the insolvent, and the Examiner sent to Mr. Micklejohn, Mr. Jackson's successor in business, who returned a message that he knew nothing of the matter, having no instructions nor had he seen or heard of or from the insolvent. Mr. Micklejohn repeated the same thing to the Court, and added, that the relatives of the insolvent were rich, but they would not come forward, and Mr. Jackson had received only 200 rupees, whereas the fees out of pocket alone exceed now 300 rupees. The Court said that this was not a proper course so to desert a client, it being quite optional for an Attorney to act or not in any matter, and that the Attorney was bound to proceed. This is all that could be said at present, and the matter was ordered to stand over until the next Court day, the 19th January.

IN THE MATTER OF DURGACHURN ROSE.

This insolvent not having filed his schedule since June last, an order nisi was granted for him to shew cause on this 19th instant, why his certificate of protection from arrest, should not be revoked, he not having filed his schedule.

IN THE MATTER OF T. LINTON AND F. PALMER.

The Assignee applied for and obtained orders nisi in these matters, for these insolvents to shew cause on next Tuesday, why an attachment should not issue for non-payment of the sums directed to be paid to the Assignee, out of their monthly income, for the benefit of the creditors.

IN THE MATTER OF MR. ABBOTT.

Mr. Pearson applied for a rule to shew cause on next Tuesday, why this insolvent should not be exempted from payment for two years, of the sum he is ordered to pay his Assignee, for the benefit of his creditors, monthly out of his allowance. The application was grounded on medical certificate of ill health, which rendered it necessary for the insolvent to proceed to the Cape for the present, for the benefit of his health, and to continue there for two years, when, if not better, to proceed to Europe, and that the insolvent was not in circumstances without this income to support himself and his children here and in England.

Rule nisi granted, with liberty to add grounds as to whether the salary now enjoyed by the insolvent, or what portion of it, would or would not be continued to him during his absence.—Hark., January 7.

JANUARY 19, 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Chief Justice.)

IN THE MATTER OF DOCTOR CHARLES MOTTLEY AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of the insolvent, begged to state, that the insolvent wished to amend some inaccuracies which had unknowingly been inserted in the insolvent's schedule. These were the debts due to Ersee Null and to Ramanund Doss, two up-country Merchants, on promissory notes of hand, the dates of which were unknown. The Insolvent, on the statement of the creditors, begged to add the interest of these. The Chief Justice remarked, how could interest be added to notes, the dates of which were uncertain, and if Mr. Leith's proposition to add in the schedule the interest of these notes was complied with, it would cause the attestation of the schedule; in which case the prisoner must be remanded, otherwise, as there is no opposition, the prisoner might be discharged. He then remarked, that there are on less than 18 notes, all of which are inserted without the date being specified, and some of these creditor's reside as far as Kurnaul and Ajmeer. The total of the debts considerably exceeds 100,000 Rs.; how comes it then, that the interest of these two notes are applied for by the insolvent to be added to the schedule and not of the other 16 notes. It is not probable that natives would lend money to large amounts, without interest being added to them; interest ought, therefore, to be inserted to all these notes.

Mr. Leith replied, that notices had been served by dawk, and these two had sent down their statements and the dates of their notes.

The Judge replied, that it is the duty of every debtor, previous to applying for the benefit of the insolvent act, and swearing to the truth of his schedule, to be sworn of its correctness; otherwise he may subject himself, in case of an inaccuracy, to be remanded altogether. There is likewise a difficulty in creditors residing at a distance, to have their claims represented here.

Mr. Leith replied, that the prisoner had, previous to applying for the benefit of the insolvent Act, taken out letters of licence from his creditors here, and proposed to those at a distance, to forward him their accounts with him, and accept of these terms; but on their refusing to accept of this proposition of a letter of licence, the prisoner was then necessitated to apply for the benefit of the insolvent act.

Mr. Leith likewise applied to amend the schedule regarding the deductions which may be made from the insolvent's pay, which, as he is a medical man, the amount of it would greatly vary, if the insolvent has the charge of a regiment, from what it would be if he had not.

The Chief Justice consented to the alteration in the schedule regarding the application for the deduction from the insolvent's pay, but he refused the former order as to the amendment of the schedule regarding the amount of the prisoner's debts, by inserting the interest on the two promissory notes aforesaid; and he added, that as there was an opposition, the prisoner may be discharged, on swearing to the truth of the present schedule.

The insolvent was then sworn to the truth of his schedule, and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARMER, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Strettell moved on an affidavit, to amend the insolvent's schedule in this case. It appeared that a debt, which was stated to be due to two persons, was actually due to one, and the debt itself was smaller than the sum inserted in the schedule.

The Judge replied, that these amendments were very irregular; in amending a schedule it was not merely the consent of the creditor regarding whose particular debt the amendment required was concerned, but the interest of all the other creditors might be affected by the proposed amendment; and, therefore, the amendment ought not to be made without giving them notice of it, and in their presence.

The Judge then added, that as the prisoner was not in custody, the case must stand over, and the insolvent give notice by an advertisement in the public papers, to the other creditors.

IN THE MATTER OF KISSEN CHUNDER BEAT, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Meickeljohn begged to have the Examiner's report confirmed, and it being in confirmation of the accuracy of the schedule, the Judge informed Mr. Strettell, that he believed the schedule must be confirmed; and the Examiner added, that Mr. Strettell had refused to attend at his office regarding this matter, although desired to do so.

Mr. Strettell replied, that as the Examiner had already made up his mind as to what he would report the case, he (Mr. Strettell) did not think it therefore advisable to attend fruitlessly on the Examiner in the matter. Mr. Strettell then added, that it was not his intention to make any exceptions to the Examiner's report, but he begged to remind the Judge, that he himself had, during the examination of the prisoner on the truth of his schedule, conceded that there were strong suspicious circumstances regarding it.

The Judge then requested to see the Examiner's report.

The Judge, on receiving the report, said, that it appeared Mr. Strettell had been noticed to attend, and asked him why he did not attend on those notices. Mr. Strettell replied, that on the first occasion he did attend, and the Examiner was not present; on the latter occasion he did not attend, for the reason aforesaid.

Mr. Strettell admitted, that he had no further evidence to produce; but after his client, who was the detaining creditor, had entered up judgment, a fictitious sale was made by the prisoner to his brother, of a house, and judgment entered up, although no one saw the money paid for the sale; and the seller and his family is still living in this house, and the buyer cannot give any account of it.

The Judge admitted, that his impression was, that there were grounds for suspicion of a fraud in this case; but Mr. Strettell ought to have attended, and taken his exceptions to the report, and have pointed them out to the court to-day. He then proposed to postpone the case until Monday week, to enable Mr. Strettell to file his exceptions to the report. Mr. Strettell replied, that the matter is so plain, that if the Judge would peruse the evidence of Mr. Marnell, he would discover the correctness of Mr. Strettell's allegation.

On examination of the deeds, it appeared, that the insolvent had, on the 16th of June, given a mortgage to his brothers on this house, for which a judgment was entered on the 17th June, and Mr. Strettell's client obtained her judgment on the next day. This, Mr. Strettell said, looked very suspicious, although he had not any proofs to show it to be a fraudulent matter; and it appeared that this mortgage was executed by the insolvent to his brothers, the day after his attorney had notice of trial, and 5 days before the verdict was given in his client's favor.

The Judge summed up and said, that as the Examiner had given his report in the insolvent's favor, he is entitled to his release. If Mr. Strettell could even prove the truth of his allegations, he could not in this case recover the property, which is all that it appears Mr. Strettell is in this case anxious to secure; and for this he, or rather the assignee, on Mr. Strettell's showing sufficient grounds, must move in another court. All that Mr. Strettell could do in this case, even if he were to prove his statement, would be to punish the insolvent; and for this, if Mr. Strettell pleases, he can have him brought up again and re-examined.

The prisoner was then sworn on the truth of his schedule, and after being warned that he was liable to be brought up again and examined regarding the sale of the house in question, and if found guilty of concealing any fact, remanded to prison, he swore to the correctness of his schedule, and was discharged.

During the hearing of the case to-day, the Chief Justice remarked, that he wished to impress on the minds of the practitioners in this court generally, that in future the court will decline amending any insolvent's schedule on any material matter on the day of the hearing of his case; the amendment must be previously applied for, by an affidavit Chambers, and due notice of it given by advertisement to the creditors generally. He added, that he had no objection to make alterations regarding any minor difficulties of mistakes, figures, &c.; but he was sorry to say, that in many cases, schedules were very loosely got up, and these applications were made for material amendments, to accommodate interested parties, without any intimation to the other creditors whose interest may be affected by it.

In the case of John Brown, late wine-mERCHANT, insolvent, a dividend of 60 per cent. was declared by J. W. Alexander, Esq., to be payable to the creditors of the estate.

Mr. Sandes applied for two attachments on the estates of sheik Abdolla, an insolvent, and Lieut. Beecher, an insolvent.

Attachments ordered.—HURKARU, January 21.

HOOGHY SESSIONS COURT.

November 25, 1858.

(Before J. Davis, Esq., Sessions Judge.)

Benaï François Belmansis, native of Chandernagore and Indigo Planter at Farroodpore, deposed in 1818, I was employed as an assistant in the Bascharriah indigo factory, and I used often to come to Chinsurah as the factory is near it. I went to see Rajah Pertab Chund at Chinsurah Rajbarry, to endeavour to settle with him regarding the sale of the Coleahdah indigo factory. I saw him about eight or ten times altogether. The prisoner is that Pertab Chund, but he is now older in appearance than he then was, for 20 years have elapsed since. He is little darker and thinner than he then was but his general figure and features are the same, and I have sufficient recollection of him to be able to recognize him to be Pertab Chund. Towards the latter end of 1819 Rajah Pertab Chund returned to Burdwan without effecting a sale of his factory at Coleahdah to me, and I never saw him subsequently. Pertab Chund had purchased it from Monsieur Guthrie. I saw the prisoner to day, and on questioning him, he recognized me and answered me regarding the sale of the Coleahdah factory correctly. When I saw the prisoner in 1819, he was 25 or 26 years of age, and I suppose now, from that circumstance, and looking at him, that he is about 40 or 45 years of age.

Hajj Abotalub, merchant, resident of Chinsurah That is Maharaaj Pertab Chund I saw him yesterday, in the Court, after a lapse of 22 or 25 years, and I recognized him. I knew Hakim Usur Ally, who was with the Rajah Pertab Chund, and as I studied physic, I frequently used to go and visit the hakim at the Chinsurah Rajbarry, and I used to see the Rajah come to the hakim's apartment. I used to rise and make my salam to him, and enquire of his health, and he used to return my compliments. I used to see him play at chess and fly kites. Whenever he used to play chess I left the room, as it is forbidden by my religion to play games of chance or to witness them. I used to see him drive out in his carriage on the road. He was then 23 or 24 years of age, fair, stout and playful. He was now about 45 years of age, darker and somewhat pitted down. There was a mark in the left eye of Rajah Pertab Chund. This mark I observed in the prisoner's left eye yesterday, when I examined him in Court. I subsequently went to Lucknow and thus ended my visits to him. On my return from Lucknow, I heard, at Calcutta, that Rajah Pertab Chund was dead, but subsequently on my arrival at Chinsurah, I heard from Hakim Askur Ally and others, that the Rajah was not dead, but had run away. Askur Ally died 17 or 18 years ago.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I only once, in Mirza Raza's case, gave evidence in this Court, about five years ago. I gave Mr. Forbes evidence in Hajj Raza's case. Mr. Forbes did not write any comment on my evidence rejecting it. In another case regarding the Emambarrah here, I gave evidence in this Court. Agah Suffer Ally was a party in the Emambarrah case. I knew near Golam Hosain, formerly the Foujdarry nazir in this zillah. I never complained against him but my son did. The case did not come on before Mr. Harrington. The charge was for bribery.

Mr. Shaw objected to this mode of questioning the witnesses.

The Judge said, that he did not see what the witness's son's actions had to do with the witness.

Mr. Bignell replied he only put the questions to show that the man came from a noted family. He can go official copies of the documents mentioned by him, therefore he would not press the questions any further.

Witness added. I was 30 years of age when I came to this country from Persia. I have been residing in this country 55 years. It is 20 years since Mr. Forbes was a Judge. I do not know Aga Tofail Michael was the name of an Armenian writer, formerly employed under Mr. Overbeck, the Governor of Chinsurah. I gave evidence in his case at Chinsurah.

REJECTION OF BAIL FOR THE PSEUDO RAJAH PERTAB CHUNDER, BY THE NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

In consequence of the reply of the Sessions Judge of Zillah Hooghly, to the reference made to him by the Nizamut Adawlut of Bengal requesting that officer to assign his reasons for refusing to accept bail for the pseudo Rajah Pertab Chunder, the Superior Court has refused to comply with this prisoner's petition to it praying therein to be released on bail, pending his trial at Hooghly.

REGARDING THE MANNER IN WHICH THE SUBPENAS HAVE BEEN ISSUED IN THE PSEUDO RAJAH PERTAB CHUNDER'S CASE, AND OTHER MATTERS CONNECTED WITH THE TRIAL.

The pseudo Rajah Pertab Chunder being prevented from attending Court on Wednesday the 27th instant, on account of indisposition, the case was consequently postponed on that day. Mr. Leith, the prisoner's Counsel, informed the Sessions Judge, that he had been credibly informed, that the subpoenas which have been issued to the witnesses for the prosecution had penalties attached in them to be levied against those witnesses who might have neglected to have attended the Judge's Court here, and given their testimony in the case varying, according to the circumstances of the witnesses to whom these subpoenas were directed and varied from 100 rupees to 1000 rupees, whereas in the subpoenas which have been issued to the witnesses for the defence, no penalty of a like nature is mentioned. This procedure Mr. Leith considered to be partial, and moved the Court to have the subpoenas for the defence issued in the same form in which those for the prosecution had been issued.

Mr. Bignell replied, that it is usual in the Mofussil, whenever any subpoenas are issued, for the parties to state before the name of each witness what is the point they are called to prove. In consequence of the Counsel for the defence having failed to adopt this plan, and as they have subpoenaed upwards of 300 witnesses, the Magistrate did not think it expedient to affix penalties to the subpoenas of so many witnesses, in case of their neglecting to obey the writ issued to them.

Mr. Leith further observed, that as the present prosecution, even if the prisoner proved his identity as Rajah Pertab Chund of Burdwan, would not restore him to his zemindary, he wished the Counsel for the prosecution to state, in a more precise manner, the nature of the charge concerning the disturbance at Calcutta. For, added Mr. Leith, surely the charge of personifying a person whom the prosecution alleges to be dead, cannot be a very heinous one; and with respect to that of obtaining money under false pretences, as the money was, by the evidence of the very person who had paid it, proved to have been paid in Calcutta, he did not think the jurisdiction could be in this Court. The reasons for wanting him to a judge were, that if he concurred in opinion with him, in would lay open as little of the prisoner's case in this trial as he possibly could, so that the prisoner might win the prisoner will eventually have to institute a suit in the Civil side of the Court, for the recovery of his rights, may not be put in full possession of his case beforehand, and exact measures to frustrate it hereafter.

The Judge replied, that as Rajahman Bynack deposed that one of the bonds had been signed in the jail at Hooghly, he supposed the jurisdiction did lie in this Court to try that point. Mr. Graham observed, that the deed had been drawn up at Calcutta and the money paid there previously; the mere signing of the bond at Hooghly followed only as pro forma.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he was of opinion, that a concurrent jurisdiction did lie in this case. He then added, that if Mr. Leith wished him to state explicitly whether the prisoner had committed any actual breach of the peace or whether a riot and assault had actually occurred by a concussion between the Government officers, and the prisoner's party, during his stay at Culna, he would readily admit that there had not; but so far he considered the charge had been supported by the evidence, viz., that the prisoner had set at defiance with a large, tumultuous mob for some days, the public authorities and the purwanas of the Burdwan Magistrate, directing him to disperse the mob during his stay at Culna. Mr. Bignell then added, "I do not know what the practice in the King's Courts may be, and what light they may view the crime of imposture or false personification; but Mr. Leith will, I am sorry to say, find it to be a most serious offence by the Mussul law, and one on which I hope to get the prisoner convicted, and most severely punished; therefore I would suggest to the counsel for the defence, not to be led away by the notion that this is only one, the minor part, of the charge; whereas it is one of the most important portions of it, and which they ought most strongly to rebut."

Mr. Leith replied that as several of his witnesses had sworn, that the prisoner was Rajah Pertaub Chund of Burdwan, if he could establish that point, why he would prove by a natural deduction from the evidence, that Rajah Pertaub Chund was living; and the prisoner, if he was him, could not be Kinto Lal; and to prove which, Mr. Leith added, I can bring numerous witnesses.

Mr. Bignell replied, that it was sufficiently clear that the whole matter was, whether the prisoner is Kinto Lal or not; and whether Rajah Pertaub Chund, the Rajah of Burdwan, is dead or not. If these points are not satisfactorily proved on behalf of the defence, why the charge of false personification will be established against the prisoner. On the contrary, if Mr. Leith can prove satisfactorily that his client is the real Pertaub Chund, Rajah of Burdwan, why, the inference will naturally follow that the prisoner cannot be Kinto Lal, and that Pertaub Chund's death in that case, would be proved to have been fictitious. But there are points which ought not to be argued in the middle of the case.

Mr. Curtis here observed, that he had, at the express request of the prisoner's Counsel, postponed the case from Saturday the 22d inst., until Wednesday the 26th inst., to enable Mr. Shaw, the prisoner's attorney, to see which of the numerous witnesses here in attendance for the defence were required by him and which not; and he was, on coming into Court, informed by these witnesses and the officer who had charge of them, that they objected to go to Mr. Shaw's residence at Chinsurah; and as he had no power to compel the witnesses to go there, he wrote an ex-officio note to Mr. Shaw, to come and examine these witnesses in Court, where he could have had a separate room to himself to see and talk with them on the subject of their evidence; and although the case had been expressly postponed for that purpose, Mr. Shaw did not come, but, on the contrary, addressed him a long letter, which he (Mr. Curtis) did not approve of. Mr.

Curtis then added, that all communications between a Judge and any party, under trial in his Court, ought strictly to be made by petition on a stamp paper. He certainly must confess that he had hitherto permitted the deviation of this mode, but he doubted how far he was justified in having permitted it. Be that as it may, said Mr. Curtis, I beg that all future official correspondence in this case, between the prisoner and the Judge, may be made in the usual official form, agreeable to the practice of the allahs, by petition on stamp paper.

The Poudarry Sheristadar informed the Judge, that the Culna chokyars subpoenaed in this case, were in attendance here, to the great inconvenience of their duty; and that two maternal uncles of the prisoner, who had been subpoenaed by the Judge, had been forwarded here by the magistrate of Jessore and were in attendance.

Mr. Curtis said, that they may stay at present and they would be examined hereafter; and Mr. Shaw replied, that with regard to the Culna chokyars, he would willingly take up the examination of those who were required in his case, as soon as the counsel for the prisoner had decided on the nature of the demurrer the prisoner had put in regarding that part of his case; for it appeared to him inconsistent to extend the charge to ten days, viz. from the time of his client being at Culna, till his apprehension. Mr. Curtis replied, that the prisoner's defence was so long and had but so lately been put in, that he had not had time to read it. It must be translated to Bengalee for the Moulvee of his court.—Hurkara, January 1.

MOTION IN THE CASE OF THE SOI DISANT RAJAH PERTAUB CHUNDER.

On Saturday the 29th instant, after the examination of Hajy Abou Talub, Mr. Shaw, on behalf of the prisoner, addressed the Court. He said, that a difference of opinion had arisen between him and Mr. R. Graham, one of the attorney's of the prisoner. Mr. Shaw said, that he did not consider it expedient to examine any more native witnesses regarding the question of the prisoner's identity, and with the exception of 3 or 4 respectable European gentlemen, such as Messrs. D. Hare, J. Abbott, Dr. Halilulay and perhaps one or two more, he did not consider it advisable to throw open the prisoner's case in toto in the present suit, but to reserve it for the civil action which the prisoner must eventually institute to recover his Zamindary, &c. Mr. Graham, Mr. Shaw added, differed with him on this point, and was for examining many more witnesses than Mr. Shaw considered requisite to be examined in this case. Mr. Shaw said, that in consequence of this opinion he begged the case might be postponed until Wednesday, the 2d proximo, to enable Mr. Shaw to proceed to Calcutta and consult Mr. Leith, the prisoner's counsel, on the affair. Should Mr. Leith coincide with Mr. Graham, Mr. Shaw said he would resume the examination of the witnesses on Monday the 31st instant, but should he concur with Mr. Shaw, then Mr. Shaw would write to Mr. Bignell, informing him of the result of his consultation with Mr. Leith, and resume the case on Wednesday the 2d proximo. In this latter event, Mr. Shaw said, he hoped to be enabled to shorten the proceedings materially, by dispensing with the evidence of many of the witnesses.

The Judge remarked, that at all events the proceedings might be resumed on Monday the 31st instant.

Eventually, on Mr. Shaw's informing the Court, that in the event of his dispensing with the native testimony in a great measure, the European gentlemen, such as D. Hare, Esq. and J. Abbott, Esq., would wish to see the prisoner before they would venture to depose as to his identity; and as Tuesday was New-year's day, if he, Mr. Shaw, could, by referring the attendance of many witnesses, shorten the proceedings considerably, he did not suppose that the delay of one day would be considered material by the Court.

Mr. Bignell concurring with Mr. Shaw in any measure which may tend to shorten the proceedings, the Judge consented to Mr. Shaw's proposal, provided Mr. Shaw would apply for the postponement in a petition to the Court, setting forth his grounds for the request.

A petition was filed by the prisoners' counsel regarding the demurrers of Prawn Baboo and Ramesh Potah Koomares, the Aunt of Rajah Pertab Chund, and the Ranees, widow of Raja Pertab Chund, together with those of Bebes Badamy and Dhau Bebes, in which these witnesses had objected to attend on their subpoenas in this case.

The Judge, after reading the petition, said that the objections of Prawn Baboo were frivolous, and he must attend to confront the prisoner; and with regard to the Ranees and the other respectable females, the maternal aunts of Raja Pertab Chund, they can, if their evidence is materially required, come down to Chinsurah Rajbarry, and be examined there by confession.

Mr. Bignell remarked, that with regard to the mode of taking the depositions of respectable purdahneheen females in this country, the regulation stated, that the interrogatories of the mooktars of both the parties, should be committed to writing, and two or more respectable females be deputed on oath to examine them on these queries, to take down their replies, and forward them to the Court; but in this case, it being one of identity, the mode of procedure could not be adopted. He, however, expressed his willingness to lend the defence every assistance in his power, to get the attendance of all the witnesses they may require.

Mr. Shaw suggested, that these ladies might see the prisoner from behind a purdah, perforated with holes to peep through, and examine him, who might be placed in another room for that purpose; but before he could give any reply as to whether he absolutely required the attendance of these ladies or not, as witnesses in this case, he said he would like to see Mr. Leith on the subject.

After this Mr. Shaw said that he would dispense with the evidence of the Nazee of the Civil Court of Burdwan, because ever since his arrival at Hooghly on his subpoena, he has refused to accompany Mr. Shaw to see the prisoner, and he has been residing during his sojourn at Hooghly in the house of the mooktar of Prawn Baboo, for his affairs in Hooghly district Courts. With regard to Cazeo Bussobhux, Sudder Aumeen of Zillah Burdwan, who had written that he did not recollect Rajah Pertab Chund sufficiently, so as to be able to depose regarding his identity, and that he was unable to attend the Sessions Judge's Court at Hooghly, because of indisposition, Mr. Shaw believed he must likewise, after seeing Mr. Leith, dispense with this witness; but he could not help remarking that by so doing he feared that he was encouraging the other witnesses to start up similar pleas in order to get rid off their attendance as witnesses in this case for the defence.

Mr. Bignell informed the Sessions Judge, that if he considered the evidence of the two maternal uncles of Kisto Lall, who had arrived from Zillah Jessore, to be material, he could examine them; but as far as he was concerned, he did not think their depositions very requisite to his case; and if the Judge coincided with him he would order their release at once without taking their testimony, the Judge concurring, they were discharged without being examined.

Hajy Mohamed, who had been examined on the 20th instant, attended the court on the following day, and informed the Judge, that when questioned by Mr. Bignell to mention the cases in which he had formerly given his evidence in court, he had forgotten to mention a pauper case in this court in Mr. D. C. Smyth's time, but having recollected the circumstance subsequently, he came now to request the court to add this omission to his evidence; that it may not hereafter be impeached on that score, his request was complied, and the additional paragraph added to his late depositions in this case.

Mr. Shaw asked the sheristadar if he could inform him what was the amount of the proceeds of the sale of the prisoner's articles. The sheristadar referred Mr. Shaw to the naib nazir, who said that he would be able to give the amount of it at the expiration of 10 days; in the mean time he conjectured the amount to be about 150 rupees, and that many of the articles for want of a purchaser, had remained unsold.

Mr. Shaw asked Mr. Bignell whether he would consent to deliver to him some of the most valuable articles of the prisoner in custody of the court, such as fowling-pieces and sabres, for he believed that he might be able to sell them to an advantage at Calcutta, and that he required to raise a sum with the proceeds, to be able to tender the expenses of Dr. Halliday, whose evidence he considered to be material in this case.

We could not distinctly catch Mr. Bignell's reply, but we believe that he said that if the court had no objection to grant Mr. Shaw's request, he had none.

On the day on which Mr. Overbeck gave his evidence, at the adjournment of the court, the court compound and the entrance room was quite thronged by the populace; so that for about 10 or 15 minutes it was almost impossible to pass and repass without difficulty; and the throng, as the Pseudo Rajah left the court to return to his palkee, thrice shouted jai dhumrah Raja Pertab Chunder.—Harkara, Jan. 2.

JANUARY 2, 1839.

Cossinath, Culna Police chokedar, deposed. I was in Culna in Byasackhat, when the prisoner came there for 16 or 17 days. He only landed once to perform some religious ceremony, and I saw no disturbance created by him or his followers. He performed the Dewalie Poojah. None of the Culna people were alarmed at his arrival, and he never defied the public authorities there.

Orjoon, Teenecourie, and Postumber, Police chokedars at Culna, confirmed the testimony of the above witnesses almost verbatim.

Louis Alexander Frederick Theira deposed. I was acquainted with General Allard, who is now in France. General Allard did see the prisoner in the jail at Hooghly, and recollected having seen him previously at Lahore. I went with Doctor Leonard to see the prisoner in the Hooghly Jail, and was surprised to see him recognise Doctor Leonard.

Goluck Chunder Ghose deposed, that he was formerly a tutor to Rajah Pertab Chunder, when he was very young. He taught him English six months, and quit- ted his service in 1803. Since that period he never renewed his situation at the Rajbarry, but he married and settled at Burdwan and served in various situations in Calcutta, and he continued at various times to see the Rajah Pertab Chund, both at Calcutta and at Burdwan, for many years. Subsequently to the Rajah's reappearance, I visited the Rajah in the house of Rada Kissen Byasack at Calcutta, and we mutually recognised each other and talked over old matters.

The prisoner I know to be Rajah Pertab Chund of Burdwan. The prisoner is older, darker and thinner than he was when I formerly knew him. I had heard of his death and burial, but I soon afterwards heard that he was living in exile; and that a box, was burnt in lieu of his corpse. I questioned the prisoner to-day in jail, regarding his identity. I have given evidence in 2 or 3 cases formerly.

Goopes Moira, shopkeeper of Burdwan. I used to sell articles to Rajah Tej Chunder and Pertab Chunder. I recognize the prisoner to be Rajah Pertab Chunder.

Ham Dhona Manjee, I was formerly in the semindar of Telemataee's employ, whom Rajah Pertab Chunder formerly used to visit. I saw him when there and accompanied him to Moorsheadabad. I subsequently to his re-appearance saw him at Allypore, when he was in custody there, to be brought to give evidence in a case in the Supreme Court, and recognized him to be the Rajah Pertab Chunder.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I was confined on a charge in the Mofussil Jail, but I was never tried nor convicted. I am now the manjee of the ferry boat at Bultah ghant, and in the service of the Judge of the sillah, and am paid by the semindar.

Agab Abbas deposed. I was for 7 or 8 years jemadar of the Moguls formerly employed in the Rajbarry at Burdwan. I used to receive the daily treasure remitted to the Rajah, and in the evening to pay it over to the dewan. One day about 2 months after the return of Rajah Pertab Chunder, he despatched me to call his doctor, Hakeem Uskur Ally. The hakeem came, and examined the Raja, and said, that he was not seriously ill, but that he was feverish, and advised him to eat something cooling, and he eat a few oranges. A few days after this, Rajah Pertab Chunder expressed a wish to go to Culna. Raja Tej Chunder objected, and said, why go there? but Raja Pertab Chunder persisted, and ordered me to get six Moguls mounted, and accompany him thither to Culna. I asked Raja Tej Chunder what I was to do, and he replied obey your orders. The next day, I left the other Moguls in charge of the treasure at Burdwan, and accompanied Raja Tej Chunder and Rajah Pertab Chunder with six Moguls to Culna, where we put up at the Rajbarry. Raja Pertab Chunder was lodged in an upper roomed apartment. He subsequently expressed a wish to be taken to the river side, and he was taken up by the arm-pits, put in a palkee, and taken to a tent by the river side. I was desired to stay and guard the treasure. Messengers were laid from the tent where Pertab Chunder was removed, to the Rajbarry, to give intelligence of what may transpire. The first messenger arrived at about dusk, and said, that the young Raja had said, that he would not die for one hour yet. After the expiration of this period, Baboo Bissant Lal and Nundoo Lal came and informed Raja Tej Chunder, that the young Rajah was dead or had disappeared. Tej Chunder said, that it was very strange, as he was not very ill, and neither of his physicians, Askur Ally, who has attended him all day, nor Zuffer Ally, whom I sent for to-day by the hand of Agga Abbas, and who gave him some majoom. He did not apprehend any thing serious; but if he is really dead, perform his funeral obsequies. Nundoo Lal then went to perform the ceremonies; and Raja Tej Chunder wept and returned the next day to Burdwan, where I subsequently, with the train under me, joined him. Just previous to my leaving Culna, I heard contradictory rumours. Some said there, that the young Raja was dead and burnt, and others that he had abdicated the gadda and gone in exile to the Nabob of Moorsheadabad. I did not mention this circumstance on my return to Burdwan to the elder Raja. A few days after my return to Burdwan, I felt melancholy for the death of Raja Pertab Chunder, and requested my discharge; and although Raja Tej Chunder wished to retain me in his service, I took a certificate from him of my services, (This certificate the witness produced in Court, and it bore the signature of Raja Tej Chunder) and having received my pay, I made over the treasure to Porran Baboo and quitted the service of the Rajbarry and came to Calcutta, where I saw Hakeem Askur Ally, and questioned him about the mysterious disappearance of Raja Pertab Chunder. The Hakeem said, the Raja is not dead, but has gone into exile; but nobody could give any reason for his adopting this step. Of the six Moguls who accompanied me to Culna on the aforementioned occasion, three of them died at Hoogly shortly after the disappearance of Pertab Chunder, and the others have returned to their native country at Affganistan: what has become of the other, I do not know. Hakeem Uskur Ally died at Calcutta three months after the alleged death of Pertab Chunder. After the return of Pertab Chunder from Moorsheadabad, he began to erect an Emambarah, and a Mahomedan caravanserai, and the Raja his father got angry with him, and rebuked him, and said what have you, who are a Hindoo, to do with Mahomedan religious edifices and ceremonies. Pertab Chunder replied, it is my pleasure. In consequence of the rumour of Pertab's appearance, I went to see him at Bancorah. I then recognized him and he me. Then he went under the assumed title of A Luck Shab. The prisoner is the true Rajah Pertab Chunder, and I am quite certain of it. I went with Nabob Baboo and the Magistrate of this district to see the prisoner in the Hoogly Jail, where I mentioned to the Magistrate, in the presence of the Darogah, that I had recognized the prisoner to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, only that he was thinner, darker and older. Since my discharge from the Rajbarry, I have supported myself by trading.

Doctor Leonard deposed. I was formerly acquainted with Rajah Pertab Chunder, son of Rajah Tej Chunder, of Burdwan. I had known him in 1820, and I saw him at Burdwan three different times. The interviews were regarding the sale of my indigo factories to him, and I subsequently saw him at my factory at Culna. I recognize the prisoner to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, the son of Rajah Tej Chunder, the person I have alluded to in my depositions.

Mr. Graham asked the Judge whether the witness who were subpoenaed in this case, would be protected from arrest from debt in civil cases during their attendance in this case. Mr. Curtis replied in the affirmative. Mr. Graham added his reason for putting this question was, because he had been informed that some witnesses objected to attend to their subpoenas in this case, because there were writs for debts pending against them, and directly they quitted their houses they feared being arrested.

Mr. Curtis expressed that the copy of the prisoner's defence, as translated into the Bengally language, he expedited and the original handed to the law officer of his Court to enable him to judge of the nature of the prisoner's defence. He added, that he supposed Mr. Shaw's native writer might have done the needful long before this. Mr. Graham added, that he believed the work was nearly finished, and he would bring it with him on the 4th instant into the Court.—HURK., January 5.

JANUARY, 3, 1839.

David Hare, Esq., Resident of Calcutta, deposed. I am Secretary to the Medical College at Calcutta. When Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan was in Calcutta, I had opportunities of being acquainted with him. It was during the years 1817 or 1818. I was six or seven times in his company, and each time for an hour to an hour and a quarter at the Rajah's house in Chowringhee. I think the prisoner resembles the Rajah Pertab Chunder very much. I have seen the picture in the room adjoining the Magistrate's Court. I examined the prisoner very minutely with it, and I traced a strong resemblance between the nose and the eyes of the prisoner, with those in the picture. The prisoner's nose is a little bent; but the chin and the depression under the lower lip are similar. The countenance and the color of the picture are fuller and fairer than the prisoner is now, but the general features are the same and the prisoner to me appears to have been reduced and grown darker now than he then was. At first, in consequence of the prisoner being reduced, he appeared to be a little taller than the Rajah was, but on comparing his height with mine, I found the prisoner's height corresponded with the height of Rajah Pertab Chunder; that is he was little taller than me, which was the case with Rajah Pertab Chunder. I saw the prisoner to-day in jail and conversed with him. The prisoner at first did not recollect my visiting him accompanied by Ram Mahon Roy, but he soon afterwards said he remembered my having come to his house with Ram Mahon Roy with a case similar to a gun case with a telescope fast, and that we went together on the roof of his house and viewed the moon through it. He likewise said that I had a curious bird cage with two birds in it. This article I had at that time, and I subsequently presented it to the King of Oude. I never showed the Rajah this cage, but some of my men might have shown it to him. He did not describe the telescope minutely, but he stated the size of it correctly. The questions I put to the prisoner I never mentioned to any person; for having heard of his return, and contradictory rumours of his death, and abandonment of his Semindary, I suspected I must be called as a witness in the case, and therefore kept the queries to myself. I, previous to seeing him to-day, saw him twice since his return from his exile, once at a sanch at Rajah Kesoon Chowdry's at Panketty, and he then had a beard, therefore I could not see that part of his face distinctly; but the upper part struck me as bearing a strong resemblance to Rajah Pertab Chunder's countenance. The second time I saw him without his beard in the Supreme Court, where his appearance altogether struck me as strongly resembling the Rajah Pertab Chunder's countenance, and I mentioned it to Mr. Laith in Court at the time. This I suppose led to the subpoena; but as I verily believe the prisoner to be Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan, I therefore never spoke to him since his return from his exile until to-day. I observed a peculiarity in the prisoner's nose which I did not see in the nose of any other prisoner in the jail, viz. that it perispired.

Soorooop Chunder Gossain, deposed. I see the Rajah Pertab Chunder sitting in the Court. I saw him at Ohinsurah about 22 years ago. I there received religious donations from him of 16 rupees each time.

Rajah Khithor Mohon Singh, of Bancoorah, I was acquainted with Rajah Tej Chunder of Burdwan, and his son Rajah Pertab Chunder. I was very intimate with him. The prisoner is Rajah Pertab Chunder. I am quite certain of it. About three years ago the Rajah took shelter at my house for three months at Bissenpoie, and I sheltered him in my Thinkoorbarry and placed guards for his protection. I know the prisoner was confined at Bancoorah, where he told me he had assumed the appellation of Aluck Shah. It is not for me to say why he was confined, as it is not for me to pass strictures on the conduct of Government authorities. The prisoner in consequence of the hardships he underwent in jail, and subsequently, is very much reduced and darker than he formerly was. I saw Pertab about five or seven years ago. A Pathan informed me that Pertab Chunder was not dead, but that he had seen him at Lahore. I never visited Pertab Chunder, but used to speak to him when I visited Rajah Tej Chunder at Burdwan. At Bancoorah, Mr. Elliott, the Magistrate, abused me, and desired me to desist from succouring the prisoner, whom he termed an impostor and a vagabond, and said that if I persisted I should be likewise sentenced to imprisonment. I replied that it was unbecoming a judge to abuse any witness in Court. Rajah Tej Chunder purchased my Semindary. I did, in my examination at Bancoorah, state that I had only seen Pertab Chunder once when he was 11 years old. This I did because Mr. Elliott threatened to imprison me if I spoke any word favorable to the prisoner; therefore I, through fear, concealed my further knowledge of Pertab Chunder. Mr. Elliott used to send peons to sound my evidence, and in the heat of the weather shut the prisoner up in tattoos, so as to prevent any air coming into his apartments, and thus oppress him with heat.

Baines Messer, Subadar of the late Burdwan Provincial Battalion, deposed. I formerly used often to see Rajah Pertab Chunder at the hutchies, &c. at Burdwan. I lost sight of him at the end of the year 1817, and after a lapse of 20 years. I see him here as a prisoner in this Court. I am sure he is the man, only that he is somewhat older, darker and emaciated through grief, age and vicissitudes. At Boorbhoom I heard that Rajah Pertab Chunder was dead, and two years afterwards, on my return to Burdwan, I heard that the young Rajah was living, and had abdicated his gudden and gone into voluntary exile. I used often to see both the Rajahs at the Rajbarry. Captain Ludlow formerly Commanded the Burdwan Provincial Battalion, and he was very intimate with Rajah Pertab Chunder. Rajah Pertab Chunder, from the year 1809 till 1811, the period that Captain Ludlow commanded the Provincial Battalion, used to come and see the Battalion exercise every day. I was then a Recruit in the Battalion. After the expiration of 1811, I was transferred for two years to the Midnapore Provincial Battalion, and was in 1814 re-appointed Jemadar in the Burdwan Provincial Battalion. I saw the young Rajah at a horse race at Burdwan, between Captain Ludlow and Mr. W. B. Hayley, the Judge of the Zillah. Captain Ludlow died 15 or 20 years ago.

Mr. Shaw said, that he declined calling any more witnesses to-day, but he hoped by half past ten o'clock to-morrow morning, on his return from Calcutta, to be able to produce three or four more respectable witnesses, and then close his case at once, and begged the Judge to postpone the further hearing of the case until that hour to-morrow. The request was complied with.

Mr. Shaw to-day struck out the name of many witnesses in the calendar, whose evidence he did not consider to be essential to his case. Some of these were in attendance in the Court on their subpoenas, others were expected, and some had either secreted themselves or had refused to come.

It appearing that the second witness examined to-day, Soorooop Chunder Gossain, had been subpoenaed with his name being inserted in the calendar of the witnesses submitted to the Judge, or without any subsequent petition to the judge, but by a direct statement to the magistrate, Mr. Curtis objected to this mode of procedure, and said, that he had already intimated to the prisoner, that if he required any fresh witnesses to be subpoenaed for the defence, to submit their names to him by a petition. Already there were about 320 witnesses subpoenaed, and if the list went on increasing thus, there would be no end to the suit. He had no objection to grant every indulgence to the prisoner that his case required, but he wished the rules of the Court to be adhered to, and all applications for increase of witnesses, and first subpoenas, to be applied to him by the prisoner, or by counsel, by petition, and not by sending their names in direct to the Magistrate, without his knowledge of it.

Mr. Shaw replied, that the mistake had arisen from his being unacquainted with the practice of the Magistrate Courts in these matters, and as he found it much pleasanter to him to make these applications to the Judge than to the Magistrate, he certainly would take care that no similar mistake should hereafter occur. At the suggestion of Mr. Elliott, those already subpoenaed under the circumstances, should not be discharged without the consent of the prisoner's counsel from their subpoenas. — Burdwan, January 7.

January 4, 1896.

Rajah Jye Sing deposed. I reside at Jambhooor in Allah Bissampoor. I am related to the Bissampoor Rajah's family. I am now 56 years old, and ever since I was 12 years of age I have been acquainted with the Bissampoor Rajah's family. My grandfather knew Pertab Chunder's grandfather Rajah Tilluck Chund, and my father Bakhdoor Sing knew Rajah Tej Chunder. I likewise was very intimate with Rajah Tej Chunder and his son Rajah, Pertab Chunder, and repeatedly visited them at Burdwan. The prisoner is Rajah Pertab Chunder. I recognize him perfectly. From this date it is 25 years since I saw him, with the exception of having seen him when, on his way to Pachete, he put up for one night at my house. I did hear of Rajah Pertab Chunder's death about 19 years ago, and about eight days afterwards I heard that Rajah Pertab Chunder was not dead but gone voluntarily into exile and abdicated his gaddas. Both the respectable and the vulgar community at Bissampoor trusted the latter rumour, and it was very current and generally believed. Subsequent to this rumour I never saw Rajah Tej Chunder and consequently I had no opportunities of ascertaining the correctness of this report from him. I used to see Rajah Pertab Chunder repeatedly at Burdwan.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I was a prisoner in the suit at Bancoorah and was detained three months there and then released on bail. I gave my statement there. This is it, signed by me.

This document, dated 20th April 1896, was then filed and read.

Deponent added. I do not know what Mr. Elliot might have written. I said that when I saw him he was younger, and he had no beard or mustachoes, but the prisoner's general appearance is the same, and his gait and manners are similar to Rajah Pertab Chunder; but he is a little stouter and darker than Rajah Pertab Chunder was. Mr. Elliott said, he is not the Rajah, and I replied you may think what you please, I think there is a resemblance. I was never tried on the charge for which I had been arrested at Bancoorah. The day I gave this statement as a defendant, I was released from my detention, and I sold my elephant to pay my expenses and returned home.

By Mr. Shaw. The prisoner was not present when I was examined at Bancoorah. The statement is in Persian. I can neither read nor write that language, and the statement was never read to me. Mr. Elliot, after it was written, desired me to sign it and I did so. I never saw the prisoner at Bancoorah. I have subsequently seen him last Sunday in the Hooghly jail. When I gave my statement at Bancoorah the prisoner was in jail there.

Hakim Wullee Woolah, resident of Chinsurah. I have been residing at Chinsurah and Calcutta for the last 30 or 40 years, and I often went to the Rajbarry at Chinsurah, and attended the young Rajah Pertab Chund, jointly with my friend Hakim Utkar Ally for a Choonera, for about one month and half or two months, and I saw him during that period about 200 times. The prisoner is Rajah Pertab Chunder. When I saw him, he was 25 years of age. When he was cured, I returned to Calcutta, and the Rajah to Burdwan, and he is now about 45 years of age. The only difference I perceive in him is that he is mostly obscured by age. About 15 or 16 years ago, I heard, at Calcutta, that the Rajah died. When Hakim Utkar Ally returned to Calcutta, about four months after the alleged death of the Rajah, I said to him, I hear contradictory rumours of the death of Rajah Pertab Chunder, can you explain this, you were his medical attendant? Hakim Utkar Ally replied, the report of his death is false; he under this pretence, allowed his gaddas, and has gone into voluntary exile.

Kash Bahary, resident of Kumbhar. This witness being a Hindu, objected to be sworn the Oath of the Court, and the Judge seemed disposed to have him sworn in that form; but at Mr. Bignell's suggestion he permitted him to be sworn on his written affirmation. Witness deposed. I was formerly a writer in the Rajbarry of Burdwan. I was altogether about 19 years a servant of the Rajbarry, and it is about seven years since I received my discharge. I saw Rajah Pertab Chunder. There he is sitting in Court I recognize him perfectly well. He is my old master. Surely, I ought to know him. When the prisoner was in 1836 coming from Bancoorah in custody to Hooghly, I saw him in the village of Mahapoor, and previous to that I saw him at the Golab Baug, about three or four years ago. The time that elapsed between my seeing him at Golab Baug, and my having last seen him at Burdwan, was about 15 years. In 1227 B. S., when I went to my house, the Rajah Pertab Chunder was sick with a headache, and about one month afterwards, on my arrival, I heard that Rajah Pertab Chunder had not died, but a box had been burnt in its stead, and the Ganges dragged with a net for his body. Hearing this I questioned Beernand Gossain. He said go away, I must not talk about those matters. Prawn Baboo has promised to increase my salary to 50 rupees a month to keep this matter secret—hereafter all will be revealed to all. The rumour of the young Rajah's death, I had heard about five days previous to my return to Burdwan. When I went to see Pertab Chunder at Golab Baug in Burdwan, all the inhabitants of the surrounding villages hinted about that Rajah Pertab Chunder had returned. I heard this at least in 20 villages. He was then dressed as a devotee. He is thinner and darker now than he was when I knew him at Burdwan.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I never ran away from the Rajbarry after the death of Rajah Tej Chunder. I absented myself from my duty on private affairs, and on my return, Prawn Baboo discharged me; but I was subsequently re-employed by Prawn Baboo. I was never accused of embezzlement. When I saw the prisoner at Golab Baug, I was in the employ of Baboo Turrah Chund, the son of Prawn Baboo, who asked me what I thought of the prisoner, and on my replying that I thought he resembled Rajah Pertab Chunder strongly, he discharged me. This was about eight days after I had seen the prisoner at Golab Baug. There was a decoity in my village when Mr. Gilmore was Magistrate here, and he, as I was the talookdar of the village, confined me for six months for not giving information of the decoity to the Magistrate. The darogah of the village, Hyrab nazir, and many other talookdars, were all confined for the same period. I was never committed to take my trial with the prisoners, who were subsequently tried and convicted by the sessions judge. I was never tried either by any Judge or Magistrate for the neglect of information, but punished commonly by the Magistrate on that charge.

Saoroo Moira, resident of Burdwan. I was formerly a peon of the Burdwan cutcherry, and used to carry purwannahs to the Rajbarry at Burdwan. I often saw Rajah Tej Chunder and Rajah Pertab Chunder there, but I never spoke to them. The prisoner is Rajah Pertab Chunder. I went to see him after a lapse of 14 years at Kuchunagar, and recognized him to be the young Rajah. I heard in 1227 B. S., that the young Rajah had gone into exile, and that a box had been burnt instead of his corpse, and that Beernand Gossain had the river dragged for his body, pretending that a golden cup had fallen in accidentally.

Shoosann, deen Tewarry, late Havildar of the Provincial Battalion of Burdwan, deposed, that he had occasionally seen Rajah Pertab Chunder at Burdwan, and the prisoner is that individual. I am sure of it. I see him now after a lapse of 16 years. When at Kishenaghur and at Culna, I had heard the death of Rajah Pertab Chunder, contradicted generally. Soon after it was stated, that a box had been burnt in lieu of the corpse, for which the river opposite Culna had been ineffectually dragged, and that the Rajah had abdicated the gadda and gone into voluntary exile for religious purposes.

Mirza Hadea deposed, that he was the tutor of Beelate Khanum, who was formerly the mistress of Mr. Hayes, the judge of Hooghly and Burdwan, and taught her Persian at the time when she quitted Mr. Hayes' protection, and entered into the service of Rajah Pertab Chunder. I accompanied her to Burdwan, where Rajah Pertab Chunder allowed me eight annas a day diet money. I staid there six months, afterwards I returned to Chinsurah and opened a perfumery shop. I used often to see Rajah Pertab Chunder before my return to Chinsurah, and subsequently he used to buy perfumery from me. Beelate Khanum is dead. She died about 20 years ago at Patna. She was a native of Cashmere, and had relatives at Patna. About 20 years ago, I heard contradictory reports of Rajah Pertab Chunder's death. Some said that he was dead, others that he was living and gone into exile. The prisoner is Rajah Pertab Chunder, and I recognize him perfectly well.

Mirza Mahomed Hosain deposed. I was an attendant on the young Rajah of Burdwan, and quitted him about two years previous to the alleged rumour of his disappearance, and was about five years in his service. The prisoner is the young Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan. I was arrested at Culna with the Rajah.

Questioned by Mr. Shaw. I was for 22 days confined in the thannah at Burdwan, and three days in the Fouz-darry jail there. The Rajah had presented a petition to Government to be identified by the Rannees, and he went to Culna for the purposes of going to Burdwan to be identified. I was kept in the thannah at Burdwan in order to give evidence, and as I would not I was kept three days in the Burdwan Fouz-darry jail. I was then forwarded to Hooghly and confined six months in the civil jail here, and then released without being tried on the charge for which I had been arrested. All the persons who were arrested with me were not similarly treated. I was examined for the prosecution on oath at Burdwan. I was released on my recognisance having giving security of 25 rupees penalty, if I ever became an attendant on Rajah Pertab Chunder. I am not a defendant now. There was no riot whilst the prisoner was at Culna. The prisoner obeyed all the police orders whilst at Culna, and never set the authorities at defiance. I first saw the prisoner after his return from exile in the house of Rada Kissen Bysack, where we mutually recognized each other, and I served him about twelve months at Calcutta. About two months after this he was arrested at Culna. He only took his usual attendants with him to Culna.

Mr. Bignell contended that Mr. Shaw's cross-examination regarding the witness's treatment and statement, whilst confined at Burdwan and in the Hooghly jail, on charge of abetting the prisoner in his riot at Culna, were regular, and bore no reference to this case. He had been sufficiently punished for it.

Mr. Shaw replied, that he contended that it did bear reference for it tended to show that an effort was made to gain him as a witness for the prosecution, and that he had been confined for six months without being tried, and that as he was released from that charge, there were no objections to his evidence, and by cross-examining him, Mr. Shaw hoped to show that there was no riot at Culna, and how the prisoners were treated in confinement here; and attempts were made to gain him over as a Government witness, and if any man can be punished or convicted for any offence without trial in the mofussil courts, he wished to have it given to him on record.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he certainly considered these questions bore no reference to the prisoner's case; but Mr. Shaw may proceed with the questions. With regard to the practice of the mofussil courts, Mr. Shaw had no right to demand a written exposition of it. If in any case he considered, that either the magistrate or judge had acted improperly, he could appeal to a superior authority.—Harkara, January 8.

JANUARY 8, 1839

William Dalrymple Shaw, Attorney at Law, deposed. I arrived at Culna on the evening of the 29th April last. On the following morning, I walked through Culna, and saw no disturbance there. I had gone to Culna at the request of Radakissen Bysack, to attend upon the prisoner who, I understood, was proceeding to Burdwan on matters connected with an ejectment suit, pending in the Supreme Court for the recovery of three large bazars in Calcutta, the object of that suit being more to prove the identity of the prisoner with Rajah Pertab Chunder, than the recovery of these properties. I was the attorney who filed the plaint in ejectment, and on his behalf I retained four Members of the bar, the Advocate General, Mr. C. B. Philsep, Mr. L. Clarke and Mr. J. F. Leith. Defence was made to that action by the Rannee Bussanath Komary. I visited the prisoner at Culna, on board his boat, between 5 and 6 p. m. of the 30th of April, 1838. When I went on board his pinnace he was in an adjoining boat, as I was told, dressing, and whilst I was waiting for him, I looked about the pinnace. I did not on that occasion see a single armed man. If there had been any I would have noticed the occurrence. My reason for saying so is, that just before I was leaving the Rajah's pinnace to return to my own boat, a man named Banka Sing, whom I had known as the servant of the prisoner since April or May, 1836, came in armed with a sword. I immediately asked why he was allowed to have a sword, and ordered him to be deprived of it, to prevent any question regarding it. I also asked how many swords there were amongst the men, and I was told that about 25 chokyders had swords. Banka Sing accompanied me when I went up to visit the prisoner in the Bankoorah jail in 1836, and he then carried with him a gun and a sword. My trip to Bancoorah being my first visit to that part of the country, I was astonished to find that almost every person I met was armed either with a sword or a staff. I consequently made enquiries about it, and learnt that it was customary in that part of the country, for persons to go thus armed. After waiting on board of the pinnace of the prisoner at Culna on the evening of the 30th April, the prisoner came into the pinnace accompanied by the servants. Shortly afterwards Rajah Neer Hurry Chunder Roy, Rajah of Hurdan, came into the pinnace, and we conversed on general topics. I recollect I stated to the prisoner, that if he intended to go to Burdwan and wished me to accompany him, he must send and engage a house for me at Burdwan, and he must consent to go with his necessary domestics, and without a large retinue of servants. He replied that he had dispatched a person to order Rada Kissen Ghosaul, his mooktar at Burdwan, to hire a house for me; and as I had come to accompany him, he was not afraid, and he would do whatever I wished him. He then began to make complaints of the manner in which his people were treated by the Police authorities at Culna, and begged that I would intercede to have them better treated. I consequently gave orders to the prisoner's darogah Futehollah Shaw, to call the darogah of Culna; and after some time, when it was dark, the darogah came. Some of the prisoner's attendants informed us, that the darogah wished to come on board with a number of armed men. I then sent word not to allow him to do so. He came about two or three minutes afterwards, attended by about four or five persons, and I blamed him for coming on board in that way, when there was no disturbance, and that such proceedings would in all probability lead to a quarrel with the Rajah's people; and likewise told him, that complaints had been made to me of the manner in which the Rajah's people had been treated, and that I would report his conduct to the Magistrate. He entreated me not to do so, and said that he was always desirous of paying all respect to the Rajah; he then called him, and whom he, in my presence, invariably treated with respect. I then began to jest with him about his compulency and endeavoured to coax and mollify him, so that he may treat the prisoner's retinue better. He then had been on board about a quarter of an hour, and was on the eve of departure, and he said that he had an order from the Magistrate and asked whether I would wish to hear it read. I replied in the affirmative, and it was then read by one of his followers who had no appearance of being a Police functionary, but a villager. After it had been read, I spoke to the prisoner, and told the darogah that I did not understand what was the meaning of the word Jamneehbustee, as written in that order; and that I did not see any person about the Rajah except those whom I had known to have been with the prisoner at Calcutta; and I now positively say, that at no time during that night did I tell the darogah, nor did I hear one else say, that the prisoner was going by an order of the Government in Council to Burdwan, or that any force would be used to take him there and place the Rajah on his galley. The darogah did not address himself to the prisoner or ask him what his answer was to the putwana. After the putwana was read, I said to the darogah, "point out any person you may wish to be turned away and I will undertake that the party will be discharged." I then told the prisoner to repeat words to the same effect to the darogah, and which he did, and as the darogah was going away, I said to him, understand clearly that the prisoner is willing to obey any order, and that he would even discharge his pipe bearer or oral attendant, or any other domestic, if the darogah would but point them out. The darogah replied the proper person to whom this should be mentioned was the Nazir, and in consequence I requested him to send for that officer which he did; but after waiting some time, and the Nazir not coming, the darogah went away. In consequence of the Nazir not coming, and to prevent any question subsequently as to what had passed between the darogah, the Rajah and me, I directed a letter to be written to the Nazir, to the same effect as the offer which had been made to the darogah, and Moushy Humschander, by the prisoner's orders, wrote the letter. I think this letter was drafted, but I went away, leaving my head native assistant, Joynarain Chunder, with particular orders to see it delivered to the Nazir at the thana, and to endeavour to procure bearers for me to go to Pygachee, Mr. Lyall's factory, in the neighbourhood of Culna. It was just as I was going away, that Bunka Sing, of whom I spoke, came in with the sword in his hand, and then went to my boat and retired to rest. The next morning my writer informed me, that he had delivered the letter at the thana, and that the thana people had said that they could not get bearers, as there was a rumour that the Magistrate was coming to Culna. I consequently borrowed the prisoner's palkee, and whilst waiting for it to come, my attention was attracted to a chokeydar in a boat, with a man whom I have since recognized as Peary Lal Bahon, the witness in this case for the prosecution. They were then stopping my Kidmitgar from going on shore, whom I had ordered to get some milk for my breakfast. I asked them why they hindered my servant from landing. They were very insolent, and said that they had orders of some person in authority, which order I desired them to produce. They then went away, but they did not return. I was very much irritated, and consequently addressed a letter to the Magistrate. That letter was dated the 1st of May, and is, I believe, filed in the proceedings of this case. I then went to Pygachee Factory and remained there until the next morning, when, in consequence of hearing of the Magistrate's arrival with the military at Culna, I returned there and was arrested opposite to the Revd. Mr. Alexander's house. When I was being taken to the place in which I was confined at Culna, the Nazir accompanied me. I asked him what was the meaning of the occurrences of that morning, and he replied that he could not comprehend it.

Questioned by Mr. Graham.—In the suit which the prisoner instituted for ejectment in the Supreme Court, Dr. A. R. Jackson was security for four annas, Radakissen Bysack four annas, Mothornauth Mullick four annas, Rustomjee Cowasjee eight annas. Dr. Jackson and Rustomjee were induced to enter into the transaction from what they heard from Mothornauth Mullick. At that time Mothornauth Mullick, I believe, was employed at the Rajbairi, at Burdwan, and was the broker of Kassinauth Mullick, the late Dewan of the Burdwan Rajah. The interview between the prisoner and Mr. Toby Prinsep at his office was at my suggestion, and I was present at it. The prisoner on that occasion did not satisfactorily recognize the persons present, nor did he apparently answer Mr. Prinsep's queries satisfactorily; but he recognized Mr. Trower immediately on his entering the room, and answered his questions correctly. I introduced Dr. Scott to Mr. Trower after his return from Madras, but Mr. Trower, after looking at him, did not recognize him.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell.—I am still the Attorney on record for the prisoner in the ejectment case, but during the Dargah Poojah Holidays of 1837, the prisoner changed attorneys, and Mr. Graham was appointed Attorney on the usual terms of paying my costs, but these costs not having been paid, this has been the cause of the suit not having been proceeded with. I have since been solicited to take up the prisoner's case; but I have declined to do so, because I do not like to take up the case of any client after he has shewn a want of confidence in me by withdrawing it from my hands. No ex parte judgment can be obtained in a case of ejectment by the casual ejector ex parte against any property situated in Calcutta, belonging to a native residing out of Calcutta, and who is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. In my opinion both the guardians of Madab Chunder, the present Rajah of Burdwan, and he himself, are liable to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Calcutta.

Gargoh Boshun Mookerjia, Dewan of the Stamp office, deposed. I know Kisto Lal, the son of Shamlal Bramacharee, of Krishnagar. He in 1237 B. S., waited for about one year on me in hopes of obtaining employment, during which period I saw him almost daily, and I believe I could recognize him again if I were to see him. Both the prisoner's countenance and figure differ from that of Kisto Lal's, and Kisto Lal was much finer than the prisoner. He does not appear to me to be Kisto Lal.

Kerbut ol Soosbaun, Record-Keeper of the Zilla court of Nuldea, deposed, that he had known Kisto Lal, the son of Shamlal, Bramacharee, of Krishnagar. The prisoner was not that man, to the best of his belief.

Moulvy Masooladigen and Mohon Mookum, two other witnesses, likewise deposed, that they had likewise known Kisto Lal, the son of Shamlal, Bramacharee, and that, to the best of their belief, the prisoner was not Kisto Lal.

Maulvy Moonsoor Ahmed, Muddureph of the Hooghly College, deposed, that he had been acquainted three years with Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan, and recognized the principal prisoner in this case to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, and that he had likewise heard of the death and cremation of the Rajah, and shortly afterwards of his having escaped across the river and having gone into voluntary exile.—Hurk., January 9.

11th JANUARY, 1839.

Thomas Yeatherd, coach-builder, resident of Calcutta, deposed I resided in Burdwan during the year 1811, for about 11 months, and I was there employed as the overseer of the Golab Baug Garden. The prisoner very much resembles Rajah Pertab Chund, under whom I was employed. Rajah Pertab Chund used frequently to visit Golab Baug, and I generally saw him 3 or 4 times a week. I have a perfect recollection of Rajah Pertab Chund's general appearance and features, which were very similar to those of the prisoner. Rajah Pertab Chund and Purran Baboo, were not very intimate.

After this the prisoner's Counsel put in a petition, stating that out of the 16 persons against whom attachments had been issued, only one was in attendance, viz., the witness just examined; and as the prisoner had not the means to compel the attendance of the other 15 witnesses nor the funds to pay the expenses of the attendance of Dr. Halliday, he must consequently close his case to day, and begged the Court, as he had already been upwards of 8 months in custody, to take his case into its early consideration and adjudge the matter.

The Monivv then asked the prisoner what reply he could give to that part of the evidence which related to the burning of the corps of Pertab Chaud, and what motives induced him to abdicate his Rajship and go into voluntary exile; and also how he could account for his actions during that period.

The prisoner expressed a wish to give a detailed account of his proceedings during the period of his exile, and the motives which had induced him to abdicate his zemindari and go into exile; but Mr. Shaw objected and said, that if he were to give this detail, it would be opening his case and telling the parties, who would be the defendants in the civil action, which his client must bring to obtain his zemindari,—into the particulars of that suit prematurely. Added to which he considered, that the evidence which his client had already produced, had sufficiently rebutted all the charges pending against him in the case, and he did not consider it expedient to go into another part of the case which he must do to prove the accuracy of the prisoner's statement regarding the account he would give of himself in reply to the questions of the law officer of the Session's Court, and this would unnecessarily delay the proceedings, and cause the examination of additional witnesses,—he therefore advised his client to decline to answer this question.

On the Judge putting the question to the prisoner, he, after a short consultation, replied, that if his withholding this communication would injure his case, and his communicating it would benefit him, he would then make it, not otherwise.

The Judge replied, that in this matter the prisoner must decide for himself, and asked him how he intended to get over the evidence of 11 witnesses, who have positively sworn to Rajah Pertab Chund having died, and his corps being burnt in their presence at Culna, about 18 years ago.

The prisoner replied, that as nearly 50 persons had deposed to his being Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan, he supposed that his identity with that person had been sufficiently established, and in that case, if it has been clearly proved, that he is the real Pertab Chunder, Rajah and Zemindar of Burdwan, he supposed the evidence regarding the death and burial of Rajah Pertab Chunder, must be discredited, for it is manifest that if he were alive, he could not have been dead and burnt.

The Judge said, that he must decide for himself; and the prisoner said, that when on Tuesday the Government Vakeel would put in his demurrer to the prisoner's reply, by that time he, with his counsel, would reconsider the matter and inform the Court as to his determination on that point.

The Court then adjourned until Tuesday the 15th instant, to enable the Government pleader to put in his demurrer to the prisoner's written defence.—Hurk., January 14.

TUESDAY, 15th JANUARY, 1839.

No evidence was taken to day in consequence of the case having closed last Friday from the non-attendance of witnesses.

The Judge said that he had prepared his opinion of the case, but believed the law officer was not ready with his Futwah, which, had it been drawn up, the decision would, in all probability, have been passed to-day, but he believed some difference in opinion would exist. Mr. Shaw said, that some objection was made to bail his client before, in consequence of his being located at Hooghly. The Judge replied that it was done when the case was pending the decision of the court, but that measure would be adopted according to the decision of the case on a future day, when the prisoner would either be released or be bailed by two sureties of 5,000 Rs. each.

Mr. Bignell said, that his reply was ready (in a rough state) and the only difficult he experienced to file in Court, was the translating of it, especially those parts which related to boundaries, &c. The Judge told Mr. B. that it was not necessary to translate the whole, as the substance of the reply would answer the Mulvie's purpose.

Mr. Shaw stated that his client still wished to reply to the Mulvie's questions of last Friday, but he advised him to the contrary, as his statements would not be supported by evidence. Mr. Bignell concurred with Mr. S. Mr. Shaw moved the Court to file Mr. Beecher's evidence given in the Magistrate's Court, with the present proceeding, which the Judge, with the concurrence of Mr. Bignell, ordered to be transferred.

The proceedings of the Magistrate's Court at Burdwan, with the returns in English, and Persian translations, in which it is ordered to apprehend a "person calling himself Pertab Chaud," and Mr. Shaw on the 2d May, 1838, was put in by Mr. Shaw to be kept with the other proceedings in the "Jumgut Bushie" charges, with a view to shew that the returns were false, and had never existed on that date. With respect to the letter of the 19th May 1838, Mr. Shaw said that he would get a copy from Mr. Secretary Halliday and send it up from Calcutta. A petition for bail was then put in by Mr. Shaw in behalf of his client. The Judge said, that it was his anxious desire to release the whole of the poor, unfortunate people who were suffering so long in Jail, but with regard to the application, he could not determine, as it had reference to a point which could not be decided by Thursday next. Another document, with accompaniments, was put in by Mr. Shaw, which was an appeal from the Hooghly Magistrate's decision fixing Mr. Shaw 50 Rs.

The prisoner stood up and addressed the Court, that he would file his answer to the Mulvie's questions to-morrow. The Judge said he was left entirely to his own judgment, and if he was inclined to furnish them he was perfectly at liberty to do so; and expressed his surprise that a Raja possessing such large estates, should leave his Guddee and Raj, and go away, without leaving any documents, &c.; and that he considered this to be a very great point, although unanswered or unentered in his evidence. Mr. Shaw remarked, that in his opinion this was quite unnecessary, having the opinion of all the members of the bar.

Mr. Shaw also said, if the Judge and law officer agreed in finding his client guilty, whether there was no appellate Court. Mr. Curtis said that certainly there was, and he was very glad.

A person who, it appears, was the Raja Pertub's uncle, came, but although prisoner wanted him to be examined, his Attorney objected, after convincing him of the inutilty of it. The person goes by the name of Poursun Chund Bahoo. This person is not connected to the present Barliwan family, and is the brother of the late wife of the Raja Tej Chunder.

The Court adjourned at 12 o'clock and will sit on this case on Thursday.—Commercial Advertiser, January 18.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1838,

Mr. Shaw attended at 11 o'clock this-morning, at the Magistrate's Court, for the purpose of tendering Company's paper as bail for his client. The Magistrate came into Court about half past 12, and Mr. Shaw presented his petition and paper, and offered to endorse it in any way the Magistrate chose; but the Magistrate refused to accept it, as the Judge's order for holding the prisoner to bail specified, that two bail in 5,000 rupees each should be taken, and that as Mr. Shaw was a European, and had no property in the district, he could not accept him. Mr. Shaw expressed his surprise at the Magistrate refusing to accept an acknowledgment of a debt due by the Magistrate's own masters as security, and preferring that of two landholders; and he informed the Magistrate, that it was by the suggestion of the Judge (who had informed him that great delay occurred in examining the properties of securities) that he had procured Company's paper. The Magistrate, however, as a matter of course, refused to accept it before referring to the Judge, and he said he would make a reference to that functionary. Mr. Shaw, then went to the Judge and complained of the conduct of the Magistrate, and reminded him that he had begged him, when making an order, to hold the prisoner to bail, to allow him to put to bail in his Court, as he knew every difficulty would be thrown in his way in the Magistrate's Court.

The Judge seemed surprised at the Magistrate's refusal, and asked the Magistrate's sheristadar, Munshiram, the meaning of it. The sheristadar explained, that if the prisoner did not attend to receive his sentence what could be done to him; but that if two people became bail, they would be obliged to enter into an agreement to suffer the sentence passed on the prisoner, if they did not produce the prisoner. Mr. Shaw informed the Judge that that was exactly the report he had heard before going to the Magistrate, and he believed it had been got up to prevent any natives becoming security for his client's appearance.

In consequence of Mr. Shaw informing the Judge, that he believed the difficulty thrown in the way of the prisoner's release by the refusal of the Company's paper, originated in a desire to prevent him being held to bail, and that still more difficulties would be created after Mr. Curtis had left the station, the Judge addressed a letter to the Magistrate, informing him, that it was true the roobecarry mentioned, that the prisoner was to be held to bail on producing two good securities in 5,000 rupees for his appearance; but that Mr. Shaw had offered Company's paper for 1,000 Rs., and he reminded him that Mr. Courtney Smith was dismissed the service for a similar proceeding, and he thought he ought to accept the security offered by Mr. Shaw. Mr. Shaw reminded the Judge of the case of Mr. Houston, who had, as Collector, got himself into a scrape for refusing to take an acknowledgment of the Company when tendered by Prosonacoomar Tagore. At this stage of proceedings an official letter came in from the Magistrate, stating his inability to accept Company's paper without an order of the Judge, and giving as a reason that Mr. Shaw was a British subject, who could not be sued in his court. Mr. Shaw remarked, that he had already experienced the contrary, for he had been sued and fined by Mr. Samuells. He would only repeat, that he had offered, by petition, to place the Company's paper in the Magistrate's possession, and he had verbally offered to the Magistrate to endorse it in any manner the Magistrate might wish it, and that if he failed to produce his client in terms of the order holding him to bail, the paper would be forfeited. The Judge then added to his letter, that he would give an official reply if required, and sent it to the Magistrate. Mr. Shaw attended before the Magistrate, and endorsed the paper to him, and obtained a receipt for it. A perwanna for his client's release was therefore granted, and Mr. Shaw left Hooghly with his client, in the afternoon, for Calcutta.

We understand that Mr. Curtis leaves on Sunday for his new appointment in Calcutta. Mr. Ward will officiate as Judge until Mr. Barlow arrives. Mr. Bignell has also left the station and things have resumed their wonted quietness.

The six persons who were tried with Mr. Shaw's client, and acquitted on Thursday the 17th, were not released until Saturday afternoon, when they were brought before the Magistrate, who told them they were discharged. They were not required to enter into any morchulcha like those who were released without trial. We were surprised at this, as we supposed the most guilty parties were committed for trial before the Judge.

We believe the Magistrate has not yet made any return to the Judge of what he has done towards trying or releasing the other parties who were seized at Culna, and who have now been nearly nine months in custody without a trial or even an examination by Mr. Samuells. These people are still in jail, and we doubt whether the now officiating Judge will think he is called on to interfere about them. They must cause a considerable expence to the Company.

No decision has yet been passed on Mr. Shaw's petition of appeal against Mr. Samuells's order, fixing him 50 Rs. The Judge has sent for the proceedings and called on the Magistrate to state whether he acted as a Magistrate or Justice of the Peace.—Hulk, Jan. 22.

REPLY OF MR. MONTIE,

On behalf of the prosecution, to the defence of the said Rajah Pertub Chund.

In requesting the attention of the Court to the observations I am about to offer, I must solicit its indulgence for such a deviation from the ordinary form of procedure; but the singular nature of this case, the general importance of some of the principles involved in its decision, and the unprecedented interest evinced by the native community regarding its issue, will, I trust, be deemed sufficient reasons for the adoption of the course which I have pursued. When the Government was pleased to direct me to conduct in person the prosecution of the prisoners (which was not until some time after the close of the proceedings in the Magistrate's Court,) I was instructed to waive all objections to the appearance of Counsel and Attornies from the Supreme Court on behalf of the accused parties; and as you, Sir, have allowed the Counsel for the soi-disant Rajah to put in a written defence in the English language, I respectfully submit, that I am entitled, on behalf of the prosecution, to reply in English to that defence. The gentleman opposed to me have filed three separate pleadings, the last of which is clearly irregular; inasmuch as, although it purports to be a petition regarding the attendance of certain witnesses, it is in fact a comment upon the evidence that had been adduced by themselves on behalf of the prisoner, such comment not being allowed by the practice of any Court with the rules of which I am acquainted, when no fresh evidence had been offered by the prosecution to rebut the testimony given for the defence. It is, however, far from my wish to insist upon this objection. I have throughout these proceedings been anxious, that every probable facility should be afforded to the soi-disant Rajah (and with the case of the other prisoners I have at present no concern) to establish his innocence, if innocent he be, of the charges preferred against him, and if there is any thing in this last irregular pleading which you may consider to make in favour of the prisoner, I am perfectly content that it should have its full weight with you.

* We do not think this case at all analogous.—Es.

After carefully perusing the three pleadings to which I have alluded, I think I shall just consult the convenience of the Court by considering, seriatim, the charges upon which the soi-disant Rajah has been tried, and by commenting, as I proceed, upon the arguments urged by his Counsel with reference both to the law and the merits of the case. I must, however, premise, that to a great deal of the matter set forth in the prisoner's defence, I do not intend to give any answer. The conduct of the Magistrates of Illoohy and Burdwan, has been commented upon in the most improper manner. The former gentleman has been charged with the breach of a solemn assurance, and with a deviation from the established practice of the Honorable Company's Criminal Courts, for the purpose of getting up, by any means, fair or unfair, a case against the prisoner, and with having displayed, in the discharge of his official duties, the most glaring partiality to the case of the prosecution; while the late Magistrate of Burdwan is accused, in direct terms, of having falsified the proceedings of his own Court. I will not presume to defend against such charges, proceeding from such a source—the character of gentleman so well known and so highly respected as Mr. Samuells and Mr. Ogilvy, for I feel that it would be presumption in me to suppose that that character needed the aid of my advocacy. They are both well able to defend themselves, and will, I am sure, be most ready to do so, if any tangible charge be regularly preferred against them to their official superiors, and unless such charge shall be so preferred, you will, I am confident, regard the attacks now made with the contempt they deserve. I may remark, however, that I, and not Mr. Samuells, am responsible for certain of the witnesses examined before the Magistrate not having been produced in your Court. When I was called upon to prosecute certain distinct charges against the prisoner, it would have been the height of absurdity, if I had called witnesses whose evidence I well knew would be of no service to my case. I distinctly stated to Mr. Morton at the commencement of the trial, that it was not my intention to call the witnesses in question, but that if he wished to have their testimony they should be produced. I repeated this offer several times in the course of the proceedings and when at last the prisoner's Counsel did ask me to produce Mr. Overbeck and Mr. Deere, both of these gentlemen were summoned, and they both appeared in Court and gave their evidence on the day appointed. If other witnesses examined before the Magistrate were not produced by me, it was, at the framer's of the prisoner's defence very well know, simply because I was never asked to produce them. So much for this part of the defence. Ag Mr. Morton, I believe, conceived that the Magistrate had told him that no witnesses would be produced before the Sessions Judge in addition to those who had been examined in his (the Magistrate's) Court, I am quite certain that whatever Mr. Morton may have said upon this subject is a correct statement of the impression left upon his own mind, but he must have mistaken Mr. Samuells's meaning. That gentleman has been some years a Magistrate and was of course fully aware that when the case should be made over to the Sessions Judge, and its management on behalf of the prosecution placed in my hands, his control over the proceedings would cease, and that he could not possibly bind either the Judge or the public prosecutor to any particular line of conduct. It is a matter of everyday practice for new witnesses to be called at any stage of the proceedings before the Sessions Judge, when there are sufficient grounds for believing that their evidence will tend to throw light upon the guilt or innocence of the prisoner; and it is absurd to suppose that Mr. Samuells could have intended to pledge the Government not to avail itself of any valuable evidence that might be procurable before the close of the prosecution. It is also insinuated that there was much more difficulty in procuring the attendance of witnesses for the defence than for the prosecution, and that this difficulty arose from the unwillingness of the Government officials to serve the subpoenas upon the parties named by the prisoner. Now, it is within my personal knowledge that every possible exertion was made by the Magistrate to produce the defendants witnesses. I do not know in how many instances a return of non est inventus was made, but I challenge the prisoner, and those acting for him, to name one single case in which that return was made, where the party mentioned in the subpoena was living in the place stated as his residence in the petition for the issue of such subpoena. If they chose to summon as witnesses imaginary persons who had no existence, or existing persons who were not residing at the places mentioned by them, it was their own fault, and it is ridiculous to complain of the non-production of such persons. Prawn Baboo is particularly pointed out as not having been in attendance. How does the fact stand? Prawn Baboo was served with a subpoena in the ordinary form, but he did not obey its requisition. Mr. Shaw complained of this to you, Sir; you immediately offered to order the enforcement of the subpoena by every lawful means, and I engaged that the witness should be in attendance on a certain fixed day, provided that, if he came, his evidence should be taken. What was the result? Why, the prisoner's attorney put in a suggestion to the effect that he did not want Prawn Baboo's evidence. It is clear that it was never intended to examine him, and that his name was inserted in the list of witnesses, merely in the hope of causing him unnecessary vexation and annoyance. The prisoner would indeed have been mad if he had supposed that Prawn Baboo, the father of the Rajah of Burdwan, would have given evidence in his favor; and the only reason why I did not call him for the prosecution was, that I knew that the testimony of a person so deeply interested in the result of this trial, would have little or no weight with you. The same remark applies to the Rannees. When the prisoner thought that these ladies would not be forthcoming, he complained of the hardship of being deprived of their evidence; but the moment he was told that they should be produced, he begged to dispense with their testimony. One word more; the Magistrate is charged with having issued circulars to the effect that he had proved the prisoner to be an impostor; you will probably smile when I tell you, that these alleged circulars, were, simply a few copies of the Samachur Durpanu, containing a faithful translation of the evidence given before the Magistrate, but without note or comment of any kind. They were forwarded to the darogahs and principal zemindars, in order that correct information might be afforded to the native public regarding proceedings which had given rise to much contradictory and absurd rumours. I feel, Sir, it would be an insult to your understanding if I were to say any thing further to prove the entire groundlessness of the prisoner's complaint respecting the fairness of the mode in which proceedings have been conducted.

*Objections have been taken to the charges against the prisoner on the score of informality, but I think that these objections must have had their origin in an ignorance of the practice of the Company's criminal tribunals, and in a mistaken notion that the technicalities of an indictment in the Supreme Court, are necessary to give validity to proceedings before you. Without, therefore, detaining you any longer with preliminary remarks, I shall proceed to consider the first charge on which the sui disant Rajah has been arraigned. It is as follows.

"Aluk Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, alias K-dolali Paures Brumocharce, charged with gross fraud and imposture in falsely and fraudulently assuming the name of the deceased Moha Rajah Dheraj Pertab Chunder Behadour, formerly Zamindar of Burdwan, pretending, in various places, during the last two years, to the great disturbance of the general peace and quiet of the country, that he is in verity the aforesaid Zamindar of Burdwan, that the Zamindaree of Burdwan belongs of right to him."

To this charge, by far the most important of all, and the one most prominently brought forward, the prisoner, in the first instance, demurred, on the ground that assuming its allegations to be true (which most of course he assumed for the purposes of a demurrer) the Sessions Court had no right to try him upon it, inasmuch as his claim to the Burdwan Zamindary was a question properly cognizable by a Civil Court. I need not spend many words to satisfy you, that this demurrer to the jurisdiction of your Court is without the slightest foundation. Supposing Rajah Pertab Chunder were now alive, and the prisoner had forged the Rajah's name to a bond for a lac of rupees, and were prosecuted by the Rajah for the forgery, what would you say if he were to plead that he could not be arraigned at the bar of the Sessions Court, because the question of the forgery involved the decision of whether he had or had not a right to recover from the Rajah a lac of rupees, a matter cognizable by a civil Court? Again, supposing a man were to insure his house and property for an amount greatly in excess of the real value, and then wilfully set fire to the same; if he were tried upon a charge of arson, would it be tolerated for a moment that he should plead in bar of jurisdiction, that the question involved the liability of the insurers to pay him the amount insured, which ought to be determined by a Civil Court? I could multiply instances; but I feel that to do so would be uselessly occupying your time, and that it cannot be necessary to say any thing more in order to convince you that a Criminal Court is not barred of its jurisdiction by the mere circumstance that its decision may possibly affect questions which may be proper subject, for the cognizance of a Civil Court. Were it otherwise, Criminal justice would be powerless with regard to a large class of the most serious offences against property. What would be the state of law, or rather of lawlessness, in a country where it should be laid down as a fixed rule, that however clear an imposture might be, and however injurious both to the rights of individuals and the tranquility of the state, the impostor could not be put upon his trial and brought to punishment, because he chose, falsely, to allege something, which, if true, might give him a claim in a Civil Court, the prosecution of such claim resting entirely with the impostor himself, who might postpone it to any period he might think proper? Mr. Leith, indeed, when verbally arguing the question before you, seemed to abandon the demurrer which had been put in, and to maintain, not that you had no jurisdiction on the ground urged in that demurrer, but that the fact of a man choosing to assume the name of a deceased person was no crime; and something of the same kind appears to be intended in the prisoner's written defence, where the charge is designated as "childish and the production of one ignorant of what constituted crime." It is scarcely necessary to say that the wording of the charge set forth in the defence and so freely commented upon, is widely different from the wording of the charge upon which the prisoner has been tried before you, and with which, alone I am concerned. For what purpose, unless it were a hope of misleading you and of unfairly influencing the public, the prisoner, when replying to charges preferred against him to your Court, has quoted the terms of a former proceeding before another tribunal I know not. To meet, however, Mr. Leith's argument, I admit that there may be cases in which a man assuming the name of a deceased person might more properly be sent to Beilam than to a jail; but such cases are totally different from the one set forth in the allegations of the present charge. The prisoner is charged not merely with assuming the name of a deceased person, from whim and caprice, as a half-witted man might do; but he is charged with having assumed such name and title with fraudulent intent and purpose, and to the disturbance of the peace and quiet of the country. I should suppose that no one could fail to perceive the broad line of distinction between the two cases, and to feel that while in the one instance the offending party might be an object of pity rather than of punishment, he is in the other guilty of a heinous crime. I do not refer to the law of England as any authority for the guidance of the proceedings of this Court, but I may mention, by way of analogy, that by that law the offence of personating a seaman with intent to receive his wages or pension, is felony, and visited with congn punishment. It is true that the Regulations of Government have no where particularized the crime of fraudulent personation, but the framers of those regulations, were fully aware that they had done little more than modify the Mussulman Criminal Law which was in force when this country was first acquired by the Hon. Company and the British Government, and had not even attempted the formation of any thing like a general Code, reserved to the Criminal Courts full power to punish, at discretion, offences not specially provided for. That power, Sir, is in your hands, to the extent of awarding seven years imprisonment with labour, and if you conceive such punishment to be inadequate, you may refer the case to the Sadler Nazamut Adawlut, who can impose any penalty short of death. What may have been the particular intent of the prisoner can only be inferred from his conduct and proceedings; he has, however, saved you the trouble of drawing any such inference, for he has admitted before you, that his object was to obtain possession of the Raj and Zamindary of Burdwan. If then the English Law, to which the learned gentlemen opposed to me so triumphantly appeal, declares the personation of a poor seaman, with the intent to obtain a few pounds sterling, to be a felony, what offence can be more serious, or what crime can deserve more severe punishment, than that of personating the deceased Rajah of Burdwan, with the intent of fraudulently obtaining the princely revenues of that ancient Raj? I will add no more to shew, that the offence with which the prisoner stands charged, is a crime cognizable in your Court, and a crime of the greatest magnitude, but will proceed to examine what ground there is for alleging the present prosecution to be a hardship upon him.

This ground of hardship or unfairness was first taken in the demurrer, and I really think that if the charge before the magistrate deserves to be characterized as the production of one ignorant of crime, I may fairly retort that this demurrer must have been the production of one ignorant of the first principles of pleading. Whoever heard of hardship being a ground of demurrer to jurisdiction? The demurrer assumes the truth of the charge, and who ever before heard, or heard with gravity, of the hardship of punishing an impudent impostor? I will not, however, trouble myself with such technicalities, but will meet fairly what I believe was really intended to be urged, namely, that the prisoner asserts himself to be in verity the Rajah of Burdwan, and has taken certain proceedings for the purpose of proving his alleged identity, and that, under such circumstances, there is a hardship in prosecuting him criminally as an impostor, because if he should be acquitted he would still have to prosecute his civil suit, in order to obtain possession of the Burdwan Raj, which cannot be awarded to him upon this trial. Now, at first sight, this argument may seem a plausible one, though it is of course merely an argument ad misericordiam, and in no way affects the question of the power of a criminal court to try the case, and punish the culprit if found guilty. It is in fact an argument why Government might have delayed the institution of the prosecution, but no argument at all to affect the prosecution, when instituted. It is obvious however that no general rule can be laid down for determining a question of this nature, and that each case must depend upon its own particular circumstances. Let us see then what ground there is for applying this argument of hardship to the present case, and whether, instead of the prosecution being an undue severity towards the prisoner, its institution was not the bounden duty of Government. In 1835 the prisoner first made his appearance in his assumed character, and selected, as the scene for his performance, a very unsettled part of the country, bordering upon a district in which open insurrection had only lately been subdued by a large military force. He collected together a considerable body of adherents, and there can be little doubt what would have been the consequences if he had been suffered to pursue his career without interruption. The Magistrate of Bancoorah arrested him, and he was sent for trial in 1836 to this Court. Some remarks have been made upon that trial, and it is said that I have not proved the record of conviction. I need not tell you, Sir, that I am at full liberty to refer any convictions and judgment in your Court, without producing any formal evidence to prove them. Whatever may be the rule of English Courts in this respect, there is here neither regulation nor practice requiring me to give any such proof. It is further observed, that on that trial the prisoner was not allowed the benefit of Counsel. He certainly was not; he was tried as every criminal had been tried from the first institution of the Company's Courts, nor was there the slightest reason why the presence of Mr. Tutton should have induced Mr. Harrington to depart from established precedent. On that occasion the Government confined itself to the charge of riot and tumultuous assemblage; it was then willing, however thoroughly convinced of the absurdity of the prisoner's pretensions, to give him an opportunity, if he chose to avail himself of it, to prefer his claim to a competent court. He was tried by a very merciful judge, who passed upon him the lenient sentence of six months imprisonment without labour, but required heavy recommitment that he would not again disturb the peace of the country. This precaution was necessary, not, as has been hinted, on the score that there was a shadow of foundation for the prisoner's claim, but because experience had shown that he possessed the power of exciting and agitating the populace to a very dangerous extent. We all know how ready the natives are to listen to any tale of wonder, apparently believing events almost in proportion to their incredulity and impossibility. It has been proved that Prawn Baboo's management of the vast estates belonging to the Burdwan Raj has rendered him unpopular in the extreme, and under such circumstances it may well be conceived, that even if the prisoner had not found a single European credulous enough to listen his story, he might have proved a very troublesome and even dangerous individual, if allowed to wander about the country with an armed rabble, whom he pleased to call his retinue, at his heels. After his release from the Hooghly jail, it is said that the prisoner instituted a suit for the purpose of asserting his claims; but what sort of a suit was that? In the first place, it was instituted in the Supreme Court, a tribunal having no jurisdiction over the Raj and zamindari of Burdwan—a tribunal having no jurisdiction over the present Rajah of Burdwan or his legal guardians; at least so I assert, and I believe upon enquiry you will find my assertion to be correct, notwithstanding Mr. Shaw's evidence about constructive jurisdiction. The action was brought for the recovery of certain lands in Calcutta, constituting an almost indefinitely small portion of the property of the Burdwan Raj. Can any man believe that the object of this suit was fairly to try the question of the prisoner's identity? He knew very well that even if he succeeded in that suit, he should have to institute proceedings de novo in the Mofussil Courts for the recovery of the Burdwan estates, and, therefore, his grand objection to the present prosecution applies just as strongly to his own action in the Supreme Court. He knew very well that nothing would ever induce either Prawn Baboo or the young Rajah to subject themselves to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, by taking defence to his action, and, therefore, if he obtained a judgment at all, it must have been an ex parte one, in the absence of those who alone could properly defend the suit. It is also possible, that he may have supposed, however mistakenly, that the Judges of that Court, not being so conversant as the Mofussil Judges with the manners, customs, and language of the natives, might be more easily imposed on, that they might not be so fully aware of the monstrous absurdity and repugnancy to all native customs involved in the story of a chest or coffin having been burnt upon the funeral pile of Pertab Chund, or of the peculiar construction of such a pile rendering escape from it impossible. I repeat that if the prisoner entertained such a hope, I have not the slightest doubt he would have found himself deceived, but that he did entertain it, is likely enough. But the strongest proof of all, that the suit in the Supreme Court was merely a ruse to alarm the Burdwan family, to extort money from them, and to induce the credulous persons who had already lent an ear to his tale to continue their belief, is the admitted fact that, up to the present day, no step has been taken in it. I crave pardon; one step has been taken, and it is one that imperatively demanded the institution of the present prosecution. It is in evidence that the prisoner caused notices to be served upon the servants of the Burdwan Rajah, warning them not to pay their rents; the number of these notices may be guessed when the attorney's bill, although nothing else appears to have been, amounts to the very moderate sum of 40,000 Rs. The probable effect of such notices, if the system had been persevered in, and its operations still further extended, we all know. The Burdwan Rajah has to pay an immense annual revenue to Government, and in default of such payment his estates are liable to immediate sale; and if the tenants, ever anxious to avail themselves of any pretext for withholding their rents, were generally to decline payment, inevitable ruin would be the consequence. To put a stop to such a system, the Rajah (who, as a minor zemindar, is under the special care and protection of Government, and would, but for particular circumstances, have been placed under the superintendence of the Court of wards) might be compelled to pay any amount the cupidity of the prisoner might choose to demand; and I say, that if Government, when it heard of these proceedings, had at once put the prisoner upon his trial as an impostor, and so either have compelled him to prove his claim, or have procured his conviction, it would have done no more than most honest men in the country would have thanked it for. But the matter does not rest here. The prisoner, emboldened probably by the leniency of his former punishment, again, thinks fit to put himself at the head of a tumultuous assembly, and to proceed to Culna, at which place are the Rajbarree and the Sumajbarree of the Burdwan family. I will not anticipate this part of the case, which is the subject of a distinct charge; but will merely say that the Government, upon finding that the constituted authorities had again been set at defiance by the prisoner, that the Magistrate had been obliged to call in the aid of the military, and that lives had been lost, determined at length to institute the prosecution which has been tried before you. I think the circumstances I have stated will satisfy you, Sir, that the prisoner has no cause whatever to complain of the treatment he has received at the hands of Government. In alluding to the proceedings of the military at Culna, I am far from intending to express any opinion regarding their propriety, and merely mean to say, that the fact of lives having been sacrificed on that occasion, and the prisoner's pretensions being the cause of the military having been called in, was an additional reason why those pretensions should speedily be set at rest, one way or other, for ever, in order that the same cause might never again lead to the same unhappy result. There is one other observation with which I will trouble you on this part of the case. If the prisoner really be the man he asserts himself to be, this prosecution, instead of a hardship, is a benefit to him. Supposing he had preferred his suit in the Civil Court of Burdwan, the party in possession, if well advised, would have relied upon that possession and would have left the plaintiff to prove his own case, and unless he could have completely satisfied the judge as to the cause and mode of his disappearance, the reason of his long absence, and all other points necessary to establish his identity, his suit would have been dismissed, without the defendant being called upon to shew the death of Pertab Chunder or any other circumstance affecting the case. By the institution of the present proceedings, this course is reversed and the Government has taken on itself the onus probandi. Fortunately the clearest and most indisputable evidence has been forthcoming; but it might very reasonably have been anticipated that there would have been great difficulty in proving the case for the prosecution, however true it might be, and if Pertab Chunder were not dead, the proof would have been impossible; of all those difficulties the prisoner might have had the advantage; for I fully admit the proposition of his Counsel, that if I fail to prove him to be an imposter, he is entitled to an acquittal. That acquittal would not, it is true, give him possession of the Zemindary of Burdwan; but if it proceeded upon the ground that we had failed to prove the death of Pertab Chunder, the prisoner would have gone into a Civil Court with heavy odds in his favor. I should apologize for the length at which I have entered into this part of the argument; but so much has been said about the hardship of the proceedings, that I do not think I should have done my duty if I had not exhibited the true state of the case.

To proceed, then, Sir, to the enquiry of whether this charge of fraudulent personation has been proved or not. The evidence given in its support is of three kinds: first, testimony to the death and cremation of Rajah Pertab Chunder; secondly, testimony to the identity of the prisoner with Kistulall; and, thirdly, testimony of the belief of witnesses possessing peculiar means of knowledge, that the prisoner is not and cannot be Rajah Pertab Chunder. I was of course aware all along that, being in possession of good and sufficient evidence of the death of Pertab Chunder, it was quite unnecessary, for the purpose of obtaining a conviction, to adduce any proof upon the other points; but as I proceed I will explain the reasons which have induced me to offer testimony regarding them. First, then, as to the evidence of the death of the Rajah. There is were but one single question for your consideration: vizt: the credibility of the witnesses that have been examined before you; for unless you believe the whole of them to be guilty of the most deliberate and unblushing perjury, there is an end of the case, it being quite impossible they can be under any mistake as to the facts to which they have deposed. They swear distinctly to the gradual progress of the young Rajah's illness until his case became hopeless; to his having been taken from Burdwan to Culna; to his having been carried in their presence from the Rajbarree at Culna to the Banks of the Ganges; to their having stood by his side at the moment of his death, two of them, in conformity with the custom of the Khetries, having had their hands upon his body; to their having borne the corpse from the river side to the funeral pile; to their having placed the lifeless body upon that pile; to their having seen it consumed, they being near enough to distinguish the features of the deceased as long as the fire allowed them to be visible; and to the bones having been collected the next morning, and deposited in the Sumajbarree, where a monument remains to this day to mark the spot. Clearer and more decisive evidence of the death of any human being it is impossible to produce. The prisoner has not dared to call a single person either to contradict these witnesses or to discredit their testimony, by shewing them to be men of bad character; the prisoner's counsel scarcely ventured to put a single question to them in cross-examination; and yet you are asked to believe that they are all perjured! The only one of the prisoner's witnesses who spoke at all as to the death, or, as he chose to call it, the disappearance of the late Rajah, I will not say corroborated the evidence for the prosecution, for the testimony of such a man could corroborate nothing, but at least had the prudence not to swear to any thing inconsistent with that evidence. This man (Aga Abbas) admitted that the Rajah was reported to be ill, that he did go with his father to Culna; that he was at Culna taken from the Rajbarree to the river side at the time in question, accompanied by several of the witnesses for the prosecution; that he (Aga Abbas) staid in the Rajbarree, and therefore could say nothing of what passed at the river side; that one of the witnesses for the prosecution returned to the Rajbarree and announced the death of Pertab Chunder to his father; that the old man wept, and ordered the usual ceremonies and rites of the Khetrie caste to be performed; that the witness was not present at the performance of these ceremonies, and shortly afterwards returned to Burdwan. Why, Sir, I was rather curious to ascertain for what purpose the prisoner called this witness, and it now appears that the whole object was to obtain from him a declaration, not of any thing within his own knowledge, but that he heard a report from others that the young Rajah was not dead, and his illness was a pretence. If ever the testimony of mortal man was stamped with the characters of perjury, it is that of this witness to these reports. He speaks of six Moguls who accompanied the Rajah to Culna, but when asked about them, he says some of them are dead, and the rest gone to Canbul; he swears that a native doctor who attended the Rajah told him that there was no serious illness, and when asked whether that doctor is now forthcoming, he states that he is dead; he says, or insinuates, and the old Rajah was aware that his son was not really ill. The old Rajah, as we all know, has long since followed his son to the grave; he swears that on the morning after the obsequies he was told that Pertab Chunder was not dead, but had escaped, and when asked who told him this, he says it was a Brahmin, whom he met on the road, whom he never saw since, and whose name he does not recollect. So much for the evidence of Aga Abbas. Other witnesses for the defence, and one of those called for the prosecution, have indeed spoken to the existence of a vague bazar report, of Pertaub Chund having, in some mysterious manner, disappeared; but an attempt whatever has been made to trace this idle rumour to its source, or to explain how it came to be listened to even by the most ignorant of the natives. Some of the witnesses say, that the report was that the young Rajah had gone to Rangoon to form a conspiracy against the British Government; others, that he was asserted to have gone on a visit to his friend, the Newaib of Moorshedabad; and another witness declares, that the story was, that the Newaib and the Rajah had both vanished, and would reappear after a certain number of years. We all know that folly can invent no story so monstrous that it will not be repeated, and, perhaps, even credited by the people of this country, and it would indeed be a hopeless task if I were to endeavour to account for the origin of so ridiculous a tale. The prisoner's council are perfectly aware of its absurdity, and have very judiciously refrained from entering into it. They have not attempted to bring evidence to shew the escape of Pertaub Chund, or to prove the burning of a chest filled with shells by order of Prawn Baboo, nor even ventured to hint a motive which could have induced a young man in the prime of life, in possession of an immense fortune, addicted to pleasures of every description, and a free thinker in religion, to abandon his estates and country, and to wander about for sixteen years disguised as a beggar. After having said thus much, it is, I should think, unnecessary for me to add any thing in support of the testimony of the Rajbarree witness. Uncontradicted and unimpeached as their evidence is, you, Sir, must believe them, unless you are prepared to say, that you will never convict a criminal upon the testimony of native witnesses. But what are the objections to their credibility which the prisoner has urged? One of them is curious enough; it is said that they all agree in their statements, and that the ingenuity of my friends was unable to shake their testimony by cross examination. Why, Sir, I suppose, that if they had differed from one another, and if the cross-examination had been now successful, you would have been told that that was a reason for disbelieving the witnesses. An event like the death and funeral of Rajah Pertaub Chund was not likely to be forgotten by any of those connected with him, and as to the witnesses not being able to speak on the spur of the moment to circumstances relating to the death of Rajah Tej Chunder, the answer is simple enough. Many of them, were not present when Rajah Tej Chunder died, and the forgetfulness of those who were present, was almost entirely confined to dates. Now I am sure there are many events indelibly impressed on my own recollection, the precise dates of which I could not mention without considerable reflection, and, perhaps, not even then. It is true, all the witnesses recollect the date of Pertaub Chund's death, but this is quite natural; for the last three years they have been aware of the prisoner's pretensions, and of course have frequently spoken to one another about the death of Pertaub Chund, and by comparing events, and very probably consulting written memoranda, they ascertained the exact date. Again, it is contended that they are unworthy of credit, because they have sworn that the prisoner bears no resemblance to the deceased Pertaub Chund, whereas the witnesses for the defence have sworn that there is the greatest similarity between the features of the two. I might just as well say that Mr. David Hare ought not to be believed upon his oath, because he has sworn to a very strong resemblance, whereas Mr. Thoby Prinsep, Mr. Trower, the late Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Herklotz and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, have sworn that no such resemblance exists. But I do not say any thing of the kind: I merely say that the different opinions that have been given as to similarity of features, proves what I had from the first anticipated, viz., that no evidence upon such a point could possibly be satisfactory, one way or the other. There is, perhaps, nothing concerning which the memory is so treacherous as the recollection of countenances and features. Most of us can remember some instance in which we have differed widely from another party concerning the fidelity of a portrait of a mutual friend, whom neither had seen for several years; one of us perceiving no resemblance to the original, and the other declaring it to be a speaking likeness. At all events it is sufficient for my purpose that you cannot disbelieve the Rajbarree witnesses on account of any thing they have said respecting the appearance of the prisoner, unless you also believe that all the gentlemen whose names I have just mentioned, have deliberately given false evidence. But then comes the grand objection, that most of these witnesses are more or less connected with the Rajbarrees. Now there are some cases in which an inference prejudicial to the cause of a party may fairly be drawn from the circumstance that his principal witnesses are his own connections or dependents; but a little consideration will show, that in the present instance the witnesses we have produced are the very best possible ones, and, indeed, the only ones who could give satisfactory testimony concerning the question at issue. Most of them, it is true, receive salaries from the Treasury of the Rajah, but they are all men of high caste and fair reputation among their countrymen, and some of them of considerable opulence. You are fully aware, Sir, that the service of a distinguished native prince, such as the Rajah of Burdwan, is considered in the light of an honour, and not of a degradation, is eagerly sought for by men of the highest respectability, and is generally hereditary. If the prisoner were Pertaub Chund, they would be closely connected with him, and would have a decided interest in his favor. Indeed some of them were called by the prisoner himself to give evidence at Bancorah. These witnesses being of the same caste with Pertaub Chund, and related to his family, took the most prominent part in the performance of the funeral rites, and are of course better able than any other persons could possibly be, to speak to the fact of the actual death and cremation of the deceased. I am asked why I did not bring forward a multitude of spectators unconnected with the Rajbarrees. In the first place, the possessions of the Burdwan family are so large, and their influence extends so far and wide, that it is probable that the great majority of those present at the performance of Pertaub Chund's obsequies, would be found to be liable to the same suspicion which the prisoner has attempted to cast upon the witnesses I have produced. But there was another reason why, with two exceptions, I did not call any of the spectators, except those who took an active part in the performance of the ceremonies. Cautious as the prisoner's advisers have been not to say any thing regarding the story of the mole of his pretended escape from Calcutta, I know from a petition presented to Government in 1836, and which is in my possession, that his tale then was that an imposition was practised, by which spectators were induced to believe that Pertaub Chund was burnt on the funeral pile, although in reality a chest or coffin was substituted for the supposed corpse. It would, therefore, have been idle for me to have called witnesses who could merely speak generally to their having seen certain ceremonies performed, and to their belief that a body was consumed upon the pile. The only witnesses who could effectually rebut this wild fiction (if indeed its gross absurdity were not of itself sufficient testimony of its falsehood) were the persons who took an active part in the performance of the rites of cremation, and who could not possibly have been imposed upon as to the fact of whether the corpse of Pertaub Chund was or was not consumed upon the pile. Every one of those persons now living has been called by me, and examined before you. I submit that no evidence could, under the circumstances, have been called to corroborate their testimony. I submit that that testimony is unimpeached and unimpeachable, and that the prisoner must therefore be convicted of the crime of fraudulent personation; for if there be satisfactory proof of the death of Pertaub Chund, it matters not what resemblance the prisoner may bear to the deceased, what marks he may have upon his body, or what circumstances relating to Pertaub Chund he may be acquainted with. There is one point I have omitted to mention. The report that Pertaub Chund's illness was a pretence, is decisively disposed of by the evidence of the late Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Erskine, who both speak to conversations with the late Dr. Coulter, who visited the young Rajah in his sickness, and who declared him to have been dangerously ill at the period of such visit.

I now come to the evidence which proves the identity of the prisoner with Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal, for many years an inhabitant of Gwarree, Kishnaghur. The prisoner has thought proper to allude in his defence to my not having, in the first instance, intended to go into this part of the charge. As this allusion has been made, I will explain how the fact stands. It is true that, when the case was first put into my hands, I was unwilling to enter into any evidence to show who the prisoner is. It was enough for my purpose to prove, that Pertaub Chund was dead, and that he could not, therefore, be the person he pretended to be. I thought the evidence of the prisoner's identity with Kisto Lal to be very strong, but I felt that it was open to the observations I have already made respecting all evidence of identity, founded merely upon resemblance of features and similarity of habits. But when I became acquainted with the testimony which Prawnkissen Christian was able to give, I changed the opinion I had previously formed, and determined to proceed with this part of the case. I need not say that the object of this prosecution is not merely to convict the prisoner as an impostor, but, if it be possible, to set at rest the minds of the natives upon the question, and to remove the delusion under which so many of them have long laboured, and I did not think myself justified in abandoning any line of proof which might lead to the desired result. If Prawnkissen's evidence be true, the identity of the prisoner with Kisto Lal is established beyond all possibility of doubt. You, Sir, have nothing to consider except the credibility of this witness, for it is impossible he could be under any mistake as to the facts to which he swears. He was the companion of Kisto Lal, and his elder brother Gour Lal, in their native village; he accompanied sometimes the one, sometimes the other, and sometimes both of the brothers, in their wanderings. He was with Kisto Lal when, in the guise of a Brumacharee, he threw out mysterious hints to the deluded people by whom he was surrounded, that he was an incarnation of the deity; he was with Kisto Lal when, having relinquished his assumption of supernatural attributes, he represented himself as some great personage in disguise; he was with Kisto Lal's father and brother when the prisoner first assumed the part he has so long performed, and accompanied that brother on an expedition to assist the prisoner in his fraud; he went with the brother to Bissunpore to meet Kisto Lal, and was a party in the imposture there practised, by which the brother was represented as a Nawab coming with a large force to the aid of the rightful heir to the Burdwan gaddes; he accompanied the prisoner, from Bissunpore to Bangorah, and was subsequently arrested by the Magistrate for holding a clandestine correspondence with the prisoner while in jail. This evidence, if worthy of belief, disposes at once and for ever, of the question of the prisoner's identity. Then, Sir, what ground is there for disbelieving it? There is certainly none in the evidence given for the defence. Some few witnesses of respectability have said, that the prisoner differs in appearance, though not very greatly, from the Kisto Lal they knew some seven or eight years ago. This may well be; for there can be doubt that the prisoner has, during that period, led a life which might have caused a considerable change in the appearance of any man. Mr. Deane, the most respectable of these witnesses, allows that there is a great similarity in the height, and in those features which are least liable to change; and there is, in short, nothing whatever in the testimony of any of them that can in the least shake the positive evidence for the prosecution. Indeed, the prisoner's counsel have rested their case not so much on any evidence they could produce, as upon the assumption that Prawn Kissen was not worthy of credit, because by his own shewing he had formerly been an accomplice in the frauds practised by Kisto Lal. I am willing to admit thus much to them, that the evidence of a man coming forward under such circumstances, should be received with circumspection. Let us give them the full benefit of that circumspection. You know, Sir how I first got acquainted with this witness. He was not known either to the officers of the Magistrate's Court, or to the amlah of Prawn Baboo. While the case for the prosecution was going on, the Reverend Mr. Hill, of Berhampore, came into your Court, and told you, in the presence of Mr. Morton and myself, that he could produce evidence decisive of the question of the prisoner's identity. Not being at all aware of what this evidence might be, I declined to summon the witness, until Mr. Hill should inform me who he was, what testimony he could give, and what character he now bore. I cannot give in evidence the conversation that passed between Mr. Hill and myself; suffice it to say, that, after that conversation, I had no hesitation in requesting that a subpoena might be issued for the witness, and I think it will be sufficiently obvious, that unless Mr. Hill were guilty of subornation of perjury, the witness stands clear from every possible imputation of having been tampered with. I took the utmost pains to prevent any communication being held with him by parties interested on either side, previously to his giving evidence in your Court. The subpoena was enclosed in a private letter to the reverend gentleman who had succeeded Mr. Hill at Berhampore, and immediately upon his receipt, the witness was sent to Hooghly under the care of a man selected by the Magistrate of Moor-beelabad for that purpose; and as soon as he arrived here, he was sent to the house of the Reverend Mr. Mandy, of Chinsurah, where he staid until he was examined. The prisoner himself has not ventured to insinuate, that either Prawn Baboo or his people knew any thing about this witness. In his examination before you, he mentioned a great number of places which he had visited in company with the prisoner Kisto Lal and with his brother Gour Lal. You asked him for the names of persons resident in those places, who were likely to recollect their visits if they ever occurred; he gave you a great number of names; you ordered the parties to be summoned; a great many of them were produced before you, within as short a time as it was possible to procure a return to the subpoenas; all these persons recognized the prisoner; some knew him as Kisto Lal, others, without knowing his name, knew him to be the Brumacharee who came to their village about the time specified by Prawnkissen. The evidence of these men is remarkable, as shewing they could not possibly be tutored witnesses. There was nothing so extraordinary in the fact of a Brumacharee visiting their villages, as to render it likely that they would after the lapse of some years, recollect minor circumstances; and, accordingly, we find, that while one of them forgot what another remembers, they all agree in the main fact that a Brumacharee resembling this man was seen by them at their places of residence in such and such years. This is just the evidence that honest witnesses would give; but if they had been taught their story beforehand, we may rest assured their recollection would have been more uniform. May I not then safely affirm, that, produced before you as Prawnkissen's corroborated as he has been, his evidence is on impeachable ground. Mr. Hill is no longer in this country, or I would have given his testimony as to the character of this witness. The fact, however, that that gentleman, after an experience of some years, has continued Prawnissen in the employment of the Missionary Society, is pretty decisive on this point; it shows that whatever may have been the errors of this witness in former days, they have been repented of, and his old course abandoned. I will further add, that these errors were very venial. The prisoner and his brother Gour Lal appear to have exercised a power almost approaching to fascination over many of their countrymen, and it is not quite clear that when Prawnissen first joined them he had not some strange notions that the prisoner was in reality a magician. Now that he has been converted to a pure religion, and has been rescued from the superstitious by which he was so long held in the most degrading thralldom, he sees the folly and the wickedness of his former conduct; but the man who would judge very harshly of him, for having once been an adherent of the prisoner, can have little knowledge of human nature, and still less of the peculiar modes of thinking prevalent among the natives of India. I say, therefore, this witness is fully entitled to credit, and then the evidence to identify, which before was inconclusive, comes in with irresistible force. I will not detain you by recapitulating that evidence; you will well recollect what it is, and the peculiar circumstance under which the nearest relations of Kisto Lal were produced, in compliance with your own orders, circumstances which rendered it next to an impossibility that those witnesses would have been tampered with by any body, they swore positively to the identity of the prisoner with their relation Kisto Lal, and I submit that that identity is proved beyond all shadow of doubt.

After the great length to which this address has already extended, I must apologize for saying anything upon the last of the three kinds of testimony above adverted to, and which is, from its nature, the weakest and the most inconclusive of all. A great many witnesses of the highest respectability and character, and well acquainted with the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, have sworn that they can trace no resemblance between him and the prisoner; but, as I have before said, I attach very little importance to testimony of this kind, one way or other, given after the lapse of eighteen years. I may observe, however, that the evidence of the late Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Trower, Mr. Herklots, Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and, above all, Mr. Thoby Prinsep, is the very strongest testimony of the sort that could be given. Their conviction that the prisoner is an impostor, is founded not merely upon dissimilarity of appearance, but upon his inability to recognize persons with whom the Rajah was intimate, and to answer questions regarding circumstances with which Pertab Chund, if he were now alive, must be perfectly familiar. Mr. Prinsep's deposition is indeed all but decisive of the case. The visit paid by him to Pertab Chund and his father, was of so remarkable a nature, and the subjects discussed were of such vital importance to the young Rajah, who was at the time in actual possession of the Burdwan Estates, that it is next to impossible that Pertab Chund, as long as he was able to remember anything, could have forgotten the object of that visit and its attendant circumstances. Mr. Shaw has, indeed, given evidence on behalf of his client regarding the interview which the prisoner had at Mr. Prinsep's office with that gentleman, the late Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Patle and Mr. Trower. The object of this evidence I do not exactly know. If the intention were to discredit the testimony given by the gentlemen called for the prosecution who were present at that interview, I think it would have been more discreet to have left such an attempt alone; and as to Mr.

Shaw's declaration that the prisoner was upon that occasion dressed in an unusual costume, it has nothing whatever to do with the question at issue; for the gentlemen present founded their opinion not on their non-recognition of the prisoner on that occasion, but on his non-recognition of them. Let me then very briefly advert to the witnesses called by the prisoner upon this branch of the case. As to the great majority, no remarks are necessary, because, however disreputable or suspicious the character of some of them may be, their testimony, if true, would be of no importance. I care not whether the Chinsurah Moguls, and the sweetmeat sellers, and the boatmen and Mr. Enmer (whose memory is so bad that he swears he does not recollect whether he was dismissed from the Board of Revenue,) and Mr. William Frazer, carver, gilder, and fiddler, (whose memory is so good that he recognizes at a glance persons whom he has not seen for twenty or thirty years,) do or do not believe the prisoner to be Rajah Pertab Chund. They had not that intimate acquaintance with the Rajah, and were not on those terms of familiar intercourse with him, that could alone render their evidence of the slightest value. I have no doubt there are thousands of natives who believe the prisoner to be the Rajah, and thousands who believe him to be an impostor; but such belief is of no importance one way or other, unless, from particular circumstances, the party has peculiar opportunities of forming a correct judgment upon the matter. The two ladies who gave their evidence before you, have, I am sure, said what they believed to be true; but what is their testimony worth? They were never in the same house with the Rajah, but, when young girls, used to amuse themselves by watching him from an opposite window. To Major Marshall's deposition, I request your attention. He says that he was intimate with the young Rajah, but did not know that his name was Pertab Chund; that although he took such an interest in the late proceedings in the Supreme Court as to be present during the trial, he did not know that the pretender to the Burdwan Guddie assumed to be his old friend; that although he has the most distinct recollection of Pertab Chund's features, and took such particular notice of the prisoner in the Supreme Court, that he drew a sketch of him, it never occurred to him that the two were identical until he saw Mr. Overbeck, when, all at once, upon hearing that the prisoner had a scar on his back and another upon his wrist, he took upon himself to come down to the Court, and went to his berth that the prisoner was no other than the young Rajah. I think the mere recapitulation of this evidence is sufficient to shew what weight is due to it. As to the mark on the back, it is proved that Kisto Lal had a scar in that position, and I think an examination of the prisoner's back would satisfy you that the scar to be found there, much more resembles the mark left by a wound arising from such an accident as happened to Kisto Lal, than the scar of a bite from a horse. The mark on the wrist is in no way peculiar, and similar ones will be found on the arm of a vast number of natives; besides, it could be effected in a moment by any one wishing to produce such a scar; and the prisoner's own witnesses shew, that among his followers are some of the old personal servants of Pertab Chund, who could of course easily have told him of any peculiarity of this description in the person of the Rajah. The only remaining three witnesses on whose evidence I shall comment, are Mr. Overbeck, Mr. David Hare, and Mr. R. Scott. In addressing you, Sir, it cannot be necessary for me to say that I can have no intention of speaking of Mr. Overbeck in any terms save those of the highest respect. I believe no man ever better merited the high esteem in which he is held by the community among whom he has resided for so many years, and I am sure that he is utterly incapable of stating any thing that he does not conscientiously believe to be true. He has, however, told us the grounds of his belief that the prisoner is in truth Pertab Chund. He candidly admits, that general personal appearance has nothing to do with belief, which is formed entirely upon the answers given by the prisoner to certain queries, and upon particular marks which he conceives are to be found upon the prisoner's body. I have already observed that no inference in favor of the prisoner can safely be drawn from the circumstance that there may be scars on his body resembling those on the person of Rajah Pertab Chund, as nothing could be more easy for him than to counterfeit such scars when informed of their position on the person of the party he pretended to be. Moreover, Mr. Overbeck tells us that he never saw the marks on Pertab Chund's body, excepting those on the wrist and behind the ear, and I really think he must have deceived himself in supposing he can distinguish any scar behind the ear of the prisoner. You, Sir, will, of course, judge for yourself upon this point; all I can say is that Mr. Overbeck's eyes are better than mine if he can perceive any such scar. He further speaks of a peculiarity in the prisoner's eye, and this I admit could not well be counterfeited; but I really doubt whether the witness's fancy has not misled him; at least there appears to me to be nothing at all remarkable in the eye of the prisoner. Then let us see what were the questions put by Mr. Overbeck to the prisoner. They related principally to circumstances connected with the old Dutch Government House, in which Mr. Overbeck, when Governor of Chinsurah, had entertained Pertab Chund, and with the Chinsurah Rajbarry. In forming a decisive opinion in favor of the prisoner, in consequence of his replies to these queries, Mr. Overbeck seems to have forgotten that the converse of a true proposition is not necessarily true. If the prisoner were Pertab Chund, he would no doubt have recollected many circumstances relating to these two houses; but it does not at all follow that if he were not Pertab Chund, he would not be aware of the same circumstances. The Dutch Government House was in many respects a very remarkable one, probably unlike any other in the country; but this very peculiarity in its construction and decorations, would render it the more easy to obtain ample information from the old residents of Chinsurah, Dutch, Portuguese and Natives, regarding it. There is, besides, one person who most certainly could have told the prisoner every thing which he mentioned to Mr. Overbeck, and that is Aga Anbas. In one respect this man swore the truth; he was undoubtedly an old servant of Pertab Chund, and had accompanied his master in most of his excursions. He was probably often at Mr. Overbeck's in the suite of the young Rajah, and we know from his own admission that he was with the prisoner at Binsunpore, and you, Sir, may have seen with your own eyes how close the communication between them now is. Is it then any marvel that the prisoner should be cognizant of many circumstances relating to Pertab Chund and those with whom he associated? But if I can shew that in one instance the answer given by the prisoner to Mr. Overbeck was indisputably the result, not of the recollection of former days, but of very recent information, I think that I shall establish, to the satisfaction of every one, that that gentleman's belief is founded upon a mistake, and that consequently, his evidence must go for nothing. Now, Sir, you will recollect that in 1836 Mr. Herklots visited the prisoner in the Mooghly Jail. In August or September last, Mr. Herklots was examined before the Magistrate. He then mentioned that his conviction of the imposture of the prisoner, was very much based upon what had occurred at the interview he had with him in jail, but he did not mention any particulars of that interview. Early in November, Dr. Scott (whose evidence, as far as it ~~concerns~~ ^{relates to} the prisoner, must certainly be beyond all suspicion), visited him in jail, and he tells us that among other questions he asked the prisoner some particulars regarding the Chinsurah Rajbarry, and that the prisoner seemed to know very little about it. On the 22d of November Mr. Herklots was examined before you, and I then asked him what were the particular circumstances which in 1836 had satisfied him that the prisoner was not Rajah Pertab Chund; and he replied that one of the principal was his utter ignorance of every thing relating to the Chinsurah Rajbarry and his not being able to describe a single room in the house.

This evidence was of course given in the prisoner's presence. Six weeks afterwards, Mr. Overbeck was examined at the prisoner's request. This gentleman had, previously, stated before the Magistrate, that he used to visit Rajah Pertab Chund at the Chinsurah Rajbarree. He requests to be allowed to question the prisoner, and among his queries were several regarding that Rajbarree. Every one of these queries was answered in the most satisfactory manner, the prisoner mentioning every thing concerning that house, even down to the furniture and pictures. Now, Sir, is it not as clear as the sun at noonday, that the prisoner must have ascertained these particulars about the Rajbarree after he had heard Mr. Herklots's evidence on the 22d November? He knew that Mr. Overbeck was to be examined; he considered it very probable that he should be questioned about the Chinsurah Rajbarree, and he took care not to make the same mistake which had ruined his cause in the opinion of Mr. Herklots. I think, Sir, that after this I am fully justified in assuming that it is utterly immaterial what knowledge the prisoner may display regarding places and persons familiar to Pertab Chund, unless indeed it were a knowledge of such circumstances as those he was questioned about by Mr. Prinsep. Those circumstances occurred at an interview from which the native servants and amlohs were carefully excluded, no one being present except Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Elliott, and the two Rajahs. Of those circumstances he cannot recollect one tittle, and here I think I may leave this part of the case. Mr. Overbeck has unfortunately been imposed upon, and has thus been led to lend the sanction of his name and character to a gross and palpable imposture. Respecting Mr. Hares's evidence, I will only say one word, for the same remarks apply to him as to Mr. Overbeck. He speaks to what he believes to be true, but his belief is formed upon erroneous grounds. Mr. Hare says, that the prisoner recollects having brought a telescope to him. What of that? the Rajah's servants would recollect Mr. Hares's coming with the telescope, just as well as the Rajah himself, and probably even better. It only remains to dispose of Dr. Scott's evidence, and assuredly, if hard, point blank swearing to every thing that a man could recollect, and to every thing that most men could not recollect, would be of any service to the prisoner's case, Dr. Scott is a most valuable witness. You will remember, Sir, how tender the prisoner's Counsel was on my questioning this witness as to what character he bore while at Burdwan. I respectfully submit that I had a perfect right to pursue that line of cross-examination, and to shew, if I could, from Dr. Scott's own admissions, how far he was a witness to be depended upon. You were pleased, however, to intimate a wish that I should not press these questions, and I immediately desisted. If the prisoner's Counsel liked to object to my inquiry into the character of his own witness, and that witness liked to protect himself under such an objection, I thought my object was as fully answered as it could have been by the most searching cross-examination. But under what circumstances does Dr. Scott make his appearance in this Court? He desisted, indeed, that he was a volunteer witness, but, after a little questioning, he was obliged to admit that he had sent an anonymous letter to Mr. Shaw from the Magistrate's side, which letter might probably be the cause of his having been summoned as a witness. Now I have no means of proving or even of ascertaining the contents of that letter, or of shewing what communications there were between Dr. Scott and the prisoner, or his agents or friends, before the arrival of this witness in Calcutta; but I would ask you, Sir, to consider the transaction as it stands, and to say whether it is not, at the least, a highly suspicious one. If Dr. Scott had really been actuated by no motive but an honest desire to further the ends of public justice, is it likely he would have had recourse to the sinister proceeding of writing an anonymous letter to the prisoner's Attorney? Would he not have come forward openly and manfully, and have addressed the Government whose servant he is, and told them that he heard that a claim was made by the prisoner to the Raj of Burdwan, and that as he had formerly been very intimate with Pertab Chund, he could probably, if allowed to see and converse with the prisoner, give important testimony, one way or other, as to his identity? Instead of this plain, straight-forward way of going to work, we find Dr. Scott holding this anonymous and under-hand communication with the prisoner's agents; and to suppose that there was nothing in his communications to induce them to believe that his evidence would be what it has proved to be, is idle. He would never have been summoned, or if summoned, he would never have come a distance of upwards of five hundred miles, upon a bootless errand. We may rest assured that it was perfectly well understood he was coming to give evidence in favour of the prisoner, and if so, he must have determined upon that evidence before he had ever seen the man, and when, therefore, he had no possible means of forming an opinion as to his identity. I could not of course hope to get much out of such a witness in cross-examination. He swore to recollecting what nobody else could recollect, and to believing what most people would consider incredible; but it is an old saying, that if you throw up a feather, it will show which way the wind blows, and so I think two or three little trips in Dr. Scott's evidence, will shew whether he spoke truly when he declared he had no bias. One of the most difficult points in the prisoner's story is, that if Pertab Chund were now alive he must be about 48 years of age, whereas the prisoner is evidently a much younger man; it required very hard swearing to make him out to be nearly 48, and accordingly Dr. Scott was selected for the purpose. He gave a very pompous account of the marks by which, as a medical man, he could pronounce infallibly upon the age of any party, and then thought fit to swear that he should say the prisoner was between 43 and 46. Now, without any pretensions to medical knowledge, I had enough to satisfy me that this part of the Doctor's evidence was nonsense, and I accordingly asked him whether he was not aware that the most eminent medical writers had pronounced it to be impossible to speak to the age of any one in the manner in which he had done to that of the prisoner. The question was I fancy unexpected, and, in the hurry of the moment, the truth came out; he replied, that he said the prisoner was 46, because Pertab Chund must have been about 23 when he knew him, and adding the number of years that had since elapsed, he must now be 46. Can anything be more decisive as to the way in which Dr. Scott has given his evidence, and as to the value of his testimony? It is perfectly obvious, that the whole parade of his medical skill in detecting ages, was a farce, and that his answer really proceeded upon the assumption that the prisoner, was the venerable Pertab Chund. Again, he says, that one of his reasons for being satisfied of the prisoner's identity, was that he drew a correct plan of the Burdwan Rajbarree. Now there could be no difficulty in the world in the prisoner drawing such a plan, for there are thousands of persons who could have furnished him with all the details, but it so happens, that Dr. Scott has given us satisfactory proof that he at least was no competent judge of whether the plan was correct or incorrect. I allude to his testimony regarding the situation of the aviary. I know that if evidence of the Doctor's mistake had been required, the Judge on the bench would have been perfectly able to give such evidence, for you, Sir, were many years at Burdwan, and are well acquainted with the Rajbarree. I do not mean to say that Dr. Scott here swore what he knew to be false, but I bring it forward as an illustration of his readiness to swear to anything in favour of the prisoner, whether he was or was not certain of its being the truth, and also to shew that Dr. Scott's memory is not so very excellent as he would have us to believe. He has taken upon himself to speak to Mr. Trower's bad memory, and I did not think it worth while to recall Mr. Trower to contradict him; if I had done so, you would perhaps have had to decide whether the difference between the statements of Mr. Trower and Dr. Scott arose from an imperfection of memory on the part of the one, or from a very curious development of the faculty on the part of the other. With these remarks I leave Dr. Scott's evidence to the judgment of this Court, and confidently submit that, even upon this branch of the case, the balance of testimony is immeasurably in favor of the prosecution; but, as I have already said, I should not care, for the purposes of the present case, if the balance had been the other way. I have proved beyond all shadow of doubt that Pertab Chund is dead and was burnt, and it matters not who is, or who is not, credulous enough to believe him to be alive. The charge, therefore, of fraudulent personation, is clearly established; that that personation was with intent to obtain possession of the Raj and Zemindary of Burdwan; we have the prisoner's own admission, and that it led to the disturbance of the peace and quiet of the country, is sufficiently proved by the proceedings before Mr. Harrington, and by the evidence in this case.

The other two charges on which the prisoner has been arraigned, are of comparatively trivial importance, and my remarks upon them will not occupy many lines. The first of them is the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. I will not reply to the objection urged to the jurisdiction of your Court. I consider it to be without foundation, and that the circumstance that a portion of the money was paid in the town of Calcutta, can in no way interfere with your power to punish a fraud, committed by a party amenable to your tribunal, and chiefly concocted and completed without the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. I leave it, however, in your hands, merely observing that the fact of Radakissen Byssack not being a complainant against the prisoner, is no reason at all why the fraud of the latter should be unpunished. A fraud of this kind is an offence against society, and the welfare of the community at large demands that such offences should be punished, and that the criminal should not escape on account of the immediate sufferer being too weak and credulous to comprehend the injury inflicted upon him, or too timid to seek for redress.

As to the last charge of tumultuous assemblage, I will only observe, that it is not at all necessary that I should prove any actual breach of the peace to have been committed by the prisoner or his followers. Upon this point I would refer you to the Circular Order of the Sudder Nazimut Adawlut No 664, dated 8th December 1831, containing the construction put by that Court upon Clause 1, Sec 2, Reg. IV of 1825. It is said that I have not called any witnesses upon this part of the case, except Government servants; but this is not the fact. I called one of the most respectable European residents at Cutch, Mr. Alexander. That gentleman came to this station on the day named in his subpoena, but the trial had been postponed at the request of the prisoner, and upon Mr. Alexander representing that he could not be absent from Culna on the ensuing Sunday, without the most serious inconvenience, it was arranged that he should be allowed to depart; and Mr. Morpoin subsequently consented, under the circumstances, to his deposition before the Magistrate being received as evidence in this case. If the testimony given before you does not establish the fact of an illegal assemblage with intent to commit a most serious breach of the peace, as far as the intent can be inferred from the acts of any party, I know not how such an offence could possibly be proved. It is not true that the prisoner had with him only the same number of servants that attendant him in Calcutta, and this is sufficiently proved by his own admission before the Magistrate, compared with his letter to the Nazir. But if it were true, it would make no difference to me. If the Calcutta Police authorities chose to allow a man to wander about with an armed mob of from three to four hundred persons in attendance upon him, that is no reason why the Mofussil Police authorities should do the same. The prisoner cannot plead ignorance of Mofussil law in this respect, for he had previously been imprisoned for six months on a similar charge. It would indeed be monstrous if a man were permitted thus to go about the country, in a district moreover where his appearance was certain to create the greatest excitement among the natives—and to overawe the Police by a superior force—and to refuse to obey the orders of the Magistrate, and then quietly say that he has been guilty of no offence, because, forsooth, the Police were too weak to resist him, and the Magistrates of Calcutta too civil to disperse his armed force while he remained within their jurisdiction. It is granted there was no actual breach of the peace committed at Culna; but why? because the Police were about one to ten to the prisoner's followers, and dared not obey the orders they had received. We have it in evidence that the darogah begged and entreated the prisoner not to go on shore with his armed attendants, and informed him of the Magistrate's purwannah prohibiting him from doing so; but the prisoner persisted, and the darogah was compelled to succumb. If I wanted further evidence as to the state of affairs at Culna, it has been afforded by Mr. Shaw, the prisoner's own Attorney, who has sworn that upon hearing the darogah wanted to come on board the prisoner's pinnace, he sent an order not to allow him to do so if he were accompanied by his armed burkandazes, and that when the darogah did come, he remonstrated with him, saying, that the presence of these armed men would be very likely to lead to an affray with the prisoner's followers. At this time the darogah had the most peremptory orders to arrest the prisoner, and it is quite sufficient for my case to shew that matters were in such a state that the prisoner's Attorney usurped the place of the Magistrate and issued orders to the Police authorities. The darogah has sworn that he did not arrest the prisoner, because he was afraid to do so; and this evidence is fully corroborated by Mr. Shaw, who admits that if armed men had come into the boat there would probably have been an affray. As to the letters said to have been written by the direction of Mr. Shaw, they deserve no notice whatever. The prisoner had been ordered over and over again to disperse his followers, and he had all along refused to comply, and the Nazir must have been credulous indeed, if he had been guided by this proposal, made at the eleventh hour, on certain conditions. But it matters not whether the prisoner was or was not sincere in the proposal made in that letter, for his offence was completed before it was written. He heard that the Magistrate had been obliged to send reinforcements to the Police, and he had that morning received the most peremptory orders to disperse his people, which he had not obeyed. It is said that the prisoner did not refuse to obey, but merely wished to consult with Mr. Shaw. I say that the Nazir was quite right in treating that answer as a refusal to obey, and in reporting to the Magistrate that such refusal had been made. I have yet to learn, that the Attornies of the Supreme Court have any jurisdiction in the Mofussil, or that it rests with them to decide whether the magistrate shall be obeyed or not. It has been attempted to be urged, that if an offence were committed, Mr. Shaw, and not the prisoner, was the offending party. The only remark I will make upon that, is, that Mr. Shaw was the prisoner's agent, acting in his name and issuing orders in his presence, and Mr. Shaw's acts must be taken to be those of the prisoner. If a party were to be allowed to set the law at open defiance, and then plead that he cannot be punished, because he acted through the medium of an English Attorney, I think the legislature would soon see the necessity of placing British born subjects under the jurisdiction of the Company's Criminal Courts. Mr. Shaw says, that he sent for the Nazir, but he did not come. This piece of evidence exhibits a strange ignorance of the relative position of the parties. The Nazir is a high executive officer of the magistrate, who had a certain duty to perform; he had nothing to do with Mr. Shaw, and he cared nothing about him, and if Mr. Shaw wanted to see him, it was his place to have waited upon him. Before I conclude, I must, in justice to Mr. Ogilvy, say one word about the attempt that has been made to shew that he wilfully signed a false return to the writ of Habeas Corpus issued by the Supreme Court. This has nothing to do with the present case and could only have been introduced to create an impression against a highly honorable gentleman. The fact is that the return was drawn up by Mr. Swinbo, the Hon'ble Company's Attorney, who mistook a roobakarree for a warrant, and Mr. Ogilvy taking it for granted, that this formal legal document was correct, affixed his signature to it.

In conclusion, Sir, I submit that the whole of the charges have been clearly proved against the principal prisoner, and confidently leave the case in your hands. With reference to the other prisoner's put upon their trial before you, I will not make any remark, as they have not had the benefit of counsel; but will merely say, that nothing is further from my wish than to press the case too harshly against them, or to prevent any thing they may be able to urge in mitigation of punishment, from having its full weight with you.

(Signed) M. A. BIGNELL,

Depy. Supt., Legal Affairs.

N. B. We are requested by Mr. Bignell to mention, that since his reply was written, he has been made aware that the error in the return to the habeas corpus, arose from an important letter having, by mistake, been excluded from the papers sent of the Company's Law office. He wished this to be noticed as he learns that his remarks have been misunderstood to impute blame to the Hon'ble Company's Attorney, though it was far from his intention to do so.—Ed.—Hurkara, Jan. 25.

MISCELLANEA.

[For January.]

CALCUTTA

SIR H. FANE.—The Commander-in-Chief's camp at Ferozepore, was struck on the morning of the 16th of December, His Excellency having taken boat on the Sutledge for Bombay, he preceding afterwards, from whence he will proceed overland to Europe. The Head Quarters Staff marched on the same day towards Meerut where Major General the Hon'ble J. Fane, as senior General on the Bengal Staff, assumes the command of the Army.

In taking leave of the Bengal Army, the Adjutant-General thus expresses Sir Henry Fane's sentiments :

"The time has arrived when his Excellency Sir H. Fane's connection with the Bengal army must cease ; but he cannot allow it to be severed, without first bidding that army farewell ; and offering his best wishes for their prosperity and happiness."

"The support which he has received from the general officers holding commands, and the generally excellent conduct of all ranks in the army, European and native, have, for some time past, rendered his command a task of great ease ; and he offers his best acknowledgements and thanks to all, for this gratifying result."

"He feels that he cannot adequately thank the general staff of the head quarters of the army, for the able and friendly assistance which they have rendered to him on all occasions ; and he now takes leave of them with regret, and with feelings of cordial esteem and regard."

The Commander-in-Chief was suffering from gout when he embarked, and made his way from Ferozepore to the Ghaut, (five miles distance,) in a carriage. The Staff attended his Excellency on horseback.

A SHIP LAUNCH.—There was a vessel launched from the building yard of the Docking Company. At half past twelve the side supports were removed and the vessel stood in her cradle alone, for about a quarter of an hour, when, every thing being ready, the ceremony of breaking the bottle of wine on her head was duly performed by Mrs. F. Pereira, and she was named the Poppy, and moved rapidly off the ways without the slightest force being used. This vessel is schooner rigged, and had her lower masts up, the top masts and top-gallant masts being down on the caps—her main and fore yards were also crossed. Her stern is ornamented with a clump of poppies with several buds in the centre, and a sprig of the same on either side prettily painted.

REPAIRING OF ROADS.—It is said, that it is in contemplation by Government, on account of the many complaints already made of the manner in which the roads in Calcutta are repaired, to issue an advertisement, when any thoroughfare is to undergo repair, notifying such event, which will afford people an opportunity of avoiding the roads in question when possible ; and also, that no roads will hereafter be repaired in the manner they are at present, piecemeal, but the whole length of a single road will be covered at the same time, and finished in the same manner, after which another will undergo the same process, and so on.

LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK'S STATUE.—It is said, the Government have approved of the site, the circle opposite the Town Hall, that has been selected by the Committee for the erection of Lord William Bentinck's statue, and have directed the executive engineer in charge of the aqueduct, to make arrangements that the aqueduct may not obstruct the full view of the statue.

BLOCKADE OF QUEDA.—A private letter from Penang dated 7th December, 1833, intimates, that the sloop-of-war Hyacinth, with three gun-boats, left the harbour, the preceding day, to blockade the coast of Queda, in pursuance of orders from Calcutta. This, it seems, is the extent of interference which the Bengal Government are at present prepared to allow, in acquittance of the obligations we have incurred by the treaty with Siam ; but if Tharawaddi continues troublesome and picks up courage to bully Colonel Benson, trusting to the abundance of our occupation on the N. W., it is not impossible that the Siamese alliance may acquire the same ridiculously exaggerated importance which was attached to it at the time of our former turn up with the Burmese, and then, we suppose, we may look for a marvellous degree of impressment towards our esteemed ally, and the display of an exceedingly warm interest in the success of his measures against his refractory subjects.

METCALFE LIBRARY BUILDING FUND.—A letter from Agra, dated December the 19th, states, that at a meeting held at the station rooms on the morning of that day, it was determined, on the condition of the assent of subscribers being obtained, to hand over the Metcalfe subscription to the Metcalfe Library Building Fund, should the Calcutta Committee not object. The ground upon which this decision was come to, was, that the funds collected are insufficient for the fulfilment of the original purpose of the subscribers, viz., that of erecting a statue and presenting a service of plate. In order, however, to carry out part of the original plan, it is stipulated that a bust of Sir C. Metcalfe shall be placed in the Library building ; which stipulation, completely squares with the wishes and early intentions of the supporters of the Building scheme.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S CAMP.—Such was the want of foresight of Government, that the Governor General's camp, on their way from Simlah, were unable to leave Burreah until the Political Agent borrowed 20,000 Rs. from the native shroffs, and on their arrival at Ferozepore, they were compelled to borrow a still further sum of 20 lacs from the Sikh Chieftains.

THE EDITORSHIP OF THE COURIER.—The present editor of the Calcutta Courier, Mr. Frederick Osborne, will vacate his situation on the 28th of February. A successor has not yet been nominated.

DACOITY.—The following account of a serious dacoity, attended with murder, on the factory of a gentleman in the neighbourhood of Benares, is extracted from a letter dated 16th December :—

"Poor R— has had a very serious affair at his factory lately : a large gang of dacoits, well-armed, entered the factory at night with the view of carrying off the treasure box, and any thing else of value, but finding the box empty, they broke it to pieces, and then commenced destroying every thing in the house—all R—'s furniture, &c. They did not do it silently, as they came in sufficient numbers to overcome any force that might be hastily collected in the factory. It is very fortunate that R— was absent at the time, for had he been there he would certainly have made some resistance, and would as certainly have been murdered. As it was, one man, the chokedyar of the house, was killed for attempting to defend the place. The poor fellow died nobly, for he might have run away if he had liked. After receiving five spear wounds he was cut down by a fearful stroke from a sabre. The Magistrate of the district, Mr. Tulloh, is a very active person, and there is every hope that some, if not all, of the dacoits, will soon be brought to justice."

It appears that a large sum of money had been dispatched to R —, but in his absence from the factory it had been deposited with a native banker in the bazar not far from the factory. It was this prize that tempted the dacoits, who were very deservedly disappointed."

The following is another account of dacoity at Chuprah.

In November last, the house of a merchant of the place, named Doorhijoy Shah, residing next door to Ram Saba Sing, the Sheristadar of the Foudary Adawlut, was stormed by a gang of robbers, about two or three hundred in number, of whom most were armed. Doorhijoy was wounded by one of the ruffians with a sword, and was robbed of property to a large extent. The same night a goldsmith living close by, was killed and had his house plundered of all the valuables it contained. The sadder thanah, or the principal police station in the town, was looted, and the Jemadar and some others were wounded therein by the same gang."

COLLISION BETWEEN THE FRENCH AND BRITISH COURTS OF JUSTICE.—A case occurred recently near Pultah Ghaut, out of which has arisen a decision in the French Courts on the subject of the jurisdiction, exercised in those Courts over foreigners. In the month of December last, Mr. Martin, a Lieutenant in the 52d Regiment of Native Infantry, was proceeding to join his Regiment at Nusseerabad. He went up to Hooghly himself with his boat, sending on his horses by land, with orders to join him at Hooghly. Arrived at Pultah Ghaut, the horses, two in number, were picquetted by the natives. Near them was a mare, the property of a Monsr. Plague. One of Mr. Martin's horses got loose, and a furious battle took place between him and the mare, in course of which many kicks and bites were interchanged; finally they both scampered off, and reached the town of Chundernagore. Mr. Martin's horse was instantly impounded by Monsr. Plague, who got an order from the French Court for its detention, and instituted a civil action against Mr. Martin. Mr. Martin, finding he could not get his horse, applied to the Magistrate at Hooghly, who, as the transaction took place within his jurisdiction, wrote to the authorities at Chundernagore, requesting them to forward the horse to his Court at Hooghly, and Mr. Martin objecting to the jurisdiction of the French Court, the point of jurisdiction arose. The following is the decision on the point. "As to the competency of this Court to decide this case, inasmuch as the French tribunals are competent to take cognizance of matters of contract arising in foreign countries and entered into by foreigners with French subjects, the same rule ought to obtain in matters arising out of torts committed by a foreigner towards a French subject, notwithstanding that the tort should have been committed in a foreign country. The facts are then recapitulated and the Court, after hearing the Procureur du Roi upon the point, and having taken the point of jurisdiction into this consideration, declare its own competency to hold plea of the matter between Monsr. Plague's mare and Mr. Martin's horse."

EXECUTION.—Charles DeCruz, the man who was tried for, and convicted of, the murder of Caroline Isaac, according to the sentence of the Court, expiated his crime on the gallows on the morning of the 7th instant. About half past six, the culprit was brought out of the jail, attended by sepoy, &c. and shortly after the fatal cord was put round his neck, when the drop was struck away from under him. The man expired without struggling much. The number of natives that had come to witness the scene was a large one. The body of the deceased hung for a full hour, when it was cut down and removed for interment.

THE RAJA OF NAGPORE.—His Highness the Raja of Nagpore, accompanied by Captain Fitzgerald of the Madras Army, reached Benares, and had been extremely liberal of his offerings to those who have the souls of all good Hindoos in their keeping. Not less than three lacs of rupees are said to have been handed over to the Bramins.

DAWK BETWEEN BENARES AND CALCUTTA.—It is stated, that since Captain Taylor, the Secretary to the late Post office committee, visited that station, a very great improvement has taken place in the dawk between Benares and Calcutta. It has been so much accelerated, that letters now arrive seventeen hours earlier than they formerly did!—a great and important gain in a 4 days' dawk.

ARRACAN LOCAL CORPS.—Letters from Akyah to the 6th ultimo, give very favorable accounts of the state of the Arracan Local Corps. Though a young corps, it is remarkably steady and the men appear to be much attached to their officers and attentive to their wishes and instruction. Late in November, a party of hill savages assailed a village and killed some 20 or 30 of the people and carried off upwards of 50 slaves. A detachment of the Arracan corps was immediately ordered off and soon came up with and attacked the hill people, who decamped, leaving four or five men dead. The Arracane cut off the heads of the slain, and took them to the head-man of the village which had been attacked; on which that person caused them to be stuck upon a pole to be held up as a terror to all future dacoits.

THE WEATHER.—The state of the weather is the theme of every tongue. Every body feels the effects of the unusual and unwished for gloom and rain, and every body is complaining. In fact, such weather as we have this year, has not occurred within our recollection, and well might it be designated as unseasonable.

Ever since the 15th of December last, there had been a dense haze, and on Christmas and New-year's Day, the temperature was above summer heat. On the 10th of January the sky became clouded. On the nights of the 12th and 13th, we had a little drizzling rain; on the evening of the 14th a regular north-wester visited us, and rain at night; there was rain again on the night of the 15th; and on the morning of the 16th, at two o'clock, we had the wind all round the compass, and what Uncle Sam would calculate to be a right up and straight down pour of rain, and no mistake, for three hours. On the 17th, the sky was overcast and wore all the appearances of a day in August, and threatened us with more rain and unpleasant weather, which came on accordingly. On the evening of the 18th instant, we had a hard shower, and drizzling rain the greater part of the night. And now, S. E. M. of the 19th, we are threatened with more rain, and the weather is most gloomy and unpleasant.

MONSR. DUPUIS' BALL.—"The juvenile ball, given by Monsr. Dupuis, at the Town Hall, on the night of the 15th instant," a spectator writes, "went off with great éclat. The hall was crowded, and the assembly far more select than on any preceding occasion—in fact as select as a public ball of the description could be. Monsr. Dupuis seems to have reaped wisdom from experience, and learnt, that the admission of a promiscuous crowd, from all classes of the community, is not at all conducive to harmony or his own interest."

Many of the young belles present, were dressed with great taste, and looked bewitchingly beautiful. Indeed in passing through the bright throng, I thought, as the poet, when he said:—

"I have met more beauty ripe and real Than all its statued stone ideal"

After the children had gone through their trained gyrations, the adults took their places, and

"The merry dance, traced fast and light."
 Mons. Dupuis seemed quite delighted, for
 This dance outshone his revels past,
 It was his blishest,—not his last

I hope. He was in all parts of the room, now attending to the comforts of his guests,—now directing the musicians; and his exertions seemed to give great and general satisfaction. Every body seemed pleased,—every face was dressed in its most pleasing appearance,—wreathed smiles were the order of the night, and I left the gay assembly at mid-night, in as happy a mood as ever I was in my life.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.—About three o'clock on the afternoon of the 19th instant, a dingy was upset in the river, off Barnagora. There were eight young men on board at the time, one of whom was drowned, although the accident took place near the shore.

MONEY.—A great deal of money has, it is said, come out to Calcutta for the merchants by the last mail. Not less than fifteen lacs of rupees were drawn in their favour by the Home Government in the brief interval between the 29th of October and the 5th of November.

MR. W. H. HAMERTON.—Mr. W. H. Hamerton has been admitted as a pleader of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, after the usual examination in the Regulations, and the Bengallee and Hindoostanee languages.

PROPOSAL FOR BUILDING A STEAMER.—A proposal is now in circulation, for building a steamer, similar to the most successful of the English—the Great Western, and there is every prospect of the whole sum required being subscribed at once.

RUNJEET SINGH.—A report was current that Runjeet Singh was dangerously ill, in consequence of the deep prostrations he had indulged in at the meeting with the Governor-General, and that his heir, by and with the advice of his Chiefs, had determined, in the event of his death, to arrest the person of the Governor-General and make His Lordship a state prisoner during pleasure or convenience. A subsequent report, however, says, that the Lion of the Punjab had partially recovered and that Lord Auckland had taken his departure from Lahore.

DWARKANATH TAGORE.—A melancholy event has occurred in the family of Dwarkanath Tagore, which has plunged him into the deepest affliction. His son, a promising lad, about 13 years of age, died on the 12th instant last, and on the following day, the unfortunate father was doomed to still deeper suffering, he was deprived of his wife.

THE HON'BLE MR. ROSS.—Mr. Ross remarked at day-break of the morning of the 17th instant, on board the Lord Hangerford, under a salute from the ramparts of Fort William. He carries with him the cordial esteem of the whole European and Native community, and their best wishes for his prosperous voyage homeward, and for his future health, happiness and prosperity.

THE BARK EMILY.—The following extract of a letter, received from on board of the bark Emily, of this port, now long overdue from England, gives a deplorable account of the sufferings of her Commander and crew from sickness.

"Coringa, January 9, 1839.—No doubt you will be somewhat surprised to hear from me from this quarter, I will therefore detail to you the unfortunate circumstances that drove the Emily, the craft on which I left England, from the track that would have carried her to her port of destination—Calcutta. We lost the N. E. trades in sight of the Cape de Verde Islands, after which S. S. W. and S. W. winds continued on both sides of the Equator. We crossed the Line in about 4° west, and got the S. E. trades in about latitude 5° 30' South. We touched at the Island of Ascension, filled up our watercasks, and lived upon turtle soup and steaks for a week. We found the barques Lady Clifford and Newgrove, from Calcutta, at anchor; the former out 102 days, and the latter 104 days. Both ships had missed St. Helena, and had been some days looking for Ascension before they made it, tacking East and West, a scientific way of hitting a port, I must say. Their crews were in a dreadful state, and they were burying men daily while at anchor. We took turtle on board, weighed, and made sail. About a week after leaving the island, some part of the Emily's crew became sick, and by the time we reached the longitude of the Cape of Good Hope, the sick list was so full, that it was with difficulty a top-sail could be reefed. From the island of Amsterdam, or lat. 38° long. 78° East, up up to the Line, we were left with only six seamen and the Captain—(Charles Dunbar) without an officer or any person to depend upon, or to assist him in taking the vessel to her destined port. From the Line to 16° 30' North latitude, after burying 7 men and the carpenter, and having fourteen men lying sick in their hammocks, we had but 4 men and the Captain to work up the Bay against the N. E. monsoon. Yet the Captain thought he would have succeeded in getting her to the Sand Heade, had he but remained in good health. Unfortunately, however, the anxiety and fatigue of navigating a deeply laden ship, were too much for him, and on the afternoon of New Year's day, he dropped on the deck, after putting her round with three men. He remained in his cabin 48 hours, apparently suffering the most excruciating torments that it was possible for man to endure. From his right groin down to the foot, he was all black and swollen, the same as if he had a cochin leg. But, three seamen remaining, and no person to navigate the ship, the Captain was compelled to bear up for the first port—Coringa—where we arrived on the evening of the 4th instant, and two more men died that night. We brought up and fired sails two days afterwards, when we procured assistance from the shore. The Captain applied to the Collector, who has behaved very kindly, indeed, and rendered him every assistance that laid in his power. We landed the whole of the remaining crew—16 in number—and sent them to the hospital, from whence I expect but few will return. We shall leave this for Calcutta, immediately we can procure a native crew. If it had not been for the extreme kindness and attention of Mr. G. A. Smith, the Collector, and of Mr. M. N. Faynton, the Master Attendant, we would, perhaps, have lost the whole of the crew, as well as the Captain. The Collector, posted down, on the Captain making his application, about forty miles, and, with the Master Attendant's assistance, removed all the sick to the Hospital, a distance of twenty miles from the place where the ship was anchored in the roads."

MELANCHOLY AFFAIR.—The following is an extract of a letter from a gentleman in the pilot service:—

"A melancholy accident occurred yesterday, a little below the Rangafullah Tree, abreast of our ship. An immense tiger suddenly made his appearance from the jungles, in pursuit of three natives, one of whom, I regret to say, he succeeded in carrying away. We fired muskets to scare him from his prey, but without succeeding in our object. The beast was seen from our mast-head to startle at the report of our fire-arms, but could not be persuaded to leave his unfortunate victim."

ATTEMPTED ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.—It is reported, that an attempt at escape has been made by the prisoners in the Nuddea jail. Sunday being a day of exemption from labour, the prisoners, to the number of about 150, seized upon what arms they could lay hold of and endeavoured to effect their escape. It was not till ten of the convicts were killed and more than 50 of them were severely wounded, that the Burkundaz succeeded in re-capturing the revolvers. The Culwallah Jemadar, who took a very active part in the apprehension of the convicts, has been dangerously wounded.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A serious accident occurred about three o'clock yesterday morning, of which the following are the particulars. A cart drawn by four horses belonging to Messrs. Cook and Co., with dogs in it, belonging to the Calcutta Hunt, while proceeding through the Potulidangah street, at the head of Harcutta Lane, happened to be driven into a deep ditch dug in the middle of the street for the purpose of building a bridge. Three of the horses were killed on the spot, and the position much injured.

The accident occurred in consequence of the ditch being without a light or any fence, except four pieces of split bamboo, to warn parties of its existence. Messrs. Cook and Co. have represented the case to the Chief Magistrate who has promised to re-imburse them for the loss they have sustained, if he should find, on examination that the statement of the non-existence of a proper fence is correct. The public fences in general put round such apertures in roads, we are of opinion, are not sufficiently strong or high to prevent accidents. A horse running quickly, would break down or spring over them. The fences should be raised and boarded.

THE RACE BALL.—The Race Ball, on the evening of the 14th instant, was a very brilliant affair, though there were, perhaps, not quite so many fancy dresses as had been expected. The extreme elegance of good keeping, and of them made ample amends for the disappointment in respect of number.

JHANSI.—Jhansi has fallen, the troops entered it without opposition, and the Bate Begum, the Rajah's sister, made her escape. The place was occupied by our troops, it would appear, on the 15th instant.

RUSSIA.—Intelligence has been received from Persia, to the effect that the Shah has now definitively quitted the British Ambassador and is disposed to yield in all things to the wishes of our Government. The influence of Russia is said to be decidedly on the wane throughout Persia, and it is to be seen, the Amir has for the present thought proper to draw in his horns and await a future turn of affairs before he renews the project of an advance upon Central Asia.

SIR W. HORTON.—Sir Wilmot Horton, has been appointed Governor of Bombay.

SALE OF THE KOJAH INDIGO FACTORY.—On the 15th instant, the Kojah indigo factory, one of the most lucky indigo concerns in the country, was put up to public outcry at Messrs Moore, Hickey and Co.'s auction room, and disposed off for the sum of ninety five thousand rupees.

The produce of this singularly fortunate concern, is stated never to have cost one hundred rupees per maund, whilst for three years the average cultivation has been.....heegahs 11, 300

" " Produce ditto maunds 311

" " Outlay ditto rupees 21,700

And the outstanding balances for the last thirty years, amounted to only six thousand rupees.

REWARD TO THE CREW OF THE FLOATING LIGHT.—Government have most liberally rewarded the crew of the Floating Light at the Sand Heads, for their exertions in saving a part of the survivors of the unfortunate Protector. The whole of the crew have each received a month's pay as their reward, the lascars who exerted himself so much and pulled the survivors on board, has had bestowed on him a gold medal and promotion, and the European officers have received a letter of thanks from the Government, for the great assistance they afforded.

MEETING OF THE GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.—The eighth half yearly meeting of the members of the Globe

Insurance Company, was held at Messrs. Eglinton, McClure and Co.'s Office, when the accounts, &c. of the Company for the past six months were laid before the meeting and passed as correct. The following is an abstract.

CR.

Funds of the Office in Calcutta, London,
China and Bombay, Co's Rs. 3,96,613 13 10

Dr.

Premiums, Outstanding Risks and sundry losses paid by the Office, 3,45,630 14 2

Balance, Co.'s Rs. 50,982 15 8

NOTIFLING.—Letters recently received from Dorjeling, mention, that the road and houses were being quickly constructed, and that every thing progressed as well as could be expected. Bazaars were established, and all kinds of commodities were rapidly being supplied to it.

REAR HOWITZERS OF RUNJEET SING.—A letter from the camp of the Governor-General at Lahore, states, that one of the brass howitzers, recently presented to Maha Rajah Runjeet Sing, has become perfectly unserviceable by an imprudent attempt to work the gun without the aid of regular artillery men; and that orders have been issued for another howitzer being cast in the foundry to replace it.

CRICKET. The Calcutta Club, have twice successively beaten their often victorious rivals of the Camerons lately.

INFLUENZA.—The rainy weather we have lately had has caused influenza to rage in Calcutta and its neighbourhood, to a considerable extent.

LORD AUCKLAND AND SUIT.—Lord Auckland and suit crossed the Sutlege on the morning of the 5th instant, and are now on their way to Delhi. His Lordship has been much pleased with his visit to Runjeet Sing's territory. Nothing could have been more entirely, cordial, honourable, hospitable, than his treatment of the whole party.

FAIR AT GUNGA SAUGUR.—The annual fair at Gunga Saugur, took place on the 13th instant, but the number of Pilgrims, on account of the weather, was not so great as usual; and the quantity of goods sold on the occasion, was very small. Several boats were upset by the storm lately experienced, and some lives were lost.

INDIGO.—A letter from Kishnaghur, dated 21st instant, says, "the late rains have enabled most of those who have been lucky enough to have received their supply of up-country seed, to sow almost all their low and chur lands. The seed that was sown about the 14th or 15th, has germinated well, and should the weather continue milid, there is every reason for the lucky ones to thank "dune fortune" for having placed in their hands the wherewithal to sow. The unthrashed seed crop has suffered very considerable from the rain, which has been rather heavy for the last ten days, as has also the mustard crop, which it was expected, would have proved highly remunerating to the ryots, and in a great measure make up the loss of paddy from inundation."

THE NORTH-WESTERN COALITION—H. M. 3rd Lt. Dragoons and the 7th Regt. of Lt. Cavalry are under orders immediately to march to Meerut. The cause of this sudden and unexpected movement is attributed to the reports of the large Afghan force collected in Candahar, composed chiefly of horse, in which arm the Army of the Indus is weak; and is further explained by the following extract of a letter dated Tabla, Banks of the Indus, 7th January, 1839:—

"I break open my letter to give you the following very important information. The Western countries have all coalenced against us? Lieutenant Pottinger is ordered out of Herat and is making his way, as fast as he can, to India. Major Leech, ditto. Not a camel or a seer of grain was to be given them. They say that we shall not dictate to them who is to be their ruler. Russia has been called in by them to assist! Thank God we are all so well advanced into Scinde, for this, after all, is the most important country, and which we shall now, doubtless, permanently occupy. The whole of the Bengal Army advances, as was at first contemplated, with the addition of a reserve. We are "in for it," and I cannot see where it will end.

"P. S. A. despatch has just arrived from Sir. A. Burnes, giving the news of the coalition of the Western powers."

In addition to the above, it is understood, that it was stated in Camp, that Sir. Henry Fane would immediately resume the command of the Army of the Indus.

The following is the version of the Englishman's correspondent of the affair:—

Shah Shoojah's Camp, Mumoondee Khundee, 31st Dec.—I have only time at this moment to put you in possession of the following highly important intelligence just received, namely, that the Ameer of Khyrpoor has at length submitted, and has concluded an alliance, offensive and defensive, with the British Government, yielding into our possession, for the campaign, the Fort of Bhukur, which gives us the command of the Indus! For this very important advantage the Government is indebted to the talent and perseverance of Sir. Alexander Burnes, whose conduct throughout has been deserving of the highest praise. However selfish may have been the motives which dictated this concession by the Ameer, the importance of it to us at the present crisis, is unimpaired thereby. Without his aid we could but with difficulty, have accomplished our march, from the great scarcity of grain and forage, and the still greater scarcity of carriage cattle. The assistance afforded us by the Khan of Bhawalpoor has been very trifling indeed, and this, too, forced from him most unwillingly through his fears. It will ever be a subject of regret to us that we were not permitted to administer to him the punishment which his conduct so richly deserves, and which, young and raw as our force is, we are amply strong enough to have done effectually. We trust, however, that the Company's army following us, will not be so forbearing—it being the army of the paramount lord—we but the followers of a foreign ally.

As you will be glad to hear the above news, as early as possible, I shall detain my letter no longer than, to mention, that this is our third march from Ahmedpoor and fifth from Bhawalpoor. The roads are good, but the country has hitherto been a miserable one. The remaining few marches in the Khan's territory, are said to be through a richer country. We were forced to halt a day at Chowdree (our last ground) by rain, and the coldness of the weather and the clouds, alike indicate another fall. We shall reach Bhukur in about 12 days from this, as Sir Alexander Burnes is urging us on to our utmost speed. We have a march of 17 miles before us for to-morrow to Khanpoor, and start at 3 A. M. This is commencing the New Year early indeed.

SAIPWRECK.—The following is an extract of a letter from Chittagong, dated 20th January, 1839:—

"I suppose you have heard of the loss of the bark Jaute Randolph, Capt. Lambert, off Tek Nauf. Capt. Lambert is the only person missing."

WAR WITH BURMAN. Orders were received yesterday, for the dispatch this morning of the new steamer Enterprise to Madras, it is believed for the purpose of conveying more troops and munitions of war to Rurmah; and it is currently reported, that war has been declared with that country.

HOOCHLY BRANCH AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Hoochly Branch Agricultural and Horticultural Society, held the first annual meeting for the exhibition of vegetables and the distribution of prizes supplied by the Parent Society in Calcutta. Considering that the matter was not well understood by the natives the exhibition was as good as could have been expected. There were some fine specimens of potatoes and some very fine cabbages, some very good Indian corn and a fine specimen of arrow root.

The Meeting was attended by all the ladies of the station and by all the public functionaries, Mr. D. A. Overbeck the late Governor of Chinsurah, was also present. The prizes, consisting of metals and sums of five rupees, were distributed by the Magistrate and Dr. Wise, the Secretary of the Branch Society, and Baboo Joy Kissen Mookerjee, explained to the natives the object of the Society and of the distribution of prizes. There was a full attendance of natives generally, and most of the neighbouring Zemindars were present. Next year, when the objects of the Association are better understood, and the natives learn that their exertions will be rewarded, a much better exhibition may be expected, and of more important articles. It has been intimated, that rewards will be given for the best sample of sugar cane, cotton and other staples.

THE RESUMPTION QUESTION.—A truce has existed the whole of this week, between the combatants on the resumption question. The answer of the Government has been returned to the Landholders' petition, and the arguments used in it, are a mere recapitulation of those urged by GAUNTLET, and consequently opposed to the petition.

WAR WITH BURMAN.—The expected general order announcing the declaration of hostilities with Burmah, has not been promulgated; but it is still believed, that Government have decided on war, and will soon proclaim their determination.

BHAWAL KHAN'S MEETING WITH SIR H. FANE.—The following is an extract of a letter from Camp Bhawalpoor.

The Cavalry Brigade came in yesterday, and the 1st Brigade this morning, without mishap of any kind beyond the loss of a few camels from death and desertion and without losing a single man, to the best of my knowledge, excepting poor Colonel Duffin, who died on the 28th, just as his boat reached this Ghaut, and was buried in front of the standard guard of 2nd Light Cavalry, this morning. Sir Alexander Burnes, in a letter to Sir Willoughby Cotton, states, that he has an abundance of supplies at Shikarpore, where he now is, and that everything is going on as well as could be desired in the neighbouring States. The Nawab Bhawan Khan paid his visit to Sir Henry Fane this day at 11 o' clock. A squadron from the Lancers and 3d Cavalry, with the band of the former, were in attendance at His Excellency's tents, who came to them from his boats a little before that hour; shortly after which the Nawab made his appearance on horseback, accompanied by Lieutenant Macke-on, and proceeded by sixty men clad in white. This body was succeeded by sixty more men, the whole armed with swords, but no matchlocks. The Commander in Chief received the Nawab at the tent door with a hearty shake of hands.

Another letter, states the following:—"The line of march lies through desert a great part of the way, and supplies are scarce. In Bhawalpoore, the bazar people were obliged to be flogged, before they would supply any thing. The Nabob, Bhawal Khan, threw every impediment in the way of the troops."

ICE—Ice is again to be had in great abundance, and we are now promised a regular supply. The apples have all been sold.

EXECUTION.—The unfortunate culprit, Ram Sing who was convicted of the murder of his fellow servants at the premises of his master in Chitpoor, and consequently sentenced by the Nizamut Adawlut of Calcutta capitally, underwent the execution of his sentence before the Tollygunge Jail at sunrise, on the 28th instant. Being an athletic man, he struggled considerably under the gibbet before the vital spark became extinct.

PERTAB CHUNDER.—James Curtis, Esq., the late Sessions Judge of Hooghly, before whom the case of Government versus the ad dunt Rajah Pertab Chunder, the claimant to the zemindary of Zillah Burdwan was tried, in submitting to the Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, the result of the suit, together with his summary of the case, his opinion on it, and the fatwa or verdict of the Law Officer of the Sessions Court of Zillah Hooghly, Moulay Syud Ahmad, forwarded the Minutes of the proceedings as recorded before him in their original state to the superior court. The Judges of that Court, on the receipt of these documents, returned them to the Sessions Judge of Hooghly with instructions to conform to the customary practice of the Company's Mofussil Courts in all criminal cases which have been submitted to the Nizamut Adawlut, viz., to retain the original proceedings in his office, and to forward to the Nizamut Adawlut the attested copies of them. In consequence of this order, the final result of the decision on the case of this individual, has been delayed beyond the period which it would otherwise have been.

MR. LINTON'S ORATORIO.—The Oratorio given by Mr. Linton on the 29th instant, was the most brilliant thing of the kind ever got up in Calcutta. It was well attended.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The exhibition of fruits, vegetables, &c. at the Town Hall on the 1st instant, was very grand. There were some very large cabbages, turnips, cauliflowers, peas, potatoes, yams, &c. and though quite out of season, a ripe jack and loquats were displayed. The cattle show, although the first, was very good.

A cow, bred by Hunter and Co. in the country, from English Stock, was brought to the exhibition. She was a splendid animal, and is said to give seven gallons and a half of milk, when in proper condition! Mr. Pattle's was deemed the best cow, and consequently carried the prize, of a silver medal and two hundred and fifty rupees. Mr. Gibson's ram, without horns, carried off the gold medal and two hundred rupees.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—The Coronation of the Great Mogul, was celebrated on the 29th of December last, with great splendour.

AGRA.—The amount of support extended by Government, to the district, during the famine of the past year, and of remitted revenue, together, exceeded the considerable sum of forty-two lakhs and a half of rupees.

The sum expended in employing the poor, amounted to 13 lakhs and 51,000 rupees, and the balance, is the amount of revenue, remitted in this district alone.

A line of posts is to be formed along the Indus, connecting the north west Provinces with the Bombay presidency. The principal stations on the line, are to be Ferozepoor, Bhawalpoor, and Shikarpoor, or at a spot nearer the junction of the five rivers of the Punjab with the Indus. This occupation of course implies the consent voluntary, or forcible, of the Bhawalpoore Rajah and the Scindians, and while it completes our frontier from Bombay to the Sutlege, it will give us such a commanding influence over the political affairs of the Punjab and Cabool, that we can never be surprised in those quarters by any foreign aggression.

The Governor-General, it is said, will positively visit Agra in February. He is expected to be there by the 22nd of that month, and has sent instructions to the Magistrate to repair the roads for his advent.

The weather for some time past has been hot, and even sultry for the season, and threatening rain, the want of which the country is severely experiencing. The gram crop, which is almost wholly dependent on the rain that usually falls during the cold weather, is very backward.

MARWAR.—Our accounts from the westward are unfavourable as respects only our relations with the state of Marwar. Mun Singh, it appears, not only refuses the Governor-General the honourous title of Munha ool Jodwa ool Ektan, but absolutely declines to reply in any way to the numerous communications which have been addressed to him by the Agent. Khareeta after Khareeta, is despatched in vain to Jodhpoor.

MOORSHEDABAD.—The place of fresh up country indigo seed at Hogwongolah, is now as low as eight Reper maund, but almost all the planters are under contracts to pay as high as 10 and 11 Reper maund for January deliveries. It is suspected by the planters, that the seed agents had entered into an understanding amongst themselves, and by incorrect statements regarding the seed crops in the upper provinces, had frightened their credulous friends to contract at the high rates last quoted.

The fears of Zemindars in this and the neighbouring districts on the subject of the realization of rents in consequence of the destruction to the paddy crops by the last high inundation, have been entirely removed by the favourable result of the collye and good prospects of all other description of winter crops.

A party have been hunting lately on the Ram Chunderpoore Dheer with great success. On the 1st day 11 boars fell to two spears, and at the breaking up of the hunting 29 boars had fallen in three days. One of the party, however, having incautiously dismounted to view the effects of his prowess on an old boar, before he was quite done for, the beast rose and commenced taking summary revenge on his unprepared opponent; but another hunter, with one thrust of his spear, killed the enraged animal over the body of his prostrate friend, not however, before the fallen hunter had received two pretty sharp cuts from the brute.

THE INDUS ARMY.—Letters from the Army, date Camp Kasrme Re, speak chiefly of the barren monotonous character of the jungle, through which the line of march lies. The villagers are described as a set of marauders, who waylay and rob all stragglers they discover; they even openly stop strings of camels, and quietly selecting such of them and their gear as best suit their purposes, walk off with their plunder. They are extremely rough, and readily resort to their talwars, at the use of which they are very expert. No examples had been made of any of them, lest the "harmony of our relations" should be disturbed. The Army have been strictly cautioned against injury and aggression towards the natives of the country through which they march.

NATIVE STATES.

LAHORE.—The following is an extract of a letter from Lahore, dated 21st December, 1838.—The Governor-General arrived here this morning, from Shrialmar gardens, distant from hence about 6 miles, and is encamped on the same ground the Commander-in-Chief occupied when he visited Lahore, the rear of the camp being on the banks of the Ravee, now very shallow and divided into two or three streams, all which are fordable and little above knee deep.

The Maharajah gave an entertainment in the Shrialmar gardens to his Lordship and suite last evening, but as usual, the intimation that those officers of the escort who wished to attend, were permitted to do so, came out so late, that few could avail themselves of the intended kindness, and I must confess they lost little by being absent, as, with the exception of the illuminations which had a pretty effect reflected on the sheet of water under the 'Barah Dhowree,' in which the party were assembled, nothing else was worthy of the great little man. The fountains were not playing, owing to a scarcity of water as they said, but I hear in consequence of the pipes being out of repair; the fireworks were execrable and the dancing and singing as noisy and cracked as in other parts of India. As to the wine and apples, few could give you a report upon their merits, unless it were some of those fortunate ones, who got a position in the front ranks. The Maharajah took especial care however, that our worthy Governor had his share of the fiery liquid, insisting each time that he presented him with the cup, that it was drained to the dregs. I believe nothing definite is arranged as to the length of our stay here, but it is conjectured, we shall leave on the 31st, and cross the Sutlege at Huzreka Putlan, on the 7th proximo. The escort under Major General Smith, are to have a field day for the amusement of the Maharaja, during our stay here.

Did you hear that Runjeet Sing, much to the surprise, and without consulting any, of his chief officers took the Governor-General and suite all through Gobind Ghur on Sunday evening last: I was not of the party, but hear from those who were, that it is a very pretty place inside, and had only 6 or 8 guns mounted. I must now close, having other fish to fry. I will write again should any thing occur worth noticing.

ALWUR.—The heir and only son of the Rajah of this state, an infant a few months old, has just died and thrown the Rajah, who was long childless, into a state bordering on distraction.

BHURTPUR.—A communication from the British Resident at Ajmeer has just been received by the Rajah of this place, in which the policy and designs of Government, in their Afghan excursion, were lightly and graphically portrayed for His Highness's information. At the close of the letter, the Rajah signified by a salute of 21 guns, his approbation and concurrence. A party of Thug-approvers introduced by Lieutenant W., of the Thug Department; have been admitted into the city to pursue their avocation. They had already identified some individuals.

MADRAS.

SIR JASPER NICOLLS.—On the 21st December, Sir Jasper Nicolls landed at Madras, and assumed the Military Commander-in-Chief at that presidency.

STRONG CURRENTS IN THE BAY.—The set and extraordinary force of the currents in the Bay of Bengal, have been exemplified in the fact of boxes bearing the mark of the Protector, having been lately drifted on shore near Jaffna in Ceylon, so many hundred miles from the saugor Sands, where that unfortunate vessel was destroyed.

DEPARTURE OF SIR P. MAITLAND.—Sir Peregrin Maitland left Madras and embarked on board of the Colombo on the 3d instant.

BOMBAY.

THE SCOTCH FORCE.—A letter from Hujamaee, of the 19th December, states, that 2000 camels had arrived at the camp, and that His Excellency with the 2d brigade Light Infantry, the 3d troop Horse Artillery, and the 4th Light Dragoons, would, in 4 or 5 days, march to Fatta. The road is described as tolerably fair and the distance four marches. General Wiltshire with the remainder of the force, was to follow. Boats for the transport of heavy goods were abundant, and the inhabitants appeared inclined to be civil. The troops were well supplied with stores, but good water was scarce. It is said from good authority, that the Ameers were collecting forces in the neighbourhood of Hyderabad.

A NATIVE CONVERT.—A pupil at the Colombo Academy, named Banda, son of a respectable native Chief of the Kandian Provinces, has been baptized at St. Peter's Church, Colombo, by the Rev. Mr. Marsh, of the Ceylon Branch of the Church Mission Society. His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor, the Rev. Mr. Marsh and Mrs. Marsh, stood sponsors to the young man, who is about twelve or thirteen years of age, and whose parents are of the Dutch religion.

SIR H. COMPTON.—It is said, that as the Hon'ble Sir H. Compton has not yet received an intimation of the acceptance of his resignation by the home government, and the appointment of his successor, His Lordship, who sails in the next steamer, will enjoin in Egypt until the receipt of such intimation; and in case his resignation be not accepted, his Lordship will be obliged to make a retrograde voyage to Bombay.

THE ANGRIA OF COLABA.—His Highness the Angria of Colabah, who had long been suffering from a sordid complaint, for the treatment of which a medical attendant was more than once deputed by our Government, has been gathered to his fathers. His Highness has no male issue. He had recently a birth of but a female child.

CASE OF SYUD MOOSTAFA THE MOGOL.—Syud Moostafa, a respectable Mogol, who was apprehended by the authorities at this place, was removed from Bombay to the Jail of Tanna, before the writ of Habeas Corpus, which was granted by the Supreme Court, could be served. On what charge or suspicion this person was seized was not known for certain at the time. It was United that Syud Mostufa was charged with a murder in the Nizam's jurisdiction; which statement appears to be correct, from the circumstances that have now come to knowledge, from a quarter on which implicit reliance can be placed; and they are, that the Nizam of Hyderabad having been informed of the seizure of Syud Mostufa, deputed a party of Horse to demand the surrender from this Govt. of his person to be tried in His Highness Court, as the offence under which he has held in custody, arise in his jurisdiction:—this just requisition could not be refused, and Syud Mostufa was therefore delivered to the party of the Nizam, under whose escort he was conveyed to Hyderabad.

GATHERING OF THE BELUCHES AND PUNJANS.—All the accounts received from the Indus agree in this, that the Beluchees and Semlians are collected in large numbers to oppose the march of our troops, although there is no manifestation yet of an open opposition.

The Amers are, it is said, also fortifying Hyderabad within which we hope our troops may find a resting place, notwithstanding, and such a stock of ailments as ... nerve to compensate them for the sandy roads and bad water which they will have to encounter in the progress to it.

SAWUNT WARREE STATE.—It is said, that within these few days, a hill-fort, in the Sawunt Warree State, has been taken possession of by about 150 men, themselves inhabitants of the Goa territory, and the whole of the petty Rajah's country is said to be in a state of anarchy, the result of a long course of imbecility and misrule.

Mr. Spooner, of the Civil Service, has been sent there to introduce order, but the insurgents are in such force as to render the aid of the military necessary to disperse them. A detachment of 60 men with an officer, proceeding from Vingoria to join another party, was attacked by about 500 men armed with musket and matchlocks. The Officer in attempting to fight his way through, was wounded and obliged to retreat with the loss of a few men. The country is full of jungle, and very strong in many places.

GIANG ROBBERIES.—Giang robberies are becoming more frequent in the interior. It is reported in the Gazette, that a Mr. Hanson, of the Agent's office at Poonah, and his son, were attacked and fired upon on the 2nd instant, within half a mile of the village of Chowk, and all their baggage was carried away. They, however, lost 200 Rs. only, their clothes being found the next day, outside a small village, in the neighbourhood. An officer's baggage, it appears, had been plundered a day or two before in the same way.

—A gang of horse and foot, amounting to nearly two hundred, assembled at a temple in the Malwal district near to Chakun, and after performing pooja, beat their tom-toms, blew the shahing and collaroy horns, made, a dhurra on an adjoining village, and hurried it out, in the true Pindaree style. Amongst the spoil, there was a quantity of Government treasure coming from the district, and a Subedar and a Carcoon were somewhat severely wounded. Lieut. Rudd, the Police-master in Poonah, with a detachment of thirty sowars, has gone off in pursuit.

HIS HIGHNESS SUYAJEE RAO.—Accounts from Baroda state that another discussion has arisen between the Resident and the Guicowar on the subject of a murder or death that has taken place among the domestic of the sons of the late Wittoba Bhao, who being a guaranteed family, the interference of the Resident becomes necessary. The time allowed to His Highness Suyajee Rao to make up his mind on the subject of the ultimatum submitted to him on the part of our Government some months ago, has expired with the end of the year.

VINGORIA.—A serious disturbance recently occurred at this place, but was promptly quelled.

CHINA.

Chinese journals to the 23d of December, inform us of the total stoppage of the trade in China, in consequence of the Mandarins having seized a quantity of opium which had been landed, in twenty-two treasure-chests, from one of the smuggling schooners at Canton, and was being conveyed to the store of a merchant named Innes. The coolies employed in carrying the opium, had been tortured to disclose the name of the vessel from which the drug had been brought, and they erroneously named an American ship, the securing Mandarin of which craft, had been seized, and paraded through the fleet, with a wooden collar on his neck, the greatest indignity to which a Chinaman of his rank could possibly be subjected. These measures were succeeded by orders to stop the trade. No ships were, accordingly, allowed to be issued, and boats were prevented from leaving or going to Canton, and all the opium on board of the ships at Whampoa, was being rapidly shipped off to Linn. Mr. Innes had been directed to quit Canton within three days from the date of the order to do so, and the Chinese authorities expressed their determination to stop the trade, not only until Mr. Innes should leave Canton, but until all the foreign householders had entered into a bond to abstain from smuggling altogether in the Canton River, and threats of unroofing the British factory, had been uttered.

An edict, passing sentence of death against all vendors and smokers of opium, having been violated by a Chinaman, who was convicted of keeping an opium smoking shop, he was condemned to suffer death by strangulation. On the 12th of December the culprit was taken to the square in front of the factories, to suffer the penalty of his disobedience of the law, the locality of the execution being chosen with the sole view, it is said, of insulting and degrading the foreigners. The foreign residents, feeling the indignity the Chinese contemplated thus offering them, assembled in a body and appealed to the officer superintending the execution, who was induced to consent, without referring to the Governor, to the removal of the criminal to a greater distance for execution. An immense crowd of Chinese were assembled, on the day of execution, to witness the spectacle, and, in consequence of some foreigners taking the liberty of making their way through the throng by the aid of their canes, a serious riot took place. The foreigners engaged in it, were forced to take shelter in the imperial hong, which was immediately invested by the crowd, who commenced battering it with stones, &c. and one of the missiles struck a merchant on the head with such violence, as to stun him for a time. The mob were proceeding to commit greater excesses, when application was made in the proper quarter, and the aid of the military procured, who soon succeeded in dispersing the rioters. On information of the disturbance being conveyed to Capt. Elliott, he manned the boats and proceeded to rescue the merchants; but, fortunately, his assistance was not required. The foreigners were released the next day, at the Chamber of Commerce, to decide what was to be done.

The Kellie Castle, was wrecked on the Louisa Shoal, on the 14th of November last, at half past eleven at night, but no lives had been lost, and the passengers' baggage and some opium, had likewise been saved. The crew and passengers, were distributed among several vessels, which were in company of the Kellie Castle when she took the ground.

A new paper, called the O Commercial, has been started at Macao, on the 1st of December, and is printed, half in Portuguese and half in English.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore journals to the 3d of January intimate, that the Siren, Captain Alves, long overdue from this port, had not reached Singapore, and that fears were entertained for her safety.

PENANG.

Penang Gazette to the 22nd of December, received during the month, furnish us with some additional information respecting the state of affairs in Quedah. It appears, that some of the officers of the Hyacinth, who had been dispatched from that vessel to the Quedah shore, in a boat, were stopped by the Malays at one of the reaches, and asked the reason of their visit. On a reply being given, that the officers sought fresh water, they were desired to go back to Penang, where it was better and more plentiful, and were obliged to retire. There was a rumour, that the Hyacinth had subsequently sailed to the Lancavies, to endeavour to rescue about six thousand Siamese, who were said to be detained there as captives by the Malays, with the view of selling them into slavery, in case of the Malay chiefs meeting reverses at Quedah. The report, however, was of a doubtful nature.—Opium was still dull of sale in the Penang market, and a few chests had been disposed of at a decline in price.

The Resident Councillor of Penang Mr. Edmund, had proceeded to Quedah, to ascertain, personally, the state of the contending parties, and to learn whether there is a sufficient Siamese force near Quedah, to whom the country that we compel the Malays to retire from, may be delivered.

BURMAH.

MAULMEIN, 23D DECEMBER.—Advices from Ava to the 30th of November state, that the resident had succeeded in obtaining an interview with the assembled ministers; but that this interview was far from being of a friendly or satisfactory nature, and that it amounted, merely, to a recognition of Colonel Benson as the Representative of the British Government, and not according to their former construction of the treaty of Yandabo, as an atacer with 50 men allowed to reside at the Burman thort. The mission is cut off from every supply and intercourse with the people, even the most common necessities of life are not to be obtained without difficulty, and at enormous prices. A man and woman, who sident at J seated under a tree in the neighbourhood of this place, in a compound, were seized and carried off, in their A released, on its being discovered that phically portrays people come from a distance, and the close of the lily to be connected in any way with

A deserter from one of H. M.'s Regiments, stationed at Maulmein, is said to lead a precious life of it at Court, for the amusement of the King and his Courtiers. This half-starved and half-naked individual is made to go through the manual and platoon exercise to the sound of a drum, and receives more kicks than halfpence for his reward. On remonstrating, one day, against the treatment he received, he was kicked out of the house by one of the King's sons, and told he was a liar, as all Englishmen are. This man has been seen running behind in the train of a petty officer, to whom he is attached as a slave, with a musket on his shoulder.

It appears that bloody executions are as frequent at the Capital as at Rangoon, where, the day before the steamer started, three more unfortunate men were crucified in the same horrible manner as described in one of our former numbers. At Amarapura three men were executed, one for saying the young Prince was in existence some where to the northward, where he had erected a palace, and was assembling an army; the second for not informing against the first; and the third for residing with one of the other two, he having been a follower of the Prince.

It is said, that at one time, the Resident was making preparations for quitting the country, and that he would have done so, had not the Ministers at last agreed to grant the interview, for which he had been so long contending.

Much alarm appears to exist in Rangoon, under the idea, that we are preparing here for some act of aggression: men and arms are said to be collecting from all quarters and the people to be ready for a run into the jungle, with all their valuables packed into the smallest possible compass.

The Woodouk of Rangoon, is said to have sent off his wife, family, and valuables to Prome; the town itself is becoming quite deserted. No trade is going on, and not a bit of timber is to be had. Cutch is monopolized by Woodouk, Starg and Co. There is a report, that these two worthies have written a joint letter to the King, hinting to him in the most delicate manner possible, that unless he alters his bearing towards the English, he may chance to repent of it.

MOULMEIN 26TH DECEMBER.—It would seem that the Resident had again been fully prepared to make start from the Capital, and that he had once more abandoned the intention, and resumed his pleasant position on his sand-bank. At Rangoon, the idea seemed to prevail, that a perfectly good understanding had once more been established with the Court, though there appeared to be no cessation in warlike preparations. Rumours being again to be a float of a general arming throughout the country, and some reports state that should the Resident quit the country, he is to be followed by an army of 60,000 men, who are to make push for these provinces.

By intelligence received from Maulmein, to the 15th of January it is understood, that Colonel Benson has not been enabled to obtain an audience of the King, and is himself satisfied, that the object of the delay, is to gain time, so that the rains may set in, before his ignominious expulsion from Amarapura takes place. He has intimated to the King that he only waits the instructions of his Government, as to his movements. This news is tantamount to an immediate declaration of war, for it is impossible our forbearance can be carried further, without an utter prostration of all self respect.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIME, &c.

Truly both the age of Magic and Romance revived ! What pen can accurately delineate the surpassing wonders that our sower and unpractised senses witnessed last night ! The wild fantastic of Fra Diavolo ; the spirit-stirring harmony of Masaniello ; the soft and fascinating cadences of the Grand Medley, all conspired to bewilder and transport. But let us sober down our pen to the gravity of profound criticism. The pieces enacted last night were COMFORTABLE LODGINGS and the Pantomime of BEAUTY AND THE BEAST, repeated by the desire of affectionate Maumas for the edification of their little darlings. Comfortable Lodgings is a most admirable piece of dramatic writing, and amply repaid the audience for their time and money. Sir Hippington Miff, a rather elderly and suspicious gentleman, is the hero of the piece, and barring a few unimpeachable grantees, was ably and effectively represented. The scene is laid in Paris and the plot chiefly founded on a legal band, the object of a good deal of turbulence, alarm and activity. The intendant of Police guideth his lions and premedeth, like a lion, for the chase ; a French Capitaine and his Fam militaire beat a skilful retreat from the threatened incarceration (for in those Arcadian times no Insolvent Court existed to render debtors proudly independent of their creditors), poor nervous Sir Hipp himself is officially apprised of the danger in which he stands from robbery and murder ; and this superabundant commotion is caused by a ship of parchment designated a boat ! The whole of the plot is capably managed. A lover, a thief, a magistrate and a soldier each severally enters Sir Hipp's comfortable lodgings, impelled, as it were, by one common object, the box. The lover from a willingness to be lettered by Hipp's hand ; the thief from a desire to possess himself of the original mauve hand, the Police Intendant from professional zeal to secure the thief in the hand of prison discipline ; and the veteran soldier from a natural anxiety to avoid the incriminating hand which threatened to overwhelm him. Sir Hipp tries a brace of pistols, and, considering his age and infirmity, does marvellous execution amongst tipplers as well as quadrupeds. He shoots a pig—and he cannot but observe, that the squeaking of the wounded animal was most piggy-like true to nature, and it was a pity that the Managers did not introduce the dying pig on the stage, groaning in anguish and weakening in his blood, with honest Gregory lamenting over his favorite's untimely end and yet characteristically metamorphosing its delicate flesh into streaky bacon or spicy brawn. This process, ingeniously dramatized, would not only have amused but gratified the little juvenile spectators who, we dare say, have often enjoyed these epicurean delicacies without once enquiring into the nature of the process by which they were fashioned into form. This excellent little piece concluded very happily by the lover jumping in at the window just in time to save Sir Hipp from being throttled ; by the unskilful thief being marched into the room in all the pomp of military parade ; by the veteran Captain and his inseparable Bombardier expressing their delight at what surpassed the limits of our comprehension ; and lastly, by the hero Sir Hipp, for once indulging in a cheerful laugh and anticipating the pleasures of a supper, unalloyed by the apprehensions of being poisoned. The curtain fell amidst encouraging plaudits.

But what shall we say of Beauty and the Beast, of the sprightly Harlequin and his ethereal Columbine ; of honest Clown and jovial Pantaloon ? It was, indeed, a scene of enchantment and delight where the heart, the understanding and the senses, were equally gratified. The interview of Beauty and the Beast was as romantic as could be wished ; the Beast was of that order of animals called a Bear, and without intending to perpetrate a pun, the orderly and polite manner in which he addressed Beauty, was not only bearable but gratifying ; he was truly a most affable beast, and never failed to be transformed from a shaggy, cumbersome and forbidding monster, to the graceful, agile, and handsome Harlequin. Behold him now tripping it on the light fantastic toe, with his delicate and graceful Columbine, and the twain in their adorable sallations delighted the spectators in no slight degree. Columbine particularly in her perouetters and gyrations ever and anon, displayed to the admiring gaze of ladies and gentlemen of all ages, a pair of legs worthy of Persephore. The juvenile spectators, in their turn, enjoyed the merely pranks of Clown and Pantaloon, and their little hearts were boisterously merry at the several mercurial feats which seasonably gave their infant minds faint glimmerings of the rights of property and the triumph of shrewdness over simplicity. The poetical portion of this splendid pantomime, was in strict harmony with its other beautiful attractions. With a most enchanting melody of both rhyme and metre, the author dashed into his subject and rivetted attention by novelty. Had we the book before us, our gentle readers would have indulged with two or three choice extracts. They may, however, take our words for it, that the poetical beauty of the Pantomime was of an original kind and, to our tastes, the most attractive feature in the whole composition. Both performances concluded to the great unequivocal satisfaction of all concerned.

It is pleasing to contemplate that the Drama will flourish and luxuriate in the proud capital of British India, provided the rival stars which at present shine in the theatrical firmament, keep within their proper orbits. They seem, however, to act like generous foes without evincing any intention of crossing each other's paths. If opinions of ours have weight, let the ordinary of Chowringhee keep to Pantomimes and melo-dramas, where grown men may enact to please the eye and ear of Childhood ; and let the new Saint James or Middleton Row, confine itself to the more serious walks of the Drama, where Juvenile aspirants for fame may exhibit their precocious talents to the wondering gaze of venerable spectators. If this rule of amity and forbearance be strictly adhered to, the lovers of Dramatic excellence may rest assured that the stage will soon become the chief attraction among all the sources of attraction of this rising metropolis.

Calcutta Courier, Feb. 1.]

Z.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The play that will please the auditors and satisfy the artists, must surely be the best play to perform after all ; and to judge from the crowd of seemingly delighted spectators which we saw at the repetition of the Christmas Pantomime and Comfortable Lodgings, at Chowringhee, scenic display, farce and pantomime, seem to be more congenial to the taste of our Calcutta public, than the more legitimate drama. Mr. Ballou, we think, must have made a good penny by his adventure, for he has twice drawn together a larger audience by his tomfoolery, than Shakespeare's heart has often done for even a single night. We are told that he intends to try the pantomime once more during this season, and we believe that he will find the speculation turn out profitably ; for all present at the theatre on the last representation, the few little children, and the crowd of a large growth,—gods, mortals, and infernals,—seemed so well tickled by both pieces, that we have no doubt of their “coming down with the dust,” as the Englishman would say, to obtain such another hearty cachinnation. We really were alarmed for a portly gentleman near us, and thought, when the Clown was about to be deprived of his inexpressibles, that his risibility would have proved too much for him, and that there would have been a case either of bursting or suffocation.

The Secretary was very happy in his representation of Sir Hippington Miff. The querulous tone in which he complained to Rigmarole, that he “couldn’t do as other people did;” his alarm at the prospect of being murdered; his watchfulness and inquietude on the attempt made by Rigmarole to remove his pistol; his jealous suspicion of every body and every thing, and his affected sprightliness and gaiety, to keep up appearances, in conformity with the wish of the Intendant of Police, were very good. This gentleman has greatly improved of late, in his imitations of our late Secretary, to whom he makes an admirable successor. Madame Pelagie’s jealousy of Sir Hippington’s attentions to her niece, and her “there’s a hand” and mock modesty on presenting the tawny slipper, were very fair. Captain Bombasus was tolerably good, and Bombardier Babilard, just the thing. He looked as stiff and spoke as sharp and short, as if he had swallowed the barrel of his musket, and was hard pressed for breath.

Vincent Dorville, Roué and Rigmarole, though we would “Be to their faults a little blind,

And to their merits very kind,” were compelled to say, were not quite what they should be.

The pantomime, on the whole, was very fair, though some parts we thought to be a little detrap. The Clown was an admirable Clown, looked as foolish as possible, and performed his antics to the admiration of the spectators. His Papa and Pantaloon, were capital also, and tossed themselves about famously. Columbine, danced about the stage very prettily, with Harlequin, who delighted the audience by his headforemost exit from a window four feet high, after playing off his roguish tricks, — the Clown and his fellows following him through an adjoining pane of glass at an equal altitude. The representation of the Banks of the Sutlege,—the Red Lion and White Lamb, was capital, and the representatives of the Lions of Calcutta and the Punjab, very strong resemblances of the originals; the latter, we understand, a far better likeness of the redoubtable Sheikh, than the pen-and-ink sketch of the Editor of the Englishman. The said Editor was present, and seemed to be struck with the successful hit made by little Ballin. Nina Nouveau made an admirable fury, and we were surprised to hear the child speak English so distinctly as she did; for it is not long since, that she did not know a word of the language. The scene shifting department was execrable, and requires a radical reform. The music was very good.

A word to the management ere we conclude. Let us have “fair play and no favor.” About thirty ladies and gentlemen were let in by the private entrance, to choose and avoid themselves of the best seats, while we, and a whole host of others, were kept waiting in a fog, at the gate, beyond the appointed time of admission. This used not to be the case formerly, and should not now be tolerated. — Hickaru, February 2.

THE EXHIBITION OF VEGETABLES, CATTLE, &c.

Yesterday morning the Town Hall presented an animated and interesting sight to the lovers of the good things of this world. The annual exhibition of vegetables, produced under the direction and patronage of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, was the occasion of drawing together a very respectable and numerous assembly of ladies and gentlemen, among whom we observed Sir Edward Ryan, the President of the Society, Sir Henry Seton, H. H. Spry, Esq., the new Secretary of the institution, and several of its members.

Some of the finest specimens of all kinds of vegetables, fruits, flowers, &c. of the season, were to be seen in every direction. The vegetable show was very extensive, consisting of all the varieties of kitchen articles to be found in the gardens of Europe. Those which in particular attracted our attention, were the drum-head cabbages, the sizes of which were extraordinary, and their firmness and delicacy equally creditable to the growers of this fine vegetable. Of turnips, carrots, peas, beat, lettuce, &c. &c. there was great abundance, all in such perfection that it spoke volumes in favor of the exertions of the Society, by proving that these good things, so rare a few years since, had become common, and within the reach of almost every body. There was a basket of purple brinjals, one of which we found to measure about two feet in circumference, a pumpkin full a yard long, white onions from Europe seed of the largest size, a yellow variety of the beat, and a pumpkin of extraordinary shape circular and flat like a cake with the edges indented in the form of an artificial star. There were two vases each of which extended fantastic ramifications over a space of at least a yard and a half, and filled up two large baskets. That one of these belonged to Ramnarain Ghose, of Moorchkholah, whose neck was decorated with a silver medal won on a former occasion. There were also some plants brought in flower pots, among which we saw an artichoke luxuriating with peculiar grandeur.

Among the fruits, a ripe jack and loquats at this season, were rare sights. A bundle of white sugar-cane, of gigantic dimensions, also seemed to claim attention.

Nosegays and baskets of flowers, occasionally met the eye; but a basket containing about half a dozen flowers of the red variety of the lotus (Rocto Combol) shone above them all.

Within the purlieus of the building were exhibited some very fine specimens of cattle, a new branch of the Society’s patronage. Among these, some Merino sheep, belonging to Mr Gibbon, were very fine, particularly a ram without horns; but there were not bred in the country. Two cows bred in the country from English stock, belonging to Mr. Rose, of the establishment of Hunter and Co., were also very attractive; one of these, a white one, had a calf at heels, and was stated to give fifteen seers of milk per day. But the prettiest animal on the spot, was a dark, copper coloured country cow, belonging to Dr. Evans. She was a small sized animal, but the symmetry of her proportions gave her au exceedingly pretty appearance. It was said she gave nine soers of milk per day.

The number of Cattle exhibited were not great, but they were deemed by the Judges very good of their kind. The awards were as follows:

To Mrs. Pattle the sum of two hundred and fifty rupees and the Society's silver Medal, for the best bred cow imported from any part of the world.

To William Gibbon Esq., the sum of two hundred rupees and the Society's gold Medal, for the best woolled ram, not less than two years old.

To William Gibbon, Esq., a premium of one hundred and fifty rupees and the Society's silver Medal, for the second best woolled ram, not less than two years old.

The common sort of vegetables, such as cauliflower, cabbages, lettuces, peas, &c., were excluded by the General Committee of the Society as having reached such a state of perfection, that they might be safely left to the natives' care. The following is the list of the names of the successful competitors on whom prizes were bestowed by the two Members of the Society, who acted as umpires on the occasion.

Silver medals. Rs.

Seetaram, Alipore, for Scotch Kale, best sample.....	0	5
Muthoor Spear, Mooscheekolah, for Celery, best sample.....	1	10
Rajoo, Chitpore, Do. 2d best sample.....	0	5
Muddasooden, Sambazar, Do 3d best sample.....	0	3
Jandani Ghose, Mooscheekolah, for parsley, best sample.....	0	5
Faam Ghose, Mooscheekolah, for Turnip, best sample.....	1	5
Amundoo, Do. Do. 2d best sample.....	0	3
Amundoo, Do. Do. 3d best sample.....	0	2
Bridmant Doss, Etal Ghats, for Carrots, best sample.....	1	5
Do. Do. Do. 2d best sample.....	0	3
Bidram, Bala Do. 3d best sample.....	0	2
Muthoomohun Ghose, Mooscheekolah, for English Spinach, best sample.....	0	5
Perchund Doss, Do. Do. 2d best sample.....	0	3
Perchund Doss, Do. Do. for Endive, best sample.....	0	5
Perchund, Mooscheekolah, for English Broad Beans, best sample.....	1	8
Baron Doss, Mooscheekolah, for Asparagus, best sample.....	0	8
Charon Ghose, Do. Do. 2d best sample.....	0	5
Rajoo Chitpore, for Red Beet, best sample ..	0	5
Amundoo, Etal Chittah, Ditto, 2d best sample.....	0	3
Muttiah, Ditto, Ditto, 3d best sample.....	0	2
Kenton, Mooscheekolah, for Ginger, best sample.....	0	8
Perchund Doss, Bala, Ditto, 2d best sample.....	0	5
Bidram Ghose, Mooscheekolah, for French Beans, best sample.....	0	5
Jayramin Ghose, Ditto Ditto, 2d best sample.....	0	3
Hurymohun Doss, Bala, Red Cabbage, best sample.....	0	5
Oajoon Kidderpore, Ditto 2d best sample.....	0	2
—, for Jerusalem Artichoke, best sample.....	0	5
—, Ditto 2d best sample.....	0	3
—, Ditto, 3d best sample.....	0	2
—, for Potatoes, best sample.....	0	5
—, for Leeks, best sample.....	0	5
—, for Cauliflower, best sample.....	0	3
—, for Onions, best sample.....	0	3
—, for Vegetable Marrow, best sample.....	0	5
Distributed in smaller Prizes.....	0	17

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S DINNER.

About eighty of the members of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, met, last Friday evening, to dine at the Town Hall, and discuss, in a manner more congenial than the exhibition in the morning of that day, the merits of the vegetables, &c. produced under the patronage of the Society. Sir Edward Ryan, the President, Sir M. P. Grant, Mr. H. M. Parker, Mr. C. Poonsep, Captain Forbes, the Secretary of the Institution, and several other distinguished persons were present. The company sat down to dinner at half past 7, and every thing went off with a great deal of good humour and conviviality, although the company consisted of people of various classes and denominations. The dinner, with its appendages, was excellent, and in the best style of Spence, to whom no little credit is due for the good arrangement, care and regularity with which every thing connected with these burn khannas are conducted at the Town Hall. The vegetables, the best of their kind procurable in the country, no doubt contributed to the eclat with which the affair went off. We had some cauliflower, some peas and some of the deservedly noticed carrots for our share, and we must say they were as good or better than we remember having tasted for some time. The carrots were particularly nice, being very large yet as tender as butter, and well flavored. The public will, no doubt, unite with us in feeling thankful to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society for the improvement in the quality of these good things.

To come to the toasts. The first was, of course, by the worthy President, viz. The Queen, the band playing the national anthem, and the company standing with all the respect of loyal subjects.

The Patron of the Society, the Governor-General of India, was also given by the President, who, in proposing it, adverted to the deep interest his Lordship had always taken in the proceedings of the Society, and to the knowledge he possessed with regard to one branch of its labours, viz. Horticulture, with which subject his Lordship was quite familiar. Drank with three times three.—A tune.

The next was also from the chair, viz. The Prosperity of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, which the President accompanied by the following observations on the present state of the Society, in which he had no doubt all who were present took a lively interest. The principal object of concern in all Societies was the finances. In that regard the President was happy to inform the gentlemen present, that the Society was prosperous. It had received and expended liberally. It had received during the last year 20,000 rupees and expended 17,000, which had left a small balance, besides which the Society had a stock of 20,000. The source whence this income was derived, was chiefly subscriptions, which alone amounted during the past year to 10,000. He would speak in round numbers and avoid dry details. During the year the Society had also a large accession of members, and he had much pleasure in observing, that the Institution was now supported by all classes of the community.

The President then communicated the substance of the following comparative statement of the accession of members to the Society, accompanying the most remarkable instances with suitable comments which, on the whole, showed that within a few years the Society had rapidly increased in popularity among almost all classes.

	1940	1941	1942	Total
Grain and other crops	43	41	11	95
Stocks and bonds	25	46	79	150
Auto, radio, etc.	25	21	43	89
Household goods	17	17	18	69
Insurance	16	16	10	40
Utilities	15	9	7	30
Law, medicine, etc.	14	8	1	20
Education and other particular purposes	6	9	1	14
Gifts	6	6	2	14
Other	6	1	0	7
Total	188	183	124	479

The Methods of Captains Gifford and Quercourt and Mr. Lay were made over to the Secretary, for delivery to those gentlemen, the others were slipped at the table to the representatives of the people.

Mr. G. Farrow—Gentlemen, you have heard a very hard exposition from our worthy President, in which allusion was made to the object of colonial, and I was in a manner appealed for further explanation, regarding it. As the subject is however, stale, I will at present merely state, that the conclusion of the colonial insects now here, when I took charge of them, was such as to give little hope of propagating them, but I shall take an early opportunity, at the Society's Meetings to propose a plan for inducing the successful propagating of the insect on a large scale.

In regard to the Natives of the country, who would ultimately be the greatest gainers by the labours of the Society, the President regretted that no law had passed it, and that its objects had not met from Government a more cordial support. He, however, hoped that as education advanced among them, they would begin to perceive how much their interests could be promoted by the agency of this Society. At present it was but proper that the European portion of the community should lead the way.

The President also stated, that six volumes of the transactions of the Society, containing much valuable and interesting matter connected with the Agriculture and Horticulture of the country, were at the ready, and in a great state of forwardness in the Press.

To Signor Mura, the Society's gold medal, for the perfection to which, under many difficulties, he brought the standard mulberry tree in the Decan.

SECRET

To Ochs's credit, the report was a successful attempt to show that the drug institutions, and particularly on one which claims the precedence over us in age and reputation, we have the most rational and grateful for what he has done for us, and when I reflect upon the length of his connexion with us, and compare the strength of our society at the period of his first connection with it with the high state of prosperity it now exhibits, and seeing that all his prosperity has grown up under his zealous patronage and direction, I cannot but regard him as the father of the society. Gentleman, I give you our most worthy President, Dr. Howard Ryce. Break with enthusiastic cheers. Dr. Ryce, Parker's day in the morning.

Dr. Kossuth -- Mr. President will be pleased to allow me to occupy your attention for five minutes and I propose to you the subject of "The Freedmen."

the Society who have been, by the assistance of the
... to provide ever and anon for the
... of our respectable President, among his
... we recognize our old and talented friend, Dr Wallis, a gentleman who has enjoyed for years the most perfect intimacy with the vegetable world, and which, by all well-founded intimacies, has long and repeatedly won such a perfect regard and affection, that I suppose believe, that if our talented friend were as independent as his best friends would wish, he would still be found labouring in the cause of science, and seek as an apple toward for his sustenance, the distinction of witnessing the success of those who taught them—a success which must necessarily result when seed and sowing are so happily united. Gentlemen, we owe to Dr. Wallis an immense amount of gratitude—gratitude for the lustre he has thrown over this Society. We share with him in his fame and celebrity—a fame which has not only reached London, where I have no doubt he will be quoted as an authority for ages to come; but even our somewhat fastidious friends, the jennies of Paris, who have recognized his merit and have felt proud to claim him as an associate. Gentlemen, we owe a debt of gratitude to our friend, Mr. C. K. Robinson, one of the staunchest friends of the Society, when its members were by no means so numerous and influential as they are at present. In Mr.
Robinson, Gentlemen, we behold one who, out of the little leisure left to him by his official duties, still finds time to assist in every pursuit that has the comfort or the benefit of his neighbours for its end, and whether we obey him meeting the fit end of a departed warrior and statesman, to design an Obituary Monument, or whether we behold him in this Hall, presiding over our meetings, we recognize the same active spirit which imparts animation to those around him, and greatly contributes to the success of the object to be obtained. I regret that I am not equally acquainted with the Native Gentlemen whom we have elected to be our Vice President. But it is enough gentlemen, that we know them, all to be of high rank, talent, and acquirements, which they nobly devote to the cause of Science. Gentlemen, I will detain you no longer, but give you my toast, the Vice Presidents of this Society.—A Toast.

Dr. Wallis was unable to express his feelings, which he found almost overpowered him, on hearing the complimentary manner in which his name had been mentioned by his friend, Dr. Robinson. So far as the labours of the other gentlemen, whose names were mentioned by the last speaker, were concerned, Dr. W. was sure too much had not been said in praise of them, but so far as he had been the subject of panegyric, he felt his humble exertions much overrated. The little he had done for the Society he had considered it his duty to perform as being in charge of the Company's Botanic Garden. He, however, begged leave to return his grate thanks for the honor done to him on this occasion.

Dr. WALLIS.—How exalted was the object, how alluring the recollection, how great his own anxiety, to do justice in the manner that had been recommended to his charge—the dispersion of the venerable founder of this Society, and of the late Secretary! He would not bring the name of Carey in his recollection, without being troubled with feelings of grateful affection and the deepest sorrow. When he first met him on the shores of India, it was the late lamented Dr. Carey who took him by the hand, and he had been his patron and protector throughout his upstart in this country. When he was not very full and old had believed to behold the old gentleman of Dr. Carey. Dr. Wallis then returned to the subject with which Dr. Carey had been connected, the good of his fellow countrymen, he wanted, whether the progress in the cause of science, for the public benefit, and the education of the poor, for the benefit of the Society, and the progress of the

... of the ...
... of the ...
... of the ...

The President then gave the ...
... of Madras, Bombay, ...
... of India ...

Mr. P. Gault, rose, in the midst of much ... to propose "the Merchants and the Commercial ... of India." The least he was about to propose ... with great good will ...
... At the place was that more appropriate
... of an Agricultural Society. The prosperity of agriculture and commerce had a mutual dependence on another. Agriculture could not flourish if there were no merchants to export its produce to foreign lands, and bring in return the produce of those countries; nor could merchants establish themselves in a country that produced nothing. The commercial and agricultural interests were inseparably united, and he was glad to find so many members of the commercial community supporting this society. He congratulated the Society on the success of its mercantile members during the session which the President had made mention. The prosperity of Indian Agriculture, not only in grain, but all other articles, which constitute the wealth of this country, depends, in a great measure, on the prosperity of commerce on the export of its produce to foreign markets, particularly those of Europe, where the prosperity of commerce had equal dependence on the prosperity of Agriculture, in which he was rejoiced to find the merchants of India now took so lively an interest. He concluded by repeating the toast, which which was drunk with much enthusiasm.—Luce, Pol-lucra San Vigen siggors.

Mr. Parnass rose and returned thanks for himself and brother merchants. He had been for many years a member of the Society, during which period, he was quite certain, the Merchants of Calcutta, had done all in their power, to aid the highly respected and truly indefatigable President, in his strenuous efforts to promote the interests of the Society and to forward the objects for which it had been established. But they would resolutely continue to do so, he had not the least doubt, and he felt quite certain that the Society would at no distant day obtain the accomplishment of the objects for which it had been established.

Mr. H. M. Parnass.—Singularly enough, it has fallen to my lot, on two occasions of our Agricultural Disputes, to propose to my fellow citizens a toast connected with the United States—"The Agricultural Interests of the United States." I could have had none which would afford me more pride and pleasure to give it, next to our own. I think the Agriculture of the United States ought to be more interesting to every right feeling Englishman. I shall ever love to consider the United States and Great Britain as connected by the, analogous to those which are nearest and dearest amongst mankind; and if like relatives, we now and then hit each other a little hard—for, as Charles Surface says, if a man cannot take a liberty with his own relations, what the deuce can he take a liberty with?—with an hope and trust, that although neither English nor Americans have strange homages to Father Time, yet the Bull may have some half-brothers, and the Mother of Brother Jonathan may have some others living in the ... outside barbarians.
... but that both will heartily
... who dares to throw himself
... But I will not
... the worst disadvantage of
... and still remain
... I believe
... the much regret for the still for our common anxiety, now, to fall out without real cause, and may the curse of Crimwell be upon any man, or any set of men, whether on our side of the water or the other, who, having the power, does not take timely measures to prevent such real cause from ever arising. United as we are now, shoulder to shoulder, side by side, become as it were a pair of Siamese twins, as I may say, through the most magnificent triumph of steam navigation, coming nearer and nearer to each other every day, it would be a sin and a shame were we to allow any misunderstanding to sunder us even for an instant. It would be worse, it would be a bitter reflection on the common sense of two nations, who ought, from a thousand circumstances, to possess more of that inestimable gift than any people in the world. No; let us think of no rivalry, no triumph, but that in which America and England shall equally rejoice, by which both shall equally benefit. Such rivalry will, indeed, with the aid of modern science to support it, open a glorious prospect for the increased happiness and prosperity, not only of England and America, but of all mankind. We, gentlemen, can perhaps, better appreciate its effects than any other people. We have drunk our wine cooled with ice from the Ponds of Boston at this board. We have seen it glowing with the produce of the American vineyard and orchard, and while we of all mankind are more bound to rely upon, and to admire, the gallant spirit of enterprise which so nobly distinguishes our transatlantic brethren, it will appear to none here assembled a strange thing to follow out the speculation, which I recently met with in an eminent English Periodical, that, in a few years, by the aid of great Westerns and British Queens, the Agricultural and Horticultural riches of the almost virgin soil of the western world, will reach the markets of England as ample, as regularly, and as expeditiously, as the produce of Devonshire, or Wootton Bassett did twenty years ago.

This touches on the subject of my toast, gentlemen, and I call upon you to aid me in doing honor to the great and enlightened land of Washington, of Franklin, of Fulton, and of another who, though far removed below the level of those great names, gratitude may justify our adding to them in this place—the land of Tudor.

Gentlemen, I give you "The Agricultural interests of the United States." Drank with great applause.—Tune, Yankee Doodle.

Dr. HENRY AGLE thanked the gentlemen on behalf of the Agriculturists of America, for the sentiment which they had just expressed, and he did so under the pleasing emotions excited by the kind manner in which Mr. Parker's eloquent allusions to the United States had been received. He was, he believed, the only one in the company from the Western Hemisphere, and the love for his country appeared to be stronger for being, in this instance, confined to but one bosom. Agriculture, had been and must ever continue to be the staple pursuit of the Americans; nature had so ordained it, and had given them fertile valleys and extensive plains, every where irrigated by noble rivers. Not very many years ago, the North American exports consisted of furs and lumber, the products of a forest; now the exported results of Agricultural industry exceed in value one hundred millions of dollars annually. But Mr. H. did not intend to consume time with statistical details, his object was to thank the company, which he now, in the name of his countrymen, most cordially did, for this gratifying recollection. "Accept then," said he, "their best wishes for the successful progress of your career of usefulness, and for the long continued prosperity of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India."

Mr. STOCQUER. I follow my friend Mr. Parker as naturally as farce and burlesque follow comedy, tragedy, and at a great distance.

In mercy to my oratorical deficiencies, my colleagues have kindly assigned me a toast which, fortunately, does not require the prelude of a speech. It is framed on the "comprehensive-scheme" principle, and embraces a large proportion of the virtue of the Society. It is "The Civil Military and Medical Members of the Society, whose exertions have been pre-eminent in the cause of Agricultural improvement."

Now, gentlemen, if I had been permitted to propose an object, or an institution, or an individual of some eminence, I should probably have had no difficulty in collecting a sufficiency of the flowers of rhetoric, to constitute a pleasant banquet, and in presenting it to your consideration. But when I am called on to expatiate upon the merits of many individuals, some of whom are now present, I feel myself completely at a loss. You would not have me raise the blushes of a Spry, alarm the delicacy of a Forbes, offend the modesty of a Wallich, or outrage the feelings of a McClintock, all of whom, I now perceive at the table and all of whom have rendered service to the cause of Agriculture? It would perhaps be easy to dwell upon the claims of many absent members to your fond recollection, and to shew how much has been achieved by their exertions. But were I to name to you, Major Sleeman, Colonel Colvin, Captain Jenkins and others, I should still be guilty (unintentionally, however,) of some invidious omission which I would fain avoid; for though, gentlemen, our estimable President has told us that six volumes of our TRANSACTIONS have been published, I am ashamed to say, I have not read three pages of them, and therefore know not the names of one-half the members who have distinguished themselves in the good cause. Under these circumstances, gentlemen, I will give you the toast as I find it, conscious that you will join me in drinking it with three times three.—Tune, Cherry-Ripe.

Mr. J. HUTCHINSON, read out from a paper he had in his hand, the following speech.

Gentlemen, I have been requested to perform a duty, for I will not give it the ungracious name of task, which if unsolicited, I should certainly not have been forward enough to have undertaken. I have complied with the request with reluctance, but would have done so with much pleasure, had I felt myself qualified to do justice to the subject. Fortunately, little powers of persuasion are necessary to enlist your sympathies in favour of Colonial agriculture.

The day has long gone by, when the success or prosperity of a nation was considered intimately connected with the distress or depression of its neighbour. To an enlightened body like yourselves, I need not observe that the prosperity of a people and, far more, the starting of new Colonies into existence, is a subject of congratulation to the whole common-wealth of nations.

On the importance of her Colonies to Great Britain, I need scarcely enlarge when it is recollected, that of the 130 millions who own her sway, upwards of 100 millions inhabit her foreign possessions, their importance will be sufficiently apparent. These possessions relieve her of her manufactures at remunerating prices, while in return, they pour into her lap the rough produce best suited for affording employment to her vast manufacturing population. This Commerce cannot be carried on, but by means of numerous vessels, and thus her colonies, though they may not directly defray the expense of her naval establishments, form a vast school, from which her fleets, the real guardians and sources of British power, are constantly supplied with brave and experienced regions. Her Colonies, at the same time, relieve the mother country of her surplus population, and thus prove the source of comfort and happiness to thousands, who, according to the Malthusian doctrine, had, probably, not else been called into existence. Such are a few of the advantages which Great Britain derives from her Colonies, and I am sure, that the members of this Society will not shrink "success to Colonial agriculture" with the less pleasure now that it is carried on in every part of her dominions by means of free labour, and that the lash of the overseer no longer hangs over the workman, while he cuts down the crop which is to support his master in splendour and elegance.

A first settlement in a new country, is, no doubt, attended with many privations; but there is no obstacle which British enterprise cannot surmount; at first the wants of the Colony itself are to be provided for, and when that has been accomplished, as the population is generally thin and scattered, they look to their flocks for wealth; commerce springs up; a little capital is acquired by individuals; banks are established; and the wealth of a few is placed at the disposal or command of all. As money becomes more plentiful, the value of property increases, it is long, however, before it attains its full value, and there are seldom wanting those, who are ready to dispose of their possessions, perhaps for the purpose of entering once more on the arduous labours of a first location. Officers who have been in this service and retire with the view of colonizing, are generally but little suited either from health or previous habits for encountering such hardships; their capital, however, is of great value both to them and to the colony; and this is the stage, in the progress of colonial improvement, in which it can be most advantageously invested.

To this Society it must be a source of the greatest satisfaction, in addition to the invaluable assistance which it has rendered to this country, to have the prospect of being of the most essential service to the British Colonies in its vicinity. In some of these, Cotton, Coffee, Indigo, and the Poppy, will, no doubt, eventually be naturalized; in the early stages of colonization, however, it is to be recollected, that from the scanty population and the high price of labour, it is impossible to cultivate such articles with advantage, however well calculated the climate or soil may be for their production.

India will, in due time, reap its advantages from these colonies. The success which has attended sheep farming at New South Wales and the Cape of Good Hope, point out the expediency of giving the experiment the fairest trial in this country. Great care and nicety are necessary in this branch of agriculture in selecting suitable stock, and you must be prepared in this respect to meet with many disappointments at first, from the unfavourable nature of the indigenous stock, and the slothful and careless habits of the natives. In the colonies I have mentioned, this branch of agriculture had been exceedingly profitable, and promises to be the means of realizing much larger fortunes, than have hitherto been made in them; nor is this to be wondered at, for while the wool alone yields a fair per centage on the capital invested, the stock nearly doubles itself in number and value, with each succeeding season.

The vast colonies of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, it cannot be doubted, are the embryo's of mighty empires, and at one time had the option been presented to me, I confess to you, I should have preferred them to the Cape of Good Hope. Circumstances, however, led me to the latter, and I became the proprietor of an extensive estate of upwards of 7,300 acres of land in one of its most favored districts. Nothing has since led me to repent of the purchase, or of the choice, which circumstances led me to make of that Colony; on the contrary I have reason to believe that the value of property has since risen, and that several others have followed my example, some of them high in the service of the Indian. Though the Cape of Good Hope may not be so rising a Colony as Australia, yet it has many advantages peculiar to itself; though it may not become so great a country eventually, it is assuredly the last place, on which England will relax her grasp so long as she retains a single possession, or interest, in the East. From its position the Cape may be said to be the toll-house of the world. The more the Commerce of the East may be extended the greater must be the advantage to the Cape, and the demand for its produce; while its comparatively short distance from the mother country, and the speedy prospect of Singapore being established between England and India, promise to make an occasional visit, from it to our native shores, little more than a pleasant excursion. At the Cape, Society is good, the climate is delicious and healthful, and land excessively cheap; at a distance of 20 miles from the Capital, the price may be stated at 5 shillings per acre, at the highest; while, in by far the greater number of instances, it can be procured at half that price, or even at a still lower rate. On the whole, I consider it well worth the serious consideration of officers retiring from this country with a small capital, whether they might not be more useful members of society, nay, whether they might not be happier men, by settling at the Cape, and conducting large Agricultural Establishments, than by pacing the well-known, and well-worn pavement of some provincial town, weary and discontented, from being either confined in their circumstances or, what is more probable, from being destitute of employment.

I have to apologize to you, gentlemen, for detaining you so long, and shall now conclude, by proposing, which I do with all my heart, prosperity and success to Colonial Agriculture.—Tune My ain kind dearie!

Dr. Wallich, Junior, here sang in a good voice, "the stormy winds do blow."

Mr. J. ALLAN, with a few prefatory remarks, proposed the Committee of Agriculture and commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society, and other Agricultural Associations of the United Kingdom—Tune, Blue bonnets o'er the border.

Mr. C. PRINSEP.—In the absence of Mr. Dickens, whose absence he was very sure must have been involuntary, would propose the prosperity of that branch of Agriculture which was at the same time the earliest of those introduced by Europeans into their country, and the most important and valuable, for it had furnished to all of them the principal means of remittance to Europe. Though not himself, like his friend Mr. Dickens, either a planter of Indigo or largely concerned in its export, yet, as the son of one of the first Indigo Planters in India, he could not but feel an hereditary interest in its welfare. To this Society no class had given so many members or such able assistance. It was the successful cultivation of their product that had led, to their further enterprises which had raised the Agriculture of India from that primitive state in which we found it. He was reminded that the toast announced embraced the other branches also of tropical cultivation, which he had not before observed; he had great pleasure to propose their prosperity likewise; he looked, however, upon that of Indigo to be the first in date and importance, and the one that had given the impulse to all the rest; he therefore proposed—The Indigo Planters and other tropical Agriculturists.—A Tune.

Dr. Sney.—Gentlemen, I must crave your attention for a few moments to the subject of a toast which I am about to propose, and in doing so, must solicit your forbearance. I am sure you will go with me in the request, when you learn the importance and extent of its extent. The Press, gentlemen, is a power that has entitled the energies of the best talents of the land, and still about personal power. It is not to be an after-dinner speech that is addressed to ordinary justice to the merits of the question can be afforded—a detail of the various of the interests at stake embraced in it would cost too much time, at this late hour, than you could be possibly expected to give. Let me observe, however, that to the engine of public opinion do we owe the present perfection of all our great institutions. The Press—a free Press! What gentleman, do we not owe, do it? What is it that stimulates the young aspirant to that his midnight lamp? The Press—the hope that he may earn his appellation and thereby merit the notoriety he seeks. What is it that urges the member of senate nightly to toil in the House or the Council Chamber, that the hope and fear of the Press—leaves left if he neglects his duty, he may be denounced to his constituents—hope that by vigilance, he may be applauded before the world. The Press, when free, gentlemen, exposes corruption, stays jobbing, and assists the deserving. It is the Palladium of our liberty, the upholder of our rights, and, thank God, the bulwark of Englishmen! But gentlemen, I must not dwell more on this part of my subject, more especially as the wording of my toast calls me to consider the interests of this country and of this Society especially in regard to it. The Press of India, gentlemen, is, if I may be allowed the expressions, a different engine to what it is in the mother country, that is to say, the class of Europeans who resort to India are all, to a certain extent, men of education, thereby possessed of a knowledge of human nature, which, consequently, prevents them from being taken by inflammatory appeals to their feelings at the expense of their judgment. Such men would not condescend to vulgar declamation, and any journal in India that made such rule the basis of its dependence for popular favour, would not live a twelve month. As for working on the native mind, three centuries hence will not produce a Wat Tyler or a Jack Cade. Hence, gentlemen, although the Press of India is now in the fourth year of its freedom, it has found it to be its interest to guide its course with moderation, and give its energies with temper. All that the mind dreaded has never come to pass. In advancing the interests of the Society, it is advancing the interests of the country, for the objects of this institution are those which concern the good of India. Gentlemen, it was only lately that the sugar duties have been equalized after a hard and severe struggle; we have yet some other grievances to reduce. Gentlemen, East India now yet pays nine shillings a gallon, and tobacco three pence a pound more than do the same articles the produce of the British possessions in America. Gentlemen, why should this be? Why should India ever be regarded as an alien from the common rights of British claims? It is the abolition of these odious discriminating duties—it is to aid in bringing forward the natural production of the country by directing the attention of capitalists to the subject that we have to ask the Press to make common cause with us; and with the two powers combined, we may hope the day is not far distant, when we may see the development of the agricultural resources of this great Empire, enjoy that attention which its importance deserves.

Let us drink then, if you please." The Gentlemen of the Press, for the liberal manner in which they have given assistance in advancing the interests of the Society." (Cheers.) Three times three. Tune, Tyrolean song of Liberty.

Mr. S. Smith returned thanks for the Gentlemen of the Press, and assured the Society, that he would always do what lay in his power, by means of the Press, to promote the interests of the Society, and he hoped other Members of the Indian Press would do the same.

Mr. Stocquelen said, he had just arrived from the Mosais, and considering himself as one of the Mosais Press, he would return thanks for them, which he believed his morning contemporary had unintentionally omitted.

Mr. SMITH explained, that he had returned thanks for all the members of the Indian Press—of Calcutta as well as the Mofussil.

Dr. Egerton, in proposing the cause of Steam Communication, dwelt upon the wonders that were now performed by its Agency, which appeared something like the incredible wonders recorded in the Arabian tales. The wonderful results of this mighty power had excited the admiration of the world at large, and it was impossible to say where the progress of improvement connected with Steam would end. He adverted to the success of the Great Western, and gave as his last, facility of communication all over the world; or in other words the great Western.

Sir J. P. GRANT, with a few suitable remarks, proposed the health of Dr. Spry, the new Secretary to the Society. Drank with all the honors.

Dr. Sear in returning thanks, trusted, that his labours in the cause of the Society, during the short period of his official connection with it, had given satisfaction, and he further hoped, that by his future zeal and devotion to the duties devolving on him, he would merit the approbation of the Society.

Mr. PATRICK, in proposing the toast he was about to give, did not consider any eulogy or preface requisite to make it acceptable. The gentleman whose health he wished to propose, was well known to every member of the Society at Calcutta, and deservedly esteemed by all. He gave the health of Sir John Peter Grant. Drank with much cheering.

Sir J. P. GHAUNT, an a member of this Society, felt himself unworthy of a shout; although his zeal was great in the cause, his efforts had been very inferior. He would, however, receive the honor done him with feelings of sincere pleasure and thankfulness.

The President proposed the health of Mr. David Idris, and adverted to the great sacrifices he had made in promoting the cause of education; he had spent his own substance in supporting the education of the natives of this country, and was deserving of the highest praise. Drank with a good deal of cheering.

Mr. Hanz was extremely obliged for the handsome compliment paid him; but he did not think he had done all that the Honorable President, had attributed to him, nor did he consider himself worthy of such high praise.

After this, Mr. Hare having been repeatedly called upon to sing a song, gave Scotland's Barley Brann. The President now (1 part 11) retired in the midst of cheering from all sides.

Mr. Patrick proposed the health of Dr. Wallich, who returned thanks; after which there were several songs, &c. by the few who figured in order, to do further justice to Mr. Spence's good things, and enjoy the pleasures of conversation in a small circle, in the midst of which enjoyment we left them at about $\frac{1}{2}$ past 10 o'clock. — Hurkaru, February 4.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting was held in the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 13th February, 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, President, in the chair.

Present.

Dr. Wallich; Messrs. W. K. Ewart, W. Cracroft, W. F. Gibbon, D. Hare and M. Piddington; Col. McLeod; Messrs. J. Pattle and A. Grant; Dr. O'Shaughnessy; Messrs. H. M. Parker, F. Corby, F. P. Strong, M. A. Hignell, Trebeck, John Cowie and F. L. Beaufort; Major Carter, and Dr. Spry.

The gentlemen proposed at the extraordinary meeting were elected members, viz., Messrs T. P. Barrow, C. Scott, Jas. Wood, R. Woodrudge, and Dr. R. H. Bain.

The attention of the meeting was first called to the consideration of the motion made last month by Mr. H. M. Parker, namely, "that taking into consideration the duties expected to be performed by the Secretary of the Society, the salary be fixed at three hundred rupees a month." The members who addressed the meeting, were the President, Mr. Parker, Mr. Cracroft, and Dr. Strong. Their sentiments were all confirmatory of the propriety of the proposition, which was carried unanimously.

During the discussion of the above measure, the President took occasion to remind the Society, that the Secretary had expressed his willingness to undertake to do the duty of the Collector's office, and read the report of the Committee of Finance, in which his offer had been embodied; so that it was for the Society to determine whether it would be desirable that the two offices should be separated or not—if the latter, then, he would propose that Mr. Blechenden, who had shown himself to be a very useful Assistant Secretary, should be made collector of the society, with an increase to his salary of 50 rupees a month. Further, that the gentlemen who formed the Special Finance Committee, be requested to continue their services as a standing Committee of the Society, and that they should take cognizance of all matters bearing on the "ways and means" of the Society.

The statement of "the ways and means" which the Special Committee had prepared, showed a disposable balance of about five thousand rupees without encroaching on the "fixed assets" which left no doubt of the capability of the Society to afford this extra expense, if the proposition were carried.

The sense of the Meeting being confirmatory of this step, notice of a motion was given, which will be found below.

The second point which engaged the attention of the meeting, was the proposition of Dr. O'Shaughnessy, also submitted at the former assembly of the Society, "that, in addition to the amount already voted, a sum, equal to twelve months' salary be presented by the Society to the widow and Orphan daughter of our lamented Secretary, the late Mr. Bell."

Dr. O'Shaughnessy addressed the Meeting in a few impressive words, in support of his proposition, and reminded the Society, that for a period of three or four years, while the Society were low in circumstances, the late Mr. Bell gave his unremitting energies gratuitously to the advancement of the interests of the Institution; and that now that the Finances were so flourishing, they could well afford to grant to the widow and fatherless child, this substantial proof of respect entertained by the Society, of the worth and services of their deceased Secretary.

Dr. Wallich likewise asked for the grateful sympathy of the gentlemen, by giving their support to the vote. The motion was then put from the Chair, and carried unanimously.

The President then referred to a motion of amendment, that motion which had been submitted by Mr. W. P. Princep, to be brought forward at the next meeting for discussion, as that gentleman was unable to be present now. It referred, to the reward which the members of the Court of Directors had published to encourage the propagation of the cochineal insect in their possessions in the East Indies.

NOTICE OF MOTION—No 1.

Proposed by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, seconded by the President.

That as it appears from documents laid before the Society, that since the year 1807 a resolution of the Court of Directors has continued unrepealed, offering a premium of £3,000 for the introduction of the live Cochineal insect of the fine species into their Indian territories in a state fit for propagation; application be made to this Government to grant that sum (or 20,000 rupees) to the Society, on the ground of their having, by their arrangements, and at their own expense, effected the object for which that premium was offered by the Company; but, under an engagement that the whole sum shall be devoted to the propagation of the cochineal in different parts of India.

No 2.

Proposed by the President and seconded by Mr. Piddington, "That the gentlemen who constituted the Special Committee of Finance, be considered a standing Committee for the regulation of all matters connected with the pecuniary transactions of the Society, and that the assistant secretary be the collector of the society under them, on a salary of fifty rupees a month, in addition to his present income of one hundred and fifty rupees.

The Secretary brought forward a list of gentlemen to be proposed, as members of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India. Before the names were read the President requested to allude to a very interesting letter which he held in his hand from his Excellency the Right Honorable Stewart Mackenzie, Governor of Ceylon, of which the following is the substance. The letter was addressed to our late secretary.

Queen's House, Colombo, Jan 17, 1839.

"With regard to your transactions, I certainly place a very high value upon their publication, and am confident, that by increasing the intercourse throughout the interior of India, and by the continuation and extension of the labours of your own, and similar societies, more real good and advancement of the essential comforts, in clothing, and other luxuries, amongst the population of India in general, will be thereby ultimately effected, than has been during our past connexion, with the people of that country. The same doctrine is most applicable also to this island, and if I can open up its resource, by roads, canals, &c., in all directions, and effect the introduction of such an institution as you have recommended, I am well aware how essentially beneficial it would be to this island. It is a vast encouragement to any society commencing its operations, to have the advantage of communicating freely with one, like the Agricultural Society of India, whose transactions and reports you have laid me under so much obligation by presenting to me. The recent establishment here, within the fort, of a small Horticultural Society will, I hope, gradually grow up, into one of the character, which you have pointed out.

I shall feel highly gratified if Sir E. Ryan, does me the honor, as you suggest, of proposing me a member of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, though should that be irregular, it will by no means diminish the real interest I take in that most valuable Institution."

Adverting to the interest that expressed by His excellency in promoting the advancement of the great objects of the Society, the President asked whether the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India would not be testifying their sense of approbation of His excellency's sentiments, as expressed in his letter, more fully, by enrolling his name among the Honorary Members of the Society, instead of putting him in nomination as an ordinary member. The meeting approved of the suggestion thrown out by the President, and it was therefore proposed by the President and seconded by Dr. Strong, that His Excellency the Right Honorable Stewart Mackenzie, be put in nomination as an Honorary Member of this Society.

For election as Ordinary Members.

The Honorable Sir Henry Stoen, John Trotter, Esq., C. S., and G. W. Johnson, Esq., Barrister, proposed by the President, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Woolrich Whitmore Ryan, Esq., proposed by Dr. Wallich and seconded by Dr. Spry.

Francis Curwen Smith, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Spry, and seconded by T. P. B. Biscoe, Esq.

Wm. Sinclair, Esq., (Chandry, near Maldah,) proposed by Wm. Storm, Esq., and seconded by Mr. P. Macarthur.

J. W. Cragg, Esq., proposed by Wm. Storm, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Spry.

Captain Fenning, Artillery, and Lieutenant Burnett, Artillery, proposed by Dr. Spry and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Arnold H. Matthews, Esq., (Arumchund, near Allahabad,) proposed by Mr. John Donald and seconded by Dr. Spry.

Allen Campbell Dunlop, Esq., proposed by Mr. Hare and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

The Annual Report for the past year, on the condition of the Society, was submitted by the secretary, and will be printed in the monthly proceedings of the society.

The report of the Cotton Committee, recommending the purchase of the better sorts of indigenous cotton seed for transmission to Captain Jenkins, the Governor-General's agent in Assam, was next read.

The award of the Cattle Committee at the exhibition on the 1st instant, was laid on the table.

It was proposed by Mr. Cragcroft, seconded by Mr. Piddington, and resolved.

"That the Cattle Committee be requested to lay before the next meeting for discussion, what prizes they may recommend to be offered for the importation of cattle and sheep, specifying the amount of each, and the description of the animals."

A list of the prizes awarded to native gardeners at the annual Horticultural Exhibition on the 1st instant was also laid on the table.

After this the Secretary sent round the table, the various presents which had been forwarded for the Library and Museum of the Society.

LIBRARY.

1st. Six copies of the report of the committee, appointed at a meeting of the Agricultural Society on the 3d day of August 1836, to take into consideration the present state and condition of the Colony of Western Australia; embodying a statistical report drawn up to the end of June 1837, with a supplement to the close of the year by His Excellency Sir James Stirling, Governor. Transmitted by A. Weyler, Esq., Honorary Secretary, on the part of the Western Australian Agricultural Association.

Printed at Perth, Western Australia.

2d. A pamphlet by Mr. H. Piddington, "On the Scientific Principles of Agriculture, considered as a branch of public education in India; presented by the author.

3d. 2 copies of the proceedings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Bombay, presented by the Society.

(Note.—From a paragraph in the preface to this report, it would seem, that the support which the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India derived from the Supreme Government, was over estimated by the Bombay Society. What the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India do at present get, is the sum of 2,500 rupees annually.)

4th. A copy of 'Transactions of the Society of Arts,' Part 2nd, Vol. 51, presented by the Society.

5th. 'New England Farmer,' Vols. 15 and 16 (6 and 7 of their series,) presented by Dr. Wallich.

The thanks of the meeting were voted to the different donors for their various contributions.

MUSEUM.

1st. Varieties of Barley and Rye, grown on the Estates of several settlers at Swath River, also specimens of Wool from 2 Saxon Rams, which were sold at public auction for 8 and 10 guineas, Presented by the Western Australian Agricultural Society.

2d. A sample of cloth, made from cotton, the produce of seed sent by the Society, to Suddiya, Upper Assam. Presented by Dr. Wallich, on behalf of Capt. Jenkins.

3d. A sample of cotton produced at Hidgees from Seychelles seed, furnished by the Society. Presented by Dr. Alexander Smith.

(Note.—The two last named articles were highly approved of by the members who were present. The staple of the latter was considered particularly good.)

4th. Sugar canes, grown from Orakite stock, in the garden of the Nizamut at Moorshedabad. Presented by Captain Pemberton, Agent to the Governor-General, on behalf of his predecessor, Colonel Caulfield.

5th. Specimens of Gram, (Ouss Dhan.) Presented by the Branch Society of Assam.

Mr. Piddington submitted for inspection, an instrument called Pyknometer, "for testing the exact point to which sugar of all kinds, whether from cane or poor, should be boiled." As a proof of the accuracy of this instrument, Mr. Piddington states;—"that of about twelve thousand maunds of poor, (mostly of low quality, (and these are the most liable to failure) only two hundred and ninety had to be reboiled."

AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS.

The first communication submitted to the meeting, was a letter from a Government, requesting that the Society would undertake the management of the scheme recommended in the special Report recently made by the Society to the Government, as to the best mode of obtaining the price of produce throughout the Empire.

To H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D., Secretary to the Agricultural Society.

SIR.—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 19th instant; submitting the Report of a Special Committee appointed by the Society on the best means of procuring local information, in respect to the prices, &c. of agricultural products of India.

I In reply, I am directed to state, that his Honor the President in Council, has ordered the Librarian to give you the aid of that establishment in preparing forms and statements for circulation to the medical officers, and will be happy to learn, that the Agricultural and Horticultural Society can procure from the medical or any other officers, the information required by the Statistical Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland. His Honor in Council cannot think that the objects of the Society would be effected with sufficient care by imposing on the public officers, the necessity of furnishing the statements required in addition to the business already entailed upon them.

I am, &c.

(Signed) H. T. PARMER, Sec. to the Govt of India, Council Chamber, Jan. 23, 1839.

The meeting was not indisposed to undertake the extra labour which the Government had thus delegated to them, and as far as their services went, it should be cheerfully given. The members, however, considered, that the Government in common fairness ought to hold the Society free from any expense, and it was determined, that the Secretary should, before commencing operations, address a letter on the subject to the Chief Secretary, requesting that, besides the use of the Government Lithographic Press, which had been placed at the disposal of the Society by His Honor in Council, the transmission of letters free of postage to and from the interior, should also be conceded, as well as any other privilege, the withholding of which might cause an expense to the Society.

James Patillo, Esq., therefore proposed Dr. Wallich seconded, and it was resolved, that the Special Committee remain as now constituted, and give the Secretary the benefit of their services. Mr. Ewart suggested, that the name of Dr. D. Stewart be added to the Committee, which was done.

2. ELKAN-CANE FROM THE ISLAND OF STAMBE.

His Excellency Rear Admiral Sir Frederick Maitland, announced to the Society, through his Secretary, that Captain Nias, who will on his arrival in India, proceed to New South Wales in H. M. ship Herald to examine the duties of Senior Naval Officer on the Coast of Australia, be furnished with a copy of the (late) Secretary's letter, and instructions of the Society for packing the canes, and with his Excellency's orders to further the objects of the Society as therein expressed, as far as the service upon which he is to be employed will admit.

3. CAOUTCHOUC AND OTHER PRODUCTS.

Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of Royal Asiatic Society

Professor Royle, Secretary to the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, in a letter to the address of the Secretary, calls the attention of the Agricultural Society of India to concerns of great importance connected with the resources of the country. The letter and the discussion which ensued, excited great interest.

Royal Asiatic Society, Grafton Street,

Bond Street, Oct. 27, 1838.

"You wish to know what are the more immediate objects of our Committee. Its title is a bad one as we cannot here do any thing for the Agriculture of India, except co-operating with and assisting you.

"In Mr. Holt MacKenzie's and my proposal for the formation of this Committee, you will see the general objects touched upon which we contemplated in its formation. On Mr. MacKenzie becoming the Chairman, he addressed the members on the more precise pressing objects of the Committee,—that is the investigation, chemical examination, and practical application of the different products of India, likely to be useful to manufactures here. As I have not time myself, my assistant, Mr. E. Solty, makes a chemical analysis of the different substances we obtain, and then sends to what substances, already in use by manufacturers, they are analogous. They are then presented to manufacturers interested in the kind of product, and these are very willing to submit them to further practical experiments and ascertain if they will answer the purposes of their trade or manufacture. Several very interesting results have already attended this mode of proceeding. I need not allude to the Caoutchouc, which your Society so actively took up, and the zealous and talented officers in Assam, have so successfully carried out. You have been addressed on the subject by the Secretary of the Caoutchouc Company, as well as by Mr. Saviar, and I have written to Dr. Spry and previously to Dr. Wallich, who will, no doubt, make the contents known to your Society, as far as they can be of any use to the Society or Collectors. I may repeat that there is not the smallest doubt of this becoming an extensive article of Indian Commerce, if managed with moderate prudence. The London Caoutchouc company are willing to purchase all that is produced at prices of course proportioned to the quality."

"I have also written to Dr. Spry for some Burmese varnish (chrisse), which is also found in Munnypore

"Extract of a letter from Professor Royle to Dr. Spry. London, October 27, 1838.—"There is still some doubt about the Assam caoutchouc as at present prepared, whether it is fit for cutting into the finest thread or strong enough for that required for ropes for machinery, &c. But this can only be a doubt for a time, as I feel well satisfied that from the quality of the rubber, that it will be eventually, nay, very soon, prepared quite of an fine, strong, and elastic quality, as the best from Para, at even the price at present procurable, for it must be a remunerating one, and it may be nearly doubled or more by careful preparation. I hope you have enlightened the people on the subject of the necessity of preparing it in layers. The process is tedious and laborious, if you please, but it is the only manner we at present know, in which strength and elasticity are fully attained.

"The bottle or cylindrical form was required because there was no other way of cutting it into threads then known, but a knife has been invented and patented, and which the Caoutchouc Company have bought for £2 500, which enables a person to cut flat pieces into thread with the same facility that you saw done, when in London, with the circular pieces. So that now you may instruct your correspondents to prepare in flat pieces, if more convenient, as the less bulk it will occupy will be a further advantage in carriage and freight. But be particular in still enforcing the rubber being prepared in layers free from porosity or moisture, as in this alone depends the highest price being paid.

"You will be tired of all the above instructions; but I see the people in India complain, first of not knowing in what form a thing is best suited for the market here, when a form is sent and a mode recommended, but it is found fault with as being tedious and not compared with.

"With respect to the quantities required here, I believe there will be no limit to the demand."

"If they attempt to raise the price above what is fair, it will recoil upon themselves, as the South American will immediately be bought and reduce the price again; and the West India Proprietors are growing the caoutchouc tree on their estates. But there is room for all. Has any body thought of my suggestion of planting the Ficus lasiga all over the country. It yields good caoutchouc up as high as Saharunpore.

"The kind of Butea or Pulus of Dhat is good, is likely to be in great demand."

and called them (the Wallich) as well as for some wood oil (guggul), and both Persian and Arabian Petroleum, if procurable, for the sake of experiment in the Aetherium and Literary Quarts you may have some reports of the analysis by Mr. Solly of the astringent gum of the Black pulak or butea, frondosa which is so common all over India. Mr. Brewin, an extensive tanner, has called upon me and made trial of some which I recommended to Mr. Beckett, late of Allypore. He approves of it highly and would gladly get 20 tons if he could get any intelligence respecting the price, but I have no doubt it might be afforded at the same rate as catechu; (kuth) it would be an experiment well worth trying. If you were to make the fact known of its being in request, residents all over India might be induced to collect."

"The barberry wood and root is also in demand here. The supply from the South of Europe fails, and the dyers want it much. We have had some barberry root from Ceylon tried here. It is pronounced superior to any in the market; I have suggested that the extract which is made in the hills and sold in the bazars by the name of resant, might be tried as a dye. Mr. E. Solly's paper on this barberry, will be among the first read when our meetings commence next month, and I shall address you on the subject, as well as on that of the butea kino, which might, I think, also be prepared of a superior quality for medicinal use, as it is particularly eligible from the conjunction of astringent with gummy principles. As the barberry is no doubt common in the hills near Capt. Jenkins, will you suggest to him the subject as well as of the butea kino."

"I have written to Dr. Falconer and Capt. Cantley, for articles from Northern India."

"The seeds have been received from Dr. A. Campbell, and I will make some observations on them on some future occasion."

Dr. O'Shaughnessy begged permission to remark, that he had made three of the four articles mentioned by Dr. Royle the subject of extensive experiment. For specimens of the black varnish of Burmah and of Assam, Dr. O'S. was indebted to Dr. Wallich. He applied it to leather, wood and metal, and found that in richness of color, flexibility and impermeability to moisture, it was in every respect equal to the article employed by the patent leather manufacturers in Europe. The "gurgun" or "wood oil," Dr. O'S. observed, was properly speaking a balsam obtained from several species of Dipterocarpus common in many parts of India. By distillation this balsam yields a volatile oil, a resin being left behind. The oil Dr. O'S. found to be isomeric or identical in chemical composition, with that of the balsam of copaiba, and he had accordingly used it extensively in his hospital with exactly the same medicinal effects. He had sent specimens to England by Mr. Johnson of the Catherine now leaving this port. Not only was this article likely to become of importance in medicine, but also in the Arts in many of which copaiba is now used. While copaiba by the latest "Drug Price current" was at 5 shillings and 6d. the lb. twenty lbs. of the essential oil of gurgun may be obtained of the very best quality for about ten shillings.

The resin alluded to by Dr. Royle, and which that gentleman was the first to discover the source, Dr. O'S. stated to abound in a rich and valuable yellow coloring matter. It was, moreover, of great efficacy in the treatment of intermittent fevers. It would readily be obtained for from 4 pence to 6d. the lb. by proper arrangements in the districts where the barberry is found.

Substance of a letter from Mr. Siveter, Manager of the London Caoutchouc Company.

"I beg to say that there are not at present any works published treating upon the manufacturing properties of caoutchouc. Its notice is solely confined to lectures."

"In procuring the caoutchouc for manufacturing purposes, two sorts are used, one for dissolving for waterproof fabrics or for the manufacture of caoutchoucs by destructive distillation; the other for weaving into fabrics to give them an elastic quality. In the first case it is much better to have it free from bark or extraneous matter, in the second it is absolutely necessary; in fact, it is unless if not free even from porosity. The mode of manufacture in the second case is to cut it by circular knives into long and even threads, which are afterwards stretched upon drums to their utmost extent, the least piece of bark or an air cell will cause it to break."

"We can cut it into threads, should the caoutchouc be gathered in the form of a disc, quite as well as if made up in the shape sent by Professor Royle; the handle shape, alluded to in our former communication, causes considerable waste."

"If it should be found more convenient to collect it in the form of a disc, the mould should be in the form of a wooden trencher, but not more than 6 inches in diameter, and $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch deep. This disc may be filled by layers put on with a brush, or any other convenient method, layer after layer, until it is $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in thickness. The form sent by Pr. Royle with instructions, will save the cutting off of the neck, and is much more suitable to fit the cylinder upon which it is absolutely necessary to place it, previous to cutting. The disc is cut by a different machine."

"Should it be possible to collect the caoutchouc in a semi-transparent state, it would fetch a high price for varnishes, and could be used in the most delicate tints of portraiture, it would be invaluable to coach-makers by rendering their varnish and colors flexible."

"I have by me some of the juice or milk from the Ficus elastica sent over in a bottle. I find by looking at it through a microscope, that it is composed of small, solid, angular atoms, floating in a serum, in the same manner as you find the red globules of the blood, and that these solid atoms when pressed together, or the aqueous part being abstracted by blotting paper so as to bring them into immediate contact, they become perfect caoutchouc, fit for immediate use, and quite as solid as if dried by inspissation."

"This proves that the process of inspissation need not be resorted to, but that the milky juice might be put into bags and pressed by an hydraulic press, exactly in the same manner that spermacetti is obtained from the oil, or stearine from tallow. I should recommend to prevent air bubbles or dirt, that the exudation from the tree might be collected in barrels, and brought to Calcutta, or any convenient place; and then strained through a sieve afterwards subjected to the process of pressure."

"So great is the demand for caoutchouc at this time, and I believe it is only as a commencement, that it is a valuable and saleable commodity in any state. It is at present, in from 2s. to 2s. 3d. per lb. I have no doubt that could a quality be collected, as I have mentioned, in the same transparent state, it would reach a price of from 4s. to 6s. per lb."

"I have tried the qualities of the caoutchouc collected by Capt. Vetch.—1st, as a solution for flexible cement, also cut into thread or fibre for the manufacture of elastic fabrics."

"The solutions in naphtha are equal to that made from the best South American caoutchouc (Para). It is inferior in one respect, viz:—It dissolves easier and more caoutchouc is taken up by the same quantity of spirit."

Sample B. Thread (alluding to several samples sent by Capt. Vetch) when this has had the advantage of 6 months' exposure to the air, it will be equal to any caoutchouc from Para. The Threads upon the reel have undergone a process which gives them the quality of age, and that marked B is fit for any purpose. The caoutchouc from Para will not work well until it has aged as we term it."

"In examining the different parts with a microscope, to discover, if possible, the cause of so much difference in the qualities of the staples, I find that A in the lighter parts, which is very strong, is composed more visibly of fibres running lengthways. Crossways is represented by the small strips of paper in the sample between the glass. When this caoutchouc is strained lengthways, the fibres are plainly seen by a microscope, having a silky appearance, if stretched crossways in the direction of the strips of paper, the fibre is not half so visible, and it quickly breaks. Caoutchouc gathered or inspissated in this manner, is perfectly useless for thread."

"I have no doubt, if taken up in the East with the spirit it has been begun with, that in a few years the production of caoutchouc will be as valuable an article to the grower and merchants, as Indigo. There is still great improvement to be made in the collecting of it, although that sent by Captain Vetch, is worth 100 per cent. more than any I have seen sent as an article of commerce from the East Indies."

COCHINEAL.

The Secretary communicated a most acceptable piece of intelligence regarding the prospect of an early supply of fine grained cochineal insects and nopal from the Isle of Bourbon, through the kindness of Monsieur Bedier, Commissioner of Marine Affairs at that island.

"J'ai reçu tout récemment votre lettre du 30 août dernier. Vous n'avez pas à craindre de Com mettre indiscretion en réclamant de mon zèle pour votre Société. Je vais m'occuper avec M. Richard, & vous préparer un nouvel envoi de cochenilles et de nopal, mais à fin d'en assurer le retour de la mousson du S. O. pendant laquelle les traverses d'ici au Bengale sont très courtes. Il est peu probable que des cochenilles qui vous seraient envoyées dans ce moment pourraient supporter la longueur d'un voyage de plus de 90 jours. Soyez du reste bien convaincu que nous continuerons à vous faire des envois jusqu'à ce que vous serez assuré de la propagation de ce précieux insecte à Bengale, ayant le vif désir de contribuer à procurer à votre chère population cette lucrative et importante culture."

A NEW BRANCH SOCIETY AT BACKERGUNGE.

The Secretary read a note from F. Stainforth, Esq., the judge at Backergunge, communicating the intelligence of the residents at that station being about to establish a Branch Society there, and as king "what assistance the Parent Society is disposed to render."

The Secretary informed the Meeting, that as Mr. Stainforth's letter was pressing, he had ventured to reply to it by return of post, and had intimated that the Society would be willing to contribute to the Backergunge Branch Society, the support which was afforded to the other Branch Institutions, namely, two silver medals and fifty rupees annually.

MYZORE—SCHOOL FOR ORPHANS.

A copy of the proceedings of two Meetings of the Mysore Agri-Horticultural Society was laid before the society, Major-General Sir Hugh Gough, K. B., in the chair. The Treasurer's account showed a balance of 679.18-6 rupees in favor of the society, on the 31st 1832. The cordial thanks of the society were given to Lieut. Munro, 39th Foot, on the occasion of his departure from the station. It was resolved that in consequence of constant applications to the Secretary for gardeners from all parts of the country, the Committee be requested to make arrangements for instructing such boys as are desirous to learn gardening, and to establish a school for this purpose in the garden."

EGYPT—COTTON AND INDIGO.

A letter was read by the Secretary from Mr. Waghorn, at Cairo, offering his services to assist the society in procuring more cotton and other seeds. Mr. Cracroft spoke of the superiority of the Egyptian Indigo seed, proposed that a small quantity should be obtained, which was agreed to.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

A letter from Mr. Chambers, of Calcutta, was submitted by the secretary, requesting to be supplied with cotton seed for transmission to the Swan River. The Secretary stated, that he had complied with the request, and had furnished Mr. Chambers with a parcel of Seychelles and Egyptian seed.

The letter of Mr. Waylor, Honorary Secretary to the Western Australian Agricultural Society, was also read.

"A communication with India has always been a desire of primary consideration, and its tardy accomplishment has almost precluded expectation in the minds of many. It was anticipated that from that quarter labor might be drawn to any extent, and it is to the want of such invaluable assistance, that we are making no more rapid progress than we are doing; few will venture to improve or cultivate to the extent of their means, from the uncertainty of gathering the produce of their labors, while the extortionate demands of such of the working class, as may be procured, exhaust the profits of farming operations. Still we are progressing, and under such varied disadvantages, at a rate, that is the surprise of all who visit our shores. That many may be induced to become not only visitors, but fellow colonists, from your less salubrious climate, is the ardent wish of us all."

Before the meeting broke up, the Secretary called the attention of the society to the necessity of adopting measures for obtaining a new die for the society's medals, the present die having a flaw in it. Mr. Cracroft was so good as to mention that as he was about to sail for England shortly, he should be happy to take charge of any commission he might be intrusted with by the society; that he should willingly attend, at all times, to any request he might receive as to the purchase of English seeds and so on, and that as the great expense of a new die for the society's medals was now the chief consideration, he should be happy, as soon as he reached London, to consult Mr. James Princep on the most economical mode of proceeding. The Meeting expressed themselves grateful to Mr. Cracroft for his polite offer, and willingly accepted it.

It should be mentioned, that to the whole of the numerous correspondents who had favored the society with their communications, the thanks of the Meeting were accorded in the order in which they were read.

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary

[Buckaru, February 10.]

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

(From a Correspondent.)

We attended on Saturday at the Medical College, to witness the delivery of diplomas to the four students, who have successfully passed their examinations, and, in truth, we assure our readers, that such as were not present have lost a spectacle of deep and gratifying interest.

The attendance, both European and native, was very numerous and of the first respectability. The Lecture Room of the College was crowded with the students and spectators, and foremost, as he always is on these occasions, was Sir Edward Ryan, who presided. We noticed, amongst the visitors, the Lord Bishop, Sir H. Seton, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Mangier, Mr. Parker Captain Forbes, Colonel Young, H. H. the Nawab of Chitpore, Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore and many others whose names have escaped us. Strange to say no Member of the Medical Board was present, at least we did not perceive any one. We presume indisposition alone could have occasioned this.

The proceedings were opened by the reading of a very detailed but highly interesting correspondence, and the reports of the examiners, from which we learnt that of eleven pupils only four were finally pronounced, after a very searching examination, sufficiently forward to receive their certificates for practice; a fifth was added subsequently, in consequence of an appointment, partly medical and partly chemical, in the Opium department, having been placed by Government at the disposal of Professor O'Shaughnessy. When this was ended, Sir Edward Ryan, with great feeling, and a cordiality which honored alike the giver and the receiver, delivered to each of the students his certificate on parchment, to which the college seal, of portly dimensions, was affixed. These certificates are brief and simple, and bear the signature of the examiners, the Professors, of Sir Edward Ryan, as President of the Committee of Public Education, and of the Chief Secretary to Government.

The students were then addressed by Doctor John Grant, and of this address we can only say, that the Committee of Education can do nothing, more powerfully to influence the future conduct of these young men, and the future students who may pass, than to print and give to each of them, a copy of it as a monitor and a manual for his future professional conduct through life. It is a discourse in which are so blended the learning of the physician, the benevolence of the man, the acuteness of the philosopher, and the polished diction of the poet and the scholar, that it is difficult to say which of them predominates. Very earnestly, too, does it strive to aid the crowning pinnacle to the good work of the Professors, by inculcating upon the graduates the lofty moral duties of their noble profession, a feeling without which their studies will be to the world but as naught. Following upon this, Baboo Dwarkanath's prizes and medals were distributed to the students, and public thanks being offered to that gentleman for his noble donation, the meeting broke up. The visitors were attended through the establishment by the Professors before leaving it.

As we said at first, the exhibition was one of no common order of gratification to a well constituted mind, and we can enter most fully into, and most heartily do we congratulate the Professors on their feelings on this truly memorable occasion. Not to them the less so that, in seeing thus the first fruits of their noble but arduous task sent forth to the world, they must have felt that they were, so to speak, rendering back to the Hindoo the "pearl of price" which their brother

Broughton received from the diadem of their Mogul conqueror, when, as a recompense for his medical skill, he granted him the firmament on which the privileges of the Company were founded. This is Knowledge acquiring Power, and Power rendering back Knowledge, and rendering it, too, in the noblest form in which man can confer it on his fellow man. The lapse of time is nothing here; it is the strange and inexorable course of events to which the mind, as it were, instinctively leaps.

It was sufficient but to attend to the report, to be convinced that they must have felt as proudly and as honestly gratified as were their successful pupils, who, we are sure, carry with them the anxious good wishes of the whole community. Assuredly they have ours, and we venture to say, of the whole Press. We must defer what we have to say, further, for we have not done yet, till we receive the reports, of which we hope to obtain copies; but we cannot avoid concluding with a short quotation, which, though written, we believe, by Clot Bey, an honoured name amongst the scientific pioneers of civilization our professors may proudly appropriate to themselves: it occurs in the appendix to Mr. Waghorn's Egypt in 1838:—

"The Civil hospital at Cairo, is the first erected in the Ottoman empire since the Caliphs, and although they had in the height of their power erected some, they never were so complete as the Asylum of Piety, which Mahomed Ali has opened for human sufferings.

Thus, in the regeneration of Egypt, medicine has been and ought to be, one of the most powerful instruments.

The ascendancy which its ministers exercise throughout the whole of society by their mission of philanthropy, has rendered the union of two people, essentially different, more intimate, exacted gratitude, encouraged devotedness, and has broken down the barrier that existed between the worshippers of Christ and those of the Prophet—a superstitious but popular hatred.

The devotedness of the European physicians, their heroic struggle against the plague, their praiseworthy and entire disregard of their own lives, have produced invaluable results, but it is especially the formation of the school at Abouzabel, which gave a new era in medicine in Egypt, a glorious epoch for the imperishable sovereign.

Initiated in the different sciences which belong to the art of medicine, and which constitute the well informed man, the medical pupils become so many apostles, destined to spread the light of knowledge in the midst of a people still enslaved by prejudice and ignorance.

We can add nothing here! From the days in which this mighty empire over a twelfth part of the human race (!) was, as we may say, founded, by "Master Broughton," back to those in which Homer sang, that "A wise physician skilled our wounds to heal,

Is more than armies to the public weal."

the art of healing and every institution connected with it, has been the admiration of the human race; and well may our Professors point to those pupils, qualified as they have been after a severe examination, by only three years of study!

"More than armies to the public weal;"

and very heartily do we wish them health and success in their future labours.—Hurkaru, February 4.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartment, the 2d Feb., 1839.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting of the Society, were elected.

G. Evans, Esq., Calcutta; T. Russell, Esq., Harrow-tee; J. Menzies, Esq., 62d Regt. N. I.; J. C. Brown, Esq., 67th Regt. N. I.

The following letters were read.

From John Smith, Esq., M. D., Surgeon 34th Regt. N. I., stating his wish to become a member of the society. He was accordingly proposed by Mr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Hutchinson.

From A. Gibbon, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, European Regt., to the same purpose.

He was proposed by Mr. Egerton, seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

From R. Barclay Duncan, Esq., Assistant Surgeon to the same purport.

He was proposed by Dr. Stewart, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

From C. S. Curling, Esq., Surgeon, Artillery, to the same purport.

He was proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

From J. Balfour, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, to the same purport.

He was proposed by Mr. Egerton seconded by Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy.

From R. Laughton, Esq., Nurses' Battalion, to the same purport.

He was proposed by Dr. Stewart, seconded by Mr. Hutchinson.

From F. Anderson, Esq., 63d N. I., to the same purport.

He was proposed by Dr. Goodeve, seconded by Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy.

From A. Keil, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, Jondore Legion, stating his wish to be re-admitted into the Society.

From J. Pearson, Esq., M. D., Civil Surgeon, Darjeeling, to the same purport.

Messrs. Shuter and Strover, of the Bengal Service were proposed as members by Dr. Wallich, senior, seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

Dr. Stewart then proposed that the five students of the Medical College, who had lately received letters of qualification, viz. Balroos Rajkrishna Dev, Nobinchunder Mitre, Umachurn Set, Dwarkanath Gupto, and Shama Churn Dutt, should be admitted as members of the Society. This proposition was seconded by W. A. Green, Esq. Some discussion arose upon the question whether these young men should be elected as honorary of ordinary members. Mr. Hutchinson suggested, that it would be more gratifying to them to be elected after the same manner and by the same ordeal as European gentlemen, at the same time he proposed that the payment of the annual subscription should be dispensed with in this case, as the salaries of the young men in question would be small. Mr. Hutchinson's view of the subject was generally approved of, and it was finally resolved, to adopt that gentleman's proposition.

A letter was read from Professor Jamison, of Edinburgh, forwarding late numbers of the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal in exchange for the Society's Journal, and returning thanks in his own name on behalf of the Edinburgh Medical Society for that publication.

A collection of calculi, extracted at different operations, by W. Darby, Esq., Surgeon, 1st Light Cavalry, was presented for the Museum, viz.

- 4 Calculi of males..... by lithotomy.
- 1 Ditto female..... by ditto.
- 7 Ditto male..... by Urethotomy.
- 2 Ditto ditto..... by Dilatation of Urethra.

Some of these were very beautiful specimens, especially one enormous stone measuring in its longest circumference 7 inches and $\frac{1}{2}$, in its shortest 6 $\frac{1}{2}$, weighing ozs. and $\frac{3}{4}$, drachms. A history of the case accompanied each specimen.

The following communications were presented.

On the cure of clubfoot, by division of the tendon achilles, by R. O'Shaughnessy, Esq.

A case of strangulated hernia successfully operated on in a native 80 years of age, by Dr. Goodeve.

Dr. McNab's cases of secondary syphilis, cured by the employment of Hydriodate of Potass, was then read and discussed.

H. H. GOODEVE, M. D., Secy. Med. & Phy. Socy.

[Hurkaru, February 13.]

THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office, on Monday the 28th Instant.

PRESENT.

Committee.—G. Prinsap, Esq.; T. Dickens, Esq.; Moonshee Mohamed Amer; G. Vint, Esq.; W. C. Harry, Esq.; and Rajah Rajarain Roy Bahadoor.

Members.—Baboo Obhoychurn Banerjee and J. Homfray, Esq.

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were unanimously elected:—

Proposed by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, and seconded by G. Vint, Esq.—John Bird, Esq., of Pubna

Proposed by G. Tayler, Esq., per letter, and seconded by G. Vint, Esq.—Robert Taylor, Esq., and G. W. Brown, Esq., of Tirhoot.

Proposed by George Palmer, Esq., per letter, and seconded by Rajah Rajarain Roy Bahadoor and Baboo Keenat Sing, of Poorneah.

Read the reply of Government to the Society's letter, which accompanied the Zemindars' petition.

Resolved, that the answer received from Government be published in Bengallee and English, in all the papers.

and a special meeting be called to consider the contents. The above meeting is to take place on the Monday after next.

W. COLE HURRY,

RAMNATH TAGORE, Hony. Secretaries.

No. 80.

To W. C. HURRY, Esq., AND BAROO PRUSSONO COMAR TAGORE, Hon. Sec. of the L. S.

Gentlemen,—I am directed by the Honorable the Deputy Governor of Bengal, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 5th November last, forwarding for his honor's consideration, a petition against the measures now in operation, for the investigation of claims to hold lands free of assessment, and urging, on the part of the Landholders' Society, certain arguments against those measures.

2. The whole subject, which is felt to be one of importance in all its bearings, has long engaged the attention of the highest authorities, and the Deputy Governor, in forming his own conclusions upon the matter treated in your address, and in the petition above mentioned, has not failed to advert to the sentiments recorded regarding them by the most eminent men, who have governed British India, as well as to the best sources of historical information, both with respect to the laws and customs, which (apart from any exercise of caprice or tyrannical power,) regulated the administration of the land revenue, under our predecessors in dominion, and to the views and intentions of the authorities who framed the Code of 1793.

3—A careful examination of these sources of information, has convinced the Deputy Governor, that not only justice authorizes, but that considerations both of policy and equity, imperatively require, that all lands held exempt from the payment of which do not enjoy their immunities under the positive guarantee of the Regulations of 1793, should be subject to assessment, and that with reference alike to the common law of the country, as declared to the preambles to Regulations XIX and XXXVII. of 1793,* to the formal announcement in Regulation I. of that year, the fundamental law of the permanent settlement,† and to the unquestionable general principle, that nothing short of a legislative guarantee, can exonerate any individual from bearing his fair proportion of the public burthen, no length of prescription can reasonably be held to convert into perpetuity, to the necessary detriment of the community,

* "By the ancient law of the country, the ruling power is entitled to a certain proportion of the produce of every beegah of land, unless it transfers its right thereto for a term or in perpetuity."
† "The Governor General in Council will impose such assessment as he may deem equitable on all lands at present alienated and paying no public revenue, which have been, or may be, proved to be held under illegal or invalid titles. The assessment to impose will belong to Government, and no proprietor of land will be entitled to any part of it."

that, which being unmentioned by law, is in fact, only an abusive and untenable privilege, nor has the custom of the country given any colour to such privilege. It is well known that even those grants by former sovereigns of India, which are considered to be best entitled to be held perpetually, have not been and never could have been practically treated as such. For, in the words of Sir Thos. Munro, "if all Indian princes could grant Ulumghas jagheers, and if none could resume them, a great portion of the country might in time be released from affording any aid to the state, either in revenue or in military service. It therefore the increase of Ulumghas during successive reigns might, if not checked, have materially impaired, if not altogether exhausted, the resources of the state, and as the evil could only be remedied by resumption, it seems to follow from the reason of the thing that the sovereign must have had the right to resume as well as grant."

4. The guarantee given by the Laws of 1793, that all grants for holding lands exempt from the payment of revenue, made previous to the 12th August 1786, shall be deemed valid as respects the original grantees, and hereditary in perpetuity, if the original grant confer that immunity, has been and is scrupulously observed. The object of the measures now in operation, and objected to by the Landholders' Society, is to ascertain in regard to all lands so held exempt, what really are, and what are not, protected by that guarantee, in order that its benefit may be secured beyond further question, and forever, to the parties truly entitled to it, and that those who possess no valid claim to a privilege which ought manifestly to be confined within the narrowest limits consistent with the maintenance of the public faith, may no longer be permitted to appropriate funds which appertain of right to the state; and nothing has been done of late to these ends beyond the execution of laws, the most recent of which was enacted more than ten years ago, after long experience of the failure of former plans for the assertion of the rights of the state, and after a great sacrifice of revenue, and consequent enhancement of public debt.

After this exposition of the general principles upon which the measures of Government complained of are founded, it is not the intention of the Deputy Governor to enter upon a lengthened examination of the detailed objections to those measures stated in your letter. But his honor deems it necessary, in order to obviate the further spread of misconception, to point out a few of the mistakes of law in fact, into which it appears from your letter that the Landholder's Society has fallen.

6. You speak in the third para. of your address of Lakheraj Tenures, as "the shape in which the Government may have bestowed its favors, or rewarded meritorious services," and state that the argument (which you are combating) carried out "to its full extent, would deprive the sovereign of all power of granting honors and rewards." But the truth is, that the vast majority of even the oldest tenures in Bengal, were not granted by any sovereign or even the subordinate Governor, but were of the nature described in the passage quoted on the margin from the preamble of Regulation XIX. of 1793.*

* "Previous, however, to the Company's accession to the Dewanny, numerous grants of this description were made, not only by the zemindars, but by the officers of Government appointed to the temporary superintendence of the collection of the revenue, under the pretext that the produce of the lands was to be applied to religious or charitable uses. Of these grants, some were applied to the

To grants of this description, which are probably as many as one in Bengal, your arguments of course can have no proper application.

7. Again, in para. 4 of your letter, you truly observe, that it does not "appear how any community can be really benefited by reducing a large number of members to a state of pauperism." But the measures now in operation can only, when circumstances are most unfavourable to the parties concerned, place them in the position of the oldest zemindars of Orissa and of the North Western Provinces; and if the measures of the great body of the purposes of which they were professed to have been made, but in general they were given for the personal advantage of the grantee, or with a view to the clandestine appropriation of the produce to the use of the grantor, or sold to supply his private exigencies."

8. Thirdly, you state, in para. 6 of your letter, "that while poverty and despair will deter many from appealing at all in cases improperly decided against them; or deter them from appealing till too late to be heard, it is the practice of the Government Vakeel never to abandon a suit in which they have been cast, until it shall have been decided by the superior tribunal, or until at least the case shall have been referred to the special consideration of Government."

9. But the truth is, that of the 611 cases decided by the special Commissioners of Patna, Moorshedabad and Calcutta, during the two years ending with the 31st of July last, only 36 were appeals on behalf of Government against the decisions of the tribunals of first instance, although in the course of the same period 4460 cases, involving an estimated annual revenue of rupees 4,24,424, were decided against the claim of the estate by those tribunals; and that of 1288 cases now pending before the Special Commissioners of Moorshedabad and Calcutta, (time has prevented a reference to the Special Commissioners of Patna on this point, only 161 are at the instance of the officers whom you term the "Government Vakeels." It is not within his Honor's knowledge that any case of the nature to which you advert has been referred to the special consideration of Government.

10. Fourthly, you allege in the same para of your letter, that from this practice of universal appeal on the part of "the Government Vakeel," has resulted the readiness which so many compromises at half jumma are submitted to, rather than incur a ruinous litigation with an all-powerful opponent.

11. But with the exception of a short and unsuccessful attempt at compromise in the district of Chittagong, no such arrangement has yet been attempted on the part of government; consequently none such can have been "submitted to" by the Lakherajdars.

12. Fifthly you state in para. 11 of your letter "that the humane and just government of Lord Cornwallis, legislating in 1793, did not disturb possession if it extended back to twenty-eight years, namely, if acquired in Bengal before the 12th August 1765," contrasting this state of the law with what is assumed to be the existing law and practice. But possession is no more disturbed now than it was liable to be in 1793; on the contrary, the present law and practice are far more favorable in that respect to the Padshaha Grantee than Regulation XXXVII. of that year, which directed that he should be ousted on his tenure being proved invalid, and that a settlement should be made with "the person possessing the zemindary or proprietary right in the lands, whoever he may be."

See Section VI. Reg. XXXVII. of 1793.

Lakherajdars are as old as you allege them to be, their cases will come under the indulgent provisions of Clause 2d, Section VIII, Regulation XIX. of 1793, and will be assessed at half rent jumma—terms much more favorable than are enjoyed by any zemindar in any district not under the permanent settlement and probably by many even of those within the pale.

"Further, the law of 1793 accorded the boon of immunity from the payment of revenue only to the individual Lakherajdar then in possession of a tenure created previously to the

See Clauses 4 and 5, Section II. Regulation XIX. 1793.

12th August 1765, not to any heir or assign of such party (unless the tenure was proved to be hereditary) as appears to be assumed by the Landholders Society and this is exactly the state of the Law at the present day."

13. Sixthly, allege in para. 12 of your letter that now the poor Lakherajdar of the third or fourth generation is remorselessly deprived of his little patrimony, the sole dependence, perhaps of a numerous family; and is told that he may consider himself treated with great generosity when allowed to hold possession at half jumma for his life only.

14. But it has already been explained that under the existing law and practice, no person is deprived of his patrimony, or forfeits his estate as you elsewhere affirm to be the case; and that in all cases of long possession, to which your remarks in your 12th para. particularly refer, the Lakherajdar, whose tenure is adjudged to be invalid, is entitled by law, to a settlement at what you term "half jumma" in perpetuity. No person has been offered such terms "for his life only."

15. Seventhly. After treating in para. 13 of your letter, upon sales of assumed Lakheraj tenures for the realization of demands of Government against their possessors (instances of which must be rare), you proceed:—In the far more numerous cases, however, of sales under decree of court, arising out of private suits, redress by restitution is impossible. The proceeds of sales have been appropriated and expended, and vested rights have been acquired, which cannot be interfered with; such sales were unavoidable, and if the purchaser bought, believing the land to be Lakheraj, because he found it so advertized, any defects of title being concealed by the laches of Government, can it be just that Government shall now exercise the power to ruin the purchaser by seizing the lands on the plea that they are not Lakheraj?"

The rules in the preceding section, are to be considered applicable to lands held exempt from the payment of revenue to Government, as far as they may be applicable to the circumstances thereof, with this addition, that the purchaser of such exempted lands is to be considered as having succeeded only to the rights of the former proprietor, and that the transfer is not to bar any claims of government for the recovery of the public dues from such lands under Reg. XIX. and XXXVIII. 1793, or any other regulation that may be hereafter enacted."

16. This passage would seem to have been written without advertence to the explicit provisions of Section XVII. Reg. XLV. of 1793, which prescribes rules for disposing of Malguzary and Lakheraj Lands at public sales pursuant to decrees of the "Courts of Justices" as quoted in the margin.

17. Eighthly. You state in para. 19 of your letter, that another ground of complaint is the assumption that because by the regulations of 1793, it was ordered that all titles should be registered, therefore no titles are now to be respected, of which the registers are not forthcoming; but the fact is, that in every case where it has been shewn that full notice and opportunity of registration was not given, or that the registers have been burnt or otherwise destroyed, it has been directed that all Lakheraj claims should be investigated upon their merits, as if they have been duly registered according to law.

18. His honor proceeds to notice briefly, those passages in your letter, with reference to which it appears to be desirable that proceedings and views of the Government in the matter under discussion, should be explained.

19. You speak in your second para. of the appointment of young men under the name of Special Deputy Collectors to seek out cases of doubtful tenure, men in whom the character and interest of informer are combined with judicial powers; but the officers in question have been most carefully selected for the performance of the difficulty and delicate duty entrusted to them; and the following extract from a Report received from the Special Commissioners of Moorsheadabad and Calcutta, dated the 24th of January last, will prove how well they have performed it: "Now, however, the proceedings of the Special Deputy Collectors are conducted generally, in a superior style, and while we can bear testimony to the increased regularity and discrimination of those officers, we confidently expect that the improvement will conduce to a considerable abridgement in the labors of the appellate authority, and that a given number of appeals will not occupy more than half as much of the Special Commissioners' time and attention, as they would have engrossed a few years ago. It does not fall within our province nor have we complete means of ascertaining, what effect this improvement in the character of the proceeds of the resumption officers has had on the proportionate number of appeals from their awards, nor would the proportion between appeals dismissed and those decreed in this court, during the past year, afford any criterion for judging of the goodness of the recent awards of the Special Deputy Collectors, as our late decisions are partly of new cases and partly of those of long standing. But we may confidently expect, as a natural consequence of the increased regularity and discrimination of their proceedings, and the diminished proportion of their recent decrees which will be liable to be reversed in this court, that the number of appeals will in a short time diminish.

20. In regard to the court of the Special Commissioners, by which it is complained, that the judicial procedure prescribed by the regulations of 1793, for determining the validity of rent-free tenures, has been superseded. His Honor the Deputy Governor is not aware that by the establishment of that tribunal, in lieu of the regular courts, the law in question has been departed from. The court of the Special Commissioners is in all respects a Judicial Tribunal, and the judgments passed by it are in the strictest sense final judicial decrees, which is all that the law required before possession was to be intetered with. In many respects, they possess for the rent-free holder many advantages over the regular courts, namely, that the Judges who preside in them are selected for their high qualifications as judicial officers, the process is much less expensive, and the investigation by the means so liable to inconvenient delays and interruptions. Nevertheless should His Honor be satisfied that a return to the established courts would be more favorable to the Lakhrajars, he will be prepared to recommend the adoption again of that mode of procedure.

21. The Government is and always has been most anxious to save expense to the parties resisting its claims, as the rules of practice appended to Regulation III of 1828, will evince, and his Honor has ascertained that the Sudder Board of Revenue have recently forbidden the Special Deputy Collectors from carrying on their proceedings in any case without the district in which the tenure under investigation is situated.

22. His Honor observes, with reference to para. 13 of your letter, that as regards the few sales of assumed

Lakhraj tenures that may have taken place to satisfy the demands of Government, it is certain that the principle and general understanding have uniformly been, that in such cases, (as prescribed by law with respect to sales in execution of decrees of Court,*) only the rights and interests of the

* See Sec. XXIX. Regulation XI. of 1822 and Clause 2d of 1822 and Clause 5th, Section XXIX. Regulation VII. of 1822. possessor of such tenures have been sold, and the prices at which sales have been affected are believed to be such as fully to bear out the inference that no one has supposed that on such occasion an absolute immunity from the payment of the land revenue guaranteed by the Government, has been sold or bought. But if any cases of a different character can be brought forward, which his Honor very much doubts, they shall receive his best consideration.

23. The Deputy Governor observes, that in these paras. of your letter, you complain that the law of limitation (Clause 2. Sec. 11. Reg. 11. 1805) has been misconstrued by the resumption judges, and you assume that because sixty years have elapsed since 1778, that therefore all tenures which existed before the last mentioned year are necessarily protected by the law. This his Honor the Deputy Governor is by no means prepared to admit. You have not, however, stated, whether the alleged misconstruction has been made by one or more of the Special Deputy Collectors, or by the Special Commissioners, and if by the former, whether the case or cases in question have been carried in appeal before the latter; whether, in fact, the parties considering themselves aggrieved have sought, and failed to obtain, redress in ordinary legal course. If no such appeals have been made (as his Honor is inclined to believe must be the case, as he understands that the law in question has never, except in one or two instances, been pleaded before the Special Commissioners,) it is obviously the course that should be taken rather than a general petition to the Executive Government; for the law of limitation is not a general law, which can possibly be applied a priori to large classes of cases; on the contrary, it must be pleaded in or at least applied by the courts to each particular case; and in each case the objections of the opposite party must be attended to. The questions connected with it, will, in frequent instances, be very nice and difficult, more especially as regards the meaning under varying circumstances of the origin of the cause of action, and the fact of bona fide possession.* For

* See Clause 4, Sec. 9, Reg. 2, 1805. such investigation, the courts of the Special Commissioners are manifestly the proper theatre, and to parties dissatisfied with their general construction of the law, either an appeal to Her Majesty in Council, or application by petition to the Executive Government, will of course be open.

Town Hall, Calcutta, 18th Feb. 1839.

24. In conclusion, and with reference to those passages of your letter in which you adduce instances of alleged individual hardship,* or complain of extortion being practised by the agents necessarily employed in conducting the details of the measures in progress,† I am

* Para. 7th. † Para. 10th and note and para. 22d. directed by the Deputy Governor to state, that whilst it would be vain to expect that operations so extensive as those in question could be carried on without giving rise to complaints of this nature, the Special Commissioners, the Commissioners of Revenue, the Sudder Board, and the Government itself, will alike give the most attentive consideration to the representation of all parties, who may bring forward in a legitimate manner well authenticated cases of grievance. In every such case that has been substantiated, liberal redress has been given, like relief or compensation will be freely accorded in future, although it is unquestionable, that lands which were held Lakheraj in 1793, have been amalgamated with lands paying revenue, in order to their fraudulent concealment, in instances vastly more numerous than those in which even search has been made after non-existent Lakheraj lands. In consequence of the Registry of fictitious claims to the same, every endeavour has been made, by the employment of well remunerated and responsible officers as Deputy Collectors in the conduct of Mofussil operations, to obviate the hazard of abuse. To this end the attention of Government, and of the controlling revenue authorities, has been and will be most earnestly directed, and no pains will be spared to render the measures, which the Deputy-Governor is convinced are intrinsically just and proper, as free as possible from all practical hardship in their operation.

25. The Deputy Governor does not perceive any thing in the petition of the parties to which your letter gave cover, requiring further answer than that now returned to you.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedt. servt.,

(Signed) F. J. HALLIDAY,

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, the 15th January 1839.—Hurkaru, February 1.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee, held at the Society's Office, on Monday, the 11th instant.

PRESENT.

Committee.—Cowan Suttichurn Ghosaul; G. Vint, Esq.; Moonshee Mohamed Ameer; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; and Baboo Sumbhoochunder Mitter.

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were unanimously elected.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members:—

Proposed by the Secretary, and seconded by Cowan Suttichurn Ghosaul—C. Butcher, Esq.

Proposed by Cowan Suttichurn Ghosaul, and seconded by G. Vint, Esq., Rajah Ball Dutt Doobay, son of Rajah Sewloll Dobay, of Joanpore; Rajah Ram-kisson Doss, agent of Shah Beharyloll, of Lucknow, resident of Shahabad; Dewan Mewaloll, zemindar of Shahabad; and Baboo Seetaram Panday, zemindar of Shahabad.

The answer of Government to the Society's letter, accompanying the resumption, having been considered according to the resolution of the last meeting, it was resolved, that a petition be prepared to be laid before the Governor-General in Council, and that the former sub-committee be requested to continue their services for that purpose.

WM. COBB HURRY,

RAMANATH TAGOR,

Hurkaru, February 16.]

Hony. Secretaries.

AGRA RELIEF SOCIETY.

COMMITTEE MEETING, 17th JANUARY, 1839.

PRESENT.—Messrs F. O. Wells and Hamilton, Captains Graham and Wheeler, the Rev J. Moore, Mr. H. Gordon, Treasurer, and Mr. Woolleston, Secretary; Visitors, Rev. Mr. Wybrow and Col. Sutherland.

1. The Secretary read the requisition calling the present meeting to consider the expediency of abolishing the Famine Relief Society, and of reverting to the original Institution of the Station Relief Society.

2. Read a letter from Mr. Bell, requesting an additional allowance for his services at the Nycke Munde Hospital.

Replied, "That the sum of 150 Rs., which has been paid to Mr. Bell for his services during 3 months, is ample, and that he has no further claims upon the Society."

3. Read the accounts of the Treasurer which exhibited a balance in hand, after remitting the sum of 10,000 Rs. to Bombay, and reserving 8,000 for the erection of a Hospital at Agra, of the sum of Co.'s Rs. 20,876.

With reference to a former Resolution of the Committee, setting aside the sum of 8,000 rupees for building a Hospital, it was proposed by Mr. Hamilton, and Resolved unanimously, "That the disbursement of the above sum be suspended until further accounts are received from Bombay regarding the famine prevailing in Kuttaywar, and that in the event of its being required to aid in the alleviation of distress in that quarter, the erection of the Hospital at Agra be abandoned."

4. Resolved, "That as the available balance in hand amount to Co.'s Rs. 20,879, the following approprition be made before the dissolution of the Agra Famine Relief Society.

1st. For the support of Orphan's whose parents died during the famine in the Goursala Hospital, and who possess peculiar claims on the Funds of the Society, and whose numbers at Agra amount to 330, that the sum of 600 Rs. a month or Rs. 7,200 being the estimated cost for one year's maintenance, be set apart, and that this amount be paid over to the Agra Orphan Committee."

Secondly, that as the Goruckpore Missionary establishment received seventy of the Agra Orphans, that the sum of 2,000 Rs. be placed at the disposal of that establishment for their maintenance, and that the money be sent to the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, the Resident Missionary at that place, through the Rev. Mr. Wybrow.

Thirdly, that the sum of 500 Co.'s Rs. be sent through Captain Wheeler to Futtighur, for the Orphan Establishment at that station.

Fourthly, that for the establishment of servants at the Nycke Munde Hospital, the sum of Rs. 100 per mensem or 1,200 per annum, with 6,000 Rs. for maintenance, be set apart for the poor and sick support, by the Relief Society at Agra, many of whom have been reduced to their present state by the effects of the famine.

Fifthly, that the balance which may render, after the foregoing appropriations form a reserve fund for the present to meet unadjusted contingencies, or to be remitted to Bombay if not required in the N. W. Provinces.

5. Resolved, that with reference to a former resolution of the committee in conformity to which the bungalow at Jungun Katora was purchased for the use of the Agra orphans, the premises be made over with the orphans to the Church Missionary Society, on the understanding that the premises shall be appropriated for the use of the orphans so long as they may require them, and be placed under the management of a local committee to superintend local subscriptions, and other details, the property in the premises being vested in the Church Missionary Society; and that the trustees of the Relief Society adopt measures to carry this resolution into effect.

6. Read an extract from a letter addressed by the Secretary to Government to the Officiating Commissioner of the Agra Division, noticing the invaluable services rendered at Agra by the Rev. Mr. Moore, during the whole period of the late distressing famine, in every department of the charitable and benevolent operations, with the Right Honorable the Governor General's request, that the expression of the higher sense entertained by his Lordship of Mr. Moore's conduct on this occasion, may be conveyed to that gentleman.

7. That the Agra Famine Relief Society be now dissolved, and that the Station Relief Society be revived on its original constitution, and that the present members of the committee with the addition of Captain Wheler, constitute the committee of the Station Relief Society, and that the present officers be requested to continue their services as officers of the revived Society.

8. That the Secretary be authorized to forward a copy of these proceedings to the Bombay Committee, and to publish the Society's report of their proceedings up to this date, with a final statement of the accounts for the general information of the public.

9. That the thanks of the Society be presented to the President, Treasurer, and Secretary of the Famine Relief Society for their past services.

(Signed) F. O. WELLS, President.

[Hurkaru, February 5.

CALCUTTA PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a meeting of the Curators of the Calcutta Public Library held on the 31st January 1839.

PRESENT—W. P. Grant, Esq., H. M. Parker, Esq., and W. Carr, Esq.

The Librarian submitted a letter dated 26th instant from W. Carr, Esq., on behalf of the committee of subscription to the proposed Metcalfe Library Building, requesting to place before the curators a copy of resolutions accompanying it and to obtain the sanction of the members of this Institution to transfer the amount of the Vested Fund to the subscription to the above building.

Mr. Grant drew the attention of the meeting to another letter received some time ago from W. Carr, Esq., desiring to know if the Proprietors of this Library had any objection to place their books in the Metcalfe Library Building when it would be completed, and to the following resolution passed by the committee of curators on the 17th September 1836.

"That as it appears to the curators there is nothing in the constitution of the Public Library to prevent its establishing itself in the Metcalfe Building, and that in their opinion it would be a great benefit to the Institution to have the use of such a building upon the terms contained in the resolutions communicated by Mr. Carr."

After some discussion it was resolved.—That the annual meeting be called on Thursday the 28th February at 4 o'clock P. M. and that it be made a special "one for the purpose of considering a proposal from the subscribers to the Metcalfe Library Building to devote it to the purposes of this Library and of taking the sense of the meeting on a motion to authorize the curators to appropriate the amount of the Vested Fund in aid of such building, whenever they are assured of sufficient means being available to provide the accommodation necessary for this purpose."

PEARY CHAND MITTRA, Librarian.

Library Rooms, 4th February, 1839.

[Hurkaru, February 5.

UNITED INDIAN ASSOCIATION.

At a general meeting of the Members of the Patriotic Association, held at the Town Hall, on Saturday evening, the 9th February, 1839, the following resolution were passed

Proposed by Mr. C. P. Fission, and seconded by Mr. Wm. Reed, that Mr. C. A. Fenwick do take the chair

1st—Proposed by Mr. Wm. Reed, and seconded by Mr. J. Rabbeth, and unanimously resolved, that taking into serious consideration the apparent inattention manifested by the Government of the H. E. I. Company, to some of the clauses of the present Charter Act, passed by the Legislature of Great Britain, as evidenced by the non-operation of clause 87th of that charter, and the disabilities we all labour under when in the Mofussil, consequent upon the absence of suitable laws enforcing trials by Jury, and the want of such a protective law as the habeas corpus act a comprehensive Patriotic Association, for the purpose of using all lawful and constitutional means of procuring the removal of all such disabilities and grievances, be now formed by the union of all classes combining British-born subjects, East Indians and Natives.

2d—Proposed by Mr. J. Rabbeth, and seconded by Mr. C. P. Fission, and resolved, that in order to render the operations of the association as comprehensive as possible, so as to include, within their range every inhabitant of British India, who may be interested in the success of the means to be employed by the association, all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in the Mofussil be invited to co-operate by forming Branch Associations in the several districts.

3d—Proposed by Mr. P. Gomes, and seconded by Mr. R. Hollow, and resolved, that as the objects of the Association cannot be accomplished, without the aid of pecuniary resources, each individual joining the Association, contribute such aid, according to his means, whether in the shape of donation or monthly subscription, and that books be opened for the reception of the names of donors and subscribers.

4th—Proposed by Mr. Fordyce, and seconded by Mr. T. E. Mullins, and resolved, that in order to carry the resolutions that have just been passed into effect, it is necessary to appoint a committee for the purpose of managing the details of the measures necessary to be adopted; and that the following gentlemen be appointed to form such a committee, viz. Messrs C. A. Fenwick, W. F. Hair, F. D. Bellew, G. Chisholm, C. P. Fison, Wm. Reel, J. Rabbeth, B. L. Verboon, C. A. Ver-tannes, Agabeg, A. Fenwick, C. Fordyce, and Baboo Mothoornath Tagore and Isachunder Gupto, with power to add to their number,

5th—Proposed by Mr. C. A. Fenwick, and seconded by Mr. T. Smyth, resolved, that this association be designated the "United Indian Association."

Thanks being voted to the Chair, the meeting dissolved.—Hurkaru, February 12.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The usual Half-yearly General Meeting of the Subscribers to the new Bengal Steam Fund, took place on Tuesday last, at four o'clock in the afternoon, at the Town Hall. On the motion of Mr. H. M. Parker,

MR. JAMES PATTLE, IN THE CHAIR.

The Secretary, Mr. GREENLAW, read the following report:—Report of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the Subscribers to the Fund and to the Petitioners at the Eleventh Half-yearly General Meeting, convened under the 10th Regulation of the Original Meeting of the Subscribers to the Fund held on the 22d day of June 1833.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, have to report proceedings of an important character, which have transpired in India and at home, since the date of the last report, viz. the 17th, presented at the half yearly Meeting held on the 18th August last. With reference to the proceedings at home, the Committee communicated to the subscribers and the public, in the newspapers of the 28th ultimo, the appointment of a Committee of which Mr. Timothy Curtis, "the Governor of the Bank of England, is Chairman, in London, to investigate certain propositions of Capt. Barber, as well as those of any other person having for their object the establishment of a comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea," and that, from some portions of the evidence taken, it appeared that the investigation was of the most searching character.

By the last Mail Capt. Barber has forwarded further very interesting and important evidence given to the Committee by Capt. Claxton, the managing director of the Bristol Great Western Company, and Mr. Joshua Field, of the firm of Maudslays and Field. It is impossible for the Committee without swelling the report beyond bounds, to enter into anything like a detail of this evidence; one feature of which is that it goes far to establish that a preference will be given to iron over wooden vessels, and another, that there is a strong disposition on the part of the merchants at Bristol to unite with London in bringing the matter to bear.

The following are questions put to Capt. Claxton, and the answers rendered by him to the Committee.

Q. If the departure took place from Bristol, the gentlemen there are so patriotic that we should derive assistance from that city?

A. No doubt.

Q. We might expect a subscription of £1,00,000?

A. You must first let us know how much you have got here, and we would get a subscription in proportion.

Q. We might expect hearty co-operation from the city of Bristol?

A. Yes, and a great deal more. I think 80 or 90 of our proprietors out of 140 in the Great Western steamship company, have petitioned us to take the thing in hand.

Q. To take it in hand as far as Alexandria?

A. Yes.

Q. How would the people at Bristol propose to co-operate with this Company as a body or as individuals?

A. I should say as individuals taking shares, that if you made Bristol the port, that is all they would ask to let them in as shareholders.

Q. Do you mean Alexandria or the whole line?

A. If the Bristol people come in they would be the same as you are; but I do not believe there is a man at Bristol that would ask to have any thing to do with the direction if you would only make Bristol the Port.

Lord William Bentinck, had not on the departure of the last mail, given in his plan, &c. but was to do so on the next meeting of the Committee; nor has his Lordship made any communication to the Committee touching the reply of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to his letter. The Committee are of opinion that His Lordship purposely delays till the result of the sittings of the London Committee is known, which it is presumed, would be about the beginning of January.

The Committee entertain little doubt that that result will be the immediate formation of a Company at home, and they have every reason to trust that the prospectus will be such as to merit the support of the Indian public.

With respect to the proceedings in India, this Committee have had a correspondence with the Madras committee, consequent on a suggestion from the Chamber of Commerce at that place, to the effect that as the formation of a joint Stock Company to include the communication between England and Alexandria has from several causes proved of difficult arrangement, it seems desirable now to limit the efforts on the part of subscribers to improving the Communication between India and the Red Sea, which seems a practicable measure, and would, in conjunction with the French and English Steamers already established, effect a complete and regular communication by Steam between England and India. The Calcutta Committee considered that with reference to the state of matters at home, the time had not yet arrived for actually getting up a Company for the purpose of establishing the communication from Calcutta, Madras and Galle to Suez only; but they thought very great advantage would arise from the suggestion being instantly acted on in this way, viz, that immediate steps should be taken to obtain correct estimates of the cost of building a sufficient number of steamers of the largest class, and of maintaining and running them between Calcutta, Madras, Galle and Suez, as also of the probable returns so as to be fully prepared in the event of measures not being carried into effect at home for the whole line, to come out at once with a prospectus inviting subscription, not conditional but positive, to the plan suggested at Mad-

To this end, the Committee wrote immediately to Capt. Barber, directing him to report for what sum steamers of a proper description could be placed at Calcutta.

The Committee also addressed the Supreme Government, and His Excellency the Governor of Ceylon, requesting to be informed of the degree and mode of support which might be expected to be given to a Company formed for the purpose in question, and by the former authority whether a legislative act would be passed granting a charter restricting individual liabilities to the amount subscribed, and authorizing parties who now by Law cannot be members of a Joint Stock Company, to become so in this case. The Committee also addressed Lord William Bentinck for the purpose of endeavouring to ascertain how far such a project would receive the support of her Majesty's Government, taking the opportunity to request His Lordship to press earnestly on the authorities at home, the absolute expediency of some definite resolution being come to on the general question, seeing that until it is finally settled, nothing but dissatisfaction will prevail throughout India.

The Committee have likewise addressed themselves to the communities of the Straits, China, and the Mauritius, with a view to obtain information of the extent to which support might be expected from each of those places respectively; and finally Her Majesty's Political Agent in Egypt, Col. P. Campbell, was requested to furnish all requisite information touching the arrangements necessary in that country.

Replies have been received from the Supreme Government, from His Excellency the Governor of Ceylon, and from Col. Campbell; and a public Meeting has been held at Singapore, at which a Committee has been appointed to enquire and report on the subject as regards the Straits, and to correspond with the Madras and Calcutta Committees.

The Committee regret that the reply from the Supreme Government, should of necessity be of an indefinite character; but they feel assured that the subscribers and the public will be satisfied that it was from no want of earnest desire for the success of the project, if it should be necessary to attempt its execution, that His Honor in Council felt bound to suspend the decision of Government, until the opportunity shall have been afforded to the home authorities to express their opinions upon it.

His Excellency the Governor of Ceylon, referring to the voyages of the Great Western, considers that the route by the Cape will eventually be established, but he adds:—

"If the voyage to Suez, from Calcutta, via Madras, Galle, &c. &c. can be established (so far as regards the capital required, for an adequate number of steam vessels to carry on the Navigation constantly) so far as regards, what I have written above, I shall feel no difficulty in recommending to the home Government to permit this Government, to give a sum, towards its establishment: so far as regarded myself, I should, in the event of the proposed trial being made, after full deliberation and wisely,—I should subscribe my mite; so far as countenance goes, I need scarcely add, it would have all I could publicly or privately give it: though I fully expect that via the Cape Steam Navigation to India will ultimately and permanently be established. But I am far from saying, that that would prevent what your letter contemplates being also set on foot; either would be good—both, if successful, best.

"I shall be glad to be informed of the progress of your scheme, which has truly my best wishes. Nothing will make England ever know what India and India's resources are," but more frequent and intimate intercourse and communication.

On His Excellency's support, public and private, therefore, reliance may be placed.

The correspondence which Colonel Campbell and Mr. Walne, the Vice Consul in Egypt, contains some important information; and, on the whole, when the Report of the London Committee shall be received, if the result should not be the formation of a Company at home, the Committee will be prepared forthwith to enter into communication with the Madras Committee for the preparation of a plan and prospectus, which they will then submit for the consideration of the people of India.

Referring to the communication made by the Committee at the last Meeting touching the number of despatches into which the English Mails for Calcutta were divided at Bombay, and the great length of time occupied in their transit from Bombay, the Committee regret to report that no improvement has taken place.

The table marked A, in the appendix, shows the divisions made of the Calcutta Mails, at Bombay during the last six months; three of them were divided into four and three into five portions; the least number of days between the arrival of the letters, &c. at Bombay and the receipt in Calcutta was fifteen days, and the longest eighteen. The paying letters were generally despatched during the first and second days with very few newspapers, these latter with the free and service letters being chiefly sent on the last days.

The following table will show the great and progressive increase which has taken place in the letters and newspapers received from Calcutta at England, taken every three months.

Date of despatch from London.	Calcutta Letters.	Mofussil Letters.	Total Letters.	Calcutta Newspapers.	Mofussil Newspapers.	Total Newspapers.	Total Letters and Newspapers.
1837 April 3	575	79	654	78	1	79	733
July 2	608	79	687	109	1	109	706
Oct. 2	1941	232	2176	358	6	364	2540
Dec. 25	1089	139	1218	216	43	259	1477
1838 April 16	1330	164	1494	603	72	675	2169
July 7	1415	307	1722	528	84	612	2334
Sapt. 30	1724	230	1954	750	399	1149	3103
Nov. 26	2165	430	2595	748	394	1142	3737

The last mail brought the largest number of covers that has been received viz. 3737.

The Statement marked B, again, shews the numbers of days between the advertised latest safe date and the day on which the Calcutta letters left Bombay for England during the last 12 months; and the comparative number of covers despatched from Calcutta, and all India during eleven of those months. The shortest period between the latest safe day and despatch from Bombay, was fourteen days; the longest thirty-three. This occurred in July last, when a Mail was made up in consequence of a notification from Bombay of its being intended to send a Steamer either to the Red Sea or Persian Gulph on the 25th July. The 8th of that month was advertised at Calcutta, as the latest safe date, and a Mail was despatched accordingly; but on 14th July a fresh notification appeared, stating that a Steamer would be despatched to the Red Sea on or about 1st August, and the 16th July was advertised as the latest safe date. The vessel, the Atalanta, left on the 1st August, her destination being altered to the Persian Gulph; so that it is not only in the despatch of the letters to Calcutta, that delay occurs under the present arrangement, but also in the despatch of the letters from Calcutta, to England.

On the previous occasion to this, the Mail was made up consequent on a notice given that the Atalanta was to leave on the 3d July for the Persian Gulph. Instead of this the letters were sent on the Semiramis via the Red Sea, and she did not leave till the 12th or nine days after the time originally fixed for the letters leaving Bombay. The Semiramis put back on the 26th July, and the Mail did not finally leave Bombay till the 12th September, or 89 days from the latest safe date, as advertised.

With respect to the comparative number of covers despatched from Calcutta and all India, during eleven months, the following is the result.

Calcutta.	Mofussil	Total from Calcutta.	Total from all India.
27,762.	2,229.	29,991	86,957

So that from Calcutta, alone very nearly one-third of all the covers was sent, and including the Mofussil more than one-third; and there can be little doubt that, adding the Madras Presidency letters, more than one half the correspondence with India is subjected to the inconveniences and delays above noticed.

It may not be uninteresting for the Subscribers also, to know the increase that has taken place in the number of letters despatched from Calcutta, commencing with August 1837; the increase every three months was as follows:

Latest safe date from Calcutta.	Calcutta * Covers.	Mofussil Covers.	Total.
1837. August 4	1303	31	1334
Nov. 16	1293	98	1396
1838. February 14	2069	20	2089
May 4	1906	158	2064
August 25	2678	232	2910
Nov. 20	3472	310	3782
1839. February 10	4094	329	4423

As the last Mail from England brought more covers than were received on any former occasion, so the Mail lately dispatched from Calcutta, has exceeded greatly any former one.

The Committee cannot conclude their Report, without directing the attention of the subscribers and the public, to the continued zeal of Lord William Bentinck; to the active exertions of Sir Wilmot Horton and the disinterested devotion of time bestowed on the cause by Mr. Timothy Curtis, the Governor of the Bank of England, who, though he is commercially unconnected with India, voluntarily undertook the arduous duties of Chairman of the London Committee, of whose labours this Committee are able to form some judgment from the Extracts of Evidence taken by them, and forwarded by Capt. Barber. When the whole shall be published the public will learn the full extent of the debt of gratitude which they owe to that Committee, and its Chairman.

Nor can the Committee, avoid noticing how much is owing to Capt. Barber for his spirited and judicious determination to convert that into a public meeting, which was originally intended for a private one. It is owing to this that the merchants of London, in communication with those of Bristol, and, doubtless the other out ports, are at length taking the matter into their consideration with an evident purpose of carrying out the communication in its most comprehensive form; provided, on enquiry, such a course should be deemed safe and practicable.

In the Report published in the papers of the 28th Ultimo, the Committee adverted to attempts being made at home to decry the route by the Red Sea altogether. These attempts even proceed so far as to declare, that the people of India no longer desire to have the communication established by that route. The Committee have already expressed their sentiments on this point; and they would submit to the meeting whether it is not expedient that an immediate reiterated and strong expression of the public desire for the immediate establishment of the communication by that route should be made.

* The number under this head, must not be taken as covering single letters; the Merchants of Calcutta, and others, frequently putting as many as fifteen or twenty letters under one cover.

The accounts are laid on the table, shewing a balance of Co.'s Rs. 39,595-2-1. The principal disbursement is on account of the agency in England, being a payment by Messrs. Cockerell and Co. of £31-0-7, to Captain Grindlay to make up the sum of £500 awarded to him by the late Home Committee.

The Committee have to report the departure to England of Mr. James Prinsep, and to request the subscribers to appoint a Member of the Committee, in his place.

By order of the Committee.
C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Summary Statement of the Receipts and Disbursements on account of the New Bengal Steam Fund, from the 1st August 1838, to the 31st January 1839.

To balance as per last account, dated 16th August, 1838, published in the Calcutta newspapers of the 29th August last,.....

43,822 8 8
1,092 4 3 44,914 12 1

Interest realized on Company's paper,.....

DISBURSEMENTS.

By Secretary's Office.

Clerks pay from July to December 1838,.....	210	0	0
Stationary purchased,.....	20	12	0
Transcribing proceedings and other papers,.....	119	6	0
Compiling Index for proceedings,.....	87	6	0
Peons wages and hire of ticees palankeens, &c.,.....	10	15	0
Binding and Gold Lettering to the Books of proceedings,.....	8	0	0
4 Tin cases purchased,.....	2	8	0	459	1 0

By Postage.

Amount paid on this account,.....				142	12 0
-----------------------------------	--	--	--	-----	------

By Forbes' 2d Voyage.

Amount paid Messrs. Boyd and Co. on account of Messrs. Auckland and Boyd of Colombo, as per receipt dated 17th August 1838,.....				400	0 0
--	--	--	--	-----	-----

By Interest.

Amount charged against the Fund upon the amount last due.....				361	2 10
---	--	--	--	-----	------

By Charges General.

Subscription to the Bengal Hurkaru, from 1st May to 30th June 1838,.....	4	3	0
Lithographing 150 copies of a Circular,.....	7	8	0
Newspapers purchased,.....	41	0	0

Printing and Advertising charges.

In the Bengal Hurkaru,.....	79	1	0
Englishman,.....	99	5	0
Daily News,.....	33	6	0
Courier,.....	100	15	0
Exchange Gazette,.....	11	6	3
Commercial Advertiser,.....	7	15	6	332	0 9 384 11 9

By Steam Charges.

Amount paid for 6 prints of the Steamer British Queen,.....				100	0 0
---	--	--	--	-----	-----

By Agency in England.

Amount of a bill of Exchange drawn by Messrs. Cockerell and Co. of London in favor of Messrs. Cockerell and Co. of Calcutta, as per the letter of credit granted by them to meet the expenses of the Agent of the Fund in England,.....

3 471 15 3 5,219 10 10

Balance on the 1st of February 1839,

Balance as per last account,.....
Interest since received,.....
Cash in Secretary's hand,.....

Co.'s Rs. 39,595 2 1

43,822 8 8
1,092 4 3
8 1 6

44,914 12 5

Less Cash due to the Union Bank on the 1st February 1839,.....

5 237 12 4
Company's rupees, 39,595 2

Of the letter of Credit for 1000£ granted by Messrs. C. and Co. of Calcutta in favor of the Home Committee, the sum of 3,471-15-3 Company's rupees has been drawn in England and liquidated here. For the balance of the letter of credit, the above sum of 39,595-2-1 is subject; as also to £317-3-2 being the balance of a Letter of credit for £500 in favor of Col. Campbell, Her Majesty's Political Agent at Cairo.

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary, N. B. S. F.

A.

The following Table shows the divisions made of the last six Mails. The shortest time of reaching Calcutta after arrival at Bombay, is fifteen days and the longest 18. *The last mail brought more letters than had been received by any previous mails. *

Date of arrival of Mail at Bombay.	Number of the Calcutta Mail	Dates of arrival of the several at Calcutta	For Calcutta delivery.			For Mofussil delivery.			Totals.
			Letters.	News-papers.	Total Calcutta Covers.	Letters	News-papers.	Total Mofussil Covers.	Letters	News-papers.	Covers
26th Aug.	4	10th Sept.	754	54	808	180	0	180	1722	612	2334
		12th "	652	160	812	124	17	141
		13th "	9	309	318	3	67	70
			1,415	528	1,943	307	84	391
21st Oct.	5	3d Nov	1,193	28	1,221	203	2	205	1028	1311	3339
		5th "	477	117	594	62	251	313
		6th "	31	229	260	3	59	62
		8th "	17	228	245	2	75	77
		27	270	297	13	52	65
			1,745	870	2,617	283	419	702
26th Oct.	5	9th "	1,086	12	1,098	0	0	0	2040	1074	3144
		11th "	718	92	810	154	254	408
		12th "	32	185	215	10	63	73
		12th "	18	221	239	4	38	42
		13th "	11	166	177	7	45	52
			1,865	674	2,539	175	400	575
25th Nov.	4	8th Dec	1,074	36	1,110	151	0	151	1954	1149	3103
		10th "	555	107	660	79	250	329
		10th "	39	247	286	0	60	60
		12th "	56	360	416	0	89	89
			1,724	750	2,474	230	399	629
1st Jan.	5	16th Jan.	1,435	53	1,488	177	0	177	2249	1354	3603
		17th "	426	146	572	34	282	316
		18th "	72	345	415	29	78	107
		19th "	68	254	322	8	198	206
		19th "	0	0	0	0	0	0
			1,753	796	2,797	248	558	806
19th Jan.	5	2d Feb	857	25	882	207	0	207	2595	1142	3737
		3d "	1,156	72	1,260	206	247	453
		4th "	72	312	384	17	70	87
		5th "	50	327	387	0	77	77
			2,185	748	2,913	430	394	824
Total....									6	12588	1642	19230
Monthly average....									6	2099	1107	3205

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary N. B. S. F.

B

The following table, shows the number of days after the advertised latest safe date before the Calcutta letters left Bombay for England during the last 12 months, and the comparative number of covers despatched from Calcutta and all India, when the latter could be ascertained.

Advertised latest safe date.	Arrival of Calcutta Mail at Bombay.	Departure from Bombay to England.	Delayed at Bombay.	Number of days between latest safe date and letters leaving Bombay for England.	Calcutta.			Mofussil Letters.	Total Covers from Calcutta.	Total covers from all India.
					Letters.	News-papers.	Covers.
1888.
Feb 14th.	March 1st.	March 1st	0	15	1855	214	2069	200	2269	6657
March 16th.	March 29th.	Mar 30th.	1	14	1901	207	2108	175	2283	6477
April 11th.	April 25th.	April 27th	2	16	1706	267	1963	202	2165	6458
May 4th.	May 18th.	May 21st	3	17	1646	260	1906	158	2064	6668
* June 15th.	June 29th.	July 15th	16	30	1960	379	2339	127	2466	0102
† July 8th.	July 22d.	Aug 1st	10	33	2893	595	3488	190	3678	6401
" 16th.	" 30th	" 31st	2	17	2233	447	2680	232	2910	11277
August 23d.	September 10th	Sept. 12th	2	20	2158	309	2467	258	2725	8433
Sept. 18th.	October 3d	Oct. 6th.	3	18	1792	508	2300	217	2517	7039
Oct. 17th.	November 1st.	Nov. 1st.	0	14	2798	674	3472	210	3782	10541
Nov. 20th.	December 5th.	Dec. 6th.	1	16	2704	617	3321	275	3590	not known.
Dec. 18th.	January 1st.	Jan 2d.	1	15	1922	590	2512	160	2672	86957
1889.
Jan. 4th	January 18th.	Jan 18th.	0	16	25368	5515	31083	2204	33517	86957
Total ..					25368	5515	31083	2204	33517	86957

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary, N. B. S. F.

Hulk. Feb. 20]

THE CHAIRMAN then addressed the meeting as follows:—Gentlemen,—We are again met to advocate, I trust with all our might, the comprehensive scheme of Steam Navigation to all the presidencies of India by way of the Red Sea. I fervently congratulate you, gentlemen, that you have in such numbers laid aside all other occupation, and by thus assembling together here, placed beyond all power of refutation the fact that your ardour, your zeal, and your anxiety for the complete success of this great and important object, is not only undiminished but will suffer no diminution until the entire accomplishment of all your desire has rewarded your most praiseworthy perseverance. At this critical moment, gentlemen, the strongest demonstration you can make of an unflinching determination to gain the object you have so long and so ardently sought, is peculiarly called for. As was to be expected, you are opposed by interested persons who have other views and other schemes for the furtherance of which they have an undoubted right to use their best endeavours. To stir and avowed competition not one of us here I am sure, would object, but, gentlemen, I state with regret, that it is asserted on credible authority, that less than justifiable means have been employed to dissuade the British public from joining our cause. It has been represented to our countrymen at home, that Steam communication by the Red Sea will be always uncertain and full of danger,—and that certain and permanent Steam Communication can alone be obtained by the Cape of Good Hope. Further, that we in India have abandoned the earnestness of our desire to establish the comprehensive scheme by the way of the Red Sea, that our zeal in this cause has expired—In short, that delay, disappointment, and an enervating climate, have combined to render us indifferent to the success of the important object which has convened us together so often in this great hall, and for which we have so frequently and so urgently petitioned. I mention these circumstances not because I think there can exist any doubt that you hold them in derision and contempt—but because they mark forcibly the absolute necessity for our continuing to act most strenuously and unitedly. Gentlemen, we must consider nothing done, whilst anything remains to be done. We must persevere as if we were one body, with one soul, and resolved to be satisfied with nothing short of complete success. What have we to discourage us? Nothing. What have we to encourage us? Much, very much. To confirm our confidence, we know that our late, and our present Governors General, anxiously desire that we should attain our wishes. We know that the Commons' House of Parliament, the Ministry, and many of the greatest and most influential public men in England, have declared that we are entitled to what we ask. This is not all, gentlemen. We have another great advantage ground, for it has been shown, satisfactorily shown, that Steam Communication to all the Presidencies would actually be less expensive than continuing Steam Communication to Bombay. The statements to the report, which Mr. Greenlaw has read to you, prove that notwithstanding all the imperfections and uncertainties of the present Steam Communication to Bombay, the Post Office Revenue thus derived, has progressively continued to increase, and that it would be double what it

* This mail was made up in consequence of a notification from Bombay, that the Atalanta was to leave on the 2d July for the Persian Gulf but the Semiramis arriving thence on that day, and it appearing that the services of the Atalanta were not required in the Gulf, it was determined not to send her there, and in lieu to despatch the Semiramis to the Red Sea on the 15th of July—she left on the 15th and put back on the 26th. Her packets were the largest yet put up, amounting to 14 1/2 tons covers, and these were considered as forming too heavy and too bulky packets to admit of their being conveyed by the Persian Gulf they were therefore detained and despatched by the Semiramis for the Red Sea on the 12th September, being 69 days from the date of the letters leaving Calcutta.

† In consequence of a notification from Bombay of its being intended to send a Steamer either to the Red Sea or Persian Gulf, on the 15th July, the 8th of that month was advertised at Calcutta, as the latest safe date for letters, a Mail was accordingly despatched, but on the 14th July, a fresh notification appeared, stating that a Steamer would be despatched to the Red Sea on or about the 1st of August, and the 16th July was advertised as the latest safe date. The vessel, the Atalanta, left on the 1st of August, but her destination was altered, and she proceeded to the Persian Gulf instead of the Red Sea.

now is, whenever this presidency and Madras have Steam Communication, cannot be reasonably doubted. The late improvements in Ocean Steam Communication hold out to us the fairest promise, that when their Leviathan steamers are employed in the Red Sea, our intercourse with London will be reduced to 35 or at most 40 days. What will then be our joy! who can venture to describe, by anticipation, either the extent or the number of the incalculable advantages this country must derive from such an increased proximity of communication with our blessed country, and with Europe generally. It will be then, gentlemen, that morality, science, and civilization will make strides of advancement, which, without such potential aid, could not be accomplished in centuries of time. Who shall doubt that when Providence has conferred on us so great a blessing, the bestowal of it has had for its purpose, and its end, the giving to this benighted and vast empire, in the course of time, communion with us in all that now constitutes our superiority, and the conversion of us all with one flock under "one shepherd." Gentlemen, as British subjects, severe, persevere, your constancy and your union must command success.

Mr. R. D. MANOJAS, after a few preliminary observations, proposed the following resolution, adding that he was about to proceed to England where his best efforts shall be directed to and the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Communication with India.

"That the report be received; and that this meeting, fully concurring with the Committee, in considering it to be expedient, that a reiterated and strong expression of the public desire for the immediate establishment of Steam Communication to all the Presidencies of India by way of the Red Sea, should be made, declare that the late improvements in Ocean Steam Navigation, whereby the communication by way of the Red Sea between Calcutta and London may be made in from thirty-five to forty days, only increase their desire for its establishment, and request the Committee to continue their exertions towards its accomplishment."

This resolution being seconded by DWARAKANATH TACOR, was carried by acclamation.

Mr. GREENLAW.—Before this motion is put from the chair, I wish to be permitted to make a few observations.

It is not necessary either to produce facts or to urge arguments with a view to satisfy this meeting of the necessity of the immediate extension of the communication by steam by way of the Red Sea to Calcutta, including, of course, a call at Galle and Madras; but it may not be inexpedient to place facts and arguments on record to convince others.

The report of the Committee just read, very clearly shews that the correspondence of Calcutta and Madras, estimated at one-half that of all India, is under the present restriction of the communication to Bombay, delayed both in its passage from Calcutta to England and from England to Calcutta, while no improvement takes place, because no effectual remedy can be applied. So much for the correspondence.

Touching passengers, the Bishop of Calcutta not long since referred, in this hall, to the fate of his friends Principal Mill and Colonel DeHeseta who, though they left Calcutta in apparently more than good time, yet found the steamer gone on their arrival at Bombay. It is true they got back their passage money; but I have it from Colonel DeHeseta, that it was returned with a strong intimation that thenceforth no passage money would be returned under similar circumstances.

This is a practical proof of the necessity for the extension of steam to Calcutta, as regards passengers going home; and there only requires one link to complete the chain, namely, the inconvenience of passengers finding their way from Bombay. I am now enabled to supply that link. I have obtained, from a gentleman lately returned to Calcutta by the steamer, a memorandum of the difficulties he experienced. On his arrival at Bombay, he found his presence in Calcutta to be indispensably necessary within a given time; no indispensably necessary, indeed, that, although accompanied by his wife, he was under the necessity of proceeding at all risks. The following is the memorandum:—

"At your request I put upon paper a memo. of the difficulties I experienced in my trip from Bombay to Calcutta, remarking in passing, that from Marseilles to Bombay occupied from 11th Oct. to 25th Nov. (of which 25 days were in the 'Atalanta' between Suez and Bombay) and that comparatively speaking, that part of the journey was perfectly easy.

"On arriving at Bombay, I requested that a dāk might be laid for Mrs. — and myself via Nagpore to Allahabad. This the Deputy Post Master said could not be done, at that season of the year, without almost the certainty of our both dying of jungle fever. I then suggested our going to Madras via Hyderabad. To this he replied that I could only calculate with certainty on getting on as far as his authority extended, namely, through the Bombay territory, and that I should, probably, be detained in the Madras provinces for want of bearers, 3 weeks or a month, and possibly, after all, be obliged to return to Bombay, as the Madras troops were then in motion, and the bearers would all be employed for their accommodation.

"As a last and only recourse, I took a patamar and sailed down to Tellicherry, hoping there to procure bearers to carry us across to Madras via Seringapatam; but in this also was I disappointed, and was forced to continue my voyage to Ponnany, a considerable distance further down the coast. Well it was for us that we had on the whole favorable weather, else, on the open sea, in our small boat, which, during one shower we had, admitted the rain through every seam in the deck, we should have been very uncomfortable. At Ponnany we got bearers, and with a few trifling interruptions and delays, made it out pretty well as far as Coimbatour. There, although we had written on from Tellicherry, we were detained 4 days for bearers. From Coimbatour to Darampoor, by dint of persuasion and bribery, we got the bearers to carry us on, although sometimes two, sometimes three stages, with the same set of bearers, and at the last named place, to our extreme mortification, we found there was only one set. The Deputy Collector (my personal friend) sent out his peons in all directions, but in vain, not another bearer was procurable. As the only alternative, I got coolies to carry my heavy palkee, on their heads, while I, mounted on a taloo, rode onwards for two whole nights and half a day, at the jog trot pace of the bearers, who carried Mrs. — which one set, by the bye, accompanied us 63 miles. Never did poor unfortunate wretch, after a good besetting, pity himself more than I did, after my sleepless, jolting journey. This penance brought us to Amboor, from whence we got on to Madras easily enough, and there we took shipping to Calcutta; thus making our total time from Marseilles to Calcutta exactly 3 months, of which half the time was mispent between Bombay and this place.

"In my journeys from Bombay I experienced the greatest kindness the whole way. I had excellent introductions, and certainly nothing could exceed the promptitude with which they were answered. I mention this first to express my gratitude for the extreme kindness I experienced, and next to show that with the best assistance, the land journey between Bombay and this, to a married man, is, and must be, attended with very great difficulty, expense, and delay."

Here then, gentlemen, are clear, practical proofs of the utter inefficiency of the present system, either for the accommodation of passengers or for the despatch of correspondence.

After this, it may be superfluous to refer to theoretical difficulties; but in the early discussions on this question, these difficulties were so clearly seen and described, that I cannot refrain from bringing them to your notice; nor are there weight or force assumed in that they come from the Bombay Steam Committee! That body, on the 18th May 1833, published a report in the Bombay Courier, in which occurred the following passage. It is to be remembered, that quarterly trips were then contemplated:—

"By remaining, during one intermediate trip of the steamer to Egypt, the whole country, from the wonders of Abyssinia to Aleppo, with the splendid monuments of antiquity of Syria and Egypt, Damascus, Palmyra, Albuok, Jerusalem, Cairo and the Pyramids, Dendera, Thebes, Philæ, and Mount Sinai might be visited for one-fourth part of the expense, with far less danger, and in nearly the same period that would be necessary to cross the continent of India from Bombay to Calcutta, and back again."

Now, gentlemen, I hardly think it possible for us to have more conclusive evidence than the above, that whether for purposes, social, political (for the government equally suffers,) or commercial, the restriction of the communication to Bombay is utterly inefficient, and that the communication ought forthwith to be extended as we desire it to be.

Mr. C. W. SMITH.—The subject of Steam Navigation between this country and England, has hitherto been neglected and disregarded by the public in England, to an extent which would be altogether unaccountable had we not been accustomed to see the same neglect extended to almost every other Indian subject, however important in itself, and interwoven with the national prosperity. Recent intelligence gives us good reason to hope, that this feeling of apathy and indifference begins to disappear, before a spirit of awakened interest, and that among others the cause for which we have so often met together in this hall, and for the furtherance of which our Committee has so long and so unremittingly and so ably laboured, and at length been taken up and advocated with a vigor which bids fair to overcome every obstacle, which ignorance or interested motives may have placed in its way. In the resolution which I have the honor to propose, we are called upon—and whose bosom will not respond to the call?—to express our grateful sense of the exertions of those friends in England, who are giving their hearty assistance to the formation of a Comprehensive Plan of Steam Navigation between India and our beloved native country. Who is there, I say, that is not eager to acknowledge his sense of the continued, consistent, and disinterested exertions of Lord William Bentinck? Who that does not feel desirous to carry, by acclamation, a vote of thanks to Sir R. Wilmot Horton, who, when in India, was ever a staunch friend to our views, and who had no sooner set foot in England, than he adopted the earliest measures to bring forward the subject, and to obtain for it that degree of public interest and attention; to which it is so preeminently entitled? Who is there, that would withhold his warmest thanks from Mr. Curtis, the chairman, and every other Member of the Committee, who voluntarily came forward to give effect to the resolutions of the meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House? (Cheer). There cannot be one of the many here assembled who would refuse to unite in one unanimous burst of praise towards those, whose patriotic exertions have so richly merited our applause. To such an one would apply the words of the immortal Scott:—

"If such there be go thank him well," &c. Assured that I perform a task that is grateful to myself and to the feeling of every gentleman here present, I shall detain you no longer than to read the resolution.

"That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Right Hon'ble Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, for his Lordship's continued zeal and exertions; to the Right Hon'ble Sir Wilmot Horton, for the promptitude and energy with which, immediately on his arrival in England, he exerted himself in favor of an extended Steam Communication with India, and particularly for his able conduct as Chairman of the public meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House on the 19th of October last; and to the Committee appointed at the Meeting, for the devotion which they have made of their time to the cause of a Comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea, and especially to Timothy A. Curtis, Esq., the Chairman of the Committee, for his disinterested exertions."

Mr. R. S. THOMSON, in seconding the resolution, eulogized the conduct of Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, whose zeal and disinterestedness, have entitled him to the lasting gratitude of every man in the country.

The resolution was then put and carried.

Mr. G. A. PARNER, proposed the third resolution. He was glad to see it stated that the apathy which had been hitherto felt in England towards Indian subjects, was fast giving way to a honest feeling, corroborated as that statement was by the many real and not lukewarm friends, Steam Communication on the Comprehensive Plan, had found in England. He yielded to no one in the respect he entertained for the noblemen and gentlemen who had laboured so strenuously in the cause; and who had been so eloquently alluded to by Mr. Smith, but he thought it would ill become the meeting if they were to separate, without noticing the exertions, the talent, and the spirit evinced by their agent in England, Captain Barber, whose exertions, be it recollected, were not in proportion to the pay meted out to him, but applied, with all the spirit and energy becoming the cause he had engaged in, and the difficulties to which they were opposed. He congratulated the Committee on having an agent who had determinedly espoused the boldest plan, the best and the most likely to answer.

"That the thanks of the meeting be given to Captain Barber, for the judgment and decision evinced by him in calling a public meeting in the city of London, to take the subject of Steam Communication with India, by the Red Sea into consideration, by which the question is at length fairly brought before the British public in general, and the merchants of London in particular, as well as for his able and persevering exertions in preparing and laying before the Committee, plans and estimates, and procuring evidence for the consideration of the Committee."

Mr. STOCVELLEN had much pleasure in seconding the resolution, more particularly as possibly he might be connected with Captain Barber in business. He thought it would not be inappropriate were he to read an extract of a letter relative to Captain Barber, which he had recently received from London.

"Barber is, without exception, one of the best men of business in London, and that is saying a great deal. To an unnecessary activity of body he unites system and firmness of purpose. He is besides extremely zealous in the discharge of the duties entrusted to him, and is not to be turned away by any consideration from effecting the objects on which he has set his mind. The transfer of the agency of your steam committee was a happy hit, and I am greatly mistaken if it is not productive of the best results."

The following Resolution was proposed by Col. McLAREN, and seconded by SAMUEL SMITH, Esq.

"That James Fothergill, Esq., be appointed a Member of the Committee in the room of James Princep, Esq., gone to England."

Mr. PARRER.—The resolution I have in my hand, relates to the respected head of our Government, and though I could dilate much upon what we already owe, upon more that we hope for, under his enlightened and benevolent administration, I will not at this hour delay you long.

We have had many great men in the position now occupied by the noble Lord, many who have deserved well of India: Lord Clive won the country and well did he deserve; for I firmly believe that, under Providence, the regeneration of this empire will be owing to its connection with Great Britain. Lord Cornwallis:—well too did he deserve of a land, where, if I may use the expression, he created order out of disorder, and cast the elements of stability and law and civilization, into what was then a chaos; where, in good time, and with God's aid, they will bear wholesome fruits. Well, too, did Lord Wellesley deserve of India; for he arrested the efforts of foreign and internal foes, whose success would not have been followed by that, which alone justifies war, the invaluable blessing of peace, but by further centuries of anarchy and misrule. Lord Hastings crowned the good work, through which the peasant sits unscathed beneath the shadow of the ancestral tree, and the townsman no longer watches from the walls the horizon blackened with the smoke of Pinderry warfare. Lord William Bentinck gave an impulse, a forward motion, a feeling of life and energy, to all connected with the welfare of this great empire, the fruits of which are developing themselves at this very moment, and no where more manifestly than in this very assembly. I will say, that he too deserved well, very well, of India; he continues to deserve well of her, by his exertion in the good cause at home; but notwithstanding, I have mentioned many great men, many benefactors of this country, as great a place remains for him who shall put the final seal to whatever of good Great Britain has accomplished for India; who shall cast on one side the greatest obstacle to that good being permanent and complete; who shall put the key-stone to the arch, the capital to the column. Who ever does this work, I say,—whoever brings all India to the threshold, as it were of our native land, under the double protection of her power and her justice, shall surely take his place with the greatest of those I have enumerated. I hope and pray, that such good fortune may be reserved for one, who has, I am sure, nothing more at heart than the good of this country; who has hitherto manifested so cordial a feeling towards the comprehensive scheme of Steam Navigation between all India and Great Britain, via the Red Sea, and in this feeling I beg to propose the following resolution:—

“That this meeting cannot separate without recording its grateful sense of the support and encouragement which the cause of Steam Communication with England, by way of the Red Sea, has received from the present Governor-General, the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland; nor without expressing its conviction that the matured experience derived from his Lordship's lengthened Rules must have confirmed the views early entertained of the immeasurable value of a regular, speedy frequent and comprehensive intercommunication between the two countries by means of steam vessels by the shortest route, viz. the Red Sea.”

Mr. R. H. Cockcroft, seconded the resolution, and it was carried.

Mr. L. CLARKE came forward to propose the next resolution. He stood immediately behind Mr. Pattle's chair, who moved to make room for him. Mr. Clarke commenced by saying to Mr. Pattle, “Pray sit still, and quiet your alarm; though standing here, I will say nothing of you behind your back, (a laugh.) But what is that I see before me, pointing back towards me, (a laugh.) Is it the great Eastern?

(THE CHAIRMAN. No, the British Consul.)

Mr. CLARKE.—Very wrong. Unless it were the Great Eastern, and my own face peeping over the tangle blocking your vision, it is not a good style of drawing, (a laugh.) Mr. Mangles has told you he is going to England; I shall essay to follow him. He has promised to support your views at home. I will promise the same, when I arrive there—and be contented if I am, proximus sed longo intervallo. Mr. MANGLES.—No, no.

Mr. CLARKE.—And now, gentlemen, behold me here a persecuted man; for, believe me, I have had, since I came into the room, some fifteen of these papers containing this motion, thrust, “like greatness, upon me”; notwithstanding my friend, our Secretary, had providentially provided me with one the day before. Gentlemen, this argues a suspicion that I am not hearty in the cause, and never was there suspicion more unfounded; and of this I will give you the best reason in the world. The only speculation by which I ever made money, was by Steam. The first property I ever had, was in a Steam boat, and that was the Victory, the first Steamer that ever ploughed her way from London to Margate. Gentlemen, when I tell you that my earliest money making was by Steam, you may have a lurking notion, that I still feel an interest in the charming occupation, (a laugh.) But, gentlemen, let me come to the resolution which I have to propose to you, and it will, I feel well assured, meet with the hearty concurrence of all whom I have the honor of addressing. The object of this resolution is to promote unanimity, the want of which has worked us so much evil, and by obtaining which, I believe, our success must be inevitable. It is to a want of unanimity only, that I can attribute the slow progress which has been made in achieving the comprehensive scheme. Let any man reflect on the vast objects to be gained, the practicability of the measure, and the unbounded means of those by whom it was to be worked out. Why, the object of it is to unite together the most potent nation in the world, with a colony, unexampled for the immensity of its population, the vastness of its resources, and the extent of its limits. As to its practicability, reflect for a moment that the shores of Britain and Columbia have been united. The broad Atlantic has been traversed without one resting spot; yet here, in the same measured space, you have Madras, Ceylon, Socotra and Coosier, all as entrepôts. In short, gentlemen, difficulty does not exist, if enterprise can be found. (Cheers.) Experience has demonstrated its practicability. (Cheers.) let us next examine the means to carry it into effect. What can you command? Why, the power of Britain—the wealth of England and of India, and the experience, enterprise, skill, and energy of the most enlightened era the world ever saw. (Cheers.) Such is the object to be achieved. Such are the means of attaining it. Unanimity alone is wanting, and with so much to gain, and so little to overcome, is there a man who hears me, but must be conscious, that had the great Government of England, the all wealthy Court of Directors, and the whole of the ardent and rich population of India, been unanimous, but that the scheme would have been perfected in as many days, as it has now dragged on for years. (Cheers.) But, gentlemen, we have not only wanted unanimity, but we have met with opposition. Our brethren at Bombay have, most injudiciously, opposed the comprehensive plan, and the Court of Directors have insidiously resisted them. Communication with India never did, and never will be, honestly supported by the Court. (Cheers.) Better for us had it been that they had never interfered but left us to ourselves. They have been the empyric administering to the patient, who will not cure him, yet dare not let him die; and their whole conduct reminds me of a story I have somewhere read, of a man who had been a long time an apothecary at last left her, and assigned her to the clergyman, his usual professional successor. But Nature asserted her sovereignty, and when the quack departed, health returned. Hear me, said the lady, to her spiritual guide, here is an undoubted miracle, I have recovered, after the doctor gave me over. No, no, said the clergyman, the real miracle would have been if you had recovered, before he gave you over—(Much laughter). Gentlemen, to me it appears that this is our case; as long as the Court of Directors administer to Steam Navigation, it never can thrive or be healthy. The people of India must take it up themselves; they must be unanimous among themselves—not for a partial, but for a comprehensive plan. Not for a Bombay plan, the exclusion of the other presidencies,—nor for the exclusion of Bombay, (Chatter). Let Bombay rest assured that she never can be passed by. The Court may make her the resting place, may incidentally stop short there, but let all India force Steam Navigation to the metropolis of all India, and her sister presidency at Madras; and Bombay, will equally participate in the benefit. They have not viewed the question aright, they have not discovered that our interests are common. Madras always has done so. She has ever aided and assisted us, and, therefore, it is, that I call on you, gentlemen, thus publicly to record your opinion of the sound judgment and, excellent feeling, which our Committee have evinced, in expressing their acknowledgments to our sister presidency, and placing among their numbers one of her most distinguished members.

Would that the example may spread, that all India may discover that in the general weal, their own is best identified; and that our efforts may coalesce in the happy proverb of our country, "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together." (Hear, hear.)

That this meeting learns with much satisfaction the mutual good understanding which prevails between the Calcutta and Madras Committees and cordial by confirms the proceedings of the Committee, in requesting Mr. D. Elliott, Member of the Madras Committee, to become an Honorary Member of the Calcutta Committee.

MR. WILLIS EARLE seconded the resolution, and

THE CHAIRMAN in putting it to the meeting, reviewed the gist and pith of Mr. Clarke's address and used to favour of unanimity, yet, strange to say, his observations were also calculated to promote an unpopular feeling towards the most powerful engine the comprehensive scheme could possibly possess. He was not inclined to condemn the Home authorities; he thought they had done much, and sure he was, they would do more. Whatever of inactivity they had displayed, he ascribed to causes not made public, rather than to an apathy for the welfare of this country. Moreover, the Home authorities are as yet unheard, and it is not becoming a gentleman of the profession to which Mr. Clarke belonged to condemn parties who have not had an opportunity of being heard in their defence. (Hear, hear.)

MR. CLARKE declared the Home Authorities had been fairly put upon their trial.

After this the resolution was put and carried, and the business of the meeting declared at an end.—HURKAR, February 21.

MEETING FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A MECHANICS' INSTITUTION AND SCHOOL OF ARTS.

Last Tuesday evening, about 300 persons met at the Town Hall, to take into consideration the establishment of the Mechanics' Institution, of which, some days ago, we gave an account. Sir J. P. Grant, Mr. J. Lowe, Revd. Messrs. Haas and Campbell, Drs. Corby and Spry, and several other distinguished members of society, were among the number.

At half-past seven, Sir J. P. Grant having been called to the chair, opened the business of the evening by observing, that most of those who were present, had no doubt read the prospectus of the Society, which, although brief, was clear, and properly explained the nature and objects of the institution. It was not, therefore, necessary for him to say much on the subject; he would, however, make a few observations which occurred to him as appropriate to the occasion. He then adverted to the advantages that had been derived in America and other countries, from institutions similar to that which was about to be established here, and he looked for the same result in this country. There was, however, some difference between institutions of this kind in Europe, and that which would be established here. Society in Europe was far advanced in civilization, whilst the people of India were just beginning to receive the dawn of knowledge. Institutions like those in Europe, were intended chiefly to direct the attention of the great body of men employed in mechanical occupations to the advantages of science. These people require to fix their attention, diverted from the pursuit of sensual gratifications to those of a mental character, as a relaxation from their usual employments and an intellectual enjoyment. They require such institutions, to wean them from improper habits, to give to them a character of sobriety and morality, and to open to all the vast treasures of science and knowledge. The case in this country was different. Here we had not many who were employed in mechanical works. The young students were generally of opinion, that mechanical pursuits are beneath their notice. One of the objects of this institution, would be to remove such an erroneous impression from their minds, by shewing to them dressed in all the charms of science, the beauties of mechanical occupations. People talk much of the inveterate prejudices of the natives, by which they are said to be averse to the acquirement of useful and scientific knowledge. To prove the falsity of this notion, we need but look at the Medical College, both here and at Bombay, where he had witnessed the relinquishment of prejudices among the natives that at once set at naught any reflection against them on that score. Here, at the Medical College, dissection is now performed by the native students without the slightest aversion. These circumstances were sufficient to set at defiance the notion he had adverted to. Education is now rapidly advancing in this country, and every step of advancement gives a blow to prejudice (loud cheer.) We have met here this evening to form an institution which is to teach useful knowledge to the people of India—to show to them that the arts by which the comfortable comforts of life are secured, are connected with the sublimest sciences—that thought and observation were necessary to secure success in the prosecution of these arts, and to give the people habits of reflection and reasoning. Some time ago he had the happiness of being connected with the Hindoo College, where he had occasion to deliver several lectures upon the laws of England and to point out to them that these institutions were grounded on the great principles of moral justice and national laws, which formed the basis of every civil institution. He had there been young men, who listened with great interest and attention to his observations, and who readily understood the most abstruse points he proposed for their consideration. From the experience of native character he had acquired there, he could boldly affirm, that if those young men had commenced their education at the period when instruction is commenced in England; if they had continued to prosecute their studies to the age usually devoted in that country to education; and if they had been free from those disadvantages which necessarily arise out of a constant intercourse with their unenlightened countrymen, he was sure these young men would not disgrace any institution of learning in Europe.

But every body cannot be a lawyer,—every body cannot be a Judge (laughter),—every body cannot be a Moonseiff or Sudder Ameen; yet Lawyers and Judges and Moonseiffs must be permitted to live well and to enjoy the comforts of life. There must, therefore, be the people who contribute to these comforts. We must have mechanics, ship-builders and house-builders; we must have tailors as well as shoemakers; there must be men in every society who follow occupations which afford the comforts of life. Now there is nothing in these occupations which ought to deter young men from engaging in them. It is necessary that we have good ships as well as good shoes; and he was certain that if it were properly explained to them, that it was highly creditable to make the best shoe as well as the best ship, they would all consent to follow the occupations he alluded to. He wished to impress on them, that nothing on which the mind could be employed in a useful way, was unworthy of the mind; and to tell them that the greatest men in Europe had devoted their attention to these arts by which the comforts of life are secured. At present great openings are being made in India for all the useful arts in which the natives of the country would find employment, and by which they could earn an honest livelihood, and he hoped they would not fail to secure the advantages which the progress of improvement and the change of circumstances brought within their reach. At all events he was certain, they would not be wanting in gratitude to those individuals who have had the merit of originating this institution, which was intended to place them in the way of deriving the advantages he adverted to.

He feared he had already detained the meeting too long; but he felt he was bound to express his sentiments on so interesting an occasion, an occasion on which the honor of presiding over the proceedings of the meeting had been conferred on him. How such an institution would succeed in this country he could not tell; but he was of opinion that its success would depend almost exclusively upon the zealous and devoted exertions of those who were engaged in the mechanical arts, and not upon the patronage of the great or upon the eloquence of speakers. The chairman concluded by calling on those who had resolutions to move, to come forward.

Dr. R. CANNON has been nominated with the following resolution:—

“That Mechanics’ Institutions affording instruction at a cheap rate, have been productive of the greatest benefit to the interests of society, by advancing and improving the arts and sciences, and, in the opinion of this meeting, are calculated to increase the resources, power, and prosperity of the country where they are brought into operation.”

The learned and eloquent Chairman had fully explained the capacity as well as the willingness of the natives to improve themselves, and had also pointed out the necessity which there was for the establishment of an institution of the kind now in contemplation, in which necessity the resolution he held in his hand adverted.

Of this necessity there could be no doubt. He had only to look around us, in order to be convinced of the necessity of some institution which would teach the natives the application of science to the various arts now neglected by them. Look, he said, to the river, and observe the wretched boats that ply on it; they are now constructed in the same manner as they were in the primitive times. Consider how weakly and unscientifically their planks are put together, and how ill adapted is their form to afford security to the passengers, and those facilities which are secured by boats built on scientific principles. Yet, in a commercial place like this—a port of the greatest importance in all India—nothing was more requisite than good boats. He adverted to the loss of lives so often the consequence of the defects he pointed out. The sails of these boats were equally as bad as their hulls; they were made of a stuff which was scarcely an apology for canvas, and in the most awkward, unscientific manner. This circumstance proved the necessity of such an institution as was in contemplation. The state of agriculture, and agricultural implements used by the natives, were in an equally backward condition. He had lately read of an attempt made in some part of the country, to introduce the English plough, which was followed by great success. The making the printing Press also afforded another picture of the wretched condition in which the arts and sciences were in this country, and pointed to the necessity of a Mechanics’ institution among the natives. He was glad to say, that an opportunity now offered; an exceedingly cheap institution was to be established for the benefit of the poor, and he trusted they would now come forward to reap its advantages. It was true there might be some who would enquire what was the use of science to him as a mechanic, others would not understand the necessity of instruction, far instance, in Chemistry. But it was by a thorough knowledge of Chemistry that the immortal Watts obtained a clear insight into the doctrine of latent heat, and seconded by mechanical skill, taught the way to bring the steam engine into that perfection which, in its application to the arts and manufactures and navigation is now exciting the wonder of the whole world. It was by the knowledge of Chemistry that Wedgwood advanced the arts of manufacturing porcelain. Scheele discovered the oxygenized muriatic acid, which Berthollet brought to perfection and applied it to the art of Bleaching. Lavoisier and Davy, by Chemical processes, brought to perfection the art of tanning and preparation of leather. It was the Chemist who laid the foundation of those arts which furnish saline substances. Bergman, by the same knowledge, taught the most successful way of manufacturing bricks and tiles; in short, the useful arts of malting, dyeing, and printing, depend upon the knowledge of chemical operations. So much for the necessity of instruction in Chemistry. The same necessity exists for instruction in Electricity. The mechanic may not at first sight perceive the use of such knowledge, but he begged to say ever since the experiments of professor Volta, that distinguished German writer on philology and metaphysical philosophy, Sulzer, and the experiments of Professor Galvani, the progress of discoveries in Galvanism and electricity had been wonderful. He would merely allude to a few recent experiments. Professor Meissner constructed luminous tubes, having at intervals metallic plates, on which were formed, by means of a machine, a rapid succession of electric sparks. The professor obtained, by an operation of this kind and from a two feet machine, a constant light in his apartment resembling a bright moonlight. He asserts his ability to obtain the same result on a large scale to enable him to light up houses and streets by means of electric sparks. A plan has been shown for an instantaneous telegraphic communication between Edinburgh and London, by means of electric or magnetic currents transmitted through metallic conductors underground. The Reverend Mr. McCauley, presented a working model of a machine for producing moving power by the application of electro-magnetic influence. By other experiments in London by Davy, and Paige in America, and his zealous and talented friend O'Shaughnessy in India, it was proposed to show this influence would supersede the use of steam. He alluded to these facts merely to point out the importance of instruction in machines on scientific principles. It was the intention of this institution to show not only the way of making machinery but their value, the use of the wheel and the cylinder, the power of the screw and the lever to instruct young men in the principles by which machines were moved by wind, water, steam, electricity, atmospheric air, &c. To show the value of machinery in diminishing the cost of food, the labour of man, and in calling out the powers which man does not possess in himself; to develop that sublime gift which makes man superior to the rest of the animal creation, namely intellect which teaches him to subject the whole physical world to his dominion by availing himself of the powers which nature has placed around him. When he considered the extent of India, containing 1,16,000 square miles, equal in size to Great Britain, France Spain, Portugal, Poland and Turkey, with a population of 100,000,000 souls; when he considered the vast revenues derived and the aggrandizement of Britain by means of these possessions, he conceived it was the bounden duty of every British sojourner to promote the interests and happiness of the people, and to instruct them in the arts of civilized life.

Mr. SERRA, in rising to second the resolution, would make but a few observations. Since he had left England, every town in that country had its institutions for the promotion of arts and sciences; and he saw no reason why the germ of those institutions should not be sown in India. He had travelled over many parts of this country, and wherever he went he found the people very willing to learn and improve, and well disposed towards those who wished to instruct them. His brother, who had been an Indigo Planter in some part of Bengal, had found that the plough used there was of a very rude and slight description, so that proper furrough, could not be made without passing the plough a dozen times, seeing this, his brother had introduced a better description of plough used in other parts of the country, and recommended its use to the natives. He had since visited this province and had the satisfaction to find, that the newly introduced plough had come into common use among the people, who, preferring it into their former plough, had all taken to it. This circumstance he considered as a proof of the favorable disposition of the people to adopt improvements that may be recommended to them.

He then adverted to the progress of education in India. When he arrived in this country, there were but a very few public schools, the Parental Academic Institution, the Hindoo College, and one or two private seminaries, in all which the number of students did not exceed 500. But since that period, the number of public schools had greatly increased, and each of them had a much larger number of students than before. He thought from certain recent calculations, that the aggregate number of pupils in the public schools of Calcutta, amounted to about 1200. This showed a rapid increase in the number of the educated classes. He, however, regretted, that hitherto the attention of the educated classes had been so exclusively devoted to the pen—to mere transcribing in the offices of Calcutta, and he hoped that the establishment of an institution like the one now proposed, would take them from the pen to other more useful employments.

The resolution being put from the chair, was carried unanimously.

The Rev. Mr. BOAZ, rose to move the next resolution and observed, almost all that could be said on the subject, had already been said by the learned and Honorable Chairman, which obviated the necessity of his running into any detail. Dr. Corbyn too, had given the meeting a very full exposition of the advantages of chemistry—"there is nothing like leather" (much laughter); but the Doctor had also given a very graphic description of the native boats; might not he likewise turn his attention to the state of our roads and the most pleasing melody of the hackery wheels, with which we are constantly serenaded? As for himself, he did not profess to know the science of music, and could not decide on that grave question (laughter.) He would, therefore, leave the matter to others better qualified for the task. He had now managed to get through Dr. Corbyn, (laughter) at least through some part of his speech, and would now say a few words for himself. He felt very great pleasure at seeing so numerous and respectable an attendance on the occasion. He had at one time some doubt on his mind as to the success which such an institution would meet in Calcutta; but that doubt had been entirely removed by the cheering prospect held out by the interest which every one appeared to feel in the proposed institution. He had reason to believe, that many erroneous notions existed in regard to the objects and operations of a mechanics' institution. Some had asked him whether the institution would afford lodgings; others whether children would be taken in and we would do for them. The institution, he would once for all tell them, would neither lodge grown up men nor little children; but we would be most happy to take charge, for a few hours, at stated periods, of grown up children, and endeavour our best to make men of them. (Hear and much laughter.) The object of this institution was to bring speculative knowledge of years to bear upon practical operations, whereby the real and immediate comforts of society would be secured.

None, he trusted, would leave the room, without subscribing something towards this institution, for which purpose books had been prepared, in which he hoped they would all enter their names and residence in a clear and legible hand. The subscription of five rupees per year was so very small as to be within the reach of all, and he therefore hoped would all join the association. So soon as the funds permitted, a proper house would be taken to carry on the operations of the Society, where lectures would be delivered on various sciences and the arts, experiments exhibited, and instructions given to all who may feel disposed to avail themselves of these means of improvements; which would, at the same time, be highly entertaining, and he hoped would also prove a means of withdrawing young men from the billiard tables, and other similar pastimes, which lead many into debt and ruin. He hoped this society would prove a means of regenerating these people and producing among them a moral and healthy disposition. (Hear, hear and loud cheers.) We have, gentlemen, just hit on the proper nick of time for the establishment of this institution: we are neither too late nor too early. At this moment education has awakened the dormant minds of the people to appreciate the merits of an institution like this, and they are prepared to receive the proposal with zeal and interest. (Cheers.) In this display of feeling and approbation, we have a token of the success which awaits our exertions. But in the prospects before us, as connected with the progress of education in India, we can see the great and important bearings of this question. The fact that we are here ruling over the vast population of this extensive country, points out that we have been placed here for the accomplishment of some great object worthy of the character of the great and highly enlightened nation to which we belong. (loud cheers) we have been placed here to raise the people of India in the scale of improvement and to diffuse among them pure religion and morality. These surely are the great and important ends for which we are permitted to hold this vast empire in this distant part of the world. The establishment of institutions like this, are so many steps towards the accomplishment of that great end, and he felt much pleasure in being one of the humble instruments employed in the work. The Rev. Gentleman concluded in the midst of loud cheers, and then read the following resolution.

"That such an institution in this country would, in the opinion of this meeting, beget a love of science, encourage more generally the study and cultivation of the useful arts, and add to the comfort, well, being, and improvement of all classes."

Mr. Stocqueler, in seconding the foregoing resolution, said, that he did not expect to hear so eloquent an enumeration of the advantages of Mechanics' institutions from the lips of Mr. Boaz, after that gentleman's declaration, that the subject had been exhausted by the respected Chairman, Sir John Peter Gurnel and Mr. Corbyn. But the fact was, the subject is inexhaustible; and no sooner does a man get upon his legs with the intention of saying fifty words, than he finds himself irresistibly impelled to say five hundred. The subject was, indeed, inexhaustible. Mr. Stocqueler did not mean, however, to trouble the meeting with many observations of his own, as there were others infinitely more capable of expatiating on the advantages of the institute. But there was one point on which he would dwell for a single moment. Mr. Speed had alluded to the too common practice in Calcutta, of resorting to the pen for a livelihood. He, Mr. Stocqueler, quite agreed that it was a subject of congratulation that a nobler kind of occupation was now opening to the ambition of intelligent young men. There was, however, one difficulty, arising from erroneous prejudices, which would have to be overcome. It was too commonly supposed, by the class who would benefit by the Mechanics' institution, that their education has fitted them for higher pursuits than those of the artisan, and that the adoption of such a calling was beneath them. There might be some excuse for the notion, inasmuch as the artisans of India—the native artisan—were so immeasurably removed in the scale of society from those who were now to be encouraged to give their attention to the practical part of the arts and sciences; but that excuse would only refer to the past. The future European or Eurasian mechanic, would do well to bear in mind that, as in other branches of Indian education, he would become the teacher of uninformed hundreds—the head, in fact, of a new class of artisans, than which there could scarcely be a prouder station in the walks of civilized life. And this would be a consolation to all who fancied they were degrading themselves by embracing a new and hitherto despised line of life. "Let us have no more pen, gentlemen," said Mr. Stocqueler, "but as many tools as you please."

Dr. Spry—Gentlemen, I have been requested to take charge of a resolution, which, after the able and explicit observations that have been made by the Honourable Chairman and the other gentlemen who have addressed you, does not require that I should long dwell on it; even supposing that I had the ability, which I confess I have not, to do it justice. Gentlemen, the Hon'ble Chairman has spoken of the great natural quickness of the native community, and their aptitude for learning. I would wish to call your attention to another important class of our fellow citizens, who have not yet been alluded to,—I mean the great body of East Indians in the city. By the last census taken of the city of Calcutta, the European and East Indian population amounted to 12,000, and excepting a very small portion of this number employed in the public service and in Mercantile pursuits, the great mass all follow one avocation—the pen. Here, perhaps, more than among the natives, we may hope the advantage of the establishment of a Mechanics' institute will be felt. The principle which political economists, is to divide labour. By a Mechanics' institute, we may expect to instruct a part of this number in the knowledge of the physical sciences and thus create a diversion, as it were, from the one great object present of all, and thus prevent the ruinous competition which is going on. I cannot better illustrate the necessity of such an institution as a Mechanics' institute in the city, than by detailing to you a circumstance which has just occurred. A Government officer in the interior, wrote to me the other day, begging that I would look out for an active, clever person to undertake the instruction of some families in the knowledge of some simple machinery, whereby they might earn something more than the wages of common uneducated industry. The heads of these families have, most of them, paid the forfeit of their lives for their crimes and the object of the Government is, to by imparting instruction of the kind now alluded to, the children, to prevent them from following in the footsteps of their fathers. Gentlemen, in so large a place as Calcutta, would you believe it, after diligent search, I was unable to find a single man who was qualified to undertake this office of overseer. Can there be a more striking proof wanting to show the necessity of bringing up a portion of our community in a scientific knowledge of the arts. It is with feelings of the highest satisfaction then, that I beg to move the following resolution.

"That a Mechanics' Institution and School of Arts," be established in Calcutta.

Mr. M. Crow, felt much pleasure in seconding the resolution moved by Dr. Spry. Although Europeans who might join the intended institution would largely benefit by it, those who were likely to derive the most permanent benefit from it, were his countrymen the Natives of India. He wished to be distinctly understood, that by Natives of India he meant not only those of his countrymen who were dressed in the costume of India, but also those like himself, in the costume of Europe. Dress, in his opinion, made no distinction, and he was not aware if any proper and definite line of demarkation by which these who were called Natives could be distinguished in their civil relations of life from those who were denominated East Indians (hear hear.) Every Native was an East Indian and every East Indian a Native. They both formed but one nation, and the few trivial distinctions which yet existed between them, would, he hoped, soon give way before the influence of education. (Cheers.) This was the nation then which would derive the greatest share of the blessings which were expected to flow from the establishment of a Mechanics' Institution in this country; it was his countrymen who would for the longest period reap the most precious fruits of this institution. This reflection made him feel greatly indebted to those who had exerted themselves in endeavouring to establish this institution. He felt that himself, his children, and all his countrymen, for ages to come, would remain indebted to those philanthropic foreigners, who thus labored to benefit them, not only by the establishment of the Mechanics' institution, but all other institutions originated by Englishmen for the improvement of the people of India. For these blessings India owed to England a heavy debt of gratitude, which nothing but the sincerest and the most lasting loyalty to the crown of Great Britain, could repay. (Loud cheers.) He had much pleasure in seeing so many of his countrymen present, and taking an interest in these proceedings, and he hoped they would all support the institution not with large donations, but by joining it. He said he felt much more in the contemplation of the prospect which institutions like these held out to the people of India, than he had words to express, and he trusted that the originators of this institution, would be assured, that with his heart and soul, he was devoted to the object they had in view. The resolution which he had the honor to second, was intended to give existence to the Mechanics' Institution—to bring it into being, and he felt proud in having been made an instrument for the purpose of effecting that great object. (Applause.)

Mr. SINCLAIR next rose and addressed the chairman nearly as follows. He hoped that he was not infringing on the order of the night, by intruding on the attention of the meeting; he begged to assure the chairman, that he did come there with no intention of taking any part in the proceedings of the night; but he found it impossible to keep silent possession of his seat after the short but animated speech of Mr. Crow. On many occasions, in by-gone days, had Mr. Sincaes the pleasure of addressing the public in this hall, and they were on occasions in which he was interested; but he begged to assure the worthy and respectable chairman, and the meeting, that he never felt a deeper interest than in the institution now proposed to be established—frankly, as he thought it to be, with incalculable benefit to the rising generation, and tending, as he hoped it would, to the exultation of the pen, an avocation to which his countrymen were mostly devoted. He presumed to assure the worthy chairman, that he had listened with great pleasure and delight to his very eloquent and lucid speech, and when he said so, he trusted that Sir John Peter Grant would receive it, not as the ordinary cant of the day, but as his honest and sincere opinion. In the midst of that lengthened and explanatory speech, he had much to admire the sentiment in which that illustrious individual was pleased so pointedly to express himself with regard to the Hindoo of this country. The gratification he felt in the contemplation of the good that it was likely to do them, Mr. Sincaes fully participated in; but he deeply regretted, that no encouraging word had been extended to the East Indians (cries of order, order.) Mr. Sincaes here addressing the chair, said he was extremely sorry that he should have said any thing that could have given offence, but that he would beg leave to state to the meeting that he was perfectly borne out in this bit allusion, by the observations of the speaker, with whom he was unacquainted, but whose resolution was seconded by Mr. Crow. He would not, however, refer further to that subject; but concluded by reiterating the deep interest which he took in the proposed institution—he felt a glow of delight at beholding so many of his countrymen around him who had thereby demonstrated the interest they took in the establishment of the Mechanics' Institute. He was confident that it would receive their hearty support, and when he reflected that so illustrious an individual as Sir John Peter Grant, gave his powerful support and countenance to it, together with several other important personages whom he saw before him, he felt assured that the very laudable undertaking could not but prosper.

Mr. TWENTYMAN, junior, said, that although he was an East Indian, being born in this country, he had been sent to serve his time as an apprentice in England, which would not have been the case had a Mechanical Institution, such as it was now intended to establish here, then existed. He had seen several similar institutions in England; but he generally observed, that in them almost all desired to be teachers, and none was found willing to occupy the humble station of the learner. These institutions, therefore, generally became a sort of debating clubs. He hoped to see a difference in this respect in the institution about to be formed, which he trusted all trades-people would join and support. Mr. Twentyman made some further observations which we could not take down.

Mr. C. PARR, who held the next resolution in his hand, observed, that the prejudices of the natives, to which allusion had been made, were certainly great; but they had generally yielded to the salutary influence of education, which was now in progress. In Europe too, there was much prejudice, which gave way as the light of knowledge advanced; and he had every hope, that English enlightenment would soon expel the mists of Hindoo ignorance. He could not agree with the Honorable Chairman in the opinion, that the countenance and power of the great, would be of no avail in advancing the interests of this institution. This he thought would go far in its favor, and he expected the greatest good would result from the connection of Sir J. P. Grant with this institution. The aid of influential natives, he considered, would also go far to promote the objects of the Society, and he hoped it would be used by those who would have the conduct of its affairs. Mr. Parr then moved.

“That the following persons be appointed a committee for the purpose of carrying all the resolutions of this meeting into effect.

President.—Sir J. P. Grant.

Vice Presidents.—Rev. T. Hoax and Dr. F. Corbya.

Trustees.—Wale Byrn and—

Treasurer.—The Union Bank.

Secretaries.—George Grant and C. Grant.

Auditors.—

Committee.—Rev. J. Campbell; F. Carbury; Tara-chand Chackrabarti; Captain C. Craide; M. Crow; P. S. D'Rozario; J. Graves; E. Grey; N. Grant; J. McLelland; J. Middleton; Ramchand Mitter; J. Morris; Rev. W. Mouton; W. H. Perkins; W. Rachtou; G. T. F. Speed; H. H. Spry; J. M. Voss, and H. Wollaston.

Lieutenant KIRROF, in seconding the foregoing resolution, adverted to the late Mr. Kyd, who, although an East Indian, had been sent to England to be brought up as a Mechanic, and with whose success in this country the meeting were too well acquainted to make any description necessary. As to prejudices, he was of opinion, that all nations had their peculiar prejudices. He had visited several parts of India, and had always felt a great delight in pursuing mechanical occupations for the sake of amusement; in the course of these pursuits he had often had active workmen employed under his immediate superintendence, and he always found them exceedingly willing to improve. This disposition he observed particularly in young men. At Juanpoor, he had several of these employed under him upon the low pay of four pice per diem, whom he endeavoured to instruct, and he would freely confess, that whilst he instructed them, he instructed himself also, for there was no man ever so ignorant from whom something good and useful could not be learnt. He had lately heard from that quarter, and had the satisfaction to learn, that those young men were now employed upon wages of ten to twelve rupees per mensem each. He had taught them but very little, and yet such was the happy result of the little they had learnt. Lieutenant Kirroff alluded to several noblemen in England, who took great delight in mechanical pursuits. He particularly mentioned a French nobleman, who had taught all his sons same trade. His eldest son had learnt the trade of basket making. When the French revolution happened, these noblemen were deprived of all their possessions and the eldest son earned an honest living for some years by making baskets, until circumstances having again changed, he was enabled to recover a portion of his lost property. As for Lieut. K. himself he could put his hand to any thing (laughter) to put bread in his mouth. He was happy to find such an institution established here; and he sincerely hoped, it would prosper. He concluded by seconding the above resolution.

The Rev. Mr. Hoax wished to propose an amendment, viz. the addition to the original resolution, of the words “with power to add to their number;” upon the strength of which, he hoped, to be able to add to the Committee the name of Lieutenant Kirroff, who, he was glad to find, could turn his hand to anything. (Laughter) He would accordingly move, that Lieutenant Kirroff's name be added to the Committee.

The Chairman then successively put both the resolution and the amendment, which were carried nem con.

Mr. G. W. JOHNSON, moved the adoption of the 5th Resolution. He said that he little anticipated when entering the room, that he should have the pleasure of moving any of the intended Resolutions, though he certainly had proposed to offer his services to the institution when formed. He had assisted in the formation of several in his native country, and he rejoiced now to have the opportunity of raising his voice for the first time in an Indian assembly to advocate the said cause.

They had heard from their chairman, an eloquent detail of the general advantages and pleasures to be derived from the application of science to the arts, and Dr. Corbyn had pointed out, very markedly, much requiring such application; on another point, notwithstanding the short time that he had been in the country he, (Mr. J.) considered that he was qualified to bear testimony, perhaps as one but lately arrived: the fact struck him more forcibly; he alluded to the expertness of the natives as handicraftsmen. The chains of Trichinopoly were a sufficient example. This adroitness is a foundation for science to build upon, a qualification for science to direct. It had been said in the course of the evening, that the natives had a prejudice against engaging in the mechanical arts; but he thought there was too much good sense among them for this to be a permanent prejudice when they become fully aware of the wealth and fame to which those arts conducted when guided by science. Arkwright had been a mere barber, yet a knowledge of mechanics, had enabled him to construct that machinery which empowered England to spin cotton grown in Hindustan, and to return it hither for sale at a lower price than it could be manufactured for on the spot. Davy was a stone-mason at Penzance, yet the accidental acquirement of a knowledge of Chemistry, had enabled him to earn an unyielding fame; and if he had given to the world no other discovery than the safety-lamp, it would have entitled him to be marked among the benefactors of mankind.* He was happy to see that an ignorant prejudice, which occasionally kept the gentry in English country towns from aiding institutions like the one proposed, did not exist at Calcutta, for the most highly educated must at first be the instructors. As an editor of the Englishman, and in his relative capacity, he should exert his utmost abilities to support the institution; and he had been deputed by others to promise similarly. He would not detain the meeting longer, but at once read the resolution.

"That a code of rules be drawn up as soon as convenient, by the committee and sub-committee, for the general approval of the Members of the Institution."

In conclusion, he would recommend the committee to be alert in the performance of the duty deputed to them; for he knew that there is nothing like "striking whilst the iron is hot."

This resolution being seconded by Mr. J. D. M., and put from the chair, was carried unanimously.

Mr. WALKER BRAN.—I beg to propose a resolution not one which is on the paper before you, but which, notwithstanding will, I am sure, commend itself to the attention of my hearers. The conviction on the mind of the Meeting, that advantages are likely to result from the establishment of the Mechanic's institution, will no doubt lead all present to appreciate highly the services of that individual with whom the institution has originated, I mean the Lord, Mr. Boaz. The benefactors of their kind ought in an especial manner to be brought before our notice; firstly, because, for benefits received, it is proper that a return should be made; and secondly, because the honors and distinctions conferred upon such, may be an inducement for others to follow the same useful career. I do not, Mr. Chairman, know any individual who, within the short time he has been in India, has proved himself so useful as Mr. Boaz. To him, we owe the establishment of the Seamen's Home, an institution which has been productive of incalculable good; to him we must owe the efforts made to put down the attempt to introduce a sort of slave trade into India, and for the service done to the interests of humanity, we owe him our acknowledgements. With his characteristic usefulness, we see him now originating an institution which will doubtless be promotive of the best interests of all classes of the Indian community.

* Mr. Johnson quoted the late Mr. Burns, and another instance of a mechanic rising to fortune and favor, by acquiring a knowledge of science; but as in this instance he was in error, we have cancelled that part of his observations.

I regret on account of Mr. Boaz, that some person better able than myself, has not undertaken the task, should I have imposed upon myself, but I will confess that I should not readily give way to any person in paying to him the tribute of respect and gratitude, which I, in common with others, owe to that gentleman.

He concluded by moving—

"That in the opinion of this meeting, the acknowledgments of this community are due to the Rev. Mr. Boaz, for originating the mechanic's institution and school of arts."

This was seconded by Dr. Corbyn, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Voss now proposed the thanks of the meeting to the chair.

Sir J. P. GRANT said, he of course could not put this resolution to the vote; but he would return his thanks to the gentleman who had proposed it, and to the meeting, by whom it had been so kindly met. In the high situation he occupied in this presidency, he felt it his duty to encourage all undertakings calculated to promote the interests of this community. He regretted, that duties which in a more particular manner pressed upon his time, would not allow him to devote to these laudable objects, so much of his attention, as he would otherwise have devoted; but he assured the meeting, that so far as it lay in his power, he would do all he could to advance its interests. Adverting to what had been said that evening by a gentleman born in this country, in regard to the debt of gratitude which the people of India owed to England for the improvements that had been made in this country, he would observe, that whatever might be the circumstances under which Englishmen first came to this country, whatever might have been their motive for it now, that they were established here, it was a paramount duty incumbent upon them, to endeavour, to the utmost of their power, to diffuse that illumination of science and the arts, of which they themselves enjoyed so large a share. He considered the people of England bound to improve the people of India. He then alluded to the remark of one of the speakers, who had found fault with him for omitting to make any mention of East Indians, when he spoke of the Natives of this country. This omission, he begged to assure the gentleman, did not arise from any ill feeling towards the East Indians; but purely from the accidental circumstances of his having been acquainted with some native gentlemen; whom he had in view when he spoke on the subject. He had another reason for mentioning the natives in particular, in stating which he begged their pardon; it was the circumstance of the great mass of them having much stronger prejudices than any other class. Any body, the East Indians, he thought, were more free from prejudices, and he, therefore, trusted, that they would be more forward in carrying into effect the objects of the institution. For his part, he would always feel the greatest pleasure in promoting the objects of the Mechanic's Institution.

The Rev. Mr. Boaz said, that although the meeting had been dissolved, he would move first, that the word difficulty be expunged out of the vocabulary of this institution, secondly, that all ladies and gentlemen be permitted to put their names down in the subscription books in a legible hand with their addresses (laughter). He also stated other propositions which we could not take down.

Mr. R. Dias now begged to be heard; but no sooner had he begun his address, than there commenced such a din from moving of chairs on the marble pavement, that it was impossible to hear the speaker.

The Chairman having repeatedly called order, some quiet was restored, when he observed, that nothing but an Irishman would admit of resolutions being put after the meeting had been dissolved. But as the example had been set by Mr. Boaz, who was not an Irish but an Yorkshire-man, the gentleman who now wished to address the meeting, might be heard also. Mr. Dias therefore resumed his speech; but the moving of chairs recommenced and drowned his voice; we however heard him speaking to the following effect: Mr. Boaz's proposition was excellent and as he believed, that Government were bound by the Charter to support and appropriate a certain portion of the Revenue of India, for the dissemination of knowledge, this institution being a very important branch of education might, with reason, seek the assistance of the state. Mr. Dias did not mean to dictate to the Committee, but he thought that a proposition from the meeting, would be met with better grace, than if it were made by the committee.

The Chairman said, he could not regularly put the proposition to the meeting; but he hoped, the Government, with its usual liberality, would not withhold aid from the institution when called upon.

Four apologies for non-attendance were then read, from Mr. D. Macfarlan, Baboo Rustomjee Cowasjee, Baboo Rustomoy Dut, and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore. The meeting next proceeded to sign the books, one of which is for donation and the other for subscription. In the former, upwards of 700 rupees were put down, and 60 in the latter. These books now lie open for signature at Mr. George Grant's, Tank-Square, and we learn, that it is the intention of the committee to open other books at the Hurkaru, the Englishman and the Courier offices. The meeting broke up at about 10 P. M.

We have been obligingly favored with a sight of the bye-laws intended for the institution, which appear to us well adapted to answer the objects contemplated by the society. We wished very much to make a few selections from them, to place the manner in which it will work before our readers; but our time does not at present admit of this. We, however, begged to notice, that each member, on admission and payment of his subscription which is five rupees, is to receive a copy of the rules, together with a card admitting him to all the privileges of the institution, and the ladies of his family to the lectures. We have also seen a lithographed impression of this card, drawn by Mr. C. Grant. The design is extremely appropriate, and one may well subscribe if it be only to possess so pretty an emblem of mechanical industry, illustrated by four infants occupied in each corner of the card in using the lever, the screw, the wheel and the wedge.—Hurkaru February 28.

SUPREME COURT.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1838.

FIRST TERM OF 1839.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seaton.

DOR D. BUDDENAUH GHOSAL V. J. A. DEVERAL.

The Advocate-General was proceeding to shew cause against Mr. Clarke's rule for postponing the trial of this ejectment, but,

Sir E. Ryan said, that the utmost that the learned Advocate could obtain, would be a trial at the very end of the Sittings, and as Term commenced only a fortnight after, it would be as well to give to an early day in the Sittings.

The Advocate-General said, that he had no objection if the opposite parties were tied down to terms.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the time would be extended to the first day of next term, but the rule would only be made absolute on costs being paid.

Rule to be made absolute on payment of costs.

IN THE MATTER OF JOHN RUSSELL.

Mr. Clarke moved to quash the conviction (The circumstances of this case have appeared in the Hurkaru,) in the report of the learned counsel's motion for a certiorari. The grounds were error apparent on the face of the conviction. The Magistrate of Pabna, Mr. Allen, inflicted a fine on the applicant, Mr. Russell, for an alleged assault, and set forth in his Roobicarree that he had acted under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155 s. 105. It appeared from the Roobicarree, that there was a discrepancy between the story of the complainant and that of the witness, which the Magistrate had reconciled by the hypothesis that the complainant must have been so excited as not to know that happened! and upon the application of the defendant (Mr. R.) to call the wife of the complainant as a witness for the defence, the Magistrate had refused, solely on the ground that it would be an indignity to the lady! The learned counsel contended, that the conviction was clearly bad and could not be supported.

The Advocate-General addressed the Court on behalf of Mr. Allen. He attempted to allow, first that Mr. Russell was not a person within the scope of the statute of Geo. III., and secondly, that there was nothing bad in the conviction, for that the Magistrate himself was the proper judge of the facts which had appeared before him.

Mr. Clarke in reply, observed, that the Magistrate would not have been much indebted to the advocacy of his learned friend, if he had succeeded in showing that Mr. Russell was not a person within the purview of the statute, for the Magistrate had expressly acted under the statute, and if Mr. R. was not a person contemplated by the statute, the conviction was altogether illegal, and although the present mode of quashing the conviction could not be supported, it would then be open to Mr. Russell to proceed according to the course which was adopted in a certain recent prosecution against another Mofussil Magistrate.

Sir E. Ryan. We do not think it necessary to consider the question whether Mr. Russell is "an inhabitant of territories" within the meaning of the statute. We think the conviction must be quashed. The wife of the complaining party was evidently a material witness, of whose testimony the defendant ought not gratuitously to have been deprived. Each party is to pay his own costs. A distinct motion must be made for the remission of the fine.

Conviction quashed.

JOHN DAVIDSON SMITH V. WILLIAM WOOD ROBINSON.

The Advocate General moved to make absolute an order for taking the plaint and warrant of attorney off the file and all proceedings stayed.

Mr. Prinsep shewed cause. The circumstances of this case had more than once been before the Court in another form. Mr. Smith, before his departure for England, left a joint and several general power of attorney with Fraser and Macdonald, and another joint special power (relating to the bond on which this action was brought) to Fraser and Sim of subsequent date. It did not appear which of the powers had been delivered last, although they bore different dates. The present action on the bond had been brought by Macdonald, by virtue of the general power of attorney, and the question thus arose whether the bringing of the action was fully authorized. Fraser had gone to England, so that the joint special power could not be acted upon at present. On the one side, it was contended that the special power revoked the general power pro tanto—on the other, it was contended that the two powers were concurrent. There was a letter written by Mr. Smith at the time of giving the special power, in which he used the expression that he had "tied up" the hands of Mr. Fraser, by joining him in the power with Mr. Sim, thus apparently implying that that general power of attorney had been suspended at all events by the subsequent special power. The learned counsel, however, contended at great length that the subsequent power of attorney was only collateral and supplementary to the former, and that the two co-existed, and that either might at any time have been acted upon; or at all events, even if the operation of the general power were in any way affected by the special power, it was only suspended and not revoked altogether, and must be taken to be revived, as soon as the latter becomes temporarily or permanently inoperative.

Mr. Cochrane followed vehemently on the same side. He said that he could find no case expressly in point in his own favour, but he would defy his learned friends to point out one against him, and he referred to authorities which shewed that the entire administration of the effects of a deceased party might be granted to one person, and a partial administration to another.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith, in support of the rule, were not called upon.

Mr. E. Ryan.—This rule must be made absolute with costs. The opinion which I expressed in the Impotent Court, when I decided that the adjudication must be set aside, is now sanctioned by the unanimous opinion of the Court. If it was necessary to look to the intentions of the party, they would appear from the letter. But we decide upon the instruments themselves, and we are of opinion that the general power was revoked pro tanto by the special. The special power of attorney gave an authority to do a particular act in a particular manner, and in that only.

Rule absolute with costs.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY V. GOVINDCHUNDER BONEJEE.

This was a demurrer to a special plea, which was very ably argued at considerable length. As it involves rather subtle points of pleading, a report of the argument will be given tomorrow.

The Court gave judgment for the plaintiff on the demurrer, thus finding the plea bad, but execution was stayed, as there remain pleas to be tried upon which issue has been joined.

The Court rose at half past 4.—Hark., Feb. 1.

FRIDAY, 1ST FEBRUARY.

JOHN REVELY V. BENJAMIN HARDING AND OTHERS.

This was an action on a policy of insurance for freight, brought against the equitable Insurance Company.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case. The action was brought by Revely upon a policy of insurance granted by the agents of the Society at Penang on the ship, Edward, from that place to Bombay, upon the freight of the vessel to the amount and value of Spanish dollars 6,000, or sicca rupees 12,630. Evidence had been taken de bene esse on a former day, on behalf of the plaintiff, and it had been proved that the vessel was severely damaged in a white squall near Cochin, and that she had put into that port, and grounding there had become a total wreck. The goods were greatly damaged, and sold there for a trifling sum, so that freight was never earned. The defendants had set up several objections, viz., that the ship was not sea-worthy, also that she had been lost by fraud and negligence on the part of the Captain, also that the cargo in fact had never been put on board, and lastly that the plaintiff was not interested as alleged. The learned Counsel said, that there was no proof of any of these matters (all of which, had been specially pleaded) and that although he had no more witnesses to call to the facts, there was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover.

The depositions taken de bene esse were put in, and read off by three persons, P. A. Peterson, J. M. Scully and R. J. Phillips, who had deposed to the circumstances of the loss. It appeared from their evidence, that the Captain, Thomas Nunn, was jointly interested in the ship and freight. The sum insured was $12,630, but the whole freight, to which the plaintiff was proved to be entitled on delivering the goods, would have been only $950.

The bills of lading were proposed to be put in, to shew that the cargo had been shipped. This was objected to on the authority of Dickson v. Lodge, 1 Starkie 226, because between these parties the bill of lading was a mere declaration of a third party (the Captain, too, who was interested here) and therefore inadmissible to bind the defendants. The Court received the bills of lading, however, saying that the admission could not be objected to, but what they proved was another consideration.

John Allen, formerly a partner in the house of Bagshaw and Co., the agents and secretaries of the equitable Insurance, was called by the plaintiff to prove that a policy on goods in the same adventure, had actually been adjusted with the plaintiff, as insurer, by Messrs. Bagshaw and Co.—Witness could not say how or why the adjustment was with the plaintiff, but he presumed that there were some documents shewing authority, although it did not appear that he was the indorsee of the bill of lading. Mr. Allen added, that the reason for refusing adjustment on the freight-policy, was that there had notoriously been some roguery in the matter of this ship on the part of Captain Nunn.

Mr. Leith (with whom was Mr. Morton for the defence, addressed the Court for a verdict. Having premised that an adjustment on the policy for the goods did not by any means conclude the underwritten with respect to the freight policy. The Defendant v. Campbell, he took three objections to the claim on the merits: 1st, That the goods might have been re-shipped at Cochin, and forwarded to Bombay, in which case they would have earned freight; for although damaged they were still in case, Davidson v. Grayne, 12 East 381. It was the plaintiff's own fault, therefore, that he was damaged at all. Although there was no special plea to this effect, the objection was valid, in as much as it appeared on the plaintiff's own evidence, and amounted to a failure of proof—2dly, There was cogent evidence to presume fraud. The freight was wilfully over-valued, for this was a question upon which the plaintiff must have had definite knowledge, and the misstatement could only have been with a fraudulent view. It was not a case of short interest which entitled him to recover pro tanto but an ingredient of positive fraud, which vitiated the whole contract by making it a wagering policy, and so precluded recovery altogether, Haigh v. De la Cour, 3 Campbell. Lastly, the interest of the insured was not properly stated, and the one above was the party named in the policy, and in the plaint. This was more than mere formal objection, for the interest ought to be truly stated on the record for the information of the underwriters. The cases of Bell v. Ansley, 18 East, and Cohen v. Hannam, 5 Taunton, were expressly in point.

The Advocate-General was heard on the questions raised. He contended that the objections were insufficient, and that even if the interest was not truly averred, the Court would allow them to amend even at this stage of the cause.

Mr. Leith in reply was stopped by the Court.

Sir E. Ryan said, that there must be a general verdict for the defendants. On the 1st point taken, the Court were of opinion, that there was not sufficient evidence distinctly to warrant a finding that the goods might have been re-shipped and freight earned, and that at all events this could not be raised on these pleadings. On the 2d, also, they thought that fraud could not be inferred, for the Court was always peculiarly unwilling to presume fraud. (See Williams v. The East India Company.) But on the 3d point, they were of opinion, that the issue must be found for the defendants. The interest was not truly stated, and according to the two cases cited, this was a fatal objection. Leave would be given, however, to the plaintiff to move for a verdict to be entered up for him, as the point was certainly merely one of law, and the Court would not be favourably disposed to such an objection, nor would they wish it to succeed, unless there were some peculiar reasons in the back ground, which it was presumed was the case here. Perhaps the amendment might have been allowed under the new rules, if it had not been for the plea (the 4th) of the defendants which expressly took issue on the question of interest. The issues therefore, on the 1st, 2d and 3d special pleas, must be found for the plaintiff, and the issue on the 4th, and the issues on the common counts, for the defendants, which would thus entitle them to the general costs and a general verdict.

Verdict for the defendants.—Hurd., Feb. 2.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30.

RADAKISSAN MITTER v. THE BANK OF BENGAL AND OTHERS.

The first argument of this cause will be found in the number of the Hurders of July 10th, and the second in the number of December 3rd.

Messrs. Clarke and Nett were Counsel for the complainant.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, Counsel for the Bank of Bengal.

Mr. Leith for the Secretary to the Bank.

Messrs. Cochran and Sanders for the Assignees, Macnaghten and Ouseley.

Messrs. Osborne and Merton for the Assignee, Colville.

T. B. Swinhoe, Esq., was the Solicitor for the complainant.

T. Sanders, Esq., Solicitor for the Bank and the two Assignees.

Messrs. Wight, Boyle and Thomas for the Assignee Colville.

The Court postponed judgment until the present term, when a difference of opinion existing on the Bench, their Lordships delivered their judgments seriatim, the junior Puisne Judge commencing secundum morem.

Sir H. W. Selon. This was a petition of rehearing on behalf of the complainant on the equity side of the Court. There are no matters of fact in dispute in the case. At the time of the insolvency of Ferguson and Co., the Bank of Bengal were holders of certain bills of exchange of which the complainant was drawer and the insolvent house the acceptor; the bills were dishonoured, and actions at law were instituted against the drawer by the Bank, and it was the object of the present suit to restrain these proceedings. Three grounds of equity were relied on by the complainant:—1st that there was an express agreement that he was not to be responsible, between himself and the Bank:—2dly, that there was an agreement to this effect between himself and Ferguson, who was a partner in the house and also a Director of the Bank, and that this amounted through him to constructive knowledge on the part of the Bank:—3rdly, that there were equitable circumstances arising out of transactions on the part of the Bank which discharged his liability as drawer of the bills. On the first point, there is no evidence to support the alleged equity. With respect to the second, there is evidence of an agreement and express understanding between the complainant and Mr. Ferguson, and it is proved that Mr. Ferguson was a Director of the Bank; but I am of opinion that the Bank is not affected by such constructive evidence of notice, and even if they were held to be so, the result would only be, that at the time of discounting the bills, the Bank must be taken to have had notice that they were accommodation bills, which alone would not affect them as holders for value. On the third (and the important) point, relating to the alleged equity arising out of the transactions of the Bank itself, the facts are admitted. The Bank held in their hands a deposit of certain goods, the surplus produce of which would have been available to the liquidation of the bills; but these goods they suffered the assignees to redeem by paying the amount for which they had been specifically pledged, without applying the surplus, (as they would have been entitled to do by the terms of the general lien given under the deposit-bonds) to the partial liquidation of the outstanding bills. Now the principle equity fully admitted, that if the creditor voluntarily parts with any right or remedy against the principal debtor, which might have been available for the protection or the indemnity of the surety, this exonerates the latter from his liability; prima facie, therefore, in the present case, the drawer of the bills, who was a surety for the acceptor, was discharged by this act of the Bank. Then let us see what the objections to this conclusion are. It is said in the first place, that the surety must have paid the debt before he can claim to stand in the place of his principal. To the cases cited on this point, may be added, Pratt v. Gardner, 2 Cox's Reports 86; but in all these cases there is a plain distinction, for the surety was seeking to avail himself of the remedy, and not merely applying to be discharged from the liability. There is an obvious inconsistency in saying that the surety must pay before he can be discharged from payment; and according to Mayhen v. Cricket, 2 Swanston, the creditor can do no act to his prejudice whether he has paid or not. The only case which throws any doubt upon the question, is Brown v. Carr, 2 Russell, but that case was decided upon peculiar grounds. Again a second objection urged is, that the complainant, as surety, was not diminished in fact, inasmuch as it appears that according to the then market rate, no profit would have been really available at all by the sale of the property pledged. On this point the evidence is not by any means satisfactory, and conclusive, to shew that no profit could have been realised; and it is to be observed that the Bank are precluded by their Charter from advancing loans upon inadequate security (i. e. unless the value is the fourth more) so that it would seem to follow, if they acted according to their Charter, that the deposited property must have had some surplus value. At all events the surety must be left to judge for himself:—he was entitled to the chance of profit, and of this contingent benefit he ought not to have been deprived. The last objection relates to the form of notice, and involves more difficulty. The complainant gave notice to the Bank to retain the property in their hands on his account, but it is said that he ought to have accompanied this with an offer to indemnify against loss. Now I think that he was entitled to notice from the Bank of the offer of the assignees. It is urged indeed that the complainant had no right to compel the Bank to speculate for his benefit:—true, but he had a right to speculate for himself. I am of opinion, therefore, that by depriving him of a right which might have been available for his partial or perfect indemnity, the Bank have exonerated him from his suretyship liability. With respect to the extent of the discharge, I consider that it would be very difficult, if not impossible to appportion it, and that the discharge must be held to be absolute. The decree, I think, ought, under all the circumstances, to be without cost; and the complainant must pay the costs of the Secretary.

Sir J. P. Grant.—Having stated my opinion very fully on a former occasion, it is unnecessary for me now to say any thing more than that my impression remains quite unchanged. Turning over the matter in my mind, my conviction becomes even stronger, that this view of the case is consistent with strict Justice and fair dealing between the parties. I think it superfluous to consume the time of the Court with a repetition of my argument. The notes of my former judgment are very much at the service of the defendant's Counsel*.

Sir Edward Ryan. I have the misfortune in this case to differ from both my learned brothers. I retain the opinion which I expressed at the first hearing of the case. It seems to me unnecessary to go into a minute consideration of the circumstances which appeared in evidence, as there is no dispute of facts; nor indeed necessity to examine the arguments in detail, differing as I do, in no respect from the principles of law and equity so ably and clearly laid down by Mr. Justice Stoun, and by a very narrow line from the inferences which he has drawn and the applications which have been made. The only point of the evidence to which I shall refer, is, the notice given by the complainant to the Bank not to deliver the copper. Now this was after the dishonour of the bill, and therefore after his liability as drawer had accrued, and yet he makes no offer to pay the debt due or to indemnify against loss. Admitting fully that the surety is entitled to every remedy of which the creditor can avail himself against the principal debtor;—admitting that if the creditor parts with his debt to which the surety might have resorted, he exonerates the latter at least protanto.—I am yet of opinion, that something remained for the surety to do before he could claim a right to demand a transfer of the securities to himself. He neither offered to pay the debt nor to indemnify against the fluctuations of the market. If the copper had proved to be of less value than the debt, the Bank could only have claimed a dividend for the deficiency, and part of their debt would thus have been put in jeopardy. I believe I am correct in saying, that my learned brother would have concurred in opinion with me, if it had appeared that the Bank had given the complainant notice of the offer of the assignees to redeem. The question then is narrowed to the single point whether the Bank (the creditors) were bound to give the notice, or whether the complainant (who was the debtor, and the party to be benefited) ought not rather to have made the offer himself. One word upon the discretion of costs. Since I have sat in this Court, I have always considered costs, both at law and in equity, to be within the direction of the Court. The clause in the charter seems to bear this out. Boomes, a writer of some authority, lays it down as a general principle, that in equity the losing party is always prima facie liable upon every consideration of equity and justice. Upon this ground, whenever I myself have been in a minority, and my opinion has been overruled by the rest of the Court, I have invariably expressed my opinion that the question of costs was not affected by the want of unanimity, and that it must go with the decision of the majority of the Court. In the present instance, however, independently of the difference of opinion on the bench, there is this peculiarity, that the complainant commenced with a case totally different from that which he afterwards set up, and upon which he has eventually succeeded. The decree, therefore, will be without costs and the complainant must pay the costs of Udney, the Secretary to the Bank, who was made a party merely for the purposes of discovery.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY v. GOVINDCHUNDER BONNERJEE.

This was a demurrer to a special plea.

The plea contained a count on a promissory note for rupees 18,600, and account upon an account stated. To the latter count the defendant pleaded (besides the general issue) a special plea to the following effect:—that as to the sum of Co.'s Rs. 18,600, the defendant before the commencement of the suit, to wit on the 27th day of July, 1837, delivered to S. G. Palmer, at plaintiff's request, his promissory note in writing of the same amount payable ten days after date to the said Palmer, which promissory note the plaintiff accepted and received for and on account of the said sum of 18,600, whereby the defendant became and was still liable to pay the said sum to Palmer, according to the tenor and effect of his note.

To this plea the plaintiff demurred, shewing for special causes:—1st, that it did not appear by the plea that the note to Palmer was given or received in satisfaction of the debt due to the plaintiffs:—2dly, that it appeared by the plea itself that the note to Palmer was outstanding, overdue and unpaid:—and 3rdly, that the plea did not aver that the time for the payment had not elapsed.

The Court called upon the defendant's Counsel to support the plea.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the plea. The plea is good, and according to all the precedents in such cases, if the note had been given to the plaintiffs themselves, the delivery must have been averred to be in satisfaction, but not so when given to a third party. (See 3 Cl. & F.

* Decree for the complainant, according to the prayer of the bill, and for an injunction;—each party paying their own costs, and complainant to pay costs of Secretary to the Bank.

† We have understood Sir J. P. Grant to nod assent.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1839.

Pleading, p. 788, 2 Chit. Jun. Contracts 593). This defence is not by way of accord and satisfaction, because it does not operate as an extinguishment of the original debt, but only as a suspension; so that the gist of the defence, is not a substituted payment which discharges the original liability altogether, but new and outstanding liability to a third party, incurred at the plaintiff's request. Kerlake v. Morgan, 5 Term Rep. 513. Stedman v. Gooch 1 Rep. 3. Crisp v. Griffiths, 3 Dowl. 752.) The original liability would revive upon the dishonour of the note (Puckford v. Maxwell, 7 Term Rep. 64); so that to plead it in satisfaction would be not only unnecessary but actually informal and erroneous.

Sir J. P. Grant, Can not Palmer and the Company be considered one and the same, for the purpose of this note? The plea alleges that the note was delivered to Palmer, and that it was received by the plaintiff on account of the debt. What is the meaning of that?

Mr. Leith. It is quite out of the question to infer any thing of the kind. There is nothing upon these pleadings to shew in the least what were the transaction between Palmer and the Company. The expression, "received by the plaintiff," though perhaps appearing a little ambiguous, is according to the forms used.

Sir E. Ryan. Ought you not to have shewn that the note being overdue, was paid?

Mr. Leith. No, my Lord. It was for them to have replied to the non-payment and dishonour, if the fact were so. This is clearly laid down in all the books of pleadings. See 3 Chit. p. 788, and 1 Harr and Woll. Rep. 77. Even if the note remained overdue and unpaid, it does not follow that it was dishonoured, for there might have been some agreement for the postponement of payment, to which the plaintiffs themselves were parties. The question at all events could only have been raised by a replication shewing that default had been made in payment.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochran were not heard in support of the demurrer. They cited Simon v. Loyd, 3 Dowl. 752, and the other dicta of Baron Parke in the case of Crisp v. Griffiths before referred to.

Sir E. Ryan after some deliberation, said, that there must be judgment for the plaintiffs on the demurrer, but as there was another plea to the same count, upon which issue had been taken, execution would be stayed until the trial of the plea. It had been contended for the defendant, that the giving a promissory note to a third party ought not to be pleaded in satisfaction, because it operated in suspension only of the original debt. But how long was the original right to sue thus suspended? Only as long as the time specified in the outstandings security, and as soon as this time had elapsed, the original debt revived. Now it appeared upon the face of the plea, that the ten days expressed in the note had elapsed,* and that the note had thus become payable, but had not been paid. The original debt, therefore, was revived, and the plea no answer.

Demurrer allowed with costs.—Hulk., Feb. 4.

* With great submission—according to the principles of pleading, this does not appear. It is an acknowledged rule, that dates in pleading (except in one or two special cases) are immaterial, and that no inference can be drawn of the quantum of time elapsed, except upon a substantive allegation, which nothing but a replication could here have supplied. Suppose, for example, that issue had been taken upon this plea, the defendant would not have been tied down to proof of the precise day when he gave the promissory note; or suppose that the plea had laid the note to have been given on the day next before the commencement of the suit, the plaintiffs clearly could not then have demurred, because the ten days would appear not to have expired, nor could they have

RAJAH GOPEEMOHUN DEB V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND OTHERS, AND THE REVIVED CAUSE.

* This case had been specially fixed for hearing for this day, and was called on accordingly.

L. Clarke, J. F. Leith and T. C. Morton, Esquires, Counsel for the Complainant. W. Anley, Esq., Solicitor.

The Advocate-General, C. R. Princep and J. Cochran, Esquires, Counsel for the Company and the Lottery Committee. T. B. Swinhoe, Esq. Solicitor.

Mr. Morton opened the bill. The complainant in the original suit was Rajah Gopeemohun Deb, and in the revived suit, Rajah Radakhant Deb, his son. The defendants were the East India Company, Mr. Bayley and others, Members of the Lottery Committee, and several native parties pottahdars. The Company and the Committee had appeared and answered, but the bill was taken pro confesso against all the Pottahdars.

Sir. Cochran opened the answers.

Mr. Clarke then addressed the Court for the complainant. The origin of this suit was a disregard on the part of the Lottery Committee, of the express terms and provisions of a certain ordinance and regulation of October 1814 registered in this Court. The bill was filed in April 1824 and its object was to obtain redress and compensation for the wrongful proceedings on the part of the defendants, who had constructed a road called the Strand Road over alluvion soil in the complainant's Talook of Sootanooty, without granting the compensation to which he was entitled. The title to this talook was thus made out. Rajah Gopeemohun, the original complainant, was the adopted son of Rajah Nobkissen, and the present complainant, Rajah Radakhant, was the son of Gopeemohun. Rajah Nobkissen was in possession of the talook of Nowparah in Nuddeah, and upon a proposal from Government to exchange that talook with the talook of Sootanooty, in Calcutta, a Perman amnood or grant, and also an English deed of indenture, were executed in 1778 by Warren Hastings, then Governor-General, conveying the talook of Sootanooty, with all its rights, privileges and immunities, fully and absolutely to Rajah Nobkissen. This was admitted in the answers, and in fact it was expressly conceded that the present complainant was talookdar of the talook in question, and entitled to all the rights of talookdar. Now a certain regulation of October 1814, gave power to Justices of the Peace for the town of Calcutta, to construct roads, highways, &c. within certain limits, the value of the property to be assessed by a jury, and the amount to be paid to the private owner, or, if the title to the property should be disputed, the amount to be paid into the hands of the Accountant General of the Supreme Court, to abide the issue of the disputed claim. Under this Regulation the taken issue on the question of the particular day, because that would have been an immaterial traverse. Again, suppose a plaintiff alleges the promise to have been made in the year of our Lord one, can the defendant demur because the action appears on the face to be barred by the statute of limitations? See what Comyn says: (Dig. Pl. F. 11.) "If in a declaration a promise appears to have been made twenty years ago, and when the defendant pleads the statute of limitations, the plaintiff replies that he did promise within six years, this is no departure because the statement of time in the declaration was immaterial." To the first ground of this demurrer, therefore, the answer is, that the note was not in satisfaction at all, but in suspension; to the second, that the time did not appear by the mere plea to have elapsed; and to the third, that this was matter for the replication.

a mistake in the deposition as taken by the Examiner. Members of the Lottery Committee (who were also Justices of the Peace) proceeded to run a road over the talook of Sootenooty, but they altogether neglected to comply with the terms of the Regulation, with regard to the compensation to be paid to the parties entitled. The complainant had continually urged his claim, and demanded the compensation due, but the defendants had chosen to pay no attention to the claim, and instead of assessing the value, and paying the sum into Court under the Regulation, they had, in direct contravention of the terms thereof, taken upon themselves to decide the question in favour of the pottahdars, and, accordingly, had obtained from them what they were pleased to call a licence and permission to make the road over the alluvion which had accrued on their pottahdarree lands. The reason was plain. The Lottery Committee knew that they were likely to be able to drive a better bargain with the pottahdars, who had in truth no rights to lose, than with the Zemindar, who was the party really entitled, and they had in fact obtained the land from the great majority of the pottahdars, without paying a farthing. It appeared in evidence, that one of these parties had actually disclaimed all right and title, nay had sworn that the right was in the talookdar, yet the Magistrate chose to give him the assessed compensation in spite of his disclaimer. It was observable that the Company expressly denied in their answer that any right belonged to themselves as territorial owners of the soil, so that the question of right was raised at once between the Zemindar or Talookdar and Pottahdar. The first defence which had been taken, was by plea that the bill was defective for want of parties, and that all the pottahdars, being interested in the alluvion, ought to have been joined. Very voluminous evidence had been taken on these pleas, and upon the hearing, they had been overruled. The complainant had, notwithstanding, amended his bill by making all the pottahdars parties, upon a suggestion of Sir Chas. Grey, C. J., that although not strictly necessary it would be otherwise difficult for the court to adjudicate upon the rights of all parties. None of these pottahdars, however, had taken defence in support of their alleged rights. By the answer, a new ground of defence had been taken. It was alleged that the chief part of the road ran below high water mark, and this was claimed by the Company as Government. Now there was no evidence whatsoever taken on the pleas to shew that one inch of the road ran below high water; but ten years afterwards, when the metes and bounds had been obliterated, and it was rendered almost impossible for the complainant to shew the exact line by distinct evidence, this new case was set up. But even if the fact were found so, there was an important question remaining, to wit, whether the Company could run a road even below high water, without giving adequate compensation to the private landowner. Was there no injury to the ghauts, docks, &c. to the right to receive tolls and other dues contingent on the proximity of the lands to the banks of a navigable river, for which compensation ought to be made? The road might cause the most serious and irreparable damage, if it were constructed over the alluvion, soil or poor land below high water mark. The learned counsel then referred at considerable length to the very voluminous evidence upon the pleas and answers, and pointed out to the Court the more important passages in the depositions of Sir Edward Colebrooke, Mr. William Hay Macnaghten, and Mr. Harrington, shewing that the Zemindar and not the Pottahdar was the party entitled to the alluvion. He then cited several authorities in the Sudder Durrany Reports, relating to the question of alluvion. It did not appear, indeed, that the question had ever been directly raised between Pottahdar and Talookdar, but the contesting parties were both Talookdars or Zemindars of different talookas. The inference from this, however, was obvious:—the Pottahdars never claimed the right at all, conscious that the Zemindar was really the party interested, and in all probabilities they would not have made any claim here, if the Lottery Committee had not officially and illegally interfered to set up a right for them. There was a decree, however, (not reported, but proved in evidence) of the Provincial Court of Appeal for Calcutta, which decided upon a question raised by a Pottahdar, whether the Zemindar could grant a pottah of alluvion to a stranger,—that the Zemindar had the power of granting the pottah to any person whomsoever. Nothing could be more aptly in point than this case. A Regulation had been passed the Regulation XI. of 1825, since the commencement of this suit, (and indeed in consequence of it, according to universal belief) by which the rights to alluvion were declared; but this could not be cited as an authority to affect in any way the decree in the present suit. Even this Regulation, however, did not give the right to the Pottahdar absolutely, but only provided that "land gained by gradual accretion, shall be considered as an increment to the tenure of the person to whose land or estate it is thus annexed," and that it "shall not entitle the person in possession of the estate or tenure to which it is annexed, to a right of property or permanent interest therein beyond that possessed (by him in such estate or tenure). The learned Counsel, therefore, insisted that upon every view of the case, his client was entitled to the compensation and indemnity, which he sought to obtain by his bill. The case appeared to have been one of peculiar hardship throughout. Every obstacle to the proper determination of the question, had been thrown way by the defendants; every mode of causing expence and delay had been wilfully resorted to, in the hope of exhausting the purse and the patience of the complainant. Double sets of pleas, Quadruple sets of answers, and double sets of interrogatories and depositions, had been filed, and yet all had been nearly verbatim the same. The defendants had already been punished by the Court, rather severely too, for filing the double interrogatories, the costs of which, amounting to about Rs. 13,000, they had been compelled to pay. The learned counsel quoted an observation made on one occasion by Lord Chancellor Thurlow, in delivering judgment in a suit in which the East India Company were parties, where his Lordship had taken occasion to observe, that the bills in equity of the Honorable Company, had been invariably found to be most vexatious, and that whenever they happened to be parties to a suit, they availed themselves of their immense wealth to harass their opponents by every species of unjust opposition, for the mere purposes of delay! The remark seemed to be peculiarly applicable in the present instance. The Court would find from the authorities upon the questions of law, and from the facts disclosed in evidence, that the opposition to this claim proceeded upon just grounds, and that the complainant was clearly entitled to their Lordship's decree.

Portions of the Answer and Exhibits were then put in as evidence for the complainant. At four o'clock, the Court adjourned the further hearing until the following day. The evidence upon the interrogatories, on behalf of the complainant will be read next.

Adjourned.—Mishkuru, February 5.

TUESDAY, FEB. 5.

SECOND DAY.

The Court was occupied the whole day, in hearing the evidence for the complainant upon the interrogatories on the pleas and answers, and at five o'clock, when the Court adjourned, the reading was not quite concluded. The greater portion of the depositions were not read aloud, but taken as read, otherwise the hearing would probably last a month.

A question incidentally arose, upon the admissibility of affidavits sworn to by two of the complainant's witnesses examined in the office of Examiner, proposed to be read for the purpose of showing that there was either through a clerical error of the Recorder himself, or a mistranslation of the interpreter. The witnesses were made to say that the pond in question ran below the high-water mark, whereas they had previously sworn that they never made such a statement, but had described it as above. There were other circumstances which strengthened the probability.

Mr. Clarke cited Gresham on evidence in Equity, to show that the Court had sometimes exercised a discretion in such cases, and he mentioned that in a similar case in this Court, the Judges had examined the witness vide voce at the hearing.

Sir E. Ryan, however, refused to admit the affidavit, observing that here the alleged mistake was not upon a collateral point, but upon a matter which was directly in issue in the case.

During the progress of the reading of the evidence taken on the pleas.

Sir E. Ryan asked, how it came to happen that the Court had made an order allowing the evidence taken on the pleas to be evidence in the cause, when by the amended bill new parties were added. The former evidence could not possibly be received against them, and even an order of Court could not remedy the defect. (None of the present Judges were present at the hearing of the pleas.)

Mr. Clarke explained, that the order expressly made the reservation that the evidence was to be received at any further stage "between the said parties." Now the present case was in fact between the same parties; (the Pottahdars) the bill had been taken pro confesso, either for want of appearance or answer.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this explanation was satisfactory; but the Court were yet puzzled to know, how it happened that all this evidence had been taken at all on the pleas.

Mr. Clarke said, that there were allegations of fact in the pleas upon which the replications had taken issue.

Sir J. P. Grant. But the pleas seem to have been allowed once by Mr. Justice Buller, and yet they are afterwards overruled upon the evidence. It was not a regular rehearing?

Mr. Clarke. The only point decided, when the pleas were allowed, was that they were good in form. Your Lordships are aware, that when pleas are set down for argument, the facts are admitted for the purpose of the argument, and the only question is, whether they are good in form, now although good in form, as known to the evidence had been taken on the issues afterwards raised by the replication, the facts alleged were found not sufficiently proved, and the pleas were consequently overruled.

Sir H. W. Selon remarked, that the pleas seemed to raise mixed questions of law and fact.

Sir E. Ryan. Well! after the pleas were overruled, how came the Court to allow an amendment of the bill, and how were all these parties (already found to be unnecessary) added to the bill?

Mr. Clarke said, that he might leave that to be explained by his learned friend (Mr. Prinsep) who was now seated in the opposite ranks, but who had formerly been the complainant's leading counsel, and who had actually amended the bill.

Mr. Prinsep made no observation.

Mr. Coghane rose, and said he would explain everything clearly to the Court in a moment. The fact was that the order had expressly directed the pottahdars to be added as parties, and if the bill had not been amended it would infallibly have been dismissed.

(The order, however, upon being referred to, was not found to be on this wise.)

Mr. Clarke explained, that the Chief Justice (Grey) had recommended the parties to be added, as the Court could not otherwise fully adjudicate upon the rights of all, and conformably to this recommendation, the bill was amended. He apprehended, that although particular parties might not be actually necessary parties, there might be sound reasons for making them parties nevertheless.

At the close of the day, the Chief Justice asked whether the complainant's case would occupy much longer.

Mr. Clarke. We have a little remaining evidence, and the exhibits in the cause, and then my learned friends will address the Court.

Sir E. Ryan. What! both.

Mr. Clarke. Yes, my Lord. In equity cases all the counsel have the privilege of commenting on the evidence. I remember a case in the Rolls, where there were 9 counsel who spoke for eight days.

Sir E. Ryan. Oh! we shall be delighted to hear them!!

Adjourned at 5 o'clock.—HURKARU, February 6.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1839.

THIRD DAY.

The evidence for the complainant on the interrogatories on the pleas and answers, and the exhibits in the cause, were proceeded with this morning.

Among the exhibits, certain entries made by a deceased person, were proposed to be put in, being extracts from old books relating to the talookdaree in the time of Rajah Nubkissen. These were offered for the purpose of showing that certain alluvial lands in the talook has been actually rented of the Rajah.

The Advocate-General objected to the admission of such evidence. It did not appear that the person who had made these entries, had charged himself, and the rule was that unless this be the effect of the writing, it is the mere statement of a third party, and inadmissible. It was open this principle only that old entries were ever receivable. In the present case, the complainant sought to benefit by an admission of his own agent, which did not bind in any way either the agent or his master.

Mr. Clarke cited Phillips on evidence p. 332 and Starkie on evidence, and the case of Barry v. Baginton, 4 Term Rep. 514, where entries written by the steward (since dead) of a former Lord of the Manor, from whom the title was derived, were held admissible.

Sir J. P. Grant asked whether these entries, in the present case, appeared by the evidence to have been made contemporaneously with the event, and by a person whose ordinary duty it was to make them.

Mr. Clarke said, that the time did not appear, but there was evidence that the entries were made by the writer in the regular discharge of his duty.

The Court held, however, that the evidence was not admissible.

The declarations of deceased persons, when received on evidence, were only received on the principle that they made against their own interest. Price v. Lord Torington, 1 Salkeld, 285.

A chart or map of the lands, ghaut, &c. drawn by Mr. Josiah Rows, from a survey of the talook made by him in 1836, was offered, and not objected to, as evidence of the situation of the lands and ghauts. The line of road, and the high and low water mark.

Certain letters were then put in and read. These had passed between the complainant's agents and the different members of the Lottery Committee at the time when the line of road was first proposed.

• This closed the cause for the complainant.

Mr. Leith then proceeded to address the Court, but he appeared to be labouring so much from the effects of a severe cold, that speaking aloud was evidently a great exertion.

Sir E. Ryan, interrupting the argument, remarked, that it was evident to the Court that the learned counsel, in delivering a long address, would be speaking at present under great disadvantages, and that in a case of so much difficulty and importance, the Court would willingly postpone the hearing.

Mr. Clarke said, that considering the very valuable assistance and support which he expected to receive from his learned friend, he was very thankful for his suggestion.

Mr. Leith returned his acknowledgments for the courtesy of their Lordships.

Sir E. Ryan then intimated, that the cause might stand adjourned until Friday next; and that if witnesses were ready, the common law board would be taken tomorrow; and there would be time to send notices to the Attorneys in the causes set down on the sittings board.

Adjourned.—Hark., February 7.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1839

PLEA SIDE.

DOR ON THE DEMISE OF SHAIK RYAN RUX V. HILDAR.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings. This was an action of ejectment, which came on ex parte against the casual ejector.

Mr. Leith stated, that the title of the lessor of the plaintiff was derived under a bill of sale from the sheriff. The lessor of the plaintiff was not the same person as the plaintiff in the auction in which the judgment had been recovered, and the writ of execution against the lands was out. The date of the writ was July 1837, and the bill of sale from the sheriff was of last December.

The judgment (which was ex parte) was then put in, and the writ of fi. fa. with the sheriff's return, and the execution of the bill of sale to the lessor of the plaintiff, was proved by the subscribing witness.

Sir E. Ryan said, that there was a flaw in the proof. The sales did not appear to have taken place until after the writ had expired.

Mr. Leith said, that the seizure of the property must have been before, and he apprehended it was immaterial when the actual sale took place. He submitted, moreover, that if there was any irregularity, that might be a ground of action against the Sheriff, but it would not affect the right of a bona fide purchaser under the bill of sale.

Sir E. Ryan said, that there were circumstances of suspicion which raised a doubt whether the party was a bona fide purchaser. Here was an ex parte judgment originally, (and it was nothing that the original plaintiff was not the lessor of the plaintiff here, it might be he was); the writ was issued a year and a half ago and the property was only sold six weeks since.

Mr. Morton said, he believed the property had been advertised and put up for sale on several occasions, but not sold for want of bidders. The real question was, whether the seizure was before the expiration of the writ, the postponement of the sale was quite immaterial and easily accounted for.

A witness then proved, that the property had been seized in execution before the writ expired, and had been actually put up for sale within a month after it had been so seized by the Sheriff.

Verdict for the lessor of the plaintiff.

ABDOL SALEM V. SHAW.

This was an action brought to recover the principal and interest due on two instruments described as promissory notes, for Rs. 5,500. There were also smaller sums claimed.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Sandes for the plaintiff.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton for the defence.

The hand writing of the defendant was admitted. The defence consisted in the set-off of several large sums, and the payment of others, which altogether exceeded greatly the sum claimed by the plaintiff. It was proved that the defendant had made several offers to refer the matter to arbitration. A great portion of the payments and set-off was established, but a large item was disallowed, because it was omitted from the particulars of set-off, and some other items were withheld as being only liabilities, and not subject matter for a set-off.

Sir E. Ryan said, that as the Court calculated the sums proved on either side, there remained a small balance of Co.'s Rs 316, due to the plaintiff, and for this he must obtain a verdict. They considered the smaller sums claimed by him, for goods alleged to have been sold, not to be established, because they were of opinion that it was not at all the intention of the plaintiff at the time to charge for them as purchases. With regard to costs, they considered, that according to the justice of the case, the plaintiff was not entitled to receive them. The defendant had offered to refer the matter, and the plaintiff had only recovered a comparatively trifling proportion of the sum claimed by him, and this only from the disallowance of some of the items of set-off. The interest due and to be computed by the officer on the notes, would be allowed in addition to the balance above mentioned.

Verdict for Co.'s Rs. 316, and the interest on the notes, but without costs.

SEENNAHAIN GHOSH AND OTHERS V. SUDHONATH DAY CHOWDARY.

This was an action brought to recover interest on joint and several bond. One of the Co-obligees was dead, and the action was brought by the survivor and the representatives of the deceased.

Messrs Clarke and Sandes for the plaintiff.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the action was not properly laid. The right survived to the surviving co-obligor, and the representatives of the deceased ought not to have been joined. He mentioned, that a similar case had occurred in this Court, when it was so held after a long argument.

Mr. Clarke said, that he believed that case was upon a judgment, which could not be joint and several. He apprehended the representatives of the deceased ought to be joined, and he gave leave to move upon the point.

Sir E. Ryan said, the Court would not give leave to move. The learned Counsel might exercise his own discretion, but their Lordships were clear upon the point, and he did not clearly see how the refusal could be maintained by the plaintiff.

Not nisi.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.
This was an application to recover principal and interest due on promissory note for one thousand rupees.

Messrs. Peinsep and Leith for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

This was an action, also brought, to recover principal and interest due on a Bengal instrument of mortgage, for the sum of Rs. 2,200.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Barwell were for the plaintiff, who obtained a verdict for the amount sought.

Verdict for the plaintiff. — Hurk. February 6.

FRIDAY, FEB 8, 1839.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

This case, which was postponed from Wednesday, was resumed this morning.

*Mr. Leith addressed the Court for the complainant. The foundation of our title is the Persian sunnud or grant of 1778 to our ancestor Rajah Nabkissen, and the deed of indenture, confirming the grant. No words could have been introduced more comprehensive in their nature, than those employed in these instruments of conveyance, and it is clear that whatever right and title was possessed by the Company at the time of the grant, the whole were absolutely transferred to the grantee, the complainant's ancestor. One of the terms used, is "coomar," which means "alluvion," and this is expressly granted to the talookdar. This clearly establishes our title as against the Company. Before considering the derivative title claimed through the pottahdar, it is necessary to consider the object of the bill, and to meet the objection raised, that the complainant ought to have proceeded at law. Now the bill prays an injunction on two grounds, first to restrain the destruction of the metes and bounds, and secondly, to restrain the use of the road, until the Regulation is complied with, which directs, that the assessed sum should be paid into the hands of the Accountant-General. Again, the bill sought to follow a particular fund, which could not be reached at law, and it is an acknowledged principle in equity that where a party has a claim upon a particular fund, he is entitled to resort to a Court of Equity for relief. But further, the object of the bill is to carry out a particular Regulation, and this could not have been accomplished by any proceeding at law. The complainant does not wish to obtain the land, but the value which the Regulation declares him entitled to. Lastly, the bill is a bill of peace, and this alone constitutes a sufficient ground of equity, according to the well known principles of Courts of Equity in general. The cases of Burton v. Hospital, Andover v. Veroch's Reports, Hanson v. Gardiner, 7 Vesey Junior, and other authorities, which might be cited, bear this out fully. Another objection which has been raised, is, that the justices were entitled to notice before notice brought, but it is clear that ample notice was given to them. (The learned Counsel here referred to the correspondence and the evidence, to show that the defendants must have had notice long before the bill was filed.) But there is no authority for saying that notice was necessary before the institution of this suit, for we do not sue any of the defendants, as Justices of the Peace. Considering the case on its merits, it appears to present a two-fold aspect. We claim compensation, first, in respect of alluvion which has accrued upon land held under pottah, within our talook, and secondly, in respect of alluvion which has accrued upon* land in our own possession. The extent and boundaries of our talook are admitted by the answer, and it is also admitted that this road runs through the talook to the length of 1,400 yards, or at least over "alluvion," which has gradually accreted upon our talook. There is abundance of evidence to show that the land was above, and not below, the high water mark, and this was stated by the defendants themselves in their pleas. Our chart, too, proves, that in the year 1836 at all events, the road ran considerably above high water. The question then arises between the right of the complainant as talookdar, and the right of the defendants (admitted to be) derived from the pottahdars, to the alluvion which has accreted on their lands. This right on the part of the pottahdars, has been parted with to the Company, except in two or three solitary instances, without receiving any compensation whatsoever. But the evidence and the authorities upon the question, are in our favour, and show that these pottahdars had no right to part with it. There is the evidence of Harrington, of Colebrooke, and of other persons totally disinterested in the result, and individuals well able to form a judgment upon questions of Hindoo Law, to show that the accruing alluvion is the property of the Zemindar or talookdar, not of the pottahdar. The difference between these tenures, appears from the answers to the interrogatories on the pleas. A talookdar differs little, if at all, from a zemindar—each is a superior landlord, with subordinate holders under him;—but the pottahdar is a subordinate lessee, sometimes paying rent, sometimes rent-free, and either for a term of years, or for a perpetuity. (The learned Counsel then went into an elaborate examination of the depositions of the witnesses examined on the pleas on the question of right.

The Court remarked, that this was a question of law, and that the answers of the witnesses might be cited, and would be received, as authorities, but not as evidence. Then, with respect to the second part of the case, if it can be proved that there is any alluvion which has accrued upon ancient land within the complainant's talook, in his own actual possession and occupation, it is difficult to conceive what answer or defence can be set up on the other side. It appears from the evidence, that the land adjoining to the road, between Radamulub Bonnejee's Ghaut and Conny Katimar's Ghaut, was the complainant's own land, occupied by ryots and temporary tenants under him, and not let out under pottah. The precise number of bighas and outahs does not indeed appear before the Court, at least in the depositions, but by reference to the scale of the map, the extent of forage comprised within these limits will be found to be 750 feet. Here no question arises between the opposing titles of zemindar and pottahdar; pro tanto, the complainant possesses both these tenures, and pro tanto, therefore, there can be no answer whatever to his claim for compensation. (The learned counsel then went minutely into the evidence upon this point, and contended that it was quite clear, that a large portion of the land was in the complainant's actual possession, and that there were no conflicting depositions upon the point.) Whether, therefore, the road runs above or below high water, and whether it runs over alluvion adjoining pottahdar's lands within our talook, or adjoining land in our own possession, we are clearly entitled to compensation for the damage done. The injury sustained is various in its nature. It appears from the evidence, that the ghats and docks rented of us, and whose value necessarily depended almost altogether upon their proximity to the river, have either been destroyed or rendered worthless, by the running of this road between them and the stream. It is in evidence, too, that the alluvion subsequently accruing between the road and the river has been taken possession of by the Lottery Committee, and let out by them for their own benefit. With regard for the amount of compensation to which the complainant is entitled, (if he succeeds in his claim) this may be calculated from the rate of compensation allowed by the assessment of a jury, for the small portion for which the complainant has been paid, which was about Go's Rs. 1200 per cottah. The whole amount for the land of which he has been actually dispossessed for the road, would thus nearly equal five lacs.

The learned counsel's address occupied the Court four hours and a half, and the above report does not give even an outline of his elaborate argument, and exposition of the evidence. He apologized to the Court more than once, for having trespassed upon their attention so long, but Sir John Grant said that apology was quite unnecessary, considering the difficulty and importance of the case before them. At the close of Mr. Lenth's argument?

Mr. Morton rose to address the Court, but on account of the lateness of the hour, their Lordships intimated that they would hear him to-morrow.

Adjourned.—Barkara, February 9.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1839.

FIFTH DAY.

Mr. Morton was heard this morning on behalf of the complainants. After the elaborate argument and the minute exposition of the evidence and the authorities, which the Court heard yesterday, it will not be necessary to go again so fully into the details. Two preliminary objections are raised in the answer, which it is necessary in the first place to dispose of. It is urged, that the members of the Lottery Committee, being also Justices of the Peace, and acting as such, were entitled to notice of action, before this suit could be instituted against them. But the reply to this is, that they are not acted in their capacity of Justices. The question is not merely in what capacity they acted, but in what they are sued. The cases in which Justices, Magistrates and the like, can claim this privilege, are only where the action is brought against them to recover personal damages for the wrongful act. Now here they are not sought to be made personally liable, but only as the holders of particular funds. The second preliminary objection is, that there is no equity exhibited by the bill, and that the complainant could have obtained at law all the relief which he now seeks to obtain in a Court of Equity. This is altogether a fallacy. The complainant aims at two distinct objects, viz the establishment of his right and title, and also compensation for the damage which he has sustained. Unless he could obtain both of these at law (and it is questionable whether he could obtain either) in as full and complete a manner as by his bill in equity, it is futile to urge the objection that he ought to have proceeded at law. Now there are several distinct grounds of equity. 1st. The bill prays an injunction to restrain the use of the road until compensation has been made, and it is admitted by the answer, that the defendants have destroyed and defaced the fences and bounds, and it appears from the evidence, that they have done other irreparable injury to the land. The injunction might certainly have been obtained before, but it is grantable even at this stage. 2dly. The proceedings at law would not even have been sustainable, except to a partial extent. Ejectment or trespass might certainly have been brought against the pottahdars, but it could not have been maintained against the other defendants, the Company and the Committee, because the Regulation of 1816 gave them authority to enter upon the land. They have been guilty of misfeasance most certainly, but the wrong did not consist in their entry upon the land, but in the withholding compensation;—the Act therefore would have been a good bar to trespass or ejectment. 3dly. This is a bill of peace, and brought to prevent multiplicity of suits.

Even if the actions at law could have been maintained, a vast number must have been instituted before the complainant's title could have been established. There must have been a separate action against the Company, the Lottery Committee, and all the pottahdars (nearly 40 in number) separately and distinctly; for there is no unity of estate between them, and if joined as co-defendants, it would have been a ground of nonsuit for misjoinder; 4thly. The bill seeks to charge particular funds, and this could only be done by proceedings in a Court of Equity. The possession of these funds is admitted in the answer, and the complainant, if he is entitled to any thing at all, is entitled to revert to them. It is for this reason that a special action on the case would have been quite precluded, for a judgment at law would only have been personal, and could not have reached a specific fund. 5thly. This in effect is analogous to a bill for a specific performance. It seeks to compel the defendants to carry out the terms of that Regulation under which they professed to act, but which in fact they left half finished. It seeks to enforce the specific mode of compensation which the act points out, or at least the alternative given, viz. to assess the value of the land and pay the amount into the hands of the Accountant General. We do not ask for the land, but for the value—and this too in a specific manner. We do not complain of what has been done, but of what has been left undone; and even if we could obtain a remedy in a court of law, we certainly could not obtain a remedy so adequate, and surely where there are two modes of relief open to the injured party, he may select the one which is calculated to secure the more complete and perfect indemnity. Next, with regard to the merits. There are three species of land, over one or other of which the whole of this road passes, each of which the complainant claims as talookdar, and in respect of each of which he demands compensation. First, alluvion, which has accrued upon ancient land held under pottahs. Secondly, alluvion accrued upon ancient lands in the complainant's own possession. Lastly, and (if any) below high water mark. 1. Upon the first point. The Company disclaim in their answer all right and title in themselves as territorial possessors of the soil, and even the subsequent Regulation of 1825, does not give them any title. If they had possessed any, it would have been transferred under their sunnud or grant, and the deed of indenture, to our ancestor Rajah Nubkiamon. Their title, therefore, must be derivative. Now the parties under whom they claim are these persons called pottahdars, who have attained their supposed right by a something in the nature of a licence of permission to construct this road. Even if these pottahdars had been voluntary and bona fide claimants (which is extremely doubtful) the proper course of proceeding for the defendants would have been to assess the value of the lands, and pay the amount into the hands of the Accountant General of this Court; but it is admitted in the answer, and without any reason being assigned, that this was never done. This is a clear infringement of the very regulation under which they professed to be proceeding. But the circumstances connected with the granting of the alleged licence to construct the road, raise suspicions concerning the question whether this claim on the part of the pottahdars was a voluntary claim at all. It was set up for them by the Lottery Committee. Some of them avow their ignorance of their own rights, others are of opinion that the Company are the real parties entitled to the alluvion. It appears that two or three only ever received compensation, or equivalent in any shape; the rest have freely surrendered their alleged right (a most valuable one if it really existed) without receiving a penny in return. This is not used as an argument to show that the bargain was modus pottum, and therefore void, but merely as a foundation for the very obvious inference, that the pottahdars themselves set a very small price for value, indeed, upon the supposed right attributed to them.

and which is the foundation of the claim of the defendants. Now the question arises, in what does this supposed right consist? It cannot be a prescriptive right, because it is proved that the road was not even in existence, until some six or seven years before the construction of the road, the same having been gradually formed within the last few years from the High Water, besides which it distinctly appears that both Rajahs, Nijhewon and Gopenches, undoubtedly exercised acts of ownership upon the gradually accruing alluvion. The fact is, that several of these potladdars, as appears from their own evidence, are not only aware of their own rights, to the land itself, and the origin of their respective titles. Several admit (six or seven in number) that they hold under taluk, either from ourselves, or from the Company, anterior to the date of the grant, and their claims of alluvion are to all intents and purposes potladdars under the talukdar of Santacooty. Now we were bound to admit (for we thought that the admission would have been favourable to the defendants) that all the grantors of this licence were potladdars of ancient times within the taluk; but it seems that a novel and curious defence is about to be set up. The Counsel for the defendants are about to rely upon this very vagueness of title in their own alienors, as an argument in their own favour, and some species of unknown and undescribed tenures is intended to be attributed to all those persons who have no other title to show! But they are in fact stated to be potladdars in the plea, which were put on upon oath by the defendants themselves; and after all, we care not what tenure they may lay claim to for we claim as talukdar, not only against potladdars but against the whole world. The direct question then, arises concerning the right to "alluvion" between Talukdar and Potladdar or other subordinate holders. (The Learned Counsel then went into the depositions and the authorities upon this question.) It appears from the answers of Gledbrooke and Macnaghten, that the grantor of the potladdar is the party entitled. In the Soolie Dewanny Reports, the question of right to alluvion has never been raised in any reported case between any claimants except either zemindars or talukdars, and the obvious inference is, that the potladdars and other subordinate holders were well aware that they had no claim at all. In the case of Bebes Baidy v. Bebes Fanny and others (the only case which we have been able to find, involving directly the right of the potladdar) the Provincial Court of Appeal for the division of Calcutta, held that the zemindar was not only entitled to the alluvion but that he might grant a potladd of it to any stranger whom he chose to select. It appears, too, by the evidence, that the Company, when they stand in the situation of talukdar, always claim the alluvion as their property. This is not used as an argument to show that they are precluded from setting up any claim inconsistent with this practice, but as an argumentum ad hominem, it is certainly very important. Again, the fair and equitable rule which justice and common sense would dictate, even if all authority were silent upon the subject, is, that the talukdar is the party entitled. The quantity of land held under potladd, is a defined and limited quantity, while the alluvion grant is invariably altogether undefined, and if a potladd is found to hold more land than that which his potladdage entitles him to, the zemindar may compel a fresh allotment. This seems altogether inconsistent with the potladdar's alleged right to the accruing alluvion. The talukdar, too, is entitled to an abatement in the rent reserved under the potladd, should his lands be encroached upon by the sea or a river, while the zemindar cannot claim any abatement in the jumma or cess which he pays to Government. Now, in our own taluk, it is shown, that although we have gained by alluvion accession to some parts, we have lost by encroachment in another, so that we are not a great deal better off, but we have more than a right which would not entitle us for a corollary loss. The claim is founded upon the plain, equitable maxim, that he who reaps the benefit should sustain the loss, and conversely, that he who suffers the loss ought to reap the benefit. The potladdar, on the other hand, seeks exemption from all the disadvantages, while they lay claim to all the advantages which may accrue. With respect to the alluvion which has accrued upon ancient land in our own possession and occupation, or in that of our ryots and temporary tenants (whose possession is tantamount to our own the evidence is clear upon the matter of fact that a very material portion of the land is in this predicament, and precluded from being appropriated, there can be no answer to the claim. (The learned counsel then analysed the evidence on this point, and contended that this, at least, stood quite uncontradicted.)—111. With respect to the land alleged to lie below high water mark, two questions arise first, whether the act be so, and secondly, whether according to law, Government have the power of running a road over such soil, without granting compensation to the previous owner of the adjacent land. (He then went into the evidence, to show that both from the testimony of the parties directly interrogated, and the circumstantial evidence, it was clear that the road ran entirely above the high water mark. This case was not set up until the answer, and was in fact quite irreconcilable with the defence under the plea.) Even assuming that the fact were found against us, it is absurd to argue that Government have any such right in law. The zemindar may even have a contingent or reversionary property in the soil of the bed of the river; for the authorities shew that when the river becomes dry, half of the channel belongs to one adjoining zemindar, and half to the other. But without claiming property, he has at least an easement, the deprivation of which entitles him unquestionably to some compensation. Such a right may exist, even in respect of private property, for a man may have a right of way, or a right of ancient light, or a right of fishery in respect of another person's estate, in the soil of which he has no interest whatsoever. Whether above or below high water mark, the injury done by the construction of a public road is the same. It is surely nothing to say that the road is beneficial and actually increases the value of the lands. The owner is himself the best judge, and this is no answer to his claim for compensation. The same defence might be urged as a ground for refusing compensation for running a rail-road through a gentleman's park! In the present case, however, it is proved, that very heavy pecuniary losses have actually been sustained by the complainant. Rents for the use of the bank to fishermen and others, have been lost, to the amount of 4 or 5000 rupees in the year. Ghauts, wharfs and other buildings, whose value necessarily depended upon their proximity to the bank of a navigable river, have been rendered about as valuable as the mere stones of which they are constructed. Upon every view of the case, therefore, the complainant is entitled to the compensation which he claims for the damage sustained by him, and the relief prayed for in his bill.

The Advocate General, (on behalf of the Company and the Lottery Committee.) I agree with my learned friends in considering the present case most important—important, as regards the general question of right, but not in respect of any gross wrong or injury which the complainant can be proved to have sustained in this instance. It is difficult to understand, in spite of all that has been urged on the subject, in what the injury consists. If he was entitled to any right or easement whatsoever, as talukdar, before the construction of this road, there is nothing to prevent his enjoyment of it now. The injuries which would naturally be drawn from the circumstances, that the potladdar or proprietors along the bank surrendered the land without compensation, for the purpose of this road, is not that they considered their titles dubious, but that they expected such material benefit to accrue from the making of the road, as would alone constitute a sufficient equivalent. But this has nothing to do with the right of the complainant, and we shall contend on three grounds, that he has failed to establish any title to relief. First, that he has misconceived the remedy, even if he could show that he had a right to what he asks;—secondly, that the right to "alluvion" is to be decided by English law, and that all the authorities are in our favour; and lastly, we shall meet them on their own ground, and contend that even according to Mofussil law their alleged title cannot be supported.—1. The remedy is mistaken, and the complainant ought to have proceeded at law instead of filing his bill in equity. Even with respect to the question of costs, the Court would allow full costs to us if the bill were overruled on this ground at this late stage. It is true that the objection of want of equity ought, if possible, to be raised by demurrer; but a bill may prove defective, after the publication of the evidence, although, by the ingenuity of the framer, it may not have been originally demurrable on the face. It may be propped up by allegation, which the facts are afterwards found not to support. In the present bill, for instance, we find the actual statement, that "complainant was induced to allow the road to be constructed, on the faith of representations that the full compensation should be paid to him." Now if this allegation were supported by the evidence afterwards taken, it would raise a presumption of positive fraud, which, alone, would bring the case within the cognizance of a Court of Equity; but of this there is not a title of proof. Now it is urged, that the complainant prays an injunction, and that this is a ground of equity. Why was the injunction never applied for before? The road is actually constructed now, and an injunction would be powerless. The complainant must be taken to have abandoned everything, except the claim for compensation above. But a writ of injunction never would have been the appropriate remedy;—the complainant ought to have applied to the plenipotent of this Court for a writ of mandamus. If then, compensation only be the present object, is a Court of Equity the proper court to seek such relief? A claim for compensation is peculiarly inapplicable to a Court of Equity and peculiarly within the province of a court of common law. Again it has been said, that the bill seeks in effect a specific performance. Who ever heard of a bill in equity to enforce specific performance of a public enactment? With respect to alleged multiplicity of suits, it is not easy to see how this case cited is applicable. We do not contest the general principle that this would be a ground for the exercise of equitable jurisdiction, but the question is whether this really be a bill of peace, and whether any multiplicity of actions would have arisen here. In the case cited of Hanson v. Gardner there were several parties, who might have put in pleas raising several distinct species of justification; but there is nothing of the kind in the present case, where a single action of trespass against one of the pottahdars or proprietors would have tried the merits of all. According to Phillips on Evidence p. 310 in the case of a disputed "tithing," a verdict will be evidence even between other parties. Again it has been argued, that an action of trespass or ejectment would not have been maintainable, because those actions are founded on the supposition of a wrongful entry on the land, whereas the entry was here justified by the Regulation. But the complainant's whole case is, that we were injured by the Regulation, and we surely could never have justified under a law with which we had not complied. If English law must decide the question of right raised, and here the complainant has no foot of ground to stand upon. What pretence is there for saying that the right to landed property within the local limits of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction, is to be decided by Hindoo law? We have heard that in certain cases the law of the defendant is to be applied, but never that the law of the plaintiff is to guide the decision! But if we are to have any law other than English, why are we to have Hindoo law? The title to this land, as to all the landed property in Bengal, may be traced back to Mohammedan law. The company themselves claim through the Faruk Prince, the Nawab of Bengal, and all the Mughals played in respect to the present right claimed by the complainant, "talookdar," "zemindar," "khasmi," and all Persian in their origin. Let us inquire what the general rule acknowledged. Where there is a new colony, the colonists carry with them the rights and laws of the mother country:—where the country is conquered by arms, the laws of the conquered people continue in force, unless the conquerors choose to introduce their own laws. British India is neither a settlement, nor a conquered land: it is something intermediate:—it was ceded to the present holder, by those who had the power of ceding it. The King of England has, at different times, introduced certain changes, as he had a right to do. In 1726, when the Mayor's Court was founded, and in 1778, when the Supreme Court was introduced, English law was extended to Calcutta except in certain excepted cases. Questions of inheritance are to be tried according to the nationality of the defendant, but the law ordinarily administered is English law. It might as well be said that the ejectment cases which are every day tried here, are to be decided according to Hindoo rules. (See the case of Freeman v. Fairlie, (Clarke's Rules and Orders.) If then English law is to decide the question of right, the complainant has no case at all. (The learned Counsel then went into an examination of the English law, upon the question of right to alluvion, and cited several learned authorities. The King v. Lord Purborough, 2 High's Reports, New Series, p. 147, and 5 Bingham's Reports 163.—"allis on Rivers p. 73, citing Justinian's Institutes, and Bracton, an old black-letter authority.—Bacon's Abridgement, prerogatives V. 3.) Blackstone says, in the 2d Vol. p. 261. "As to lands gained from the sea, either by alluvion, or by dereliction, the law is held to be that if this gain be by little, and little, by small and imperceptible degrees, it shall go to the owner of the land adjoining."—111. Lastly, even upon their own ground, the Mofussil law of alluvion, they can shew no title as talookdar. Mr. Harrington, whose opinion was taken on behalf of the complainant, pronounces in our favour, for he says that the accruing alluvion is an increment to the tenure of the estate to which it is annexed. Now we will shew, that these parties, who have been called pottahdars, are in fact the owners and proprietors of the soil. Some, indeed, speak of holding pottahs, but these pottahs have not been produced at all, and in fact no tenancy or tenure of any kind under the complainant, is distinctly proved. If the pottahs (if any they were) might be perpetual pottahs, and this would give the holder an interest in the soil in the nature of a freehold. Then a talookdar is nothing more than a lord of the manor, entitled to certain advantages, profits and privileges, but not quite entitled to every biggah of land, and every building on the territory which he calls his talook? We will prove, then, that the owners and proprietors of the soil (as we do not say the pottahdars) are the persons entitled to alluvion. It is urged that Mr. Harrington's evidence, or rather opinion, cannot be taken to affect this case, because it is founded on the Regulation of 1825, which is an ex post facto law; but we contend that the Regulation although we freely admit it cannot be cited as a new law against the complainant here) is declaratory only of the law which existed before. This is confirmed by the case of Zeeboi Naja v. Purann Rai, reported in the Sudder Durrani Reports, decided before the Regulation of 1825 upon the question of alluvion between two proprietors (not appearing to be zamindars) and it is stated, in Mr. Macnaghten's appended note, written after the passing of the Regulation, that the principle of the decision is conformable to that enactment. So much for the general question of right with respect to allusion, which has occurred upon land not in the possession and occupation of the complainant himself, but occupied by independent proprietors of the soil, who pay him no rent, and acknowledge no tenancy. As regards the land alleged to be occupied by the complainant himself, we deny that the fact has been proved to be so, and we shall be able to show that there are three independent proprietors of land upon that very frontage of 760 feet to which he lays claim. We contend, therefore, that, even if the complainant have not mistaken his mode of remedy, he has totally failed to establish any substantial title to compensation, and that this bill, therefore, must be dismissed.

The Court, at the close of the learned Advocate's address, adjourned the further hearing, on account of the lateness of the hour, until Monday next. Their Lordships would not object to hear any pressing motion on that day, but otherwise they would prefer going on with this case at once.

Adjourned to Monday.—Hurk. Feb. 11.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1839.

The Court was occupied the whole day in hearing the reading of the evidence and the exhibits in this cause, on behalf of the defendants.

The two junior counsel for the defence, Messrs Prinsep and Cochran, will be heard to-morrow.

Adjourned.—Hurkatu, February 12.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1839.

Messrs Prinsep and Cochran were heard to-day, at great length, on behalf of the defendants. A report of their argument will afterwards appear. The Court broke up at a late hour. Mr. Clarke will be heard to-morrow in reply. This will close the case.

Mem.—The Court intimated that motions would be heard to-morrow (this day, Wednesday) after Gopeemohan Deb's case is closed, but not common law cases. Mr. Clarke said, he did not expect his reply to occupy very long.

The common law board will be taken on Thursday.

Mr. G. W. Johnson, of Gray's Inn, Barrister-at-law, was sworn in this morning, and admitted to practice as Advocate in the Supreme Court.—Hurkatu, February 13.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1839.

SIXTH DAY.

Mr. Prinsep followed for the defence. I shall not go minutely into the details of the evidence which has been read, as my learned friend who is to follow me, has made it especially the subject of his attention, and is therefore more competent to the task. Prima facie it seems to be rather an extraordinary right which is here set up by the complainant; for he claims the allusion, not as occupier and proprietor of the soil, but as talookdar right. Nothing can be inferred from ghumud or the indenture; for the word "allusion" is not employed in either, and at all events, the Company only granted as talookdar themselves, so that even if it be originally a talookdar right, the grant does not aid the claim. Now the opinions of several individuals have been taken by the complainant in the Examiner's Office, but this Court has very properly decided, that they can only be received as authorities. These opinions are not very consistent with each other, but the most consistent and intelligible is that of Mr. Harrington, whose evidence is generally in our favour. Mr. Macnaghten himself, in his note to Rajah Greshund v. Rajah Taschunder, in the Sudder Dewan-y Reports, says, that the Hindoo Law of allusion is altogether consonant with English law. If so, it has been shown that the rules of the latter are in our favor, and as we used to say at the University cadet quæstio—a phrase with which one of your Lordships must have been familiar there!

Sir E. Ryan. Two, Mr. Prinsep.

Mr. Prinsep. Two, I crave Mr. Justice Seton's pardon. One case has been cited which is undeniably in favour of the complainant as far as it goes; but it is only a decree of the Provincial Court of Appeal for the Division of Calcutta—a Court of very inferior authority to the Sudder, to which indeed, an appeal lies (ay?) Besides it does not appear what the nature of the pottah was in that case, and it might have been a mere khatyat or lease for years. Now it is curious that none of the pottahs alleged to have been granted by complainant, have been produced on the present occasion; it might appear from them, that the interest of these pottahdars was a freehold or a fee. There is no distinct proof of rent received for the land or for the ghauts, and no writing whatever to authenticate such alleged receipt. It is not at all likely that there would have been no written documents, if rents ever had been received. Every thing is done in this country by writing; chits are required for the most trivial transactions; and, indeed, your Lordships must have experienced the fact, that this perpetual necessity for writing is by far the most troublesome of daily duties!

Sir J. P. Grant. Except, sometimes, the reading of the writing, Mr. Prinsep.

Mr. Prinsep. In my own case, my Lord, I must confess that I have often great difficulty in reading my own Well, the complainant, then, finding himself rather insecure on the general question of right, has rested the matter chiefly on the land alleged to be in his own occupation and possession. But the evidence of this is extremely vague, and warrants no definite conclusion. The dues and profits which are said to have been received, may have been in respect of that very portion for which he had received compensation. But if there be any valid claim to compensation or to any other relief, the complainant might have proceeded at law in three different ways: ejectment to recover back the land, trespass to recover damages for the wrong, or a special action on the case, to obtain the specific compensation which the regulation provides. If this bill be only to seek a discovery in aid of the action at law, he has obtained that long ago by our answer, and the bill with respect to the relief prayed, ought to be now dismissed with costs. How is this Court to entertain the question of quantum damniificatus? Courts of Equity formerly would not entertain a bill even for a specific performance, unless the right had been first ascertained at law. This is not a case where a writ of ad quod damnum could issue, nor is it a case where the Court would direct an issue at law to ascertain the value of the land, and the amount of damages sustained, nor again would a reference to the matter be applicable. Dexter v. Stewart 1 Cox 258. So that, even if the complainant had the best claim in the world, instead of the writ, there is no possible mode in which a Court of Equity could entertain the question.

Mr. Cochran on the same side. I think I shall have no difficulty in disposing of the preliminary questions which are here raised. The great question must be decided on its broad principle, and on that alone. It is said that this is a bill for specific performance; but in all the cases of that nature which were ever brought before a Court, there was some previous specific contract between the parties, otherwise there is nothing left for the Court specifically to perform. Again, it is urged that this Regulation is an interpleader Act; but in the present case, and with respect to the matter before the Court, it bears no resemblance to an interpleader statute. The pottahdars, as they are called, or proprietors, make no claim whatever at present, there is but one claimant, so that there are no parties between whom to interplead. The objection which has been raised, on our part, that the Members of the Lottery Committee were entitled to notice as Justices of the Peace, has been discussed at some length on the other side, but we abandon it, and I shall not trouble the Court with any remarks upon this subject. The title of the complainant as talookdar of the talook of Sootagooty, is fully admitted by us, and after this admission, it is difficult to see why the other side have pressed upon the attention of the Court the terms of the sunnud and the talenture. We admit the Company thereby transferred all the right and title which was in themselves, but they could not assign what they did not possess. The same remark is applicable to the evidence which has been given of the Company themselves, as talookdars having granted pottahs of alluvion; because the original question still remains whether they had the right of doing so. This is a question which ought to have been raised at common law, and has nothing to do with a Court of Equity. Blewitt v. Tregumer, 5 Neville and Manning. It is not easy to conjecture how and why the original bill was not demurred to, and held bad for want of equity and upon other grounds too; for a more plainly demurrable bill was never put upon the files of this Court. It was nothing more nor less than a plaint in trespass, omitting only the formal commencement, and the conclusion to the damage of the plaintiff of a specified amount of rupees. Nor are the amended and reamended bills in any better predicament. One alleged ground of equity is, that the complainant could not obtain at law the specific compensation which he seeks; but if compensation only be the object sought, a special action on the case would have been the appropriate remedy. Wherein would have consisted the difficulty? Not in drawing the plaint, and certainly not in giving proof of injury and assessing the amount to be recovered, because they have at this hearing given a very ingenious and exact calculation of the sum to which they claim to be entitled. This Court, sitting as a Court of Law, would have performed the office of the Jury whom the Magistrates, under the Regulation, were empowered to summon. The argument that this bill prevents a multiplicity of suits, is a mere fallacy, for the claims of the different pottahdars as they are called, are precisely homogeneous, and one action would have disposed of all. It is nothing to say that the metes and bounds have been defaced, even if the fact be so, for mere confusion of boundaries, without some further consequence being superinduced, is no ground for equitable jurisdiction. Speer v. Crowter, 2 Merivale 418. The objection of want of equity is still more strongly applicable to the claim in the bill in respect of any small portion of land in the complainant's own possession. For that part, nothing whatever would have prevented him from proceeding in a Court of Common Law. We come now to the question, what law is to decide the general matter of right, assuming, for argument's sake, that your Lordships can now take cognisance of it at all. Whatever be the law, however, we contend, that the right is in us. I agree with my learned leader, in considering that the English law is the law applicable to this question, but I shall shew, that we are equally entitled under Hindoo law, and that in fact the two laws are based upon the same principles. Even conceding that all of these parties named in the pleas, and from whom our licence has been obtained, are in fact the pottahdars or tenants under any to name of the complainant, as their landlord, I contend that they are entitled to the alluvion as against the talookdar, and that they had therefore the right to give us the license to construct. A pottahdar may be a perpetual tenant, having a descendible and alienable interest in the soil, as appears from Gardiner v. Felt, L. Jacob and Walker's Reports. But in point of fact the evidence shews clearly, that they are not pottahdars, but independent owners and proprietors, acknowledging no tenancy under any party, but claiming by inheritance, in every case during a great number of years, and in some from time immemorial. These parties called pottahdars, when interrogated, repudiate the tenancy attributed to them, with the exception of two or three out of the whole number, and the whole evidence shews that they are independent holders, some having a bill of sale, others deeds of gift, and the like, for their titles, without any pottah whatsoever. (The learned Counsel here went into a minute examination, at very great length of the evidence upon the question of the nature of the tenancy of these alleged pottahdars, and contended that it clearly shewed, that neither they nor their ancestors held under pottah from the talookdar, but claimed under titles altogether independent.) It is a stating fact, that not one pottah has been produced by the complainant to establish his alleged tenancy; and the inference is, that none were in existence. An argument is sought to be derived from the allegations in our pleas, where we ourselves (I admit) allege the pottahdar tenure. But another argument is, that these pleas have been disproved, and my learned friends have no right to blow hot and cold, urging the falsity of the pleas as an argument against us at one time, and their truth at another. But again, look at the evidence relating to the ghats. It clearly appears that none of these ghats were built by the complainant or his ancestors, and the alleged injury in respect to them, is merely imaginary. It is evident, that these ghats were originally constructed for private purposes by the different occupiers and proprietors of the soil along the bank, and they bear their names still, and most or all of them have since become dedicated to the public. A great deal has been said of the hardships which the complainant has been gratuitously made to suffer, and of the obstacles and difficulties which have been thrown in his way, by the vexatious opposition of the defendants. The double pleas and double answers were put in, because the Company could only plead and answer under seal, and if the opposite side had made a distinct and formal offer to dispense with the oaths of the other defendants, neither the Advocate-General nor myself, would have made any difficulty in acceding to the proposition. But the complainant has himself to blame for the lamentable expense and delay which has been incurred, and for the confusion in which his case is now involved. Why did he, after submitting to the demurrer, file his amended bill, which was precisely as demurrable as the former? Why did he take issue on the pleas and examine witnesses at great length, to shew, that these proprietors were not necessary parties, instead of making them parties at once, although he was obliged to confess afterwards and act upon it, that if he had not made them parties, the bill would infallibly have been dismissed at the hearing; and why did he join the members of the Lottery Committee, who are the mere agents of the Company, as parties at all? It was decided by this Court, in an action at law, brought by George Menay v. The Lottery Committee, that they could not be sued, being the mere agents and servants of Government, and the plaintiff (as one of your Lordships will recollect) was non-suited. I contend then, generally, that the complainant has failed to make out his title in toto, and that even if there be any small portion of land in his own possession, this is not the proper form of remedy, and he cannot recover even pro tanto; and that as against the Company on the main question, and with regard to the Lottery Committee shall appoint as being more agents not beneficially interested, the bill must be dismissed. Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12.

SEVENTH DAY.

Mr. Clarke, in reply. In opening this case to your Lordships, I gave a general sketch of the nature of the claim set up by the complainant, and of the evidence which he intended to adduce in its support; this sketch has now been filled up in its details, by the evidence which has been read to the Court, and your Lordships have heard the argument urged by us, and the argument urged on behalf of the defence. It appears to me that little now remains for me to do, except to examine how far the evidence read on the other side, and the arguments which you have heard, have touched our case. It is observable that the chief witnesses relied on by the other side, are the pottahdars, parties palpably interested in the result. Although perhaps the competency of these witnesses cannot be objected to their testimony is certainly not receivable without great limitation, and their credibility is still further affected by the contradiction apparent between their acts and their assertion; for, after setting up a claim in the Examiner's Office, they decline availing themselves of the opportunity afforded them of establishing that claim in this Court. The bill has been allowed to be taken pro confesso against them all, and as far as they are concerned, therefore, the allegations in the bill must be taken to be true, and their own evidence to the contrary goes for nothing. One of the preliminary objections, has been altogether abandoned by the defendants, and they have not contended in support of the submission in their answer, that the members of the Lottery Committee were entitled to notice of action as Justices of the Peace; but the other objection for want of equity has been strongly relied on. The Advocate-General stated, that everything but the compensation had been abandoned; but this is not so. We rely upon the injunction even now, and if we show that we are entitled to it, there is nothing whatever to prevent the Court from granting it even at this stage of the cause. But in point of fact an injunction has been twice applied for, and refused on different grounds. An injunction was applied for in May 1824, before Sir A. Buller and Sir F. Macnaghten, and again in December before the latter judge only, after Sir A. Buller's death, and one of those learned judges was of opinion that a mandamus was the proper remedy, and the other considered that the complainant must seek his general relief without asking either an injunction or a mandamus to stop a public road. So that it is clear (if indeed it be of any importance) that the complainant has been guilty of no laches in applying for his injunction. But we seek compensation also, and in a specific mode. The case of The New River Company v. Graves & Vernon, of is great importance on this point for there the claim was for damages, and a Court of Equity granted a commission to ascertain the amount. We seek the compensation, too, out of a particular fund, and it has not been shewn that we could have charged this fund by any proceeding at common law. Even if an ejectment could have been sustained, it would not have given us the remedy which we seek, because we do not want the land back. But we say that to ejectment or trespass, the Regulation would have been a bar. The argument that this suit does not present a multiplicity of actions, inasmuch as the verdict in one action would have been good evidence in the others, is a mere fallacy. It might be good evidence, but it would not preclude the necessity of bringing the other actions! We contend, therefore, on all these grounds, that the bill exhibits abundant equity on the face of it. Now with regard to the question of right, a very singular line of argument has been adopted on the other side. They contend that we ought to have explained the titles of these parties called pottahdars, that we ought to have produced their pottahs if they have any, or shewn what deeds they claim under! Why this is calling upon us to prove their case. Was it for us to explain the title of these alleged grantors, or if they left a hiatus in their proof, was it our duty to supply the defect? Whatever be the titles of these parties, we claim the allusion as talookdars not under them but against them.—Another strange argument used for the defendants is, that the question of right in this case must be tried by English law, and the learned Advocate-General has observed, that the English law of ejectment might as well be objected to and some Hindoo law substituted. But there is no law of Ejectment it is mere practice. The practice is, no doubt, according to English law, and ought to be so; but the right is to be determined by Hindoo law. In an action of ejectment, the right and title would not be decided according to English law, where a question arose upon a Hindoo tenure. The tenures of talookdars, pottahdars and the like, are totally unknown to the English law, and it is difficult to see what conceivable application the cases reported in Ambler, in High, in Barnwall and Crosswell, which have been cited to the Court, or any other case whatever which it is possible to cite from English authorities, can have to the present case. If this Court were to hold that the question is to be governed by English law, the difficulty of application would be insuperable, and that law could have no effect except by the most vague and remote analogy. The law which is really to apply to this case, is the law of the land in Bengal, as administered by the Mofussil and Sudder Courts in similar cases, by whatsoever name it may be known. This law is entirely in our favour. The opinions of those whom we have examined before the Examiner, two of whom at least, Macnaghten and Colclough, were fully competent to judge, and all the cases decided in the Sudder, with the decrees cited by us of the Calcutta Provincial Court, are all favourable to the claim, and the only authority on the other side, is the opinion of Mr. Harrington, avowedly founded on an ex post facto law! (The learned counsel then went into a consideration of the evidence and the authorities at some length. He concluded by reading to the Court a sketch of the minutes of the decree which he proposed should be the form of decrees here, if the Court decided the question of right in favour of the complainant, and he urged that this proposed decree, which was quite in accordance with the allegations and the prayer of the bill, practically exhibited the title of the complainant to equitable relief.

The Court, at the close of the learned counsel's address, intimated their wish, that briefs of the interrogatories and the evidence, furnished to the counsel on either side, might be sent to their Lordships for the convenience of reference. Judgment will probably be delivered in the course of the following term.

Judgment postponed.

Mem. The common law board will be taken to-morrow, and motions (if any).—Harkness, February 14.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1809.

BOHANNIPERSAUD, EXECUTOR, &c. v. OSWALLOLL AND OTHERS.

The Advocate General, moved to amend the decretal order. One of the other parties had assented, but another had instructed counsel to oppose.

Sir E. Ryan said, it was not out of the question to amend a decretal order on motion, except where the error was a mere clerical one in drawing up the order, or except where all the parties consented.

Refused.

JADUCHUNDRA SEAL AND ANOTHER v. COCKERELL AND CO.

This was a motion for an injunction to restrain the defendant from proceeding at law upon a certain agreement for the delivery of silk. The complainants had put in affidavits in support of the motion verifying the material allegations in their bill, filed for an injunction, and the defendants had filed counter-affidavits.

Mr. Clarke, yesterday mentioned to the Court, that as the affidavits of the defendants (the plaintiffs at law) completely contradicted in every material particular the affidavits of his clients, it was quite useless to press the motion for an injunction and the complainants would rely therefore on their defence at law. The bill would of course stand dismissed.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton for the complainants. The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith for the defendants, (the plaintiffs at law.)

CALLY PROSUNOD MOOKENJEE v. MALCOLM MACLEAN.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated, that this was an action brought to recover damages for an alleged trespass upon the premises of the plaintiff, and for injury done to his property there. The defendant had pleaded the general issue, under which plea the learned counsel apprehended that defence was available, except mere disproof of the wrongful act complained of; and he had also pleaded a demurrer to himself of the locus in quo, the proof of which latter issue would be on the defendant. It would be proved that the defendant had destroyed certain crops on the land, and a quantity of indigo plant, and had done injury to certain trees growing on the premises, and had committed other trespass and waste, involving great pecuniary loss to the plaintiff.

Witnesses were examined at very great length on both sides, and the case occupied the Court until nearly 2 o'clock. Their Lordships found a verdict for the plaintiff on all the issues and assessed the damages at rupees 5,900.

Messrs. Prinsep and Clarke were for the defence.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.—DAMAGES Co's Rs 5,600

The first cause on the board for to-morrow, is Doe on the demise of P. O'Hanton v. N. Palliologus.—HURHARU, February 15.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1839.

ROBERTSON v. KIERNAN.

Mr. Clarke for the defendant, moved to postpone the trial of this case, on the ground that certain material witnesses for the defence had gone to Rangoon but were shortly expected back, and that the defendant could not safely proceed to trial until their return. The Counsel for the plaintiff might examine their witnesses de bene esse now, if they chose. (This is a libel case involving certain very disagreeable details.)

The Advocate General said, that he should show cause in the first instance. It ought to have appeared distinctly in the affidavits what was the precise nature of the evidence which these absent witnesses were expected to give. In a matter of this nature it was quite out of the question for the plaintiff to examine his witnesses now, and for the case to come piecemeal before the Court. It was a hardship upon him too, to delay the investigation of a case in which an imputation upon plaintiff was cast upon his character.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the affidavits appeared to exhibit sufficient grounds for the postponement, and for the plaintiff's own sake, the fullest enquiry ought to be had, that the justification of his character might be the more complete. The Court would sit the first day of the next Term specially, on the day of trial.

Postponed to the 1st of March, being the first day of Term.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF P. O'HANTON AND P. W. ALEXANDER v. N. PALLIOLOGUS.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Clarke, stated, that this was an action of ejectment, brought by the assignees of one Ramkisen Colleen, an insolvent, to recover certain premises in Calcutta, the property of the insolvent, purchased by the defendant at a sale by the Sheriff. There was no material dispute of fact; the whole question was a point of law, which the Counsel for the lessors of the plaintiff wished to raise by a special case; but it seemed that the Counsel for the other side were disposed to put the plaintiff on strict proof of their title, though in point of fact, the alleged title of the defendant was derived from the insolvent also.

The Advocate General said, that he was ready to make some admissions.

Mr. Clarke proceeded to state, that an action was commenced by one Miskey against the said Ramkisen Colleen, and a writ of sequestration under the Charter, for non appearance, was sued out in October 1837. Ramkisen Colleen filed his petition of insolvency on the 27th January 1838, and the order of adjudication bore date on the same day; on the 2nd of February, Miskey obtained his ex parte judgment, and sued out a writ of renditioni exponas under which the property was seized, in the March following. The Sheriff received a notice not to sell, on the 28th of March, but the sale nevertheless took place on the following day, and the defendant was the purchaser on that occasion. The question, therefore, was, whether the writ of sequestration, which was sued out before the insolvency, so bound the property in the requested lands, as to authorize the sale by the Sheriff upon the judgment and writ of renditioni after the insolvency.

The Advocate-General Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith were for the defence.

Certain admissions were then agreed to on both sides, and the rest was supplied by evidence. It was attempted to shew that there was fraud on the part of the insolvent, which would affect the validity of the adjudication, but this was explained, and it was contended moreover, by the plaintiff's Counsel, that the validity of the adjudication of insolvency could not be questioned in the Supreme Court (except indeed by way of appeal) and that it could only be set aside in the Insolvent Court itself.

Sir E. Ryan said, that as there was only the question of law remaining, relating to the effect of the sequestration to bind the property, it had better be argued as a special case next term. Pro forma, the verdict might now be entered for the lessor of the plaintiff, and the junior Counsel on each side would frame the special case, and if there arose any disagreement, they could attend at his Lordship's chambers.

Verdict for plaintiff subject to special case.

ROBERT DAVIDSON v. HENRY HADDERSPRY.

This was an action for principal and interest due upon a bill of exchange for Co's Rs 200, drawn by Forbes and Co. in London, and accepted by the defendant (a gentleman in the service) in favour of the plaintiff, under the name of Macintyre and Company. The defendant pleaded that there was no consideration, inasmuch as the bill purported to be for the amount of his passage money from England, on the ship Exmouth, of which Forbes and Co. were the owners, and the agreement was, that defendant should have free passage as a remuneration for taking the command charge of certain troops, of which agreement the plaintiff (alleged to be the mété agent of Forbes and Co.) was fully cognizant. The replication took issue generally on the allegations in the plea.

Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton were Counsel for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Osborne, were for the defence.

The cause was referred by consent to arbitration, the costs of the action and of the arbitration, with all matters in difference in the cause, to abide the award of the arbitrator.

Referred.

T. SANDER D. AGA COMBODOLIE MATHOMP.

This was an action to recover the amount of certain bills of costs. The trial occupied a considerable time, and the Court ultimately gave a verdict for the plaintiff, subject to certain points of law raised. It appeared that some of the bills were made out in the name of Mr. Charles Hogg alone, some in the names of Messrs. Hogg and Sanders, and others in the name of Mr. Sander, and it was contended that for the former this action was not properly laid. Mr. Clarke, however, cited Kell v. Nainby, 10 B. and C. 20, in which an Attorney carrying on business under the name of Kell and Son, though in fact the son was not a partner but only a salaried clerk, was held competent to maintain an action on the joint bills, in his own name. This point was reserved. Another question was whether fees for concourning were taxable. The Advocate-General also raised a point for the defendant, whether he might not shew that certain sums had been paid in part liquidation, although there was no special plea of payment, and he cited Shirley v. Jacobs 2 Bingham's New Ca. p. 88, where the evidence was held admissible in reduction of damages, though not in bar without a special plea.*

Messrs. Clarke and Mr. Cochrane, were for the plaintiff.

The Advocate-General, and Mr. Prinsep, for the defence.

Verdict for the plaintiff with leave for the defendant to move.

HOOPLOLL DAY AND OTHERS V. EDWARD DALY.

This was an action to recover the sum of Co.'s Rs. 989, for goods sold and delivered to the defendant. It comes on ex parte for want of appearance.

Messrs. Prinsep and Cochrane for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

There are no cases now remaining on the Common Law Board. The Equity Board, and motions, will be taken to-morrow (Saturday) which is the last day of the Sittings. Sir E. Ryan intimated that he could not attend to-morrow. Sir H. W. Seton will be the Judge in Chambers during the Sessions.—Hurkaru February. 16.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

DOY DN. ENAUNBUK KHANSAMMAU V. WILDER,

Mr. Norton moved in this case for an immediate writ of possession. Judgment had been duly recovered during the present Sittings against the casual ejector, and this motion was under Rule 5 of the New Rules, "Trial and Judgment," which empowered the Court at its discretion to grant an immediate writ of execution, where the trial has been had during the last four days of Term or in the Sittings. In the present case, there were affidavits put in, stating that the tenant in possession had refused to give up possession, and was pulling down the buildings on the premises and selling the materials, and committing other waste.

* Note—A rule has since been passed in England, expressly to disallow it, and the doctrine in the case cited, is clearly opposed to the spirit of the New Pleading Rules.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke, mentioned, as amici curiæ, that the same point had been raised in a former case and the Court had held, that the rule in question was not applicable to ejectments. Although there had existed a similar rule in England, it was considered insufficient, and a statute was passed expressly to give the power in ejectment cases. It might be a hard case, and perhaps a new rule might be deemed expedient in this Court to remedy the defect.

Mr. Morton said, that the rule gave the power of granting "immediate writs of execution," and the "writ of possession" was in fact the writ of execution in ejectment. But even if this rule were not applicable, he apprehended the last Plea Rule would apply, which directed that in every case not specially provided for, the practice of the Court of Queen's Bench in England was to regulate the practice here.

Sir J. P. Grant said that this was not a matter of Practice at all, and the last Plea Rule would not remedy the defect.

Refused.

MUDDENMOHUN COOPONDHAN V. MOHA RANEE RUSSENT COMARREE.

Mr. Clarke moved to discharge the order for a commission to take the answer of the defendant. The complainant in this suit (a cross-suit for the purpose of discovery) was desirous of dispensing with the oath and signature of the defendant to her answer, which would thus save the expense of the commission, and render it unnecessary for the defendant (a Hindoo lady of rank) to be subjected to the degradation of having the ronama entered by Europeans.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep for the defendant, said, that this was the most indicrous and unparalleled motion within their recollection! What was it to the complainant if the defendant voluntarily chose to incur this degradation, as he was pleased to call it? The defendant insisted on being sworn to her answer, and she had a right to do so, because the statements in her answer, without either oath or signature, could not weigh so strongly with the Court, where the testimony was conflicting, as it would under the solemn sanction and serious responsibility of a judicial oath.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that the Court was always bound by admissions, and in such cases never weighed the probabilities. He could not see the force of the objection.

The Advocate-General confessed he viewed it in a totally different light from his Lordship. But this motion of the complainant sullied himself; for the bill was a bill of discovery, and it was very difficult to perceive the value of an answer to such a bill without the sanction of an oath or even the authenticity of a signature.

Mr. Clarke in reply, said that his motion was not by any means so indicrous as the opposition of his learned friends. He recollected a case at the Old Bailey, where a prisoner, arraigned for a Bank forgery, pleaded "guilty," but finding that all his fellow forgers had been acquitted by the caprice of the Jury, he withdrew his plea and was acquitted likewise, whereupon the presiding Judge addressing the prisoner, said that he had always entertained a bad opinion of him, but his opinion was now more unfavourable than ever, for twelve honest jurymen had refused to believe him after he had confessed his guilt! His learned friend in the present case seemed to attach no credibility to the word of their client without the sanction of an oath, and the influence of the pains and penalties consequent upon perjury! But in fact the complainant had no wish to prevent her being sworn; if she was particularly desirous, she might come into the Court and take the oath in the usual way. This motion was only to dispense with the commission, and although the defendant might exercise her own opinion about subjecting herself to degradation, she had no right to impose this upon the other members of the Rajah of Bidwan's family.

The Advocate-General said, that the order was wrongly worded, for it gave the defendant no option to take the oath in any way, the words being "that the answer be filed without oath or signature," whereas it ought to be "that she have liberty to file, &c."

Mr. Clarke said, that he should move to amend at once.

Sir J. P. Grant observed, that the amendment might be made now with the consent of the other side.

The Advocate-General said, that he should consent to nothing.

Sir J. P. Grant then said, that if consent was refused now, the amendment could only be in the usual way, by a distinct motion on notice, and the present motion must of course be discharged.

Refused, but without costs.

This was the last day of the sitting. The second Term commences on Friday, 1st of March.—Hurkuruz, Feb. 18.

FINAL SESSIONS.—FEB. 18, 1839.

LIST OF THE GRAND JURY.

T. BECKUR, Esq., Foreman.

JURORS

H Ford	H. J. Leighton.
A. D. and Leod.	P. N. C. Cavorka.
D. B. Syers.	P. Cragg.
L. De Souza.	W. C. Ewart.
R. Pirgrave.	C. R. Lackerteen.
A. Beaton.	C. G. Francis.
W. Limond.	D. Hare.
R. J. Johannes.	A. Parker and
M. S. Owen.	J. Church, Esqs.
T. Lowe.	Baboo Harrokomar Tagore
Baboo Kraspmay Dutt	" Kulypersaud Ghose.

ADDRESS TO THE GRAND JURY.

The Chief Justice addressed the Grand Jury nearly as follows:

"I am anxious to call your attention to certain acts which have recently been passed by the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council.

You are aware that the Act 3 and 4 W. 4, c. 85 has empowered the Governor-General in Council to make laws and regulations for all persons whether British or Native. Under the 43d section of this Act (termed the Charter Act,) the Governor-General in Council has power to make laws, repealing, amending, or altering any laws or regulations in force at the time of passing this Act, but he is prohibited from making any laws which shall repeal, vary, or suspend any of the provisions of this Act, or the provisions of any Act thereafter to be passed in any way affecting the Company—the British territories in India, or the Inhabitants thereof. Under the powers contained in the provisions of the statute I have cited, the Acts to which I shall call your attention have been passed.

These Acts are No. 25 of 1838, No. 26 of 1838, No. 31 of 1838.

I will first observe on the Act 25 of 1838 relating to Wills.

In the first year of Her Majesty's reign an Act was passed for the amendment of the law relating to Wills. This Act was principally framed on the recommendation of certain Commissioners, one Commission having been appointed to enquire into the law of England relating to real property, and the other into the practice and jurisdiction of ecclesiastical Courts. Both of these commissions reported in favour of most of the provisions contained in this statute. The reports of these Commissioners were afterwards laid before both Houses of Parliament. They were considered by two Committees at different times in the Commons, and by two committees the Lords. A draft of a Bill founded on these reports was then prepared, and submitted generally for the comments and observations of the profession at large. And ultimately, after much discussion in the Commons and the Lords, this Bill, with some alterations, was passed into a law. The subject therefore, received all the consideration on the part of the legislature, which the vast importance of the interests affected by it required.

The general objects of this statute are, to remove danger, and error, and litigation, arising from Wills made by persons unaccustomed to legal forms, and to lay down rules so plain and simple, that they may be easily understood.

This statute did not extend to Her Majesty's Indian territories.

The Judges of this Court, after consulting their brethren at the other Presidencies, applied to the Governor-General in Council, to extend its provisions to India, all the Queen's Judges at the other presidencies, and at this, being of opinion, that evils and difficulties must necessarily arise, if one uniform mode was not adopted for the execution of Wills, which, in many cases, are to operate partly in this country, and partly in England. Thus, for example, a man having an estate in England, and an estate in India, and devising them both by the same Will, might find, that the form, that suffices to pass the one, will not transmit the other.

I will now direct your attention to some of the provisions of this Act. It commences with defining the meaning of words. It gives the widest meaning to the word Will—it extends it to a testament, a codicil—to an appointment, &c. So the words "real estate," extends to messuages, lands, rents, and hereditaments, whether freehold, copyhold, &c. So "personal estate" extends to leasehold estates, money, shares of Government, or other funds, securities for money, and all other property which devolves on an executor. Every word importing the singular number only to be extended and applied, to several persons and things, as well as one.

Every word importing the masculine gender only, is to be extended and applied to females, as well as males, in those passages in respect to several Acts or parts of Acts, amongst others, those termed the statutes of Wills, and certain clauses of the statute of frauds, by which, the law of Wills, as far as relates to those persons to whom this statute is applicable, was formerly regulated. It then proceeds to state to whom the Act applies. S. 3 provides, that the Act shall only extend to the Wills of persons whose personal property cannot, by the Law of England, pass to their representatives, without Probate or Letters of Administration, obtained in one of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature.

This act does not extend to the Wills of any soldier in actual Military service, or any mariner or seaman being at sea, nor to wills made before the 1st February 1839; but all other wills, with the exceptions I have mentioned, made after the 1st February 1839, come under the provisions of the Act. It is lawful for every person to devise, bequeath or dispose of, by his will executed in the manner directed by the Act, all real estate, and all personal estate, which he shall be entitled to, either at law or in equity, at the time of his death. All property may thus be bequeathed by will. By the first Section of the Act Real estate extends to manors, advowsons, messuages, lands, tithes, rents, and hereditaments whether freehold, customary freehold, tenant right, customary or copyhold, or of any other tenure, and whether corporeal, incorporeal, or personal, and to all future and contingent interests therein or in any hereditary estate. "Personal estate" extends to leasehold estates, and other chattels real, and also to monies, shares of Government and other funds, securities for money (not being real estate) debts choses in action, rights, credits, goods, and all other property whatsoever which by law devolves upon the Executor or Administrator.

By Section 9, a will can only be made in writing; and it must be signed at the foot or end, by the testator himself—or if he is unable to do it by some person for him in his presence, and by his direction; and the testator must either make or acknowledge his signature in the presence of two or more persons, who are to be present at the same time, and who are to sign their names as attesting witnesses, in the presence of the testator, but no particular form of attestation is necessary. This must be observed by all persons, male or female, in making their Wills. If any person is drawing up his Will, or having it drawn up for him, without legal assistance the best mode of expression will be the simplest and plainest that can be used. Care must be taken not to bequeath legacies to attesting witnesses, or even to the wife or husband of an attesting witness, as all legacies so bequeathed are void in law. The object of this enactment seems to be to prevent any will from being disposed of qualified, or impugned on any alleged undue interest on the part of an attesting witness. It, therefore, a testator wishes to give any thing to an attesting witness he must do so in some other way than by a legacy. But creditors and executors may be attesting witnesses.

By Section 7, persons under twenty-one years of age cannot make a valid will. Neither by Section 8 are married women in the lifetime of their husbands, except where they have property vested in them with a power of devising, &c.

* Soldiers in actual Military Service, and Mariners at sea, and the wills of persons in actual Military or Maritime service, are still regulated by certain other words in force as to pay, prize-money, &c.

By common law, the male infants of 14 and females of 12 might dispose of their property by will, and their will remained in force, after their majority, unless revoked. But they were incapable of acting as executors until 17. And by 38 G 3 C. 87, § 6, not until 21. But infants had generally no power to dispose of real estates until the age of 21. So that they might dispose of personal property to unlimited amount and not of one acre of real estate. (Except by the custom of particular places.) But they might appoint guardians of their children by will. Now infants cannot appoint Guardians of their children; and the age of 21 is the limit of testamentary capacity in all cases.

A doubt was suggested in the House of Lords as to the expediency of the Law with reference to illegitimate children. If a father of an illegitimate child dies under age, he is not able to provide for such issue by his will. This is certainly a hardship arising from the general incapacity of an infant to bequeath by will. Again a child, legitimate or illegitimate can make no gift, if he dies under age, whatever may be his means, to any one to whose kindness he may have been indebted for nurture and education.

The law as to the incapacity of infants has long been silently growing up. All conveyance forms are studiously framed to prevent the disposition of property until the party entitled has obtained the age of 21. The only way in which an infant can bind his property is by incurring a debt for necessities; all other contracts are void.

By Section 18 Any person having made a will and marrying afterwards, the act of marriage revokes the will, (but as made in exercise of a power of appointment, when the estate real or personal thereby appointed, would not, in result of such appointment, pass to his or her heir, executor or administrator, or the person entitled as his or her next of kin, under the statute of distributions.)

Section 20 declares that a will can only be revoked, by being destroyed, or by the execution of a new will.

By Section 21 alterations must be made and executed in the same manner as is required for the execution of a will.

Persons making any alterations in their wills, must, therefore be careful, that the alterations are made and signed in the same way as the wills.

Section 23 provides, that no conveyance or act done subsequent to the execution of a will or of relating to any real or personal estate, therewith, rised, except an act by which the will shall be revoked, will prevent the operation of the will with respect to such real or personal estate.

By Section 24 Wills are to be construed as if made immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention appears from the terms of a will itself.

Real property which the testator did not acquire until after the date of his will, could not, before this Act, pass by that will without republication, notwithstanding the will purported, in the most general terms, to devise all real estate to which the testator might be entitled. In the case of a mere exchange of lands, the lands exchanged would not pass. By Section 25, a remainder devise shall include the estates bequeathed by implied and void devises, unless a contrary intention shall appear. By Sec. 26, A general device of the testator's lands shall include any lands and tenements, as well as franchises, liberties, and advowsons, unless a contrary intention shall appear. By Sec. 27, a general gift shall include estates over which the testator has a general power of appointment, unless a contrary intention shall appear. By Sec. 28, a devise without any words of limitation shall be construed to pass the fee, unless a contrary intention shall appear. By Sec. 29, the words "die without issue" or "die without leaving issue," shall be construed to mean, die without issue living at the death of the person, and not an indefinite failure of his issue, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will, by reason of such person having a prior estate tail, or of a preceding gift, being, without any implication arising from such words, a limitation of an estate tail to such person or issue, or otherwise; but this shall not extend to cases where such words import the issue described in a preceding gift shall be held, or if there be no issue who shall live to attain the age, or otherwise answer the description required for obtaining a vested estate by a preceding gift to such issue. Sec. 33 provides, that if a child or other issue of the testator, to whom any real or personal estate may be devised, or bequeathed, dies in the life time of the testator leaving issue, and such issue be living at the time of the testator's death, the devise or bequest shall not lapse.

The rule that gifts lapse if the person to whom they are made dies in the life time of the testator, often operates with great hardship and defeats the testator's intention. Thus, as the law formerly stood, if a father gave his property amongst his children, and a son or other child died before him leaving a family, such family were frequently disappointed. These inconveniences are provided against, and the issue or family become entitled to the property given to their parent.

What I have stated are the main points of a very important Act which will tend to simplify the law of wills, and prevent a portion of the litigation so often arising from the disposal of property by bequest, will therefore, necessarily, technicalities and exceptions involved in the new law, to understand the practical effect of which, the testator should consult his professional adviser.

I shall now advert to the Second Act to which I alluded at the outset, namely Act 28 of 1838, which relates to the punishment of the offence of Perjury.

The statute 39 and 40 G. 3 C. 79 S. 12, empowered this Court to transport persons convicted of the offence of perjury.

That Statute was repealed by 5. 116. 9 G. 4 C. 74 called the Indian Criminal Act, and perjury, with some few exceptions provided for by particular statutes, such as Perjury in the Insolvent Court, &c. was punishable only as a misdemeanour, by fine and imprisonment.

This Act 28 of 1838 restores the law to its former state, and allows the Court, in all cases, should it seem good, to transport.

This, as you are aware, gentlemen, is an offence unfortunately of too common occurrence in this country, and so injurious to the due administration of Justice, that it is necessary to suppress it, if possible, by every example, and the Court is authorized to punish by transportation for life, or for a term of years, or by imprisonment for four years with or without hard labour.

I shall proceed to comment upon the provisions of the Act 31 of 1838.

It may be in the recollection of some whom I have the honour to address, that at the Assizes of 1829, now nearly 10 years ago, I called the attention of the then Grand Jury, from this place, to the Act then recently passed, for the improvement of the administration of Criminal Justice in the East Indies, and the Act for the relief of insolvent debtors. I then explained why the amendments in the Criminal law of England, which had from time to time taken place in England, by various acts of parliament since the year 1796, had been held not to extend to this country, and I also stated at some length the great improvements which this statute, for the first time introduced, assimilating the Criminal Law of India to the improved state of the law, on this subject, at home. Since that time various improvements have taken place in the Criminal law of England, but those of the greatest moment and importance are contained in Acts passed in the 24th year of the reign of Her present Majesty. These Acts did not extend to India, and the Judges thought it expedient to apply to the Government to exercise its legislative functions, and to extend these ameliorations of the law to the Queen's Courts in India. The provisions of the several statutes passed in the first year of Her Majesty are embodied in the Act 31 of 1838.

I will now detail its provisions.

Its principal object is to take away capital punishments, and to mitigate the rigour of the law. The Commissioners in their report on Criminal Law, recommend, and I shall quote their remarks, that capital punishment should be inflicted in respect of such offences only, as are expressly directed in the destruction of life, or accompanied with actual danger to life, or with so much personal violence as denotes a design to commit murder, or endanger life. But this is not the sole object, (viz. decrease of capital punishments,) another and important object is, to classify crimes according to certain gradations, and introduce precise definitions of the offences to which different degrees of punishment should be assigned. This Act modifies and restricts the application of capital punishment in the following classes of offences, and provides appropriate secondary punishments for such of them as it is thought ought no longer to be visited with capital punishment, 1. Malicious injuries. 2. Burglary. 3. Robbery. 4. Burning and destroying ships.

First as to malicious injuries: Under S. 59, 9 G. 4, c. 74. 1. The administering or attempting to administer poison. 2. The attempting to drown, suffocate or strangle. 3. The shooting at, or attempting to discharge loaded arms at. 4. The stabbing, cutting or wounding, accompanied with intention to commit murder, were capital offences. Under S. 60, shooting at or attempting to discharge loaded arms, and stabbing, cutting and wounding with the intention to maim, disfigure, disable or to do grievous bodily harm, or to resist the lawful apprehension of the offender for a crime, were capital offences, provided such acts were committed under such circumstances that if death had ensued thereupon the same would in this have amounted to the crime of murder. So under S. 61, the using drugs or instruments for the purpose of procuring the miscarriage of a woman quick with child, was a capital offence. These Sections are now repealed and the severity of the law mitigated.

The only case in which death is now to be inflicted, is, where the direct intention is murder, evidenced by the overt acts of administering poison, attempting to drown, suffocate or strangle, or cutting or wounding.

are accompanied by the further overt act, of actually causing some bodily injury dangerous to life. Where these acts are done with the intent to murder, and no bodily injury is effected, the party is liable to transportation for life, &c. &c. Besides where the intention is to maim, &c. there, the shooting, or stabbing, cutting or maiming, is no longer a capital felony, but a transportable offence.

But there is one important provision in S. 5, in which I must call your attention. "It is enacted, whosoever shall administer to, or cause to be taken by any person any poison or other destructive thing, or shall stab, cut or wound any person, or shall by any means whatsoever cause to any person any bodily injury dangerous to life, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to commit murder, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall suffer death."

I cannot better illustrate the effect and bearing of this Section of the Act, than by reading to you the observations of the Commissioners, appointed to inquire and report upon the state of the Criminal Law, contained in a letter addressed to Lord John Russell Secretary of State for the Home Department, dated 19th January 1837.

"It is material to direct your Lordship's attention to a peculiarity in our provision respecting malicious injuries which has the effect of rendering it, in one sense, far more comprehensive than the law now in force.

"Although in the enumeration of the specific overt acts accompanying an intention to murder, we have generally followed the words of the 9th Geo. 4, c. 31, we have added other words of a more comprehensive nature which are not found in that statute. As the omission to define distinctly all actions or circumstances which are to form the component parts of crimes, may at first appear, to be a departure from an important principle, we think it right to explain fully the reasons which have induced us to propose this innovation.

"From the restriction of the essence of the crime to certain specific acts, and the consequent omission of innumerable other acts equally criminal, there has been a frequent failure of justice in the application of former enactments upon this subject; by Lord Ellenborough's act, a "wounding" with intent to murder, unless produced by "cutting" or "stabbing" would not amount to a capital offence. The 9, G. 4, c. 31, improved upon this by adding the much more comprehensive word "wounding." But, even with this addition the clause by no means extends to all the cases which are within the principle and object of the enactment.

"Since the passing of the 9, G. 4, c. 31, assaults of the most violent and savage description have been frequently committed, attended, beyond all doubt, by some of the various intents mentioned in that statute, but as, in the strictness of legal interpretation, they did not constitute the precise acts therein specified they were held not to be punishable under its provisions.

"Among the cases reserved for the opinion of the Judges from the various courts of criminal jurisdiction, questions, upon the meaning of the words of this statute, have much the most frequent, as well as the most subtle and perplexing. A few instances of the debatable points which have arisen, will satisfy your Lordship of the expediency of some further definition; or extension of the law with respect to crimes of this description. At the April old Bailey Sessions in 1834, a man was indicted for maliciously wounding a peace officer by biting off the end of his finger with intent to resist his apprehension. He was convicted by the jury; but a doubt having arisen upon the construction of the words of the statute, whether this Act was a "wounding," the question was reserved for the opinion of all the Judges, who held, by a majority of 7 to 6, that in order to constitute a "wounding" so as to bring the offender within the 9 G. 4 c. 31, the injury must be inflicted with some instrument. Another instance occurred in a case tried before Lord Denman, at the summer assizes for Somersetshire, in 1834, in which a man, with the deliberate and avowed purpose of destroying his wife, had assaulted her with a heated poker, had beaten her furiously till she was insensible, and had actually set her clothes on fire, while she was prevented from killing her by the interference of the neighbours. Though the bruises and burns occasioned by this ferocious assault had nearly produced death, no mortal wound was inflicted, and therefore, as the case did not fall within any of the clauses of the statute, he could only be punished for an aggravated assault.

"Instances of this kind, where crimes of the most mischievous tendency escape the proper measure of punishment, in consequence of the insufficiency of the law to meet them, necessarily injure the character of the administration of justice, and produce that popular distrust of the efficiency of the laws which is always the result of great discrepancies between legal decisions, and the dictates of common sense. Influenced by this consideration we have been anxious to introduce some provisions by which the difficulties of construction, arising upon former statutes, might be avoided, or diminished, without, however, incurring the dangers resulting from the use of terms of loose and general description. For this purpose we have added, to the specific overt acts taken from the existing statute, the words "or shall by any other means whatsoever manifesting a design to kill, do actual bodily harm with intent to murder."

"We have already observed that in principle there seems to be no reason for a distinction as to the punishment between a direct attempt to murder however effected and, unattended with injury to the object and the combined facts of the attempt and the actual injury. It is therefore on the ground of policy alone, that the law thought it proper to place so grave a crime as deliberate design to murder, amongst secondary offences."

"The 6th Section of the Act 31 of 1838 provides, that acts which before only would have amounted to aggravated assaults, shall be now considered as felonies, namely, the sending, &c. any explosive substance, or noxious thing, or throwing upon a person corrosive fluid, &c. with intent to burn and disfigure, and whereby the party is burnt or disfigured.

Under the 6th Section of 9 G. 4, c. 74, it was a capital offence to attempt to procure abortion if the woman was quick with child.

This Section the present Act has repealed, abolishing the capital punishment and classifying this offence amongst secondary crimes. As the law stood before, the party was punishable with death if the woman was quick with child; with transportation if that fact could not be established; this distinction between the offences (as the capital punishment is abolished), is taken away. It was under the former law necessary in both cases to show, that the woman was pregnant, and the word pregnant was actually inserted in the Bill as introduced into the House of Lords, but rejected by Lord Lyndhurst, on the ground that the guilty intention was the same whether the woman was pregnant or not.

The 8th section of this Act contains a most salutary provision.

"It provides that if, on the trial of any person for any of the offences hereinbefore mentioned, or for any felony whatever where the crime charged shall include an assault against the person, it shall be lawful for the jury to acquit of the felony, and to find a verdict of guilty of assault against the person indicted, if the evidence shall warrant such finding, and when such verdict shall be found, the Court shall have power to imprison the person so found guilty of an assault, for any term not exceeding four years."

Although of course a party might be indicted for the assault separately, and if convicted might be punished by fine or imprisonment as in other cases of misdemeanor, yet, a count could not be added for a misdemeanor to a count for the felony in the same indictment, and offenders acquitted of the felony usually escaped punishment altogether.

I will now call your attention to the offence of burglary, one of most frequent occurrence in this place, especially in the native parts of the town.

I cannot better explain the alterations that have been made under this head, than by again referring to the letter of the Commissioners.

"The next class of offences to which we have endeavoured to apply the same principles of definition and arrangement, is comprehended under the general head of burglary.

"By the Common Law, simple burglary, which, as defined by Lord Coke, is nothing more than the breaking and entering a dwelling-house in the night-time with intent to commit a felony, is a capital offence, however small the breaking, and however trifling the felony intended or effected. It appears to us, that in no department is the criminal law more essentially defective than in its provisions upon the subject of burglary. Were it even to be assumed that it is proper that the forcible invasion and disturbance of the right of habitation in the night-time with a felonious intention should be punishable with death, the definition of the offence is far too wide; for, as the absence of night is the only legal criterion of night, and a mere constructive breaking is sufficient, it follows that a child who opens a casement and takes out an apple at six o'clock in the evening, may be just as liable to capital punishment as a gang of burglars who plunder a house at midnight.

"In consequence of the unreasonable latitude of the law, it would be impossible to carry it into execution at the present day; and accordingly we find that in practice, it never happens that execution does follow the sentence of death upon convictions for burglary, unless the commission of the technical crime has been attended by acts of personal violence or cruelty, or some other aggravations, which completely alter the complexion of the offence, and constitute in truth the criminal acts for which the offender suffers. Of the criminality of these acts, and their probably fatal consequences to himself, the offender has no notice by the letter of the law, nor are they contained in the formal charge against him in the indictment; they are not recorded against him, if proved; and their truth has frequently to be inquired of in the absence of the prisoner, after the close of the trial and dismissal of the jury.

"It appears to us that the practical remedy for such evil properly consists, in defining those acts and circumstances which have hitherto been considered as aggravations, and by constituting them, when joined with the burglarious entry, substantive crimes. We further propose to classify them according to their different degrees of atrocity, upon the same principle which we have followed with respect to malicious injuries. Thus, all burglaries committed in pursuance of a direct attempt to murder, or attended with acts of cutting, stabbing or wounding, beating, or striking, or the use of any other personal violence, will continue to be capital. Other modifications of the offence which at present do not usually induce the infliction of capital punishment, but are commonly followed by an aggravated punishment short of death, we have placed in our second class."

The statute of Her Majesty relating to burglary has been framed principally on these suggestions, and the clauses introduced into the present Act, provide,

Sec. 9.—"And it is hereby enacted, that whosoever shall burglariously break and enter into any dwelling house, and shall assault with intent to murder any person, being therein, or shall stab, cut, wound, beat or strike any such person, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall suffer death."

Sec. 10.—"And it is hereby enacted, that whosoever shall be convicted of the crime of burglary shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported to such place as the Court shall direct for life, or for any term of years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years."

Sec. 11.—"Provided always, and it is hereby enacted, that so far as the same is essential to the offence of burglary, the night shall be considered, and is hereby declared to commence at nine of the clock in the evening, and to conclude at six of the clock in the morning of the next succeeding day."

It will be seen that this section defines what before was quite uncertain, namely, what shall be considered as night. The general criterion before being whether there was day light or twilight enough begun, or left, whereby the countenance of a person might be reasonably discerned, than which, nothing could be more vague and uncertain.

S. 84 of 9 G. 4, C. 74 relating to burglary is repealed. S. 85 is also repealed, and capital punishment withdrawn for offences analogous to burglary, namely, stealing in a dwelling house and putting a person in fear, stealing to the value of 50 Sicca Rupees, &c. These are now transportable offences.

I shall in the next place advert to the crime of robbery.

Robbery is at present capital by the Common Law, and also by the statute 9 G. 4, C. 74, S. 80. The 81st section of that statute specifically declares the law upon a point which was previously somewhat doubtful, by enacting, that any person who shall accuse or threaten to accuse any other person of any infamous crime, with a view to extort, and by the intimidation of such accusation or threat, shall actually extort any chattel &c. from him, shall be deemed to be guilty of robbery.

The Commissioners observe, "that independently of the statutable robbery last mentioned, the crime of robbery is never, we apprehend, punished with death at the present day, unless in cases attended with serious aggravations. In this crime, therefore, as, in burglary, the punishment, in practice attached to the fortuitous incidents of the offence, and the inconvenience and injustice arising from the latitude of the law are nearly the same with respect to both offences. We propose to diminish the evil by the same means, which we have recommended in burglary, viz. by deferring the aggravations which in practice actually induce capital punishment, and incorporating them with the principal charge; and by classifying the compound offences thus formed according to their degrees of enormity. With this view, we suggest that the capital crime should consist of a robbery, or an attempt to rob, attended by stabbing, cutting, or wounding, or doing actual bodily harm with any offensive weapon or instrument, to the person robbed. In the second class of punishments we place the offence of robbery, or the assault with intent to rob, when committed by numbers, or by persons armed with offensive weapons, or when attended with beating, striking, or any other personal violence. To this class also we transpose the offence of obtaining property by the threat of accusing another of any infamous crime. As this is an offence of the deepest malignity, we had considerable doubts whether it ought not to continue to be punishable with death; but after much consideration, we are inclined to think that, with reference to difficulties of proof, and the disposition of juries, the important object of certainty of punishment will be more readily attained, by placing it in the class of secondary crimes. We propose to place simple robbery and stealing from the person, without any peculiar aggravation, in the third class; and assaults with intent to rob, and demanding property by menaces or force with intent to steal, (which, by the Statute 9 G. 4, c. 74, s. 89, was here punishable by transportation for life,) we have placed in a fourth class, with a less degree of punishment. As connected with the crime of stealing, we have placed the plundering of ships in distress, &c. or goods belonging thereto (which was capital here by 8. 90, 9 Geo. 4 c. 74 and a very grave offence) in the second class."

Lastly, I shall remark upon the offence of wilfully setting fire to houses, and other buildings, &c., whether in the possession of the offender or of any other person, with intent to injure or defraud. This offence is capital by the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 74, s. 114. By the 17th clause of the same statute, the acts of setting fire to, or in any wise destroying ships, whether complete or unfinished, and also of setting fire to them, or casting away or otherwise destroying them, with intent to prejudice owners or underwriters, are also declared to be capital. The 123d clause empowers the Supreme Court to punish, with transportation for 7 years or imprisonment for 2 years, for setting fire to any stack of rice, corn, gram, pulse, sugar cane, straw, hay or wood.

Of the numerous capital crimes connected with the burning of houses or ships, created or continued by this statute, the great majority are offences against property, and danger to human life does not form a necessary ingredient in any of them.

The Commissioners observed, "that with respect to the burning of buildings, &c. or mines, the capital punishment should be repealed in all cases in which the act of burning is not committed in pursuance of a direct intent to murder, or where it is not attended with danger to life. The same limitation may, we think, be advantageously applied to the cases of burning or casting away ships. With respect to the burning of buildings, the offences to which we have assigned a place in the first class as properly punishable with death, are merely such as would probably put life in peril. In the second class, we have placed the offences of setting fire to buildings, and of burning or destroying ships, where danger to life is not produced, and where the extent is to defraud and injure.

"The offence of riotously pulling down churches and other buildings, &c., which is capital by the 7th and 8th Geo. 4 c. 30, not being within the principle upon which we propose to retain punishment of death, we have placed in the second class."

The result of the whole as to capital offences is, that in the following cases, 14 in number, capital punishment is abolished.

1. Attempting to murder, when no injury inflicted.
2. Attempting to maim, disfigure, &c.
3. Robbery without wounding.
4. Threatening to accuse of an infamous crime.
5. Burglary without violence.
6. House breaking.
7. Stealing in a dwelling house, and putting in fear.
8. Stealing to the value of 50 Sicca Rupees.
9. Plundering a wreck.
10. Arson, when life is not endangered.
11. Destroying ships, when life is not endangered.
12. Destroying wrecks.
13. Preventing escape from wreck.
14. Principals in the second degree and accessories before the fact in the above felonies.

Capital offences that remain under 9 G. 4, c. 74, and Act 31, of 1838.

1. Returning from transportation—S. 31, 9 G. 4 c. 74, (though no longer capital in England by 4 and 5 W. 4, c. 67.)
2. Murder.
3. Attempt to murder, when injury inflicted.
4. Sodomy.
5. Rape.
6. Abuse of female children under 8 years of age.
7. Robbery with wounding.
8. Burglary with assault.
9. Arson where persons are within the house, and life-endangered.
10. Riotously destroying buildings.
11. Destroying ships, and life endangered.
12. Exhibiting false lights.

Note to the above 14 cases in which the punishment of death has been abolished.

1. Capital by 9 G. 4 c. 74 Sec. 59, abolished by Act No. 31 of 1838, Sec. 4, and see 1 Vict. c. 85, Sec. 2 and 4.
2. Ditto ditto, Sec. 60—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 5, and 1 Vict. c. 85, Sec. 2 and 4.
3. Ditto ditto, Sec. 80—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 14, and 1 Vict. c. 87, Sec. 2, 4 and 8.
4. Ditto ditto, Sec. 81—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 15, and 1 Vict. c. 87, Sec. 2, 4 and 8.
5. Ditto ditto, Sec. 84—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 10, and 1 Vict. c. 86, Sec. 2 and 1.
6. Ditto ditto, Sec. 85—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 12, and 3 and 4 W. 4, c. 44.
7. Ditto ditto, Sec. 85—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 12, and 1 Vict. c. 86, Sec. 2 and 1.
8. Ditto ditto, Sec. 85—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 12, and 3 and 4 W. 4, c. 44.
9. Ditto ditto, Sec. 90—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 16 and 1 Vict. c. 87, Sec. 2, 4 and 8.

10. Ditto ditto, Sec. 114—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 21 and 1 Vict. c. 89, Sec. 2, 4, 8 and 7.

11. Ditto ditto, Sec. 117—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 24 and 1 Vict. c. 89, Sec. 2, 4, 8 and 7.

12. Ditto ditto, Sec. 119—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 26 and 1 Vict. c. 89, Sec. 2, 4, 8 and 7.

13. Ditto ditto, Sec. 119—ditto ditto Sec. 1 and 25 and 1 Vict. c. 89, Sec. 2, 4, 8 and 7.

14. Ditto ditto, Sec. 38—ditto ditto Sec. 1.

FEBRUARY 20, 1839.

True bills having been returned by the grand jury, on the following indictments, the prisoners were tried.

Buddynath, committed on the 27th December, 1838, for maliciously cutting and wounding Ramshaw Sing, on the right side of his breast, with an axe, with intent to do him some grievous bodily harm. The prisoner when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty, he was consequently tried on it and convicted. After the verdict had been recorded, the judge sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the house of correction.

Roopchand Doss, committed on the 9th January, 1839, charged with stealing from the shop of Ramchand Mundel, a brass water pot valued at 10 annas. The prisoner, when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty, he was consequently tried for the offence and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Ramchand Ghose, committed on the 11th January 1839, charged with having stolen from the residence of Sooroo Ollah, shop keeper in the China Bazar, an umbrella, a brass water pot and some clothes, value unascertained. The prisoner when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was subsequently tried for this offence and being convicted, was, after the verdict had been recorded, sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Sumbhoor Baggdy and Nusseer Ram, committed on the 5th February, 1839, charged with having entered the dwelling house of Bipper Doss, washerman, and stolen therefrom two brass water-pots, and two smoothing-irons. The second count of the indictment charged the prisoners with having received the aforesaid property knowing the same to have been stolen. The prisoners, when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty, they were therefore tried on it and convicted. After the verdict had been recorded, they were severally sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Purraun, committed on the 5th of February 1839, charged with having entered the thakoorbary of Roopchand Ghose, in Joorah Bazaar, and stealing therefrom six Salsgram stone idols, valued at twenty-five rupees, a Baunkingo idol valued at twenty-five rupees, a brass image of the goddess Shingho Bhowanny, valued at two rupees, and various other articles, appertaining to the said domestic chapel. The prisoner, when arraigned, and called upon to plead on this indictment, denied the commission of the crime charged against him. He was afterwards tried on the indictment, and having been convicted, was, after the verdict against him had been recorded, sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Junghoe, Jeabun and Chumroo, committed on the 9th Feb. 1839, charged with having burglariously entered the dwelling house of Mr. A. Anderson, in the Dhurum-tollah Road, and stolen therefrom various articles of value unascertained. The prisoners, when brought up to plead in this indictment, declared they were innocent of the offence charged against them. They were eventually tried on the indictment, and having been convicted, were, after the verdict against them had been recorded, sentenced to be transported to the South-east Coast of Martaban, for the period of fourteen years.

Moodoo Soodon Doss, committed on the 9th February 1839, charged with having burglariously entered the dwelling house of Bhanath Day, in Chumpa Tollah Lane, and stolen therefrom several gold and silver articles of jewellery, value unknown. The prisoner, when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty, he was, however tried for the offence, and being convicted, was after the verdict in his case had been recorded, sentenced to seven years' transportation to the South-east Coast of Martaban.

Sheikh Rahamut, committed on the 11th of February, 1839, charged with having stolen from the shop of Hurroo Dhuu, in Simlah Bazar, seven earthen dishes, valued at seven annas. The prisoner, when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was, therefore, tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in the House of Correction.—

Shaddee and Baboo, committed on the 11th February 1839, with having burglariously broken into and entered the residence of Shawchurn Doss at Colingah, and stolen therefrom 250 pieces of wearing apparel, valued at 200 rupees. The prisoners when called upon to plead on this indictment, urged innocence. They were then tried on this charge and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against them, they were severally sentenced to be transported to the South-east Coast of Martaban for a period of 14 years.

Shaddee and Mudnah, committed on the 11th February 1839, charged with having burglariously entered into the dwelling house of Mr. George Brown, at Colingah, and stolen therefrom several pieces of wearing apparel, valued at about three hundred and thirty rupees. The prisoners, when arraigned on this indictment, pleaded not guilty, they were consequently tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against them, were sentenced severally to seven years' transportation to the South-east Coast of Martaban.

Baboo, a third prisoner, was included in this commitment, but the Grand Jury ignored the bill against him.

The Grand Jury ignored the bills on the following indictments, and the prisoners were consequently brought up and ordered to be released from custody.

Wahed Ally, committed on the 18th Jan., 1839, charged with stealing from the house of Maer. Humeed Ulye, in Bluchuan Bazar Road, a kachcha cloth, gold embroidered tops or vamps of two pairs of shoes, valued at 16 rupees, a quilt, and a dhootee, valued at four rupees and eight annas.

Ghousae, committed on the 10th January, 1839, charged with feloniously receiving some boxes of indigo, valued at 1,200 Rs., the property of Agah Kurbullie Mahommed, a Mogul Merchant, residing in Amrahtollah Lane.

Commitments made subsequent to the commencement of the present sessions.

Koorranee, committed on the 20th of Feb. 1839, and charged with stealing from the house of N. DeCruz, two silver spoons and one bed sheet, value unknown.

Doolub Thakoor committed on the 7th Feb. 1839, charged with uttering a Bank of Bengal note, valued at 16 Rs., well knowing it to be forged. The prosecutors in this case not having come forward to prosecute the prisoner, the bill against him was consequently ignored and the prisoner ordered to be discharged.—Hurkaru, February 22.

FEBRUARY 22, 1839.

The Grand Jury having found true bills against the following prisoners, on the indictment preferred against them, they were consequently put on their trial to answer to the charges laid against them, and the following is the result of their trials.

Bhuggeruth Doss, charged with having, on the 12th of January, 1839, counterfeited a paper purporting to be a Bank of Bengal note for Co.'s Rs. 16, or with having uttered the said paper with intent to defraud the proprietors of the said Bank, well knowing the said to be forged, feigned and counterfeited. The prisoner when placed at the bar, pleaded not guilty to the charges against him, he was consequently tried on the indictment and acquitted. After the verdict of acquittal had been recorded, the Judge directed the prisoner to be discharged.

Shumbhoo Bangly and Nauseeram, charged with having either on the night of the 16th or the morning of the 17th of January, 1839, entered the dwelling house of Bepperoo Doss, washerman, and stolen therefrom two brass water pots and two smoothing irons, valued at 12 rupees. Another count of the indictment charged them with having received the same, knowing them to be stolen property. The prisoners when arraigned on the indictment pleaded not guilty; they were subsequently tried and convicted on the last count of the indictment and after the verdict against them had been recorded, they were severally sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Gour Doss, charged with having, on the morning of the 15th January, while it was yet dark, entered burglariously the dwelling house of Ram Doss, washerman, by cutting a hole through the mat wall of his premises, and stealing therefrom 65 pieces of wearing apparel, valued at 40 rupees, the property of the several employers of Ram Doss. The prisoner, when called upon to answer to the indictment, pleaded not guilty, he was consequently tried for the offence and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, the court sentenced him to 14 years' transportation to the South-east Coast of Martaban.

Purraun, charged with having, on the morning of the 17th January, 1839, entered the domestic chapel of Roopchund Ghose, by wrenching off the padlock on the door of the building, and with having stolen therefrom the picols of Roopchund Ghose, together with various other articles, appertaining to the chapel, valued at 150 rupees. The prisoner, when brought up to answer to this indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was consequently tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to six months' confinement in the house of correction.

Junghoo, Jeebun, and Chumroo, charged with having, on the night of the 25th, or the morning of the 26th January, 1839, burglariously entered the residence of Mr. Alexander Anderson, on the Dhurumtollah Road, and stolen therefrom, a pair of plated pedestals, together with sundry other articles, valued at about 65 rs. The prisoners, on being brought to the bar, pleaded not guilty, consequently they were tried for the offence and convicted, and after this verdict against them had been recorded, the Judge sentenced them severally to 14 years' transportation to the South East Coast of Martaban.

Anundee, charged with having, on the 11th of February, 1839, stolen from the house of Budree, washerman, in the Toltullah road, one brass water pot and one coverlet, valued at 3 rupees. The prisoner when called upon to answer to the indictment against him, pleaded not guilty, he was subsequently tried for the offence, and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to 6 months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Sulleeman, committed on the 10th of February 1839, for a larceny, was brought up to plead to the indictment against him. He pleaded not guilty, and was consequently tried for the offence charged against him and acquitted. After this verdict in his favor had been recorded by the Court, the Judge ordered the prisoner to be released by proclamation.

In the case of Soonar, committed on the 16th of February, for a larceny, the Grand Jury ignored the bill against him, and the prisoner was ordered to be discharged from custody by proclamation.

Golamee and Dhunnah, charged with having, in the Custom House, on the 14th February 1839, stolen, 4 skeens of cotton twist, valued at 2 rupees, the property of Messrs. Gisborne and Co. The prisoners, when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; they were consequently tried and convicted, and after the verdict against them had been recorded, the Judge sentenced them each to one year's confinement in the house of correction.

Purjah Sing, charged with having, on the morning of the 6th February, 1839, entered the dwelling house of Bhagbutty Kaur, and stolen therefrom a brass jar and 2 brass water-pots, valued at 10 rupees. The prisoner when put to the bar to answer to the indictment against him, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against him, he was sentenced to be imprisoned in the house of correction for 6 months.

Buzoo, charged with having, on the 11th February 1839, stolen and forcibly taken from the person of Gookul Doss, Company's rupees 20. The prisoner, when brought up to plead on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore tried on it, and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to 6 months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Bangdy Ghose, charged with having, on the 24th of December, 1838, entered the dwelling house of Gopaul Doss, and stolen therefrom a chest containing 3 pieces of wearing apparel, valued at 4 rupees, and 10 rupees in silver. The prisoner when called upon to plead to the indictment against him, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore, tried on it, and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to 6 months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

The prisoner Bhojrab Bonnerjee, charged with having, on the 14th December, 1838, stolen from the shop of Pooroo Luttan Rockuth and Ram Chaund Auns, various articles of property and cash, died in the Jail of Calcutta, previous to the commencement of the present Sessions.

Nauzer, charged with having, on the 13th of December, 1838, stolen ten bundles of cotton twist, valued at 60 rupees, the property of Dammodur Dutt. The prisoner when called upon to answer to this indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was consequently tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Buddynath Doss, charged with having, on the 15th December, 1838, maliciously cut and wounded, with a carpenter's axe, Ram Sing, on the right side of his breast, with intent to murder him or do him some bodily harm. The prisoner, when called upon to answer to this indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was subsequently tried for the offence, and convicted on the latter count of the indictment against him, of a violent assault, attended with wounding. After the verdict had been recorded against the prisoner, the judge sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the house of correction.

Sheikh Chunder, charged with having, on the 26th of December, 1838, stolen from the General Post Office, three brass weights, valued at 10 rupees, the property of the Honorable East India Company. The prisoner, when called upon to answer to the indictment against him, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Si-tee Harree, charged with having, on the 31st December, 1838, stolen from the residence of Jautub Doss, in Joorah Naakoo Lane, a brass water pot and a brass plate, valued at 10 rupees. The prisoner, when arraigned on this indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against him, the judge sentenced him to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Ischhurchunder Day, charged with having, on the night of the 4th February, 1839, entered the dwelling house of Sree Mutty Doss Raur, and stolen therefrom a brass water pot valued at 12 annas. The prisoner when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore subsequently tried on it and convicted of the larceny, and after the verdict had been recorded, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Govindo, gardener, charged with having, on the 20th of December, 1838, stolen from the dwelling house of Ramchaund Doss, two pieces of wearing apparel and a brass water-pot, valued at two rupees and twelve annas. The prisoner, when called upon to answer to the indictment against him, pleaded not guilty; he was subsequently tried for the offence and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Ramchaund Ghose, charged with having, on the 24th of December, 1838, stolen from the dwelling house of Juggo Sing, two wearing apparels, valued at two rupees and eight annas. The prisoner when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was consequently tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against the prisoner, the judge sentenced him to six months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Ram Jhan, charged with having, on the 10th of January, 1839, violently assaulted Surief Ollah, and stolen from his person an umberellah and a brass water pot, valued at three rupees. The prisoner, when called upon to plead to the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was subsequently tried for the offence and convicted, and after the verdict had been recorded against him, the judge sentenced him to seven years' transportation to the South East Coast of Martaban.

Wahedally, charged with having, on the 29th of December, 1838, stolen from the house of Meer Hussein Ulee, on the Chitpore road, a Karcholee, containing embroidered vamps for two pairs of slippers and two pieces of wearing apparel, valued at 20 rupees, and 5 rupees in silver. The prisoner when arraigned on the indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was eventually tried for the offence and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, the Judge sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the house of correction.

Sheikh Ghoussee, charged with having, on the night of the 9th Jan. 1839, received two chests of indigo, of the value of 1,200 or 1,300 rupees, well knowing the same to have been stolen by some person or persons unknown. The prisoner, when arraigned on this indictment, pleaded not guilty; he was therefore tried on it, and convicted, and after the verdict against him had been recorded, the Judge sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the House of Correction.

Koraunee, committed on the 20th of February 1839, and charged with having stolen from the house of N. Da Cruz, in Cosmatollah, two silver spoons and one bed sheet, value undetermined. The prisoner, when arraigned on this indictment, pleaded not guilty; but she was tried on it and convicted, and after the verdict against her had been recorded the Judge sentenced her to six months' imprisonment in the House of Correction.

John Christian Miller, charged with having, on Friday the 8th of February, feloniously made a draft and counterfeited a certain paper, purporting to be a draft of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., No. 9, and dated the 8th day of February 1839, for Company's rupees 5,000, and forged thereto the acceptance of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., with intent to defraud Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. The second count charged the prisoner with altering the same paper, knowing it to be forged.

The prisoner, when arraigned on this indictment, pleaded guilty, and was, after a most impressive address from the Judge, who dwelt on the enormity of his crime, and regretted that he could not pass a lighter sentence on him, sentenced to 14 years' transportation to Van Diemen's Land.

As this individual's case has attracted some notice, we herein give a brief abstract of the particulars of it.

The prisoner, it appears, had been formerly an indigo manufacturer in the district of Pubna, and a constituent of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., by whom he was supplied with a blank draft book. On the 12th November 1838, the prisoner forged a draft for 2,500 rupees, payable three months after date, on the house of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., and sent it to the Banking house of Baboo Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss, to be discounted. The firm sent it to the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. to ascertain its genuineness, where the draft was not, unfortunately, detected, and Baboo Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss, after deducting 12 per cent., paid the money. Subsequently, the prisoner, on the 8th February 1839, forged another draft for 5,000 rupees, on Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., and like the former draft, sent it by his sircar to be discounted at the office of Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss, who again sent it by a sircar of theirs to be examined and authenticated by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. This draft, when presented to Mr. John Carr, one of the partners of the firm of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., was suspected by him to be forged, and he therefore sent it to the other partners of the firm to ascertain if any of them had signed the acceptance of the firm on it. Having satisfied himself that the draft was a forged one, he wrote a chit to Mr. McCann, the Deputy Superintendent of the police, on the subject; who, on receipt of the letter, despatched a constable to the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. The constable, accompanied by a sircar of the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., and the sircar of Baboo Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss, proceeded to the office of Baboo Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss, and there arrested the sircar, who had brought the draft there to be discounted. This sircar then desired them to accompany him to the residence of Mr. Miller, in Daere's lane, who, he said, had given the draft to him. They complied with his request, and the sircar having arrived at the house of Mr. Miller, proceeded upstairs with the constable, and pointed Mr. Miller out to him. The constable then arrested Mr. Miller, and brought him to Mr. McCann, before whom the prisoner acknowledged, that he had signed the draft in question, and had sent it by his sircar to be discounted at the office of Baboo Narrain Persad and Bullub Doss. When brought before Mr. D. McFarlan, the chief Magistrate, previous to his commitment being made, he declined to say any thing in his defence or to question any of the witnesses for the prosecution.

After his apprehension, Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co., to whom the prisoner had negotiated a draft of 2,500 rupees, purporting to be an acceptance of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., sent it to the latter firm to ascertain if the acceptance was correct, and they pronounced the draft to be a forgery.

With this prisoner's case, ended the first sessions of this year.—Hurkaru, February 25.

INSOLVENT COURT.

Before Sir H. W. Seton, Commissioner.

IN THE MATTER OF SAMUEL POTTER, AN INSOLVENT.

The applicant having sworn to the truth of his schedule, Mr. J. W. Alexander, the Assignee, observed to the Court, that he had already allowed the insolvent to retain goods and chattels to the value of about 300 Rs., which he considered to be fully sufficient to the sphere of life in which Mrs. Potter moved. Subsequently, however, Mrs. Potter had applied by petition to be allowed to retain some costly articles of furniture, &c., which the assignee did not consider advisable to permit her to retain.

The Judge remarked, that as the insolvent had not delivered property equivalent to cover one-half of the amount of his debts, the Court could not interfere with the assignee's disposal of the insolvent's petition.

The insolvent was then discharged, with exception to two creditors noted in his schedule, to whom he had not been able to serve the notices, and was ordered by the Court to intimate whenever he may be able to serve the notices on them.

IN THE MATTER OF THOMAS LETHBRIDGE, AN INSOLVENT.

The insolvent having sworn to the truth of his schedule, and there being no opposition, he was admitted to the benefit of the Act.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS AN INSOLVENT.

In this case Mr. L. Clarke made several objections to the Examiner's report, and stated his grounds of opposition to the insolvent's discharge; but as both the Examiner's report and the grounds of opposition were of too general a nature, the Judge postponed the hearing of the insolvent's case until the 16th March, 1839. In order to enable the opposition to state precisely the several grounds of their objection to the prisoner's discharge, and the Examiner to examine minutely into them and report on them especially.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARNER, AN INSOLVENT.

The hearing of this case was likewise postponed to the 16th, March, 1839.

IN THE MATTER OF MICHAEL CHARDON, AN INSOLVENT

This insolvent having sworn to the correctness of his schedule, Mr. J. W. Alexander, his assignee, examined him regarding the mutilation of his account books.

It appeared, during this examination, that the insolvent's books were kept in Nagree by his moonshhee, and that the insolvent was a trader on a limited scale in hides at Moonghyr; that his day books were all destroyed, but that he had a copy or rather the substance of the entries in those books, drafted into another book which, together with his Nagree book of accounts, were handed over to his assignee, and that these accounts did not extend beyond the period of one year previous to his applying for the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and that at the time when the insolvent destroyed his books of accounts, he did not contemplate availing himself of the Act, but had made proposals to his creditors for an adjustment of his debts due to them. These proposals not succeeding, the insolvent subsequently applied for the benefit of the Insolvent Act. As there was no opposition to the prisoner's discharge, the Judge, after censuring him for the impropriety of destroying his books, ordered his discharge.

IN THE MATTER OF—CAVOREE, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Strettell applied on behalf of the insolvent, to compel the Assignee to pay from the assets in his hands, the costs of certain proceedings connected with the insolvent's case, which costs the Assignee, he stated, had refused to pay. Mr. J. W. Alexander, the Assignee, replied, that the insolvent debts were heavy and that the assets in his hands, amounted to but 4,500 rupees, a sum very inadequate to pay the insolvent's debts, and the costs, alluded to by Mr. Strettell, come to upwards of 900 rupees, and had been greatly increased by the obstinacy of the insolvent, in persisting in some legal proceedings, against the advice and consent of his Assignee; therefore he, the Assignee, had on these grounds, objected to pay these costs.

Mr. Alexander further added, that he generally, in all heavy disbursements, applied for and obtained the Court's order before paying the amount. The Judge replied, that in the present case, the Court could not overrule the discretion of the Assignee, and therefore he declined to pass any order on the Insolvent's petition.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES BLACK, OF THE PILOT SERVICE, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Sands informed the Court, that when this insolvent was discharged, by the benefit of the Insolvent Act, he was Master Pilot and received a salary of about 300 rupees a month; that he has subsequently been promoted to be a Branch Pilot, and he now receives a monthly salary of nearly 700 rupees; Mr. Sands therefore moved the Court, that the deductions from this Insolvent's pay to his Assignee, be ordered, instead of one-third, as it formerly was, to one-half, a sum which Mr. Sands informed the Court, Captains in the Hon'ble East India Company's Services, who are obliged to incur a far greater expence and live higher than the Pilots do, are obliged to pay from their salary to their Assignee towards the liquidation of their debts.

Mr. Judge, on behalf of the Assignee, informed the Court, that a part of this increase was merely nominal, and that the insolvent was obliged to receive, at the discretion of the Master Attendant, any passenger that the Master Attendant may order him to receive on board of his vessel, and therefore the insolvent is obliged to maintain an extra establishment, added to which, the insolvent had incurred debts to the amount of about 3,000 rupees subsequent to his promotion, to enable him to fit out his vessel for the reception of his passenger, and the insolvent had a large family to support.

Mr. Sands replied, that the subsequent debt of the insolvent could not supersede the claims of his prior creditors, and if any person had advanced the insolvent any money lately, they must have done it with a full knowledge of his present circumstances and at their own risk. As for the extra establishment which Mr. Judge has stated the insolvent will be necessitated to maintain, Mr. Sands added, that it is a well known fact that the present, and the fees received by the Pilots, more than reimburse them for these extra expences. The Judge concurred in opinion with Mr. Sands, and the order on his application was consequently granted.

IN THE MATTER OF ROBINCHUNDER DAI, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Graham, on behalf of the insolvent, informed the court, that this insolvent, subsequently to his obtaining his discharge, had paid up to his creditors upwards of 3-4ths of the debts mentioned in his schedule; Mr. Graham therefore applied, with the consent of the assignee and the creditors, to have the estate of the insolvent re-assigned to him. Mr. J. W. Alexander, the assignee, vouched for the accuracy of this statement. The estate was ordered to be re-assigned to the insolvent.

A dividend was then declared in the estate of J. C. Sutherland, Esq., an insolvent, of Company's rupees 18, 14 annas on every 100 sicca rupees.

A dividend was likewise declared payable on the estate of Mr. W. Burrawses, an insolvent, of Company's rupees 5, 6 annas, on every 100 sicca rupees.

After this the general assignee to the court, submitted several other accounts, previous to declaring any dividend on them, appertaining to several estates, and then the court adjourned till Saturday the 16th March next.—Burk., February 15.

SUDDER DEWANNY ADAWLUT.

Circular Orders for 1838.

No. 12.—APPLICATIONS OF PAUPERS TO SUE IN FORMA PAUPERIS.

The Sudder have called on the Zillah Judges for a statement, shewing the number of applications that have been made within the last five years on behalf of pauper claimants, the number of instances in which such applications have been admitted, and in how many cases the claims preferred have been decreed as inadmissible. The Sudder are desirous of ascertaining, from a comparison of the result of the applications to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis made within a given period, whether the advantages of the law regarding the claims of paupers, overbalance the inconveniences arising from the abuses to which the law is liable, in enabling evil disposed persons to institute unfounded and malicious suits, for the sole purpose of either extorting money from their opponents, or of putting them to a considerable expence in the defence of the suits; or whether it would be expedient to introduce any alteration in the present system, calculated to prevent such abuses. The Judges have also been required to submit their opinions to the Superior Court.

No 13.—MERCHANT, AND BANKERS' BOOKS INADMISSIBLE AS EVIDENCE WITHOUT STAMP.

It being the practice in some districts to admit in evidence merchants' and bankers' books, in which obligations for money debts are entered and formally signed and attested, the Court have called the attention of the Zillah Judges to construction No. 325, of the printed construction book, which prohibits such account books being received in evidence in the absence of a proper stamp, as presented by Schedule A, Regulation X, 1829. No. 14, CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION IV. ACT XXV, of 1837.

With a view to the removal of doubts, which appear to exist on the subject, the Sudder miah informed the zillah judges, that all summary orders passed in execution of decrees of the Courts of the Principal Sudder Ameens, in cases referred to them under the provisions of Section IV. Act XXV. of 1837, must, in the opinion of the court, follow the same law of appeal as the decrees themselves, and are consequently approvable directly to the Sudder Dewauny Adawlut. The Sudder had also requested that the Principal Sudder Ameens be informed accordingly.

No. 15.—Unimportant.—Hurk, Feb. 26.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—It is said, that the Governor-General will be at Simla during the last week in March, and also, that letters have reached India for His Lordship, indicating the Hon'ble Mr. T. C. Robertson as the future Governor of the North West Provinces.

THE EAST INDIA WEEKLY POLITICAL REGISTER.—That tissue of vituperation and absurdity, the East India Weekly Political Register, has ceased to exist. It sprung forth like a rank fungus, infected for a while its petty circumambient, and then dwindled into naught.

A NEW ROAD.—A new road is now in the course of making within the Zillah Hoogly, which, when completed, will contribute greatly to the convenience of the inhabitants of the villages, through which it runs. It commences at Chinsurah and is to terminate at Dhoniakhauley, a distance of no less than twelve miles. About a hundred and fifty convicts have been daily occupied on this road, for some time past.

DISCHARGE OF A BAILIFF.—J. Witchlow, a bailiff of the Court of Requests, has been dismissed, for improper conduct in the discharge of his duty. The bailiff, in the execution of a warrant against a defendant, under a decree of the Court, for twenty or thirty rupees, took charge of a watch of the defendant's of the value of two or three hundred rupees, and yet put him to expence and disgrace, by executing the writ on his other property; and all this he did with the full knowledge, that the defendant had sufficient property in deposit in Court to meet the decree.

STAMP REGULATIONS.—It is stated, that Mr. Ravenshaw, the Commissioner of the Patna Division, has suggested the propriety of revising the Stamp regulations, and the Government, with its present wonted liberality, has referred the matter to the consideration of the Board of Customs.

THE NORTH WESTERN ARMY.—The following is an extract of a letter from the North-west frontier :—

"By the latest accounts from the Shah's contingent 10 marches S. of Bahawalpoor, all was going on well. Sir. A. Burnes had concluded a treaty, offensive and defensive, with the "Khyrepoor" Ameer, who had not ceded Bukkur, but placed the whole of his territory at our disposal pro tempore, or until final arrangements for the security of the navigation of the Indus could be completed. There is but little doubt the "Barukzye" will all submit to our protégé, Sonjah, and I am of opinion, that none of our troops will move beyond Shikarpoor there, probably, a strong division will be posted either of Ducks or Quahys."

Subsequent accounts state, that the Hydrabad Ameer had forbidden his people to afford any assistance to the Bombay force, which had greatly retarded its movement. Sir. J. Keane expected to beat Hydrabad on the 12th January, or a day or two later at farthest, as thirty thousand Belooche juvans were collected in the town, who promised to exterminate Sir J. Keane, and what they affect to consider as his paltry force. Their mode of fighting is to prime themselves well with opium, and then charge en masse. They are all foot soldiers, and therefore the more formidable. Sir. J. Keane, in the mean time, is to be reinforced by 4,000 more troops from Bombay. His actual force, independent of this expectancy, is 5,000, twelve hundreded of whom are Europeans.

Russian officers, it is said, are at Cabul and Candahar, distributing gold right and left. Sir. Henry Fane is on the Indus, and cannot now proceed further than Bukkur, until acinde is settled. The climate as yet is delightful, neither too warm nor cold. The bridge over the Indus is not yet formed, a great deal of difficulty being experienced in getting boats, and when got of making them into a bridge; so that we are certain of nothing yet.

A letter from the 2nd Brigade of the army of the Indus, dated 17th January, says, "Despatches from Sir John Keane have arrived, which give accounts of an engagement between the Bombay Troops and the Ameer of Hydrabad, who has been driven back with severe loss. Sir John had, however, lost a great number of men, who were to be replaced from Bombay. The news of this success will spread like wildfire and do as much good. Sir Henry Fane has resumed the command of the Army and intends to push on with the 1st Brigade. We sent 150,000 rounds of ammunition to the 1st Brigade last night, which looks as if they had work to do. The 2d Brigade is to be kept at Shikarpore, it is said, but this will be settled in a day or two.

Sir Henry Fane has rejoined the army of the Indus. Shah Soojah's force has entered his own territory. The guns were crossed over the river with considerable difficulty, but all safe. Afghanistan is full of Russian Engineers, who are fortifying all their forts against us. The other division of the army, which had been remanded, are, it is now said, ordered forward, and every thing looks as if we were to spread our arms to Persia.

REVENUE BOARD'S CIRCULAR ORDERS.—Mr. Poole, the Registrar of the Sudder Board of Revenue, has obtained permission to publish Circular Orders of that department, with an ample index, in continuation of Mr. Peters's book; which publication he will issue annually, if he meets with efficient encouragement in his present undertaking.

THE WAR WITH CABUL.—It seems to be the general impression, that the secret dispatches from the Board of Control, brought to Bombay by Sir Edward Campbell, are to the effect of stopping all aggressive movements against Cabul, and we have heard, as corroboratory of the correctness of this impression, that an officer of H. M. 16th Lancers, who had quitted England immediately on ascertaining his Regiment was ordered on service, was overtaken at Malta by letters from the War Office, intimating there was no occasion for his proceeding to India, but could remain, sans tâche, at home.

MRS. W. H. MACNAUGHTEN.—There has been in circulation a report, that our Envoy to the Court of Cabool, with his escort, had been cut off and massacred, but it is perfectly fallacious.

ACCIDENT.—On the 16th instant, the racer Teapot, while taking his gallop, ridden by Mr. Hardwick's native jockey, who is generally known by the name of Sam Day, suddenly bolted near the tree at the $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile post, and in leaping from the ditch on to the small bridge that crosses the road, struck his knees against the brickwork, and threw his rider with considerable violence. The poor lad lay stunned for some moments, and it was found that his left wrist was fractured. He was immediately taken to the hospital, and is, we believe, doing well. One of Teapot's knees was a great deal cut.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.—Mrs. Kresting, whose demise was recently announced in the public papers, came to her death by fire. It appears that she was sitting up and reading at night, and at about 4 o'clock on the morning of the 9th instant, she fell into convulsions, she being subject to fits by some means her clothes caught the flame of the candle, and when the alarm was given, people came in too late, for she was already nearly burnt to ashes.

FORGERIES.—Several attempts to forge have been made during the week, some of which have been detected, and the parties implicated, committed for trial at the next sessions.

On the first instant, a forged cheque for rupees 6,653-4, was presented at the Union Bank by a Jew, purporting to have been given by a respectable man of his class, for the purpose of discounting. The document was forwarded to the Directors of the Bank in the usual manner, and passed by them. The next day the Jew returned to the Bank, when one of the native officials there stated to him, that it was customary with the Bank, when they had to deal with a stranger, to ascertain the genuineness of the security presented by him. The Jew said it was very right to do so; when the official in question sent a trust-worthy sircar with the Jew, for that purpose. They proceeded together, and took a boat at Chandpaul Ghaut, to go to Garden Reach, where he stated the drawer of the bill lived. Just after they had got into the boat, the Jew proposed to make the sircar a present of two hundred rupees, if he would refrain from troubling his friend. The sircar insisted upon seeing the gentleman whose signature the paper bore. They landed at a house at Garden Reach, which he stated to be the residence of the Jewish gentlemen; but as the rogue entered the house, he told the sircar to wait outside, which he did. After the sircar had waited more than half an hour, he discovered that the man had made his escape at the back door. The boatmen saw him going in another boat, which they attempted to overtake but were unsuccessful.

A forgery was detected at Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co.'s on the 8th instant. It appears that a man, calling himself John Christian Miller, had lately set himself up as a merchant and agent in Raneemuddy Gully, and on the day in question, he sent to be discounted two drafts drawn by himself, in his own favor, on Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., the one for 5,000 rupees and the other for 2,500 rupees, payable three months after date, purporting to have been accepted by the drawers. The parties to whom the drafts were offered, sent them to Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co.'s to ascertain whether they had been bona fide accepted, when they were discovered to be forged. The affair being brought to the notice of the public authorities, Miller was apprehended, and, necessary depositions being taken before the Chief Magistrate, committed to take his trial at the next sessions.

It is stated, that besides the above mentioned notes, Miller had attempted to pass a third draft for 2,500 rupees on Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co. This draft, likewise purported to bear the acceptance of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., and when taken by a sircar of Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co. to the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., to be authenticated, the partners of the latter firm wrote across it, forged.

ROBBERY.—Thomas Watson, who falsely represented himself to be a Custom House officer, was, on the 9th instant, apprehended by the Police, on a charge of robbing the chief officer of a French ship, now lying off Calcutta, of a silver watch. Upon enquiry it was found, that Watson had made free with the property, and had sold it to Mr. Peters, the watchmaker, for 30 rupees. He was, in consequence, captured, and the watch obtained from Mr. Peters.

SUICIDE.—A rich bannian of Ramkistepoor, named Seith Gopaul Gopallea, was found, on the morning of the 10th instant, suspended by the neck, dangling from the bough of a habla tree, on the plain adjoining the Ramkistepoor ghaut. The man was subject to fits of insanity, and it is thought that he destroyed himself while laboring under one of them. The people in the immediate vicinity of the place where the accident occurred, nearly all all boatmen—had decamped from their sheds on the circumstance being known, for fear of experiencing the tender mercies of the daroga. Many people were collected at a distance, gazing on the spectacle; but no body would approach the corpse.

THE BACHELOR'S BALL.—The ball given by the bachelors of Calcutta, at the Fawn Hall, on the 11th instant, was the most brilliant fole of the season.

THE GORETTY ESTATE.—The estate of Goretty, belonging to the French Government, is at length advertised for sale in virtue of a final decree. This fine property was, in the high and palmy days of Chandernagore, one of the most beautiful properties in India. The house, which is a magnificent building, and the extensive park attached, only inferior in extent and beauty to that of Barackpore. The property has been for years disputed and illustrated mournfully the glorious uncertainty of the law.

A NEW HINDOO GOD.—The Hindus say, that in a village not twenty miles westward of Calcutta, a god has appeared in the house of a Tantrobay. Several pundits of acknowledged celebrity repaired to the sacred place to determine the exact divinity of the image, but no one could, with all his boasted knowledge of the poorana successfully point out the sort of deity to be made and the name of the deity. It is carved out on a piece of black marble, seated on a rath or car drawn by 16 horses, it has besides several bystanders of both sexes and also a pen and a bundle of paper. The mother of the simple Tantrobay is fasting for the last few days, to propitiate the deity and to know the will and pleasure of his divinity.

SUDDER DEWANNY AND NIZAMUT ADRAWLUT.—It is said, that in consequence of the return of Mr. Christopher Webb Smyth from the Cape, and his resuming his appointment at the Sudder Revenue Board, Mr. Charles Tucker, who was acting in his lieu at the Board, did, on Saturday the 16th instant, take his oath and seat as a Judge of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut. Rumour says, that Mr. Lewis is likely to succeed Mr. Ross Donnelly Mangles as a member of the Revenue Board, on the retirement of that gentleman to Europe.

CIVIL AND SESSIONS JUDGE'S COURT, ZILLAH 24 PERGUNNAHS.—During the last two months, business has been carried on very slowly in this court. There are two judges at present appointed to this zillah, viz., Mr. T. Biscoe and Mr. A. Grant, the additional judge. The latter has been absent from the Court on sick leave, for upwards of two months, and the former ever since, invariably sits in an adjoining room, with closed doors; and it is the orders of the judge, that no strangers be permitted to enter the room.

MAJOR SLEEMAN.—Major Sleeman has been appointed Superintendent for the suppression of Dacoity, in addition to his present office of Superintendent of that of Thuggee.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S CAMP.—The Governor-General's Camp was at Hansi on the 2d instant. A letter, dated 31st ultimo, says: "No orders have been issued yet for a permanent cantonment, although ground has been fixed upon, and marked out, for two regiments of infantry, a company of artillery and a wing of Skinner's Horse. Ferozepore, as far as we can ascertain, promises fair to become one of the most favourite stations in India, particularly on the score of health, both for Europeans and natives. We have very few men in hospital; perhaps less than at any station in India, although in tents. The properties of the well water are proved to be good, and at nearly every change of moon, we have cloudy weather with light showers, which purifies the air exceedingly, and the Sutlege, which is a noble stream, will greatly facilitate our communication with Bombay by steam, and all European supplies will consequently be exceedingly cheap, and the produce of this country promises to be equally so."

FIRE AT ALLIPOR.—About 2 o'clock on the morning of the 16th instant, a very destructive fire broke out, from a hut which was standing on the premises of Mr.

J. H. Patton's stables, and raged most furiously. The engines soon reached the spot, and every exertion was made by the sepoys stationed near the place, to put a stop to its progress, by pulling down the neighbouring huts, &c.; but the fire was not entirely extinguished until 3 a. m. Some of Mr. J. H. Patton's cattle, were destroyed by the flames.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The following resolutions were passed at a meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, held on the 15th instant:—

1st.—That the proprietors approve and accept the draft of act laid before them at this meeting, as modified under the orders of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors and published in the Gazette of Calcutta, and consent, to surrender their existing charter upon the passing of the said draft act into a law from the date when it will take effect.

2nd.—That the Directors of the Bank represent, at the time of communicating the said resolution to Government, the wish of the proprietors, that in section XXV, a clause be introduced, giving to the Governor-General in council the power of authorizing an increase to the amount to which the advance which the Bank may make to a single firm or individual be limited when he may think proper, which was the form in which the corresponding clause stood in the original charter and exists in the present.

NEW SALT WORKS.—It appears, by Mr. Prinsep's advertisement, that government have consented to the establishment of a salt work, on the Gordahjheel, near Deosa, on the plan submitted by that gentleman some time ago. Eleven hundred shares of the New Bengal Salt Company have already been filled up, and the remaining numbers, to be subscribed for in Calcutta, are expected to be engaged very rapidly.

GENERAL ALLARD.—Private letters from Lahore, mention the death of General Allard, as having occurred at Peshawar after a few days illness. The Lion of the North has lost in him a most valuable and efficient officer. The General was understood to be friendly to the British influence in the Punjab. The letters mention also that Runjeet Sing had recovered from his late attack, but continued in a very debilitated state.

MR. JAMES SUTHERLAND.—On dit that Mr. James Sutherland, of Hoogly College, will succeed to the appointment vacated by Dr. Wise.

THE HOOGLY COLLEGE.—The general Committee of Public Instruction, have paid twenty thousand rupees in purchasing General Peron's house, for the reception of Mahomed Moheesin's College, instead of building one for that purpose.

MR. SAMUELS.—Mr. Samuels, the magistrate of Hoogly, unlike other functionaries of his grade, takes peculiar care in appointing chowkedars under his control. Instead of leaving these appointments in the hands of the Daroga, on the occurrence of a vacancy, he causes an assemblage of all the candidates whose names he previously enters, makes them perform all sorts of gymnastics, and appoints such of them as excel both in art and strength.

THE ARTILLERY REVIEWED.—The Artillery were reviewed at Dum-Dum on the 20th instant. There was a vast concourse of spectators from Calcutta and the neighbourhood, to witness the interesting tomahawk, and in spite of bad roads, a scorching sun, and most ubiquitous dust, the great misadventure was lined with visitors some time before the proceedings commenced. The review went off very well; but after a few shots had been fired from the field batteries, there was a sudden pause in the operations, and it became evident to the spectators at a distance, that something of moment had occurred to distract the general attention in the vicinity of the guns. Upon enquiry it was ascertained, that a most untoward accident had happened to mar the pleasures of the day's proceedings. A shell from a 10-inch howitzer had burst, about thirty yards from the battery, and committed dreadful havoc amongst the crowd in the vicinity of the explosion. There were nine sufferers by the accident, of which three are now dead, three have undergone amputation of the thigh, and the others are severely injured. The deceased were a European female, the wife of Bombardier Butler, a European child, and a native, who was blown into the ditch and frightfully mangled.

• THE EDITORSHIP OF THE COURIER.—Captain John Currie, of the Solder Board, late of Howrah, has been appointed Editor of the Calcutta Courier.

MR. LINTON'S ORATORIO.—The Oratorio given by Mr. Linton on the 29th instant, was the most brilliant thing of the kind ever got up in Calcutta. It was well attended.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—The following intelligence has been received from the army of the Indus, at different times. The march down to Bahawalpore seems to have been quite an uninteresting one. Many camp followers had deserted, and sirrons with their camels had fled from the several camps into the desert immediately to the left of the line of route. The rear columns of all under the command of Captain Alexander, passed Bahawalpore on the 6th instant.

Lieutenant Colonel Sir A. Burnes, it would appear by our latest letters, has enlisted upwards of 6,000 Afghans, and he promises to have the Bolan pass clear, from all impediments, for the Army.

Dost Mahomed is determined to resist us to the last. It is said he has several Russian Engineers in his employ, and that they are hard at work, in preparing a warm reception for the troops of the Shah. British troops Dost Mahomed does not expect to travel beyond Sciude this year!

The Army was to cross the Indus at Goth Amel, and reach Shikarpore, the Cavalry, the front column, on the 27th instant, the park and irregular brigade on the 4th proximo.

Letters from Sir W. Cotton's Camp state, that Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Alex. Burnes, apprehending an attack, and the probable loss of supplies laid in for the army, had called for the rapid advance of Shah Soojah's force upon Shikarpore. It was rumoured that Herat had been again invested, not by the Persians, but by Dost Mahomed! which is not very probable.

The horses belonging to Shah Soojah's force, are dying by the score, so unequal are they to this trip. None of the horses of our troops of horse artillery with that force, have suffered. All our cavalry horses are in really excellent condition, and some will have it that those of the troop of horse artillery are in better.

The Guggur having become so much swollen by the late rain, the Governor-General's Camp had been detained on its banks, consequent to which His Lordship will not be able to reach Hans before the 30th inst., and Delhi before the 11th or 12th proximo.

Late letters from the North-West army, put it beyond a doubt that Sir Henry Fane had resumed command of the Army. Sir Henry had directed the camel battery to join the first brigade cavalry, and first brigade infantry, and proceed together by water to Hydrabad, for the purpose of making a demonstration on that capital, and causing a diversion, in favour of Sir John Keane, who was said to be shut in at Tattah by an army of 30,000 Sciadians. In consequence of this opposition, reinforcements have, it is said, been called for from Bombay; and it was confidently rumoured in camp, that orders had been sent for the second division to march from Ferozepoor.

The news from Shikarpore state, that the Doornances are flocking in large numbers to join Shah Soojah, whom they seem to acknowledge as their lawful prince, or rather as the prince backed by power to enable him to fight his way to the throne. The most contradictory reports prevail as to the part Dost Mohumud will play, although the latest rumours make him quite pacific in speech and writing, as he says he is far from wishing to be on any other terms but those of peace and friendship with the British Government.

Subsequent letters from Shikarpore, and from Camp at Subzool Kote, dated 18th January, bring the important intelligence of an action having been fought between the Bombay Army under Sir John Keane and the Sciadians of Hydrabad and Tattah, in which the latter have been defeated.

AGRA.—A new journal, to be styled Greenway's Agra Journal, has appeared at Agra. It is to consist chiefly of literary reprints, from the English periodicals.

The Governor General expects to arrive at Delhee on the 10th instant, and will stay there ten days. He will then proceed via Umbala and Puceala to Simla.

The Bachelors' Ball which took place on the 18th instant, went off with much spirit.

FUTTEGHUR.—Captain Wroughton, of the Revenue Survey department, has lost three fingers and the thumb of his right hand, by the explosion of a fowling-piece.

ASSAM.—The Singphoo, a savage race of barbarians, inhabiting the mountains in Assam, made a decent on Suddeyah, and carried it with fire and sword. The movement was quite unexpected, and Lieut-Colonel A. White, commanding the Assam Light Infantry, fell before assistance could be sent to him. The buildings were destroyed, and the small force with Colonel White, driven back with some loss. On the alarm being given, the main body of the Regiment advanced and completely routed the assailants.

JHANSI.—Letters from Jhansi, to the 30th of January, state, that Sciadia's reformed contingent arrived at Kurera from Jhansi on the 26th instant. On the evacuation of the latter place, four companies of the infantry regiment were directed to take possession of Kurera, and on their approach, the few remaining friends of the Naik, followed the example of their Jhansi brethren, and Captain Blake, in command of the detachment, took up his quarters in the fort without opposition. The Governor-General's agent, the field engineer, and his assistant (Lieut. Sharp) accompanied the force. Captain Smith is engaged in taking plans and preparing reports of the strength of the principal forts in Bundelcund.

MADRAS.

SIR JOHN DOVETON.—Sir John Doveton, was installed Knight Grand Cross of the Bath on the 11th of January last.

POISONOUS FISH.—There has been much and very fatal sickness on board the Ganges, owing to a singular circumstance. Shortly after leaving the Mauritius, she hove to off a fish bank and let down the boats to fish; the men were successful, and eat plentifully of what they caught, and within a very few days fifteen died in a most extraordinary state, being swollen like porpoises.

BOMBAY.

A story is current in Bombay, that a battle has been fought by the force under Sir John Keane, in which the 19th Regt. N. I. has been roughly handled, and a superior officer lost his arm.

EXTENSIVE DEPREDACTIONS.—It appears that the band of Pendarries, or Hamosees mentioned before, have committed the most extensive depredations in robbing merchants, exacting contributions, &c. throughout the villages in the district of Khaid, Pabul, Jooner, and others. Forty have been apprehended, who are now undergoing an examination before the Magistrate at Poonah. The Puttwardhun Sirdars have sent a contingent of 150 horse to the aid of the authorities in Poonah.

ATROCIOUS MURDER.—Recently a most foul and atrocious murder was committed in the city of Poonah. The unfortunate being, who became the victim of this bloody felony, was a banian merchant, a native of another country, who had come to Poonah on some business, and was residing in a part of the city called Vaytal Pet. Having disposed of some goods and merchandise, and realized the objects of his visit, he was preparing to return to his native country, and had in his possession cash and gold to the amount of several thousand rupees. Three or four of his neighbours, who had watched all his motions, and somewhat insinuated themselves into his intimacy, and who were aware that he had a large sum of money in his possession, watched for a convenient opportunity to ensnare and murder him, and after many schemes had failed, they began to invite him to their several houses a few days before his intended departure. No suspicion of their design seems to have entered the mind of their trusting and unthinking victim, and the murder was perpetrated. The corpse was butchered into small pieces, and, to hide it from all observation, a part of the house wall was torn down and the pieces built in. The wall was not, however, thick or solid enough to suppress the putrifying stench which arose, and led to the detection of the perpetrators.

ADEN.—A letter from Aden states, that the shells sent there by the Ass Chrichton, for the purpose of being thrown into the town, when about to be used, were found to be empty, and are, therefore, quite useless.

The Turks were a short way off attacking some place belonging to Aden; and it is said that there was a sufficiency of force present to take the place, but not to retain it.

NEW PILOT VESSEL.—A new pilot brig has been launched from the docks, and will shortly be sent round to Calcutta.

DOSSABHOY JAMSETJEE WADYA.—In consequence of the late unfavourable advices from China, a respectable Parsee merchant, a considerable trader in opium, of the name of Dossabhoj Jamsetjee Wadya, has been compelled to suspend payments.

ARREST OF TWO ROGUES.—On the 28th ultimo, two Moguls, who belonged to a gang, which had made some daring robberies at Rutnaghur, were arrested on the Sholapoor road by Provost Serjeant Buchanan. Information had been received at the Collector's Cutcherry that four Moguls, who had been concerned in the robbery, had been seen travelling on the Poonah road, and notice was given to the Military authorities to be on the alert. Two suspicious looking fellows accordingly fell under the vigilance of the Provost, and on being apprehended, were recognized by a peon of Mr. Forbes and found to be the identical thieves themselves.

THE CONVICTS.—The affair of the brig Catherine which lately returned with her cargo of refractory convicts, has been settled, and it has been amicably arranged, that the Bombay Government is to pay the owners of the vessel between 1,200 and 1,300 rupees for the detention which has been sustained, by reason of the want or inefficiency of the precautions taken for security of the convicts. The convicts are to be reembarbed, but this time a guard of marines is to be put on board, to take care of the lives of the Captain and of the crew.

IMPORTANT NEWS FROM PERSIA.—Intelligence of importance has been received from Persia. It stated, that the Shah had given up the Siege of Herat, merely with a view to protect his own territories against what had been represented to him as a formidable invasion by the British armies. Finding, upon his arrival, instead of thirty ships of war in the Gulph, with an overwhelming force on board, that but a handful of sepoy troops had been stationed in the isle of Karrack, his rage was literally unbounded, and he instantly determined to break off his friendly negotiations with our Government, and resume his designs against Herat. Dr. McNeil is at this moment, upon his way to England; he was to have started upon his journey on the 1st of January.

Two gentlemen of the Embassy were sent by Dr. McNeil to meet the Shah and congratulate him upon his return from Herat, and also to ask an apology from the Minister for the bad treatment experienced by the Envoy's messenger. His Majesty received them in the most angry manner and was as surly as a bear. He said "the English had deprived him of the meat which he had already swallowed" (meaning Herat), refused to permit his Minister to make any apology, and dismissed them without further answer. Active operations are going on upon a great scale at Tehran; they are casting guns and making up ammunition incessantly. The Shah will certainly make another advance upon Herat in Spring. He has left a large force at no great distance, to prevent the Herattees cultivating the ground. Large sums of ready cash are regularly paid to all departments both of troops and artificers, a thing not known in Persia for many a day. An order has been received at Shiraz, to put that place in a better state of defence, and guns are already on their way thither. A similar order is daily expected at Bushire.

The Shah has issued orders to his troops, that, on the Nowroze Sultannee, he intends to march to Herat, and, through the aid of the Russian Ambassador, a friendly treaty has been made with Prince Kamran, and along with the Herattees, the Persian troops are to march on to the assistance of Dost Mahomed Khan, in Cabool.

All classes are invited to join the Army in Persia, and every one receives his pay in advance on being enrolled.

It is stated that a gift of 20,000 gold tomans has been made by the Russian Ambassador, on the part of the Shah, to Prince Kamran, which will enable him to provide stores and clothing for his troops.

On learning that much distress prevailed in the country, and that this was greatly to be attributed to the quantity of British cotton goods and Cashmere shawls now worn, the Shah sent for all his sirdars and officers of the Court, and, in open Durbar, pointed out the necessity of protecting the manufactures of their own country; he then ordered that from that day, none were to appear before him unless dressed in the Kamran shawl manufacture, ordering a dress for himself to be immediately made.

Proclamation was afterwards made to the same effect, and a period of 12 months given to enable all merchants and traders to dispose of their stocks of British goods and Cashmere shawls, actually at that time in the country, but prohibiting all new importations whatever, of British piece-goods, or shawls from Cashmere.

It is said, that the cause which induced the Shah to retire from Herat, was the receipt of an autograph letter from the Highest religious authority in Persia, signing the return of the Shah, and his attaching himself, for the future, to British interests. This letter the High Priest, wrote in accordance with a letter from Mr. McNeil, in which the preparations of the British Government were represented as of great force and magnitude. That on his return, the Shah discovering all the force was chiefly some "rotten Hindus," as he styled them, openly shewed Mr. McNeil's letter to the Great Priest in durbar, and there held it up to ridicule, and said he called on him to show the truth of his formidable statements. He is, in consequence, very furious and refuses to do any one thing he promised.

Another anecdote is, that in the Shah's army were two castes of soldiers, one called the Tabreezes, the other the Azarbeezeend troops, which last, at the siege of Herat, lay close to the gates and, it turned out afterwards, secretly allowed provisions to be conveyed into that Fort. On the day of the attack, the Tabreezes gallantly marched on to the storming of the place, as ordered; but the Azarbeezeend troops never moved, and the Shah afterwards discovered their friendly disposition towards the Herattees, but, while in a hostile country, he was afraid to take notice of their behaviour. On his return to Court, however, the Shah summoned the Sirdars, charged them with their traitorous conduct, which they partly admitted, when about 70 Sirdars were immediately beheaded. It is stated that many copies of a paper printed at Calcutta in the Persian language, are sent to Persia, and have had a very bad effect there on their feeling towards the British, so much so, that surprise is expressed by the Persians that the Indian Government should permit a paper, written in a tone so hostile to British interests, to be printed in their own Capital.

THE INDUS ARMY.—Letters from Bukhara, to the 31st of January, say:—"All reports agree that the Belooches are posted in force between us and Hyderabad, which is now only twenty four miles distant from our Camp, but on the opposite side of the river. The Chief, it is said, will march, after the arrival of the buttering trade.

The general belief is that the Beloochees will fight when we attempt to cross the river, as they have already fired upon some of our sepoys coming up in boats and made prisoners of a havildar and four men, who were sent to a neighbouring village to purchase camels. We only learnt their fate two days ago, from one of the party, who made his escape disguised as a fakir banyan, and others are daily coming in with complaints of having been looted both at Hyderabad and on the road, by the enemy. Our spies report, that there is a force of 15,000 or 16,000 men, with a few guns, posted about 4 mile on this side of Hyderabad. The Ameers have refused to accede to our last treaty.

"One of these Shikargahs, not far from our present camp, was set on fire three days ago and still continues burning. Three of the Queen's officers, Sparke, Nixon and their Asst Surgeon, Hibbert, all fine young fellows, under the idea that our treaty with the Ameers was at an end, went to shoot there two days ago, and, melancholy to relate, have been burnt to death. Their corpses were brought in yesterday by a party sent to search for them, and their appearance as they were carried through the Camp, created a sensation scarcely to be described. The Europeans will have it that they were murdered and thrown into the flames, but, after a strict examination, no wounds could be discovered on the bodies. Two of them were so much burned, that they were only distinguishable one from the other, by two rings on the Doctor's finger; the third, Sparke, a fine young man Lieutenant in the Grenadiers, who was the least burned of the three and easily recognized from his height, was found about fifteen paces near the edge of the jungle, as if he had so far succeeded towards making his escape."

TAKING OF KERACHEE.—The following account of the taking of Kerachee, is taken from a letter of the 4th February:—

"We sailed from Hujumree on the 31st, and arrived here last evening. At 9 this morning we began disembarking the troops and cleared for action. By-the-bye, they fired on our guard-boat last night but hurt no one. We sent a flag of truce offering them terms, which they would not accept; but the admiral wished to spare them, for they could make no resistance as they had only seven guns and twenty men. We have since heard, that they were to have had an augmentation of 100 men this evening. To the second flag of truce they returned a message to the Admiral, saying that they were much obliged him for sending the second time, but they were determined to abide by their former decision of holding it as long as they could. The Admiral then went himself with the troops, and they fired on one of our boats, which was full of men, but luckily missed her. But the fellows in the fort would not give in. We then opened our fire as did also the Algerine, and we fired 50 shot and knocked the walls pretty fairly about their ears before they quitted, then they began to run; but we had piquets placed, so we took the whole 20 prisoners. We have now.—7 P.M.—sent a boat with a flag of truce in her, up to summons the town. To-morrow I shall give you all particulars, but must tell you the finish. We ceased firing at 1 past 12, and a prettier piece of work could hardly have been done. Our flag was planted in the fort by Lieut. Jenkins, of the Indian Navy, and a very nice little fellow he is. The 40th are now occupying the Fort."

February 3d. Our boat, with a flag of truce, returned this morning, and they have; I am very sorry to say, accorded to our terms, so that there will be no more fighting. The head man of the place, has written a glowing account to Hyderabad of the bravery of the Governor of the Fort we battered, in which he says, he held possession for an hour and a half against the fire of a 74 gun ship and five thousand sailors, for which he will most probably get promotion. I believe the 40th take possession of Kuracher today, and about their further movements I know nothing as yet. I have just now heard that the Fort would have been given up to us had we sent up to the Town at once, which is at the distance of 6 miles from us, but I am very glad we fired a shot, as it will, I am in hopes, be the means of our obtaining Tatta."

The following important news from Scinde, has since been received. The Ameers, it appears, have succumbed.

"The Ameers have at last consented to sign the treaty without a single objection, and have acceded to all the terms demanded of them. They are to pay 27 lacs of rupees, agree to maintain 4,000 troops to be commanded by British officers, and are, besides, to give 6-16th of their annual revenue as tribute to the British Government; they are, moreover, to give the assistance of 4,000 of their own troops to the present expedition against Candahar. The justice of Scinde, generally, is henceforth, to be administered by the British Resident."

PENANG.

Penang papers to the 19th of January, have been received, but they contain no news. The affairs of Quelan, remained in statu quo. The Hyacinth had been to Penang for provisions and water, but had returned to Quelan to maintain a strict blockade. There is no intelligence of the unfortunate Syen.

CHINA.

The intelligence received from China during the month to the 6th of January, is of very serious importance to opium speculators. The river trade, it seems, is destroyed. The following proclamation of Captain Elliott, the Chief Superintendent, gives the coup de grace to it:—

"I, Charles Elliott, Chief Superintendent of the Trade of British Subjects in China, moved by urgent considerations immediately affecting the safety of the lives and properties of all Her Majesty's subjects, engaged in the trade at Canton, do hereby formally give notice and require, that all British, owned schooners, cutters, and otherwise rigged small craft, either habitually or occasionally engaged in the illicit Opium traffic, within the Bocca Tigris, should proceed forth of this same within the space of three days from the date of these presents, and not return within the said Bocca Tigris, being engaged in the said illicit Opium traffic.

And I, the said Chief Superintendent, do further give notice and warn all Her Majesty's subjects engaged in the aforesaid illicit opium traffic, within the Bocca Tigris, in such schooners, cutters, or otherwise rigged small craft, that if any native of the Chinese empire shall come by his or her death by any wound feloniously inflicted by any British Subject or Subjects, say such British subject, or subjects, being duly convicted thereof are liable to capital punishment, as if the crime had been committed within the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Courts at Westminster.

And I, the said Chief Superintendent, do further give notice and warn all British subjects being owners of such schooners, cutters, or otherwise rigged small craft engaged in the said illicit opium traffic within the Bocca Tigris, that Her Majesty's Government, will in no way interpose if the Chinese Government, shall think fit to seize and confiscate the same.

And I, the Chief Superintendent, do further give notice and warn all British subjects employed in the said schooners, cutters, and otherwise rigged small craft engaged in the illicit traffic in opium within the Bocca Tigris, that the forcible resisting of the officers of the Chinese Government, in the duty of searching and seizing, is a lawless act, and that they are liable to consequences and penalties in the same manner as if the aforesaid forcible resistance were opposed to the officers of their own or any other Government, in their own or in any foreign country.

Given under my hand and seal of office, at Canton, this eighteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight"

It is expected a prohibition of the coasting trade will follow.

BURMAH.

The following are extracts of a letter from Rangoon, dated 30th January:—

On the 26th instant, the town of Rangoon was alarmed by a report of a large party having secretly taken post about twenty miles north of Rangoon, since which the whole male population from the town and suburbs have proceeded, and are proceeding thither, together with their cavalry.

The tenor of all the Burmah reports is to the effect, that it is a party bringing about a counter-revolution. The previous crucifixion of seventy men, tends to corroborate these reports; but seeing that 5,000 men must have proceeded from hence without bringing in one man, and no reports of musketry having been heard, together with a knowledge of the character of the Burmah Government, and of the necessity of an unpopular Government, if about to commence an unpopular war, to resort to duplicity to form an army of observation, when the discontented inhabitants have not merely to arm themselves, but provide their ammunition and Commissariat, strong suspicion arises that Tharawaddie is about concentrating and arming the whole male population in this neighbourhood, preparatory to destroying every house as the army retires, should we land our force at Rangoon.

Numerous accounts and corroborative circumstances, prove the existence of a civil war or counter revolution. Some prisoners have been taken and set at liberty with some presents, which implies a dread on the part of the Governor of being himself taken.

Four patriots have been taken, one of whom has had his feet severed from his legs and packed in a boat, like a pig, to be sent to Ava. The others are beheaded. Several towns and villages are said to have joined the patriotic party, who, it seems, are favourable to the English.

THE PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

Last Saturday evening, nearly a hundred friends and supporters of the above Institution, met at the School, to hear the Annual Report of the Secretary. The Venerable Archdeacon, the Revd Messrs. Sandys and Garstin, Dr. Corbyn, and several other distinguished friends of education, were present. On the motion of Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. Crow, the Venerable the Archdeacon was called to the chair. The Reverend gentleman felt much gratified at the honor done him in being called to take a share in the laudable work of education at this Seminary. Here Christian religion id morality had always been taught, and the plan of education was comprehensive and based on liberal views, embracing all those branches of knowledge which were necessary to frame a useful member of Society. Ever since his arrival in India, ten years ago, he had watched the progress of this Institution, and he was so well satisfied with the system adopted in it, that he had always felt a deep interest in its welfare. The Managers of this institution had carefully watched every change in the circumstances of the country, and had made corresponding improvements in the system of education, so as to meet the growing wants of the community. He then congratulated them on the success of their laudable endeavours. His dearly beloved friend, the late Archdeacon, when about to establish the High School, had spoken of this institution with regard to its interests clashing with that of the High School; but they had come to the conclusion, that these two institutions would no more clash with each other than two churches raised in the same place for the worship of God. For the East Indian community, he observed, this institution had done more than any other, and adverting to the openings lately made by Government, for the employment of the educated classes, and to the changes introduced in the system of education here, he hoped further improvements would be made to meet all the wants of the country. This institution, he said, was already equal to the ordinary schools in Europe, and he had no doubt its progress would in time place it on a level with the best scholastic Seminaries of England. He concluded by calling on the Secretary to read the report.

The Report entered into a consideration of the state of education in the country, and the various institutions that now exist for the promotion of knowledge. We were highly pleased with the liberal views expressed in this part of the report, which is very creditable to all connected with the institution. Mention was also made of the changes lately introduced in the system of instruction, by which the study of the vernacular languages occupied a prominent place among the regular class studies; and a course of Lectures on the Regulations of Government, it was stated, has been commenced upon. The report of the Surgeon attached to the school, was very favorable to that care which is always necessary in large institutions for the preservation of health among the children. Not a single death had occurred, and three alarming cases of fever, contracted at home, had been cured in the school. At this moment there was not a single child on the sick list. The report then went on to notice the progress that had been made in the several studies, and stated the result of the last annual examination. The number of pupils now in the school were 214. Mr. Hamilton, the Head teacher, had resigned, and Mr. Montague, who has received his education in the institution, had been appointed to succeed him. The finances of the committee were now managed with great care as to economy, and several old accounts had been, during the year, paid off. About ten thousand rupees are stated, to be due to the institution on account of the arrears of schooling, which if paid up would enable the Committee to effect much good.

Dr. CORBYN moved the adoption and publication of the Report. He made a speech of considerable length, following up the observations of the Reverend Chairman in favor of the institution, and said he had so good an opinion of the education now given in this and the other leading schools, and he was so well satisfied with the salubrity of the climate of Bengal, that he had determined, notwithstanding the opinion of many of his friends, not to send his children to England for education. He adduced several instances in defence of this view of the subject, and dwelt with much force on the importance of educating a child under the eyes of the parent, which he maintained was necessary, not only for the preservation of that mutual affection which should subsist between parent and child, but also for the proper moral education of the latter. He had a high opinion of the moral character of the alumni of this and other Indian schools, and adverted to the success of Mr. Montague, whose education and progress he had watched four years, and was much gratified to find him elevated to the rank of Head Master of the Institution. His good example, as a man of talent and high moral character, he hoped would stimulate others to follow in his footsteps.

The Reverend Mr. Garstin, having seconded the Resolution, with a few suitable observations, it was put and carried unem-con.

The Reverend Mr. Sandys, moved the follow Resolution:

"That this meeting begs to record the gratification which it has experienced, in learning of the arrangements which have been made, for the more efficient cultivation of the Vernacular languages, a knowledge of which is so well calculated to be useful to the future interests of the young men of the country."

The object of education, the Revd. mover said, was to make the learner a useful member of Society; but in this country, if we know not the Vernacular languages, how could he be useful to the millions by whom he was surrounded and whose ignorance of the saving truths of the gospel called upon every Christian to exert himself in enlightening them. It was the duty of every man to be useful to his fellow creatures, not only in regard to his temporal but his eternal welfare, which duty could not be properly performed in this country, without a knowledge of the Vernacular languages. He was therefore highly gratified to find the study of these languages made an object of particular attention in this seminary, and he felt great pleasure in moving the resolution entrusted to him.

Mr. Peto adverted to the utility of learning the Vernacular languages with reference to the employments under Government. He entered into some lengthy observations concerning the corruption of the Court Amahs, the great good effected by the abolition of the Persian language which neither the parties to a suit nor even the judges understood properly; whence he inferred the necessity of studying the Vernacular languages, and concluded by stating, that it was impossible to overrate the importance and advantages likely to result from these changes.

The Chairman, in putting this resolution to the vote, adverted to the vigilance of Mr. Byrn, the Secretary to the Institution, in watching every opportunity of advancing the good of the community. He mentioned that the church building fund had been originated in him, and that the erection of twenty churches had, up to this day, been the effect of that measure.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. W. BYRN moved the following resolution:

"That the meeting, viewing the present state of things, as adverted to in the Report, is most anxiously desirous, in dependence upon the divine blessings, to encourage all right efforts in the education of the youth of this country."

He observed that there were two empires in the world, that of error and that of truth, between which there was an unceasing conflict. Of the ultimate success of truth over error, there could be no doubt. Notwithstanding it was the duty of those who were the subjects of the Empire of truth to be on their guard, with the view of preserving their own integrity, and of reclaiming those who were the subjects of the Empire of error. He observed that there was no object, important or unimportant, which could be accomplished without the use of means. The greatest work on which the mind of man could be engaged, the conversion of the world to Christianity—it was the will of God, should be accomplished by the use of means; and in proportion as the means used were good or bad, so would the progress of the Empire of truth be accelerated or retarded.

Education, or the instruction of youth, was in the opinion of the speaker, the first means that must be used for the establishment of the Empire of truth, and it therefore behoved all who were connected with the work, to be careful as to the means to which they resorted. The inculcation of right principles—the communication of proper knowledge—the imparting to youth correct views: all these required care and consideration. The use of means, he said, evidently implied the use of Agents. As, in this great Empire of British India, all who were the subjects of it had some share, however small, in carrying on the operations of this Government; so in this great Empire of truth, all who were the subjects of it, were Agents, upon whom devolved the work of carrying out its principles. If they were not, they were defeating the purposes of the Empire of which they were the subjects; and hence Mr. Byrn insisted upon the necessity of all being in the use of the means which led to good. This was the great moral of the resolution which he had to propose. In India there was so much to do—so much ignorance to remove—so much evil to contend against, that the duty of engaging in works of usefulness was imperative.

On these school anniversary meetings many came impelled by curiosity or by the motive of pleasing friends. His object was to lead to a serious consideration of the importance of the subject upon which they were engaged, and to induce to exertions for the benefit of others. To quote the words of Lord Bacon, "it was heaven upon earth when a man's mind moved in charity," and as Christians, we should act in accordance with the spirit of the first of Christian virtues—of that charity which will lead us not selfishly to look to our own interests, but to endeavour to promote the good of others—of that charity teaching an expansive benevolence, which will bring within the range of the affections the whole family of man—whose acts will never die, but outlive the wreck of time and bloom in the world and realms beyond the tomb.

Mr. W. KIRKPATRICK seconded the resolution, and adverted to the large amount of outstanding balances due to the institution, suggested the formation of a sub-committee, whose especial duty it would be to recover these balances. The resolution was then put and carried.

Mr. CROW moved, "that the acknowledgements of this meeting are due to the friends and supporters of the institution, for the aid extended by them in the promotion of its interests."

This resolution being seconded by Mr. C. Poole, was carried unanimously.

Mr. H. B. GARDNER moved the following resolution:—That the Revd. T. Boaz and Messrs. W. Byrn, M. Crow, F. D. Kellner, R. Kerr, C. W. Lindstedt, H. Martindell, G. H. Poole, W. Stacy, P. Sutherland and J. Wood, be re-elected as Members of the Committee of Management for the ensuing year; and that Mr. W. Byrn be requested to continue in the office of Secretary to the Institution. In the room of Mr. Jacob (resigned) he proposed the election of Mr. H. Palmer.

This was seconded by Mr. C. F. Byrn and carried unanimously.

The thanks of the meeting were then voted to the Chairman, who again complimented the meeting and the institution, in the most handsome terms, stating that he always felt it an honor to be connected with the proceedings of this Institution. The Meeting dispersed at about 10.—Hurk., March 5.

PUBLIC LIBRARY MEETING.

Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the Proprietors of and Subscribers to the Calcutta Public Library, held on the 4th March 1839, at the Library Rooms.
G. F. McCLEINTOCK, Esq., in the Chair.

Present.—W. F. Grant, Esq.; J. H. Storqueler, Esq.; H. M. Parker, Esq.; W. Carr, Esq.; H. Jones, Esq.; T. P. Morrell, Esq.; Wale Byrn, Esq., &c.

Read the following Report and the Statement of Receipts and Disbursements.

W. P. GRANT Esq., H. M. PARKER, Esq., W. CARR, Esq.

Curators, Calcutta Public Library.

GENTLEMEN.—In submitting the annexed Statement of Receipts and Disbursements from 11th February 1838 to 31st January 1839, I have much pleasure to have it in my power to state, that with respect to the accession of subscribers, the circulation of books and the collections made in every month, the operations of the last year exhibit a decided superiority, and cannot but be gratifying to those who are interested in the prosperity of the Institution. In order to establish the correctness of this remark, I beg to subjoin the following tabular statement, collected from the reports furnished at the different Annual Meetings.

In 1836	there were subscribers.	5	and the amount receivable p. month.	Rs. 22 0 0
In 1837	ditto	38	ditto	200 0 0
In 1838	ditto	69	ditto	370 0 0
In 1839	there are	100	ditto	498 0 0

Amount of subscriptions collected from September 1835 to Feb. 18th 1837...	2193	11	0
Ditto from 19th February 1837 to 10th February 1838.....	3325	0	0
Ditto from 11th February 1838 to 31st January 1839.....	5211	0	0

The average monthly collection of the last year was about.....C. Rs	453	2	1
And that of the year before last,....Rs	277	1	1

Shewing an increased average month- ly collection of	Rs 176	1	0
The circulation of Books, from Febru- ary 1837 to January 1838, was.....vols.	8700
Periodicals	1127

Total	9827
Ditto, from Feb. 1838 to January 1839, vols.	14995
Periodicals	1721
Total	16716

The former giving an average month- ly circulation of vols.....	890	nearly
And the latter	1393

Among the Books circulated during the last year, there are relating to General Literature.....	5557	vols,
And Novels,.....	9438	vols,

14995 vols,

With regard to the vested Fund which was reported at the last Annual Meeting to consist of Co's Rs 3,313, I am happy to say, that several gentlemen have since contributed to it and that it now amounts to Co's Rs 4,103.

Since the last Annual Meeting, seven new Proprietors have joined the institution and two have transferred their shares. One of the Proprietors, J. Bell, Esq., has died during the last year, and his share has reverted to the Library. The present number of Proprietors is seventy-two.—Hurk., March 6.

THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office on Monday the 11th instant.

PRESENT,

Committee.—G Vint, Esq.; Rajah Kallykissen Bahadur; Baboo Sumbhoochunder Mitter; Baboo Prossannocomar Tagore, Rajah Rajnarain Roy Bahadur; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; Cowa Suttehurn Ghosaul; Monshay Mahamed Ameer, and G. A. Prinsep, Esq.,

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were unanimously elected,

The following gentleman was proposed a member of the Society.

By the Secretary, and seconded by Rajah Kallykissen Bahadur, H. E. Hunter, Esq., of Azimgurh.

Read a letter from Mr. Crawford, excepting the office of the Society's Agent in London.

Read a letter from Mr. Sandys, forwarding a pamphlet on the subject of village boundaries, for the perusal of the Society. Resolved that a letter of thanks be addressed to that gentleman.

Baboo Prossannocomar Tagore resumed his duties as secretary, and thanks were voted to Baboo Ramanath Tagore for his service during the secretary's absence.

The petition to the Governor General in Council on the resumption question, was ordered to be taken into consideration at the next meeting.

WM. COBB HURRY,

P. TAGORE.

Honorary Secretaries.

[Hurkaru, March 16.]

DORJELING.

To. H. M. Low, Esq.

Secretary to the Dorjeling Committee

SIR,—As a member of the Committee, appointed by the public meeting to carry into effect their views regarding Dorjeling, I consider it my duty to give you the result of my observations on that place, for having visited it, (under the erroneous supposition, that the public works, including the road now being made by Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd, were under my superintendence) I am enabled to give you the result of my private observations, in the hope that they may be of use in furthering the objects for which we were appointed a committee.

2. The first point deserving notice, is the road by which travellers, particularly dawk travellers from Calcutta, will get to Titalya, and in regard to this I am happy to say, that the executive officer in whose division these roads lie, is now employed, with the sanction of the Military Board, in surveying the road from Maldah to Dinagopore and Titalya, and that on his return to Dinagopore, he will survey the old direct road to Nowabgunge, near the mouth of the Mahanuddee. As I suppose the Military Board will have no objection to allow the Dorjeling Committee to have a copy of this survey when finished, I shall reserve my remarks on these roads until I can accompany them with a plan, I therefore commence with Titalya, which may be considered the point at which all the roads, from every part of the country, for people proceeding to Dorjeling, will meet.

3. The dawk bungalow built here, out of the funds raised for this purpose, is finished, and so is the store-room for the tenant of the Hotel, built at the expense of the subscribers to the same. The road from this goes along the bank of the Mahanuddee for about 6 miles, on the left or Tittalya side, to a place called Sonassacottah, and then crosses the river, (which never overflows its banks and has water in it at all seasons) it then proceeds via Raneedungah to Punkahbarree. Had the Superintendence of the Dorjeling roads been mine, I should have suggested a proper survey of the two roads from Tittalya to Punkahbarree, in order to determine which is the best and what would be necessary to make the one ultimately fixed or passable at all seasons; but as it is, I can only say that the road via Raneedungah, by which I went, was distinctly marked out the whole way; that the first part was through a grass jungle; and that the jungle became thicker and higher as I advanced, until in the latter part, through the forest, it was as heavy as any I have ever met with, though not generally swampy, as far as I could judge. During the hot weather it is probably burnt down annually, but as it springs up again every rains, and many parts will require bridges or drains, it can by no means be considered as made, indeed one of the principal difficulties will be crossing the Ballaun River during the rains.

4. From Punkahbarree the real difficulties of the road commence. At this place another bungalow has been erected, which has more than exhausted the subscription raised for building staging bungalows. I am inclined to think this bungalow may be a little out of the way if ever a carriage road is constructed; but this is not of much consequence, as travellers will only use it as a resting place for the night, going or coming. From this point, however, the present road is about as bad and as steep as could be well chosen. It is not, I admit, intended that it should be the future road, but the bad effects of an ill chosen track at the commencement, are almost incalculable. In the first place, it prevents the employment of any other means of transport than men, the dearest possible and most difficult to procure; and 2ndly, it renders the natives of the plains mere unwilling to go up, from the great difficulties and fatigue they have to undergo, and they consequently give the place a bad name. To this, in the present instance, must be added the great length of the road, 32 miles, as measured by Lieutenant Fisher (who accompanied Major General Oglander there). From Punkahbarree for about 20 miles, this path had not been what is called made, no attempt to remove any of the natural obstacles having been made; and, though passable by loaded coolies with great difficulty, it is utterly impassable for loaded cattle. When we got to the place where I met the first working party, the new road may be said to be commenced; but for several miles it is a mockery to call it a road, for not a tree standing in the middle of it, or stone requiring removal, nor even trees lying right across and totally obstructing the path, had been removed.

5. The last eight miles, however, are better, and could be passed by loaded cattle. About two miles of this road nearest to Dorjeling was made the year before, and the remainder immediately after the last rains, under the orders of Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd, (during Lieutenant Gilmore's sickness,) and by whom the line from Punkahbarree to Dorjeling was marked out, and I am sorry to say, that the part finished has been made without attention to the principles laid down by scientific men for making roads, in mountainous countries, and the neglect of which will, I am of opinion, affect the durability of this road; for no attention whatever has been paid to its drainage, nor have bridges or drains been made across it, to protect it from the torrents which rush down with violence in the rains through every ravine; and will, unless this is remedied, render it impassable in the rains. That it was desirable to get a road made quickly for the transport of provision is indisputable, but I am of opinion, this might have been as quickly done in the proper direction as the one chosen. From the very commencement of the road at Dorjeling, there is every reason to think the hill called Jolahpahar, from 800 to 1000 feet higher than the station, might have been turned, and the long and steep ascents and descents existing in the present road, have been avoided. This also applies to other parts as well. I admit that from the thick forest covering these hills, the fixing upon the proper line of road is a work of great difficulty, and requiring peculiar professional knowledge, and it is the most arduous part of the business, as many lines may be explored before the best is found, owing to the forest preventing one seeing many yards in advance; but the necessity of doing this before it was commenced (and during the two years we have had this hill, this has not been attempted) is to me very apparent; besides, the road should have been commenced at the bottom not at the top, as it is impossible to regulate the slope the whole way otherwise. Had the time and money expended on this portion of the road been judiciously laid out in the proper direction, I am of opinion, infinitely greater facilities would have now existed for the transport of provisions, and the worst and most difficult part of the ascent for the plains would have been comparatively easy and the collies (all people from the plains) would not at the first entering the hills have had the most difficult parts to go over, and consequently would have been more reconciled to what followed; besides that every mile so made would have been passable by loaded cattle, whereas that now constructed, even had it been level as the table, is of no use to them, as they can not get near it; so that coolies must still be employed the whole way until the new track now commencing at the foot of the hills, joins this. These mistakes are the more to be regretted, as the great difficulty of approach gives the place a bad name, and prevents people going there and greatly retards the advancement of the place.

6. I must observe most distinctly, that my observations apply to what I saw when I was there, and not to any new work done since, or to any alterations and amendments which may have been made. There are, as you will perceive, other difficulties which, in my opinion, might have been removed, and which, I think, Government would concede if brought to their notice, and which I shall proceed to notice, in the hope that the application of the Committee on these points, will be successful.

7. Having remarked generally on the road from Punkahbarree to Dorjeling, 32 miles in length, there yet remains other roads of quite as great, if not greater, importance, to be touched upon, and which, when I was there, seemed to have been totally overlooked. I mean the roads in and through the station itself. Before any single allotment of ground was made, I conceive the public roads should have been distinctly marked out, and that these roads should have been carried along the hill, according to the nature of the ground and public advantage, however it might interfere with any spot which would make a desirable location. I would here observe, that the great urgency for making these roads at once, arises from the narrowness of the ridge itself on which Dorjeling is situated; for in consequence of this, the road might so affect a location that the person wanting it would either change the position of his house on the allotment, or abandon it altogether from its being too much exposed or confined to suit him; and I have reason to believe, that this alone presents some of those who have already had grants assigned to them from clearing the ground.

8. In regard to the size of the allotments already made, I have no hesitation in saying, that a much greater degree of liberality in fixing their extent, would induce people more willingly to think of building, and prevent much discontent from comparisons, particularly as it is impossible from the very nature of the the ground to fix any fair standard for its distribution ; nor has the one attempted to be set up, been adhered to in all instances, even as far as it could be, I mean that of 80 yards square for each location. I have no doubt that ultimately all the ground rejected at first will be taken ; but I conceive that it is impolitic to raise any obstacle to those willing to commence before any of the numerous difficulties which always beset new undertakings of this sort are overcome ; indeed that, on the contrary, every encouragement should be given to the first settlers, and that, instead of refusing locations to companies or private associations of individuals or speculators, I think these are the very people who should be most encouraged. The first, and in my opinion the only, condition on which ground should be given, is the clearing it of the thick forest which now covers it, within a fixed and certain period, according to the extent of the grant ; and that the ground rent chargeable on each allotment, should vary according to the extent, situation and other circumstances taken together, which can only be decided on the spot, and not, as has hitherto been the case, if my information is correct, be the source for the largest and smallest lots, or the best and worst situation ; indeed to avoid much discontent, I would suggest that a Committee be appointed to decide on each allotment ; first settling aside such spots as may be required hereafter by Government, either in case it may be deemed expedient to erect any defensive works or other public buildings not yet fixed on ; and I am of opinion that some points which it would be necessary to select in the former case, have already been appropriated ; after such places are marked out I would allow such applicants, according to the priority of his application, to select his own location, and also allow individuals to hold more than one, with the full right to dispose of the same as they like, if cleared within the proper time. When the ground is cleared, many will build who will not do so if they are to clear it themselves ; and it is of no consequence who builds, so that houses arise, which they will do as the demand for them increases, and it is very certain that if a person built a dozen, as he could only occupy one, he would let the remainder, a great point at a station like this, where half the visitors of one year may not be able to go there the next.

9. I shall now notice one of the causes, and a very principal one, whence the difficulty in procuring natives of the plains willing to go up arises, viz. the total want of shelter on the road and at the place itself. This will cease at the station itself, as houses are built for servants and residents in the bazar, but not as it affects the coolies carrying loads up, or servants going there, so that it is necessary to point out the absolute necessity of Government doing something effectual to remedy this evil at once. From Titulya to Punkahbarree is about 25 miles, and from this to Dorjeling 32 miles more, nearly all up hill. A Coolie gets one rupee for taking a load of 30 seers these 57 miles, and all last rains no food was to be got on the road (at present it is procurable at 2 or 3 places, but is so dear they still carry their own provisions for the trip with them), a man, therefore, started with a load of 30 seers, and 10 seers of provisions for the 10 days it would take him to go and return. The rains in the hills are at times incessant, and the nights all the year round cold, and the poor wretches, with but little clothing to protect them from the cold, and that never dry, without a dry spot to sleep on or any thing to protect them from the inclemency of the weather, often unable even to light a fire, or to cook their food, with a scarcity too of water in some parts, had their feet also attacked by the Peepsah, whose bite festers and renders them, if not lame, at least incapable of performing their journey in the proper time ; in consequence of which their provisions were expended, and hunger, added to their other sufferings, soon put an end to all their miseries ; and I was told that 14 dead bodies were lying exposed on the road at once. The number was probably exaggerated, but the fact of several of these unfortunate people dying in this way on the road, is incontestable. I have been informed, that the same thing occurred in the Nellgherries, when the station of Ottacamoud was first established.

10. Now, although no blame can be attributed to any one, yet the thing requires a remedy, and this the Political Agent has partially obtained. The only effectual way of putting an end to the evil, is to erect along sheds, (or several small ones, according to the nature of the ground) at various points, for these people to pass the night in. Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd has already got the sanction of Government to erect 2 such huts, and has contracted with Messrs. Hepper and Martin, to build one at a spot 7 or 8 miles from Dorjeling, and a 2nd about the same distance farther down, but there ought to be one in the Bazar at Dorjeling, another half way between Mahulidram (the place where the 2d, above mentioned is building by Messrs Hepper and Co, is to be erected) and Punkahbarree, a third at this latter place, and the last at the spot where the hackeries now unload, though this last may not perhaps be required where the good road is made. Staging bungalows are also required at 3 points between Dorjeling and Punkahbarree, as 8 miles is a very good day's journey for people coming from the plains, being nearly all up hill. I am inclined to think, that if the committee apply to Government, all these points may be obtained and orders issued to Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd to commence on them at once, although it is not possible to make an estimate of the actual expense, as first of all it is necessary to clear away the forest, then to level the ground to build on, and these two operations will be the most expensive part of each bungalow.

11. At present nothing has been done in regard to the erection of public buildings, not even for erecting a temporary hospital for the soldiers, many of whom were sick when I was there from exposure and cold, they not having then (though 6 months had elapsed since the order for raising them was issued) received their uniform, and at the time I visited Dorjeling, the thermometer at night was 280. I do not think that a single public building of any description will be erected, even if the ground is cleared, till after the next rainy season, from the difficulty of getting workmen ; but the committee might recommend that a road be constructed, as soon as possible, from the entrance of the present cleared space along the hill, as far as building ground exists, or may be reasonably available, and then one at each end to the hill below, on which a very large portion of the place must be built, also paths for cattle to the different springs where water is procurable. A reservoir covered in, ought to be built at each spring for drinking water ; what overflows from this, might be retained in an open reservoir, for watering cattle and many other purposes, and what runs over here, again collected in a place for the dhobies to wash in, as cattle will not drink water strongly impregnated with the soap these people use.

12. Another point of considerable importance to all settlers, is the regularity of the dawks, and there can be no doubt that if the Post Master General is directed to arrange this, that the letters will reach their destination with much greater regularity, and infinitely shorter time than they now do. The palkee dawk for travellers, a point of the greatest consequence to the well-being of the place, has, I believe, been already brought to his notice, and as the Collector of Dinagore has expressed his ability and willingness, if permitted, to arrange for the location of beaters on this road, and as beaters are very numerous in all this part of the country, the difficulties hitherto experienced by every person who has attempted to go dawk on this road will, it is to be hoped, cease, for until that is the case, no lady or child could be permitted to go by dawk with almost the certainty of being left on the road for want of bearers.

13 Having remarked on all these points, I shall now proceed to that regarding the eligibility of the place I did not visit so early as I had intended, having been detained a month on the road by sickness; so that I could not spare the time, when there, that I had intended to give to exploring the hill, even had the season been favourable, which it was not when I was there. I had provided myself with the means of testing stones for lime; and, though I certainly saw no symptoms of lime stone on the hill, it being entirely what is called a primitive formation, in other words granite and gneiss; yet, I am not satisfied that lime may not be discovered nearer than it has hitherto been found; for we know that almost all the large hill streams, which enter the plains from these mountains to the westward, bring down round pebbles of nearly pure lime stone, and though I was unsuccessful when crossing the Ballahoun, in discovering any such amongst those I tried, still, as I passed by dawk, and could therefore only devote a very short time to make such experiments, it does not follow that lime may not yet be found there or in some of the other streams descending from these hills. I am told the surgeon of Purneah has discovered lime in similar situations, north of Purneah; and also that there is a large rock of lime stone some distance from Dorjeling, more in the interior; it may therefore yet be found nearer than we are at present aware of, though the hitherto almost total impracticability of procuring carriage, added to the local difficulties which are very great, has prevented any successful attempt to explore these hills. Dorjeling has, from this cause, and the impossibility of, at present, hiring any hill people, or even getting people from the plains in sufficient numbers, had greater difficulties than either Simlah or Mussooree had to contend with at first; but still, I have no doubt that these difficulties will be overcome by degrees, and that as the forest is cleared away we shall get rid of the Peepsah, a very troublesome fly, and which, though not now found at Mussooree, is still met with on the Tyne range above it, though 10,000 feet high; we may therefore, I trust, safely anticipate being freed from this annoyance as the place becomes occupied.

14. In regard to situation, I am inclined to give the preference to Dorjeling, as there are not those high isolated peaks which at Mussooree attract the lightning; and I am inclined to think, from the shape of the hills all around it, that the heavy storms will pass by without doing mischief to the station. The situation has undoubtedly great capabilities and will, I trust, rival Simlah in beauty, whilst as it has infinitely more soil, gardens may thrive better here than to the Westward, and many European fruits and vegetables may come to perfection here, though others, such as grapes, may suffer from the heavy rains at the time they ought to ripen. If proper encouragement is given to gardening, I have no doubt but that we may introduce fruits and vegetables yet unknown in this part of the world, and which have never been introduced at Simlah or Mussooree, as in addition to the expense and difficulty of getting them brought out from Europe, there was the great distance to take them in this country; added to which, the circumstance that those who would have been willing to go to the expense and trouble of getting them out, had little or no chance of seeing the result of their labours, as few people are enabled to visit those places above 2 or 3 successive years, whereas, from the nearness of Dorjeling to Calcutta, the difficulties will diminish and many residents of Calcutta may pay it an annual visit as long as they remain in India, and thus enjoy the result of their labours.

15 The raspberry, which is not worth eating in the western hills, is here excellent, and chesnuts, their unknown, grow here, and many fruits now found wild and unfit to eat, may become good by culture, such as the cherry, apple and pear, and I expect to have samples of different fruits and woods sent to me, that I may submit them to those who understand these things better than I do, I am also informed, that the cattle and poultry of these hills, are far superior to those found in most parts of the plains, which may encourage farming as well as gardening in this part when well established; but, until much of the forest disappears and houses are built, but little can be expected in these points. In regard to the climate, it appeared to me exactly similar to the climates of Simlah and Mussooree at the same season of years, and I have no doubt that invalids to whom change of air is recommended, will derive the same benefit by a visit to those hills, as to the others. As the European soldiers have incontestably derived great advantage from the Sanatorium at Landour, I have no doubt that they would do so here, if a hospital was established; and I am supported in these opinions by Major General Oglander, who was there when I was, and who would doubtless give his opinion to Government on the subject it called on to do so; and if it was once known that Government meant to establish a hospital here, it would go a great way in convincing the natives, that there was no intention of abandoning the place, and to the more timid, the presence of a number of European soldiers would give an idea of security how much wanting for its prosperity; but, although I think we have every reason to look forward with confidence to the ultimate success of the undertaking, I am inclined to think it will be better to disabuse those who expect the place to be established in a few months; for where too much is expected, the disappointment and consequent reaction are greatest; and I fear that those who first visit the hotel, will meet with difficulties and privations they never dreamt of, and being disgusted with it, they may give worse accounts of it than it really deserves.

16. To recapitulate briefly the points which I think it would be desirable that the committee should bring to the notice and consideration of Government at once, I would say they were first three additional huts of about a hundred feet long each for coolies and travellers (natives) to sleep in, in addition to the two already sanctioned. Secondly, Three staging bungalows in addition to the two already erected at Tititallya and Pankhabarree, by private subscription. Thirdly, that reservoirs, such as I have before stated, should be built at all the springs (which are but few in number). Fourthly, That Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd be directed to mark out the principal roads in the station, and the paths for cattle to the springs, and to clear and make them with as little delay as possible. Fifthly, That all such ground as may be required for public purposes, be at once resumed and set apart, and that to prevent future disputes, a committee be formed to mark out all the allotments and to see that their boundaries are clearly defined, and to settle the ground rent to be paid for the same. Sixthly, That the ground on which the bazar is to be built, shall also be cleared of the forest, to enable natives wishing to build to commence, as unless this encouragement is given to them, it is doubtful when the bazar will be established. Lastly, it would be a great advantage if the roads from Tititallya to Pankhabarree were surveyed and estimates made for rendering the one fixed on passable all the year; but I admit with so much on hand, Lieutenant Gilmore can hardly be expected to do this, and attend properly to his other duties.

17. In regard to the Hotel, I am of opinion, that it cannot be so quickly established as was anticipated, as the dense forest to be cleared away and ground to be levelled, were points neither known to us or the contractors, or taken into consideration when the contracts and plans were made, and the heavy expense attendant on this, will be a fair claim to be laid before the public meeting for their consideration and liberality, nor can the non-completion of the building at the time stipulated, be attributed to any want of exertion on the part of the contractors, who have done as much as was possible under the difficulties totally unexpected which they have had to contend with. As these are points which it is unnecessary to canvass here, and as other members of the Committee have been there as well as myself, and are fully aware of them, I shall here close my letter, though I shall be ready at all times to give any further information in my power, if required.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,
Calcutta, February 21, 1839. E. GARSTIN.

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secy. to Govt., Political Department.

SIR,—By desire of the Dorjeling Committee, I have the honor to transmit a letter by Major Garstin, on a variety of subjects connected with the establishment of the Sanatorium there, and to save the trouble of referring to so long a paper, I am directed to submit the following abstract.

1st. That 3 additional huts of about 100 feet long each, for coolies and travellers (natives) to sleep in, should be built.

2d. That 3 staging bungalows, in addition to the two already erected at Titalya and Punkabbarree by private subscription, should be built.

3d. That reservoirs should be built at all the Springs.

4th. That Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd be directed to make out the principal roads in the station, and the paths for cattle to the springs, and to clear and make them with as little delay as possible.

5th. That all such ground as may be required for public purposes, be at once resumed and set apart.

6th. That the ground on which the Bazar is to be built, should also be cleared of the forest to enable natives wishing to build to commence.

7th. That the line of road from Titalya to Punkabbarree, should be surveyed and estimates made for rendering the one fixed on passable all the year.

I am likewise instructed by the Committee to state, that the Bazar, as attempted to be established by Colonel Lloyd, has in effect proved a failure, as regards the three essential points of quantity, quality, and prices, and that in these circumstances (the truth of which can be vouched by letters from Dorjeling) it would be a great accommodation were a Commissariat Officer to be deputed by Government for the purpose of starting an efficient bazar.

2d. The Committee beg further to suggest, that a native Doctor should be assigned to Colonel Lloyd for the purpose of attending the road parties and,

3d. As great difficulties have been experienced by all concerned in procuring coolies, the Committee beg to state, for the favorable consideration of Government, that if proper means were taken, the Meechee population, at the foot of the mountains, might, in a great measure, be rendered available. These people have no prejudices of caste, and are ready and willing to work; but, unfortunately, being principally subjects of the Sikkim Rajah, they have hitherto kept aloof. There are 14 Chowdries distributed among these villages, one of whom is called the Sirdar. Now, were Colonel Lloyd instructed to communicate with this Sirdar, and offer such inducements as Government might think proper, there is little doubt the assistance of the Meechees would be obtained. Colonel Lloyd has been in communication with one Chowdree (Beer Sing). He is not the Sirdar, however, and little good has been gained by it. The Rajah, it is to be feared, is still unwilling to promote the establishment of the Sanatorium.

I trust the Committee will not be thought presumptuous in bringing the last mentioned points to the notice of Government, and

Have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most Obedient Servant,
(Signed) HENRY M. LOW.

Calcutta, March 4, 1839.

To H. M. Low, Esq.

Secretary to the Dorjeling Committee.

Political Department.

SIR,—I am directed by the Honorable the President in Council, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 4th March, submitting certain propositions for the improvement of the Station of Dorjehog, and in reply to state, that your communication has been forwarded to Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd, for report.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient humble Servant,
H. T. PRINSEP, Secy. to Govt. of India.

Fort William, March 6, 1839.

[Hurk., March 16.]

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 2d March, 1839.

The following gentlemen, proposed at the last Meeting, were balloted for and duly elected.

John Smith, Esq., M. D., Surgeon 34th Regt. N. I.;—Gibbon, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon European Regiment; R. Barclay Duncan, Esq., M. D., Assistant-Surgeon; C. S. Curling, Esq., Surgeon Artillery; J. Balfour, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon; R. Laughton, Esq., Nusserree Battalion; B. Anderson, Esq., 63d Regt. N.

I.; R. V. Shuter, and T. R. Strover, Esqrs., Bengal Service.

The following gentlemen were proposed as Members. J. F. Sullivan, Esq., M. D., Surgeon Bengal Establishment, by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Egerton.

T. Hunter, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Gooleve.

W. Jamieson, Esq., M. D., Assistant Surgeon, by Dr. Spry, seconded by W. Wallich.

A letter was read from W. F. Sealy, Esq., requesting to withdraw from the Society.

The question of admission of the qualified students, of the Medical College, to the privileges of the Society, then came under discussion. Mr. Hutchinson's proposition at the last meeting, to elect them as ordinary members, not subject to the payment of the annual subscription having been read, Dr. Goodeve stated, that the young men would prefer being allowed to pay their subscription like other members. Mr. Egerton thought that the burthen would be too heavy for them, and this view was supported by the President, Mr. Sawers. Dr. Spry remarked, that these youths could not be allowed to vote if they paid nothing towards the support of the Society, and in the course of the discussion, the latter gentleman observed, that although these young men had undoubtedly passed an examination equally severe, if not more so than that to which the members of the medical profession at home are subjected, that from the subordinate situations they are destined to hold, he did not consider them fit to be placed on the same footing with other members of the Society, and he for one could not associate with them as such. The following amendment was proposed by Mr. Egerton, seconded by D. Spry.

That Baboo Umachurn Set, Dwarkanauth Gooplo, Nohunchunder Mitter, Rajkiso Dey and Shamachurn Dutt, be admitted as associate members, in the class of associates, and to receive all the benefit of the Society, without paying the privilege of voting.

This view of the case was warmly opposed by Mr. Hutchinson, who declared his opinion, that the youths in question were fully entitled to every encouragement that could be offered to them by the European Members of the Medical Service. The superiority of acquirements displayed by the former, certainly deserved that they should be admitted to the medical Society on the same footing that native gentlemen are admitted to the Horticultural or Asiatic Society.

Mr. Hutchinson was supported by Drs O'Shaughnessy and Goodeve. The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

The original motion made by Dr. Stewart, at the last meeting, was then brought forward and carried, viz that Baboo Umachurn Set, Dwarkanauth Gooplo, Nohunchunder Mitter, Rajkiso Dey, and Shamachurn Dutt, be admitted members of the Society. They were accordingly proposed by Dr. Stewart, seconded by Dr. Green.

The box having been circulated for each separately, they were found to be duly elected.

A case of extirpation of the lower jaw, successfully removed, by S. V. Leese, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, 10th Regt N. I., accompanied by a drawing of the part, was presented by that gentleman.

A report upon vaccination, by Dr. Stewart, was presented by the Medical Board.

The Journal de Medicine de Bourdeaux, was received from the Editor.

Mr. Darby's cases of lithotomy, presented at the last meeting, and the reports upon land scurvy, presented in December, were then read and discussed. Mr. Darby's most interesting case was that in which he detailed the history of the enormous calculus exhibited at the last meeting. A stone weighing $3\frac{1}{2}$ lbs and measuring 73.8 inches in its longest diameter, $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches in its greatest breadth. The patient was a Rajpoot at 56, who had suffered from the complaint for the last 10 years. Mr. Darby did not consider the case a favorable one for the operation, but the patient suffered so much, and was so anxious to have the stone removed even at the hazard of his life, that Mr. Darby consented, and the operation was performed on the 13th July last. The magnitude of the calculus rendered it very difficult of extraction, but after the operation, the man expressed himself to be more comfortable than he had been for the last two years; he went on well for about a week, at the end of that time a collection of matter began to form upon the nates, it assumed the character of a carbuncle under the effects of which the patient sunk on the 31st, 17 days after the operation.

The reports upon scurvy were made in compliance with an order by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, to enquire into the causes of the disease, as it appeared in the Regiments, in Garrison at Agra. One of them was furnished by Mr. Superintending Surgeon Panton, as president of the Special Committee appointed for that purpose, and the other by H. Guthrie, Esq., Surgeon 14th Regt. N. I.

H. H. GOODEVE, M. D.,
Secy. Medical and Physical Society.
[Hurkuru, March 13.]

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 13th March, 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

PRESENT.—N. Wallich, M. D., F. R. S., V. P.; Messrs. Geo. Prinsep, H. Piddington, W. R. Ewart and D. Hare; Baboo Casinath Bhow; Messrs. John Cowie, R. Watson, W. P. Grant, J. H. Stocqueler, C. Trebeck, R. S. Strickland, C. Dearie, and Dr. H. H. Spry.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members:

HONORARY MEMBERS.—His Excellency the Right Honorable Stewart Mackenzie, Governor of Ceylon.

ORDINARY MEMBERS.—The Hon'ble Sir Henry Seton, John Trotter, W. G. Johnson, Woolryche Whitmore Ryan, Francis Curwen Smith, Wm. Sinclair, J. W.

Cragg, Allen Campbell Dunlop and T. P. B. Biscoe, Esqrs.; Captain S. W. Fenning and Lieut. F. C. Burnett.

1. Cochineal.—Claim for the Government reward.—The business that first came on for discussion was the consideration of the motion made at the last Meeting by G. A. Prinsep, Esq., and seconded by the President, claiming, on the part of the Society, the reward of £2,000 offered by the Court of Directors for the introduction of the live Cochineal insect of the fine species into their Indian Territories, in a fit state for propagation. Mr. Prinsep, in support of his motion, addressed the Meeting at some length, and took a view of the doings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, relative to this important question, from the commencement of their application to the subject. He reminded the Members of the Society, what in their endeavours to introduce successfully the fine grained Cochineal into the East Indies, the Court of Directors had incurred a great expense at Madras, and afterwards, at the representation of the Governor in Council at that Presidency, the Court had confirmed a recommendation made to them to offer a reward of £2,000, or 5,000 pagodas, for the introduction of the insect upon British vessels only, "lest foreigners, so encouraged, should avail themselves by the discovery, and so diminish the value by propagating and increasing the breed of the insect."

Some years since, when he was turning his thoughts to the propagation of Cochineal as a speculation of his own, Mr. Prinsep related having held an interview with Mr. Robinson, the then Chairman of the Court of Directors, and on bringing the circumstance of this offer to his notice, Mr. Robinson expressly assured him, that should he (Mr. Prinsep) obtain at Vera Cruz, or elsewhere, the true insect, and convey it to India, and succeed in making it propagate there, that he would, undoubtedly, be entitled to the reward which lay open to any person.

In reference to what the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India had done to deserve this reward, Mr. Prinsep went into particulars relative to the condition of the Nopaleries of the Society, since it had fallen under his superintendence, and stated, that he had planted out specimens at Allipore, Kidderpore, the Botanic Garden, Sook-Saugor and the Sunderbuns—so as to effect an extensive cultivation as possible. In conclusion, Mr. Prinsep called the attention of the Society to the present commercial value of Cochineal, and exhibited on the table at the Meeting, the plant which has recently been received in this country from Mr. Anderson of the Chelsea Garden, through Dr. Royle, with the insect upon it, both of which were in a state of great vigour and promise. Of the genuineness of the insect on this plant, there could be no question, as he believed, that the Cactus was received at Claremont from Vera Cruz with the insect on it. He considered, therefore, that the Society had justly earned the reward from the Government, and recommended that application be forthwith made for the sum of 20,000 rupees which, when obtained, he would recommend should be appropriated exclusively to the preparation of localities for the better protection of the imported insect. In Mexico and other places, where the fine insect is made an object of commerce, the Nopaleries are formed in ravines and dells, that both the plants and insects may be protected, as much as possible, from storms, whereas here, in Bengal, it has hitherto been the practice to allow the plants to be exposed to all the violence of tempests. He therefore moved, that the motion be carried.

The President alluded to the expected arrival of the new investment, promised by M. Betier, from Bourbon, which would afford additional weight to the claim now brought forward. He suggested, therefore, that in the mean time the gentlemen who stand recorded as the Cochineal Committee, be requested to give the Society the benefit of their services, and that a draft of an application be prepared by them for adoption at the next General Meeting, in which the particulars of the result of the former experiment shall be given, and the reward be duly paid claim to.

This proposition met with the concurrence of the whole Meeting and was carried accordingly.

Appointment of Collector.—The President next desired to call the attention of the Society, to a notice of motion on the board, recommending that the special Committee of Finance be made a Standing Committee, and that the Assistant Secretary be appointed Collector under them, on a salary of 60 rupees a month, in addition to his present income of 160 rupees. This was carried unanimously.

Notice of motions for discussion at the next Meeting.

No. 1.—Proposed by Mr. Piddington—"That the Secretary be authorised to incur the small expense necessary to provide for the formation of a Cabinet of soils."

No. 2.—Proposed by Mr. W. P. Grant—"That the Society restrict the prizes offered for bulls in the current year, to Bulls of the Devonshire breed."

For Election.—The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election at the next Meeting:

Chas. Cardew, Esq., C. S.—Proposed by Mr. Robert Watt, seconded by Dr. Spry.

John Hughes, Esq.—Proposed by Mr. W. F. Gibbon, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Allan Webb, Esq., M. S.—Proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

C. J. Richards, Esq.—Proposed by Mr. John Richards, seconded by Mr. R. J. Bagshaw.

Lieutenant Jas. Wemyss, (44th Regt. N. I.) Junior Assistant Agent Governor-General on the N. E. Frontier.—Proposed by Captain J. Muthie, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Arthur Smelt, Esq., C. S.—Proposed by Colonel McLeod, seconded by Dr. Spry.

W. H. Elliott, Esq., C. S.—Proposed by Mr. A. Beattie, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Library.—The Secretary brought forward a copy of London's Arboretum et Fruticetum Britannicum, or the Trees and Shrubs of Britain, 8 vols. oct., which he proposed to purchase for the Society's use.

Museum.—1. A chest containing about one hundred pounds of Egyptian cotton seed, and,

2. Two bags (about two bushels) of Malta cotton seed, which produces a red description of wool, and the colour of which never fades.—Presented by G. U. Adam, Esq.

(Note. Members and others desirous of being furnished with portions of these seeds, can be supplied on application at the Society's Rooms).

3. A second specimen of cotton, grown from Seychelles' Seed at Hidgelee.—Presented by Dr. Smith, Civil Surgeon.

The staple of this cotton, like the former presented by Dr. Smith, was pronounced particularly good.

4. A case of tapioca, grown and manufactured at Allipore, by Mr. Speed, who mentions that he believes himself to be the first person who has succeeded in getting up this article, and that it has been tested by Professor O'haughnessy, who describes it "in every respect equal, and in some superior, to Brazilian and London specimens."

5. Varieties of oil, chiefly in which cotton has been grown, from the Mauritius, Singapore, Bunderbund and America. Presented by Mr. Piddington.

6. Seeds from the Peruvian cotton plant, reared near Sook Saugor, and also specimens of the cotton from the same. Presented by G. A. Prinsep, Esq.

For the whole of the foregoing contributions the thanks of the Society were given.

Purchase of indigenous cotton seeds.—The report of the Cotton Committee recommending the appropriation of 500 rupees for the purchase of the best kinds of indigenous seeds, was next read and passed.

Agricultural Statistics.—The Secretary brought forward the reply of Government to the letter which was addressed by him to the Chief Secretary in accordance with the resolution of the Society at the last Meeting.

No. 233.

To H. H. Ewart, Esq., M. D., Secy to the Agrl. Society.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 15th instant, requesting that permission may be granted, in you to receive and transmit, free of postage, all letters and documents containing information relative to prices, &c. of the agricultural products of India.

In reply, I am directed to state, that it does not seem to his honor the President in Council to be necessary to make any alteration in the existing rules, under which the correspondence of Societies, if relating to public objects, can be transmitted through this office. I am, &c.

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Cannell Chamber, Feby. 20th, 1839.

This was regarded by the Society as tantamount to a refusal, and the further prosecution of the measure was therefore deemed impracticable.

Report from Glasgow on Assam Tea.

Mr. Dearie favored the Society with an extract of a letter, dated December 12th, which he had received from Mr. W. P. Patton, of Glasgow, to Messrs. Eglinton, McClure and Co., of this city, respecting the Assam tea sent home last year, from which it will be observed, that the brokers and tea dealers in Scotland speak very favorably of it:—

"Provost Dunlop has given me to-day a small canister of Assam tea, sent to him by the India Board, to have a report upon it, and I have given it to Mr. Connal for that purpose. It appears a most useful description of tea, and may become an article of great national importance"—and from ditto, dated 19th December 1838. "The tea dealers and brokers here report very favorably of the quality of the Assam tea:—It is good and strong, and would be very saleable here. It is worth about 2s. per lb."

The President remarked on the great importance of this communication, and alluded to the fact, that hitherto no communications, connected with the proceedings of the Tea Committee, had ever been communicated by the Government to the Agricultural Society. In the success of the enterprise all took an interest, and he recommended, that the Secretary be directed to apply to Government in the General Department, for a copy of the report and proceedings of the Tea Committee, that the same might be made public.

Dr. Wallich said, he thought the Committee would, as a wish to the effect was expressed by the Society, readily furnish their papers on the subject, and undertook to bring the desire of the Society, to the notice of the other members of the Tea Committee.

Capabilities of the soil of Guzerat for the production of superior cotton.

Mr. Ewart favored the Society with a highly interesting extract of a letter, which he had received from his brother at Bombay, who has been largely engaged in cotton-spinning at Manchester. "Dr. Burnes, at Kaira, has 50 or 60 trees of Bourbon cotton, three years old, some of the produce of which he showed me. It is excellent cotton, quite equal to the best New Orleans cotton. The seed from which these trees are grown, was taken from trees, which he found growing wild,—part of which were planted in that country 15 years ago by Mr. Gilder. The seed does not seem to have been deteriorated,—it is black and smooth, not like the Indian seed, to which the Cotton adheres so firmly."

Mr. Ewart adds:—"My brother does not say what soil these plants are grown in, but I will ask him. It is curious, that such plants should have been neglected so long as 15 years; but it is only another proof of indolence and carelessness!"

The Secretary mentioned, in connection with the foregoing intelligence, that he had discovered among the papers lately published by the Court of Directors on cotton, wool, raw silk and indigo,—the original report of the Bombay Government made in the year 1818, touching the plantation of Mr. Gilder, Civil Surgeon, and adverted to by Mr. Ewart, in his communication, and of which he submitted the following paragraphs:

"Mr. Gilder very judiciously selected a spot for his late experiment in the Eastern Districts, between the Subarnnity and the Myhee, where the greater portion of the soil is of a light, sandy nature, as recommended by the cultivators in the Island of Bourbon, and where the general division of the country into enclosures, protects the plants materially from the influence of the hot winds and from the ravages of cattle, which appear to be an almost insuperable objection to the cultivation of this shrub in the open country about Broach."

"The cotton produced from twenty-seven beegahs, amounts to about 44½ maunds of clean cotton, and on examination at the presidency, has been reported by the native merchants, to be of excellent quality, that is very much superior to the first and second thumil, and well adapted to the Europe market."

The information now communicated, therefore, of the superiority of the cotton grown in these districts, after a trial of so many years, is a very encouraging stimulus to the cotton growers in India, and proves that good sites are all that they require to command success.

Agricultural Prospects in Azimghur.

The Secretary (Mr. H. C. Tucker) of the Branch Society at Azimghur, reports the following gratifying intelligence from his division to the Parent Institution:—

"I have the honor to inform you, that the medal and prize for the best Oracheite sugar-cane was won by Mr. H. E. Hunter, an indigo planter and zameendar of this district.

The prizes distributed were as follows:—

Best Oracheite sugar-canes, (Medal to be given when received from Calcutta,).....	10 Rs.
Ditto potatoes,.....	10 "
" carrots,.....	10 "
Ditto celery,.....	10 "
" turnips,.....	5 "
" cauliflowers,.....	5 "

Total..... 50 R

The rewards were distributed in a meeting of about 14 Europeans, and upwards of 3,000 of the most respectable natives in the district, who had been assembled to witness the investiture of a khillat of 1,300 Rs. given to a Tahseeldar by Government for the suppression of Infanticide—and also to examine the Government school of the station. The competitor's sugar-canes, after astonishing the natives by their size, (the top leaves reaching the top of the canopy, nearly 14 feet high) were distributed to them for eating, and the taste then bestowed, has given the strongest impulse to the diffusion of the cane throughout the neighborhood. The cane thrives well here, and this year nearly 1,000 canes have been distributed to various individuals interested in its cultivation. We are trying the planting of the canes in October, instead of March. The Canes planted in October escaped nearly entirely the ravages of the white ants and insects, which usually destroy half the seed cane when placed in the ground in March; and should the cane ripen before the rains, so as to yield good sugar, the benefit will be incalculable. Even if they only afford the natives a pleasant food, and thereby at the end of the hot weather, the experiment will not have been useless. I purpose letting you know the state of these canes, in June—at present they look most flourishing—and though planted too late, are already about 2 feet high.

* Lieut Kirka, in the Dhoon, has practised this plan with great success. H. H. S.

We have, within the last six weeks, obtained three new subscribers to our Society, which is in a flourishing condition. 20 beegahs are being added to the garden, to be laid out as a nursery to supply the district with Otahette cane, Egyptian and other cotton, Guinea grass, Malabar mangoes, &c. The few pods of Egyptian cotton which have ripened, have been much approved by all the natives who have seen and felt them, the cotton being much greater in quantity, very soft and silky, and easily separated from the stone. Guinea grass is a product which will be especially valuable in this district, where the jungles are all being rapidly cut down, and the land brought into cultivation. Without the introduction of this and other artificial grasses, great difficulty will be, and is even now, experienced, in providing the numerous cattle with provender. The natives have a prejudice against turnips, although they plant and consume potatoes to a considerable amount. Mangel Wurzel, should it succeed, will be very useful. I am anxious to encourage the vine, which ought to flourish in a light sandy soil like this. The vines in the Horticultural Garden are very good ones, and I have had a number of kulms taken this year, with a view to their diffusion over the district. A couple of vines planted by the hut of the poorest peasant, would furnish him with a delicious luxury in the hot weather, and the common complaint of grapes not ripening sufficiently, would very probably be removed by the heat of the cottage roof. It shall at any rate be tried. The Tobacco had not a fair trial this year, so that I am unable to judge of the result."

Hooghly Branch Society.—A report from Dr. Wise was next read, communicating the particulars of the disbursements of the Society's prizes at Hooghly on the 9th February.

"The exhibition of vegetables took place in the Zemindaree School house at Hooghly, and was attended by the principal residents of the Station and a large concourse of native gentlemen."

The display of vegetables was very respectable, and the following prizes were awarded.

1. Ram Chunder Mallick, received the first prize of a silver medal and five rupees, for the best potatoes reared in the neighbourhood of Harripaul.*

2. Hurry Mallick, received the second silver medal and five rupees, for the best specimens of holocote, turnips, Indian corn, cabbages, and arrow root."

The report concludes with a list of other rewards to the number of six, bestowed for other vegetables.

Gardening and cane planting at the Mauritius.—Mr. Hugon, in a letter from the Mauritius to the Agricultural Society of India, states, that "Gardening here is carried on, on a large scale, by Europeans. I saw one estate, which yields 8,000 dollars annually entirely by the sale of vegetables."

"Whatever be the quality of the soil, the depth at which natives plant the cane in India is uniform,—here it varies very much even in the same plantation. I think the first steps in improvement should be in the mode of planting, and that attention should be directed to that point as much as to the introduction of the Otahette cane."

* Many hundreds of beegahs of land are in potato cultivation in the Collectorate of Hooghly. H. H. S.

Caoutchouc.—Dr. Wallich communicated the award made by the London Caoutchouc Company to Captain Veitch, for his zeal and industry in promoting the manufacture of Caoutchouc in Assam.

"The Board regret that the samples received are not prepared in such manner as to allow their awarding to you the premium of one hundred guineas, but in conveying their cordial thanks for what has been sent, and to testify their feelings for your promptitude in promoting that which, from the largely increasing consumption of rubber cannot fail to be a most important branch of export from the East Indies, I am directed to inform you, that the Board have, with great pleasure and satisfaction, voted the sum of twenty-five guineas as an acknowledgement to you, the disposal of which, in any agreeable and appropriate form, has been left to the arrangement of Dr. Royle, and your brother, Captain Veitch, R. E., with whom this matter now rests, and from whom you will no doubt shortly hear." "With respect to the value of the rubber, which, from its not being allowed sufficiently to dry, was found on its arrival here to be in mass, the Board have considered that the full market price should be allowed, and the amount therefore, viz.—2 cwt. 1 qr. at 1s. per lb. = £12 : 12, is placed to your credit, and which will be paid to any person you may appoint to receive it. The value, if sent as directed, would have been at present market price 2s. per lb."

"The Board desire me to express their hopes, that the success which has, in so short a time, attended your efforts, will induce you still further to apply yourself to its more perfect preparation, and in encouraging this branch of trade in an article hitherto of no avail in the districts of our Eastern possessions, fully bear out the opinions which have been so confidently expressed by Dr. Royle,—that the production of so important a staple of commerce in our settlements, was not merely possible, but certain, if necessary attention was directed to its collection."

The Secretary called the attention of the Meeting to a letter which he had received from Mr. Payer, at Jeypore Factory, in the Collectorate of Dinagapore, intimating the loss of nearly all his investment of sugar-canes from the circumstance of their being packed in paddy straw instead of with the birna or culm grass. The Society were pleased to resolve that Mr. Payer should be furnished next year with a supply gratuitously, to compensate for his loss.

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary.

[Hurkaru, March 16.]

EXHIBITION OF THE MADRAS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The exhibition of the Horticultural Society took place on Saturday morning, at the hour appointed, in the Experimental Garden, and we were most agreeably disappointed to find that the display more than equalled anything we have before witnessed in Madras. We were happy to observe also, that there was a very full attendance of visitors, and the number of ladies was greater than on any previous occasion. As stated in the Public Notice, the exhibition took place at the Garden, in the temporary Conservatory. A covered way, was fitted up from the north side, and the show room was ornamented with festoons of flowers, which contributed not a little to the display. Soon after the hour appointed, the place was crowded with company, who appeared much pleased with the well-covered tables of vegetables and flowers—fruits being at present almost entirely out of season. But the most gratifying part of Saturday's exhibition, was the very large proportion of excellent vegetables which belonged to market gardeners, in not a few instances rivalling, and in some excelling, those exhibited by European and Native gentlemen.

When the first Exhibition took place, about three years ago, only two or three natives were amongst the candidates for prizes, and the articles they produced were indeed wretched. The second time there was a little improvement, but not much. Last year the specimens produced by the market gardeners, were far more numerous, and some articles equalled the best of their kind. On Saturday there could not have been less than twenty market gardeners present, and many of the articles exhibited were excellent, especially potatoes, carrots, turnips, brussels and guavas. One gardener brought a splendid Citron, and there were native vegetables and fruits in considerable abundance.

Amongst the displays from gentlemen's gardens, Mr. McJaggart's, General Waugh's, and Mr. A. Arbuthnot's, were allowed to be the best, next to that of the Horticultural Society. There was perhaps no show quite equal to what Mr. McDonnell exhibited on former occasions, but there was a more general good display especially in potatoes, which was in very great abundance.

Mr. Ben Janssen, had an excellent basket, as usual; and there were some very good specimens from Sir R. Comyn's, Major Butterworth's, Mr. Zecherpel's, Chacapa Chetty's, Colunda Moodelly's and others whose names will appear in the Secretary's Report. Mr. Turner sent some potatoes and a few ears of wheat from Poonamallee.

There were not so many baskets of flowers as there have been before, but some were very beautiful. Mrs. General Waugh obtained the silver medal for the best nosegay; prizes for flowers were also awarded to Mr. A. Arbuthnot, Mr. Home, Mr. Zecherpel, Col. Whannel, Mr. Dent, and Mr. Mischin.

The exhibition lasted from 10 o'clock until nearly one, and as far as we could judge, appeared to give very general satisfaction.—Madras Courier, Feb. 18.

CALCUTTA MECHANICS' INSTITUTION AND SCHOOL OF ARTS.

RULES.

I. NATURE OF THE INSTITUTION.—The nature of the Institution is a voluntary association of Mechanics and others.

II. OBJECT OF THE INSTITUTION.—The object proposed is the instruction, at a cheap rate, of the Members in the principles of the arts and in the various branches of useful knowledge.

III. MEANS OF OBTAINING THIS OBJECT.—The means proposed are—

1. The payment of a small annual sum by each Member.

2. Donations of Money, Books, Specimens, Implements, Models and Apparatus.

3. A Library of Reference, a Circulating Library and Reading Room.

4. A Museum of Machines, Models, and specimens of Natural History.

5. Lectures on Practical Mathematics, Mechanics, Astronomy, Chemistry and the Arts and Sciences generally.

6. An experimental Workshop and Laboratory.

IV. INSTITUTION NOW CONSTITUTED.—The Institution shall consist first of those who before or on the Twentieth of March 1839, shall have caused their names to be inserted in the Books opened to receive them, and who shall have since paid to the Secretary their subscriptions as hereinafter directed, and signed the following declaration in the Books of the Institution.

I do hereby promise to observe and keep all the Rules of the Mechanics' Institution and School of Arts, and to promote its welfare to the best of my power.

And second, of those who may hereafter be duly admitted, in conformity with these Rules.

V. OFFICERS OF THE INSTITUTION.—The Institution shall elect one President, two Vice Presidents, two Honorary Secretaries, two Trustees and twenty four Committee Men, who, together, shall form a Committee of Management, to which the Government of the Institution shall be confined.

VI. There shall be also appointed two Auditors of Accounts.

VII. All these Officers must be Members of the Institution, and be elected by ballot.

VIII. No one of these Officers, except that of Lecturer, shall take any office of emolument in the Institution, whilst he remains a Member of the Committee of Management.

IX. CONTRIBUTION AND ADMISSION OF MEMBERS.—Every Member must contribute five rupees yearly to the Funds of the Institution, to be paid in advance.

X. Candidates for admission must be proposed by one Member and seconded by another, and after the 10th of September next, no Member shall be competent to propose or second the admission of a Member until he has himself been a Member of the Institution for three months.

XI. Every Member on paying his Subscription, shall receive from the Secretary a Copy of the Rules and orders together with a card admitting him to all the privileges of the Institution and the Ladies of his family to the Lectures.

XII. No Member shall be admitted to the Rooms of the Institution or to any General or other Meeting, unless he produces his card.

XIII. The Members' Cards are personal and not transferable.

XIV. Any Member lending his card for the purpose of introducing a person not a Member, to any room or Meeting of the Institution, shall, upon proof thereof to the Committee of Management, be fixed five rupees; and he shall not be admitted to any room or Meeting of the Institution, until the fine be paid.

XV. The Secretary or other Officer shall detain the card of any Member which may be presented by a person not a Member.

XVI. No Member, unless he shall have joined the Institution before or on the 31st of March, 1839, shall vote at any Meeting or ballot for Officers until he has been a Member three months.

XVII. Every Member shall be at liberty to introduce friends to the Library and Museum of the Institution, provided such friends are not residing within fifteen miles of Calcutta, and whose stay in Calcutta shall not exceed a month.

XVIII. COMMITTEE OF MANAGERS AND SUB-COMMITTEES.—The Committee of Management shall have the care, superintendence, and control of the Institution.

XIX. No business shall be transacted in the Committee or any Select-Committee, unless four of its Members are present.

XX. The Committee of Management shall cause to be kept, fair and accurate Minutes of their Transactions, and of all Receipts and Payments on account of the Institution.

XXI. The Committee shall have the power of dividing itself into select Committees for dispatch of business; of not less than four Members; and that the reports of such Select-Committees on the matters specially referred to them, shall be of equal force and effect with a report of the General Committee, and shall be entered on the Minutes accordingly; but such select Committee shall have no power over the funds of the Institution except such as may be specially delegated to them. The President, Vice-Presidents and Secretaries, shall be ex-officio Members of all Sub-Committees.

XXII. The Committee shall cause the Accounts of the Institution to be made up twice in every year; namely, to the 30th June and 31st December, and shall lay them together with the Minute Books, Books of Account and Papers and Documents relating thereto before the Auditors, before, or on the fifteenth day of the next ensuing months of July and January; and they shall further give such information and explanation, as the Auditors may, from time to time, require, to enable them thoroughly to investigate the state of the Accounts, and they, the Auditors, shall return the accounts audited with their remarks thereon, before or on the last days of the said months of July and January.

XXIII. The Committee shall submit each half yearly Audit, with the Books of Account, Documents and Vouchers, to a General Meeting, to be called in the next ensuing months of August and February, and not earlier than the fifteenth days of such months and the said Audit, Books of Account, Documents and Vouchers, shall remain upon the table of the public room of the Institution, for the inspection of every Member, from nine in the morning till seven o'clock in the evening, from the first day of such month until the day on which such General Meeting shall be held.

XXIV. The Committee may engage proper persons as Lecturers, and shall cause to be given courses of Lectures on Practical Mathematics, Mechanics, Astronomy, Chemistry, and the Arts and Sciences Generally.

XXV. The Committee of Management shall appoint such servants as they may think necessary, for the purposes of the Institution.

XXVI. The Union Bank be appointed the Bank to the Institution.

XXVII. The Committee of Management have power to name the persons who shall draw upon the Bank on behalf of the Institution, and the Bank shall be instructed not to pay any draft not signed by such persons.

XXVIII. All Cash received on behalf of the Institution, shall immediately be paid into the Bank.

XXIX. At the first Meeting of the Committee of Management after the first General Meeting of the Institution, all Books and Papers relating to the Institution shall be delivered to them.

XXX. The Committee shall have the power of investigating any alleged act of flagrant misconduct in any Member, on a requisition in writing from one Member of the Institution, seconded by another, stating the particular offence, and shall have power, after investigation, to expel such offending Member; provided that no Member shall be expelled, unless two-thirds of the Committee signify their concurrence or writing.

XXXI. The Committee of Management, must meet regularly once in every month, on a day and at an hour to be fixed by themselves, at their first meeting after their appointment.

XXXII. The President, or two Vice-Presidents, or three Committee-men, may, at any time, by requisition in writing signed with their names, call a Special Meeting of the Committee of Management.

XXXIII. The President shall take the chair at all Meetings at which he is present, or, in his absence, one of the Vice-Presidents, in their absence the Committee shall appoint a chairman for the occasion.

XXXIV. All questions in the Committee shall be decided by show of hands, unless a ballot be demanded by two members. The Chairman may always vote.

XXXV. TRUSTEES.—The property of the Institution shall be vested, for the use and benefit of the Members, in two Trustees, to be named and appointed by the Members in General Meeting assembled.

XXXVI. When a vacancy occurs in the number of Trustees, by death, resignation, or otherwise, it shall be filled up at the next first General Meeting of Members.

XXXVII. RECEIPTS AND PAYMENTS.—All payments on account of the Institution shall be made by drafts on the Bank of the Institution.

XXXVIII. The Secretary shall keep a General Cash Book of all his receipts and payments. This book shall always be laid on the table of the Committee of Management at every monthly Meeting.

XXXIX. AUDITORS OF THE ACCOUNTS.—The Auditors shall attend the Committee of Management of being summoned thereto at the times and for the purposes before directed.

XL. Upon receiving the Books and Accounts, the Auditors shall proceed to examine and check the whole. They shall make all such inquiries as they may think necessary of the Committee of Management, and all other persons, to enable them to make a full, clear, and precise statement of the Accounts of the Institution.

XLI. The Auditors shall lay their Statement of each half year's Accounts of the Institution, signed with their names, with such observations as they may think necessary, before the Committee, within fifteen days after receiving them.

XLII. NOMINATION OF OFFICERS.—All nominations must be made, in writing, seven days before the day of election and delivered to the Secretary.

XLIII. A list of those nominated and for what office, shall be hung up in the Public Room of the Institution.

XLIV. ELECTION OF OFFICERS. Every Officer of the Institution, shall be elected by Ballot at the first General meeting of the year.

XLV. The Officers shall be elected to serve for one year, and at the expiration thereof, shall be re-eligible by ballot.

XLVI. TIME AND MODE OF BALLOTING.—At the first General Meeting in each year, the President shall take the chair at a certain hour in the evening, to be named, at which time the balloting shall commence.

XLVII. Three Members not holding offices, shall be appointed Scrutineers.

XLVIII. Each Member shall deliver his balloting list to the President, who shall deposit it in the balloting box. The Secretary marking off the Member's name.

XLIX. When the balloting closes, the Scrutineers shall deliver a statement to the President, who shall announce the result to the Members.

L. If the suffrages for two or more candidates are equal, lots shall be prepared by the Scrutineers, and drawn by the Chairman.

LI. ALTERATION OF THE RULES.—The Rules can be altered only at the General Meetings of Members.

LII. Propositions for altering the Rules and Orders, must be made in writing and signed by 10 persons who have been Members three months, delivered to the Secretary one month prior to the General Meeting for notification and placed in a conspicuous part of the Institution.

LIII. GENERAL MEETINGS.—There shall be two General Meetings in every year, viz. on or after the 15th February, and another on or before the 15th August, of which 14 days' notice must be given by public Advertisement, naming the purpose.

LIV. All voting shall be by show of hands, but if that mode appear doubtful, the Members shall divide.

LV. The following Reports shall be presented to the Meeting:

1. Of the total amount of all money received since the last Meeting.
2. Of the total amount of all money expended.
3. Of the balance in hand.
4. Of all donations, whether of money or other contributions, and the names of the donors.
5. Of the number of Members added since the last Meeting.
6. Of the number of persons who have ceased to pay their Subscriptions.
7. Of the total number of Members.
8. Of all other matters which the Committee of management may be desirous to communicate. Hark., March 29.

PLACES AT WHICH DAK BUNGALOWS ARE ERECTED.

On the undermentioned Roads
From Burdwan to Benares 342 miles.
Burdwan,†.....	0
Birbhum,.....	12
Bardham,.....	12
Kyranole,.....	14½
*Buktenuggur † or Mungerpore,.....	13
Assursole,.....	13
Taldunga,.....	13
*Gya,.....	12
.....	12½
Tapa Choney,.....	13
*Dootares,.....	14
Bughader,.....	12
Barkatta,.....	15½
*Bardas,†.....	15
Churperun,.....	11
Dumrah (descend the Ghaut),.....	8
Bata,.....	12
*Sheergatty,†.....	13
Muddenpur,.....	14½
Norungahat,.....	14
*Baroon (Soane River),.....	14
Digra (Soane River),.....	8
Batman,†.....	14
Jehanabad,.....	14
*Alphunabad,.....	14

Noubutpore,.....	13
Mogulserai or Allypurgur,†.....	16½
*Benarest (Ganges),.....	10½
.....	40
Total,.....	342
51½ From Bara, on Grand Trunk Road, to Gya, 80 miles.
Bara,.....	0
Kooslan,.....	8
*Gya,.....	12
.....	20
Bilah,.....	12½
*Jehanabad,†.....	26
.....	28½
38½ Nemanadwah,.....	0
*Patna (Ganges, †),.....	0
.....	31½
42½ Total,.....	80
From Sheergatty to Gya, 21 miles.
Sheergatty,.....	0
Chirkes,.....	11
Gya,†.....	10
.....	21
42½ From Benares to Allahabad, 74 miles.
Benarest,.....	0
Mizamorad,.....	14
Maharajgunj,.....	10
*Gopecgunj,†.....	13
.....	37

Burrard,.....	11
Sydabad,.....	10
*Allahabad† (Ganges),.....	16

Total,.....

37

Allahabad to Cawnpore, 128 miles.

Allahabad†.....	15
Koeila.....	15
Kussea.....	16
*Lohunga.....	16

46

Arapore.....	17
*Fatepore†.....	16

Kalyanpore.....	16
Sirsaul.....	17
*Cawnpore†.....	16

49

Total.....

138

N. B.—There is a Post Office at Urdu near Shahadpore, half way between Kussea and Lohunga.

Cawnpore to Allypore, 183 miles.

Cawnpore,†.....	0
*Araul,.....	40
*Bewur,.....	52
*Etah,.....	46
*Allypore,†.....	45

138

N. B.—There is a Post Office at Bowgong, 5 miles north of Bewur.
The road to Futyghur branches off at Goomsingunge, 24 miles north of Araul.

Meerut to Mussoree, 118 miles.

Meerut,.....	0
*Deobund,.....	51
Kerie,.....	29
*Rajpore Hotel at foot of the Hills.....	32
Mussoree Hotel,.....	6

Total,.....

118

Umballa to Simla, 77 miles.

Umballa,†.....	0
*Bar,.....	41
Subathoo,†.....	13
Syree,.....	10
Simla,†.....	13

Total.....

77

Hurk., March 27.]

* Convenient distances for night daks.

† Post Office Stations.

‡ Place where cross road turns off to Gya and Patna.

§ Place where cross road turns off to Hazareebaugh.

|| Place where cross road turns off to Chunar, Mirzapore and Saugor.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY, MARCH 4.

SECOND TERM OF 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir H. W. Seton.)

SEENARAIN CHOSE V. JUDDONKAIW DAY CHOWDRY.
EXECUTOR, &c.

Sir E. Ryan mentioned to Mr. Clarke, that the Court had discovered that the decision which they pronounced against him in this case, was wrong. The action was upon a joint and several bond, brought by the obligee against the executor of the deceased obligor, the other co-obligor still surviving, and upon the case coming on for trial, ex parte, the Court had nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that the action was not properly laid, that the liability survived to the surviving co-obligor, and that the executor of the deceased was not liable at all. The Court had been misled by a supposed coincidence between the present case and the Tagore case, but in the latter in fact the obligation was joint only.

Mr. Clarke said, that he had intended to move during this Term to set aside the nonsuit, although the Court had refused liberty at the trial, for the case of May v. Woodward in Freeman's K. B. reports was precisely in point in his favour. It was true the executor of the deceased could not have been as a co-defendant with the surviving co-obligor, because that would be treating it as a joint contract, in which case the liability unquestionably survived, but the contract being joint and several, the obligee had the option of suing either severally.

Sir E. Ryan said, that there was no doubt upon the point, and the Court were of opinion that they ought not merely to grant a rule, but to give a verdict at once for the plaintiff.

Nonsuit set aside, and verdict for the plaintiff entered instead.

COLLYPROBUNNO MOOKERJEE V. MALCOLM MACLEAN.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a new trial on the ground of excessive damages. This was an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, for injury to the lands and crops of the plaintiff, in which the Court last Sittings gave a verdict for the plaintiff, with Co.'s Rs. 5,900 damages.

Sir E. Ryan suggested that the motion should be postponed, until a full Bench were present.

THOMAS SANDYS V. AGA KURBOOLIE MAHOMED.

The Advocate General, moved for a rule to enter a nonsuit. This cause was tried last Sittings (reported in the Hurkara of February 16th,) when the plaintiff obtained a verdict, with liberty to the defendant to move to enter a nonsuit. The grounds of the motion were, that the action had been improperly brought in the name of Mr. Sandes alone, as some of the bills of costs which the plaintiff sought to recover, were made out in the name of Hogg and Sandes, the former being an ostensible, if not an actual, partner, and others had been made out in the name of Mr. Hogg alone. The case of Guidon v. Robson 2 Campb. 302, decided, that an ostensible partner, although it be shown distinctly in evidence, that no partnership actually exists, must be joined as co-plaintiff. There was another ground of moving for the rule, taken by the learned Advocate, viz. that the plaintiff had recovered for a conveyancing bill which had never taxed.

The Court said, it was not necessary for the learned Counsel to go minutely into his grounds at present, and that he was entitled to his rule.

Rule not granted.

WILLIAM ROBERT COWLEY v. WILKINSON
CHORDONHAM

Mr. Clarke moved to take the amended bill off the file for irregularity. The original bill had required such extensive amendments, that it became necessary to re-engross the bill altogether. Now one of the alterations set up a new case altogether, for in the original bill the purchase money was stated to be part of the sole and separate monies of the complainant, and in the amended bill it was stated to be the money of Maharejah Tejchunder, and by him set apart for religious purposes, yet this important alteration was introduced, without anything upon the record distinctly to point it out, for the original words stood uncanceled in the first bill, and they did not appear at all in the second. And this was not only objectionable on the score of inconvenience, it being impossible to ascertain the alterations without collating one bill with the other (which the Court will certainly never take the trouble to do) but it was altogether bad for irregularity, because one part of the record contradicted the other. He apprehended the unvariable practice was, in amending a bill, to allow all the alterations whether of omission or introduction, to appear visibly upon the face of the amended bill itself.

Sir L. Ryan said, that without doubt that practice was the preferable one in point of convenience, as they could then readily catch the alterations, but it was quite out of the question to urge this as a ground for taking the bill off the file for irregularity. The Clerk in Court had mentioned, that the practice was not uniform, but it might now be understood, that the more regular practice was to prevail in future.

Order discharged.

INDIVIDUALITY KISTANOWITZ DOWRY AND OTHERS versus BIRNBAUM HIRMAN AND OTHERS.

This was a plea in equity for want of parties, it was set down for argument by the complainants. It was sufficient to state, that the plea alleged that a party claiming to be an adopted son, and also a widow were (among others) necessary parties to the suit, and it set out in detail the circumstances of the alleged adoption. The bill of complaint, however, itself admitted that the claim was set up by the alleged adopted son (stating it as a pretence) and averred that he was out of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, but prayed process of subpoena against him as soon as he should be within the jurisdiction and reach of process. The defendants in their plea, excepted certain parts of the bill out of the plea, and to these excepted parts they put in their answer.

The Advocate General was heard in support of the plea. The learned counsel was proceeding to shew that the different parties in the plea named, were indispensable parties to the suit, but he was interrupted by Sir E. Ryan, who said, that there was a preliminary objection which must first be got over. The plea had quite unnecessarily set out the title of the alleged adopted son, raising by a multitude of allegations and averments, issues upon which substantially depended the whole subject matter of the suit. If this plea were allowed to be good in form, the Court would have to decide the whole cause upon the plea, which they certainly should not do.

The Advocate General apprehended there was no objection in principle to deciding the merits of the cause (if feasible) upon the plea. He confessed he could not perceive the alleged informality, but he did not pretend to be very intimately versed in the intricacies of pleading, especially in equity, and he should leave it to his learned junior.

Mr. Clarke, on the same side, then contended that the plea was good in form. Several distinct facts were alleged, no doubt, but they all tended to one point, simply whether the alleged adopted son was or was not a necessary party.

Sir H. W. Seton. The bill itself admits that he is a necessary party, for it sets out his claim.

Mr. Clarke. Only in the pretences, and that is no part of the complainant's case. It is only part of the supposed case of the defendant, and the allegation has no other object than to lay a foundation for the interrogatories which are to tilt the defendant's conscience. How are we to take advantage of the defect of parties? We could not have demurred, because it does not sufficiently appear on the bill, and no course was left but to plead.

Sir H. W. Seton. But your plea contains unnecessary and improper allegations. The bill distinctly admits that this party is a necessary party, and actually prays a subpoena against him as soon as he shall come, within the jurisdiction. The only question upon which you could take issue was, whether or not he was within the jurisdiction of the Court. But there are other objections to the plea, for certain parts of the bill are excepted out of the plea and answered, and the answer seems to overrule the plea, as the plea is clearly a bar to the whole bill, if a bar at all.

Mr. Clarke cited a case from Beames, in which the Benchers of Lincoln's Inn were the defendants, and he contended, that at all events, the plea must be allowed as far as related to the widow, for a plea might be good in part and bad in part.

Messrs. Prinsep and Leith contra were not called upon.

Sir E. Ryan. We are of opinion that this plea must be overruled, and in the usual way, with liberty to amend on payment of costs. The alleged title of the party claiming to be an adopted son, appears on the bill and the only fact upon which the plea could take issue is the question of jurisdiction. We think that we cannot separate the parts of this plea, allowing one and disallowing another, because each part goes to the whole bill.

Plea overruled — Hurk, March 5.

TUESDAY, MARCH 5TH.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

ROBERTSON L. KIRKMAN.

The trial of this case occupied the Court nearly the whole day. The action was brought to recover damages for slander and libel, in which the defendant cast certain imputations injurious to the plaintiff's character. The defendant pleaded the general issue and a plea of justification. Evidence was gone into at considerable length on both sides, but the details are quite unfit for publication. The plaintiff's case (i.e. the proof of publication of the libel, and uttering of the oral slander) had been fully made out, when the Court commented on the absence of a witness, who appeared from the preceding evidence to be the party best calculated to speak to the truth or falsity of the justification, whereupon the plaintiff's counsel, after protesting against the unfairness of calling upon the plaintiff to meet by anticipation the defendant's case, produced

* But query whether the plea would have been tenable even then, because the prayer of process, whenever the party shall come within the jurisdiction, seems to make him a party to the bill, and nothing more is required at any future stage but, the making of the subpoena, to bring him before the Court. Now the omission to issue a subpoena, is a defect which certainly cannot be taken advantage of by plea.

the witness in question and the whole of the defendant's evidence afterwards went solely to establishing a negative case, by contradicting the testimony of this individual, so that his case if established, would have necessarily rested on hearsay evidence.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Lesch, conducted the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Cochrane were for the defence. The Court, after long deliberation, pronounced judgment in the following words:—"We do not consider it necessary to comment upon the evidence which has been adduced upon one side or the other, but we give a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages one rupee."

A Mr. Healey, who was called as a witness for the defence, and who was in the "Preventive Service," although his leisure hours are said to be occasionally devoted to lectures upon elocution and to histrionic pursuits, favoured the Court with an amateur dramatic performance in the witness box, exhibiting at each sentence an abundant diversity of intonation and gesticulation. This gentleman took an objection in time to his own examination, and declined being sworn, until his expenses were tendered to him, but the Chief Justice informed him, that he must take the oath and give his evidence, and that if any actual loss by an abatement of his salary or the like, accrued, he would be entitled to demand the amount from the party who subpoenaed him, but that for the fanciful value of his time or his services as a witness, he had no claim to remuneration.

Verdict for the plaintiff, with damages one rupee.—Hurhuru, March 6.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6

(Before Sir H. W. Saton.)

No business was done in Court to-day, except the taking of a few common motions.

COMING TO HEARTS.

Mr. Prinsep mentioned this case, of which he had spoken yesterday. His motion was to enlarge the time for a commission to examine witnesses in England upon interrogatories in an equity suit. The learned Advocate-General was to have shewn cause against the enlargement, but he was not present in Court, and the learned counsel was doubtful whether he could safely postpone his motion, as the time expired to-day.

Mr. Clarke mentioned as amicus curiæ, that the Chief Justice had been of opinion in another case, that if the application to enlarge the commission were not made in time, the irregularity would not be aided even by the consent of the opposite side, and the commission would be defunct.

Mr. Prinsep then said, that he had considerable doubts, whether the time had in fact expired, because he found that the calculation had been made, reckoning a "month" as a lunar, and not as a calendar month.

Mr. Clarke once more stepped in as amicus curiæ mentioning, that the general term "month," where the Crown was the party applying, had been held to mean a "calendar month," solely because it was considered derogatory to the dignity of the Crown not to grant the utmost possible time which the words would allow; but he apprehended, that the exception proved the rule, and that in ordinary cases, "month" would signify a "lunar month."

* In legal phraseology generally, "month" signifies a "lunar" month, as in statutes, Lucas v. Hopper 6 L

Mr. Prinsep then observed, that he should move to enlarge the time until Monday next, for the present, and this would give the learned Advocate-General an opportunity of coming in and opposing the enlargement absolutely.—Hurk, March 7.

THURSDAY, MARCH 7.

(Before Sir F. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Saton).

COMPTON MONROE MOORE & JAMES MATTHEW MACLEAY

Mr. Prinsep moved for a new trial in this case, on the ground of excessive damages. This was an action for trespass and injury to land, and for an alleged destruction of the paddy crops, baobab trees and indigo plant upon 1,757 biggahs of char lands situate in and forming part of the village of Bhautchallah in Turrit Hill circle, in the pargana of Phoychahpore in the month of December 1835 and June 1837. The defendant pleaded the general issue, and also a demise of the lands in question, and at the trial in the 1st Sittings the Court found a verdict for the plaintiff on both issues, assessing the damages at Rs. 390. In pronouncing their verdict, the Court stated the circumstances upon which they grounded their calculation of the damages, and the learned counsel now went into a detailed examination of the grounds of the calculation, contending that the sum awarded to the plaintiff was excessive. The learned counsel also seemed to argue that there was evidence of a tenancy, but this, if established, would have been clearly a ground of non-suit. When this motion was made before, Sir J. P. Grant was absent, and the Chief Justice suggested that it should be postponed until he was present especially as that learned judge was in Court at the early part only of the trial itself.

The Court granted a rule nisi.

SHEWETTY COMMISSIONARY DOWNSIDE SHEWETTY SEENOO-SOONDERY DOWNSIDE

Mr. Clarke moved that the petition of appeal in this case be allowed. In the issue directed out of Chancery, the Court had found a verdict for the defendant, whereupon the plaintiff moved on the equity side for a new trial, and upon the order refusing it, now moved on an appeal.

The Advocate-General for the defendant said, that his learned friend was irregular, for no order nisi appeared to have been granted.

Mr. Clarke said, that he moved upon notice, upon other equity motions in general. He was certain that this had been done before.

Sir F. Ryan, you had better be regular:—the ordinary practice is to obtain a rule nisi first.

Mr. Clarke then said, that he should charge his motion accordingly.

The Advocate-General apprehended that the present motion must be discharged with costs—he was brought here to shew cause.

Sir F. Ryan said that an order nisi would be granted as a matter of course, and the costs should abide the event.

Order nisi.

R. 225, in contracts and agreements, locutus v. Hankins, 1 Strange 446, in rules of Court giving time to plead and the like Tullett v. Infield 3 Burr, 1486. But it is otherwise in bills of exchange and promissory notes.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF THE DECEASED.

The Advocate-General said, that he had moved at the end of last Term for a commission ad litem in quidam, and the result of the investigation had been that the party was declared to have been incapable of managing his affairs for the last twelve months. The present application was, that it might be referred to the Master to enquire and report, who was a proper party to be constituted the committee of the person, and the committee of the estate and property.

Sir E. Ryan inquired whether the learned counsel had put in a petition with his grounds.

The Advocate-General answered in the affirmative. Order granted.

BANKIM CHUNDER BONNERJEE AND OTHERS V. RANCHOND BONNERJEE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Osborns. were heard in support of exceptions taken to the Master's report, finding that the firm of Calvin, Ainslie, Cowie, and Co., and their banian, were fit and proper securities for entering into recognizances with Mr. Charles Reed, to the amount of Rs. Rs. 3,32,000, to enable the said Mr. Charles Reed to take out of Court the sum of Rs. 1,66,000, to abide the event of the appeal in the above cause to Her Majesty's Privy Council in England. The learned Counsel contended, that there were serious objections in principle to accepting the security of an agency house, however responsible the individual members might be. The money, if paid out of Court, would be entirely at the disposal of the firm, and they might speculate with it in any way they chose. Then it was well known, that the Bank of Bengal and the Union Bank, were in the habit of refusing to advance more than one lac upon the security of any single house of agency in Calcutta. The Bank of Bengal might have done otherwise in practice, but it was certainly contrary to the terms of their charter. This firm might be, and no doubt was, a perfectly solvent and most substantial firm at the present moment; but considering the fluctuations of trade and commerce, it was impossible to foretell how long the prosperity of a house might continue. But the objection was to the principle of allowing "the firm" to become the security:—it did not appear that the members were individually liable, and four out of the five partners might retire to-morrow, and the house might consist of a single person. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlat, from which there were more appeals home than from the Supreme Court, were in the practice of requiring a specific pledge of lands as a security, before they allowed the property to be taken out of Court by the respondent.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsap contra, contended, that it would introduce an extraordinary principle, and be attended with the most inconvenient and embarrassing consequences, if, commercial security were refused as insufficient. What other or better security could possibly be had? Were they to apply to the members of the Civil Service? to the Military? to native Gentlemen?—Why, the only men who would undertake it, or were likely to undertake it, except in some few special cases, were the members of the trading community, who, naturally enough, look it up as a sort of commercial speculation.

Sir E. Ryan said, that objection was to the firm itself becoming the security, and not to the persons, because they were engaged in trade.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsap said, that this objection was the more incomprehensible of the two,

The security of the house was surely better than the security of any single partner. They had the greatest respect for the decisions and the doctrines of the Sudder Court, but they were at a loss to perceive how the security of landed property in the Moham was in any way preferable to the security of a house of agency, whose substance and solvency were unimpaired. Land might be seized at any time for the non-payment of the revenue, and sold at a Government sale (as sometimes happened) for a single rupee; and it was apprehended, that even the Sudder Court could not hold against process at the suit of Government, for default in the payment of revenue. With respect to the money in question being placed at the disposal of a trading firm, there was objection to that in principle. The temporary addition of a lac and a half to the capital of the firm, was not likely to diminish their solvency. All that the Court required was a reasonable security, without regard to possible contingencies, for the restitution of the sum in question, if the Court above should decide in favour of the appellant.

Sir E. Ryan thus delivered the judgment of the Court after some deliberation.—"This, in form, is an exception to the Master's Report; but such in strictness is not the accurate mode of proceeding. The proceeding ought to have been by petition to review the Master's Report; and as such we shall now consider it. It is unnecessary to decide the main question raised, whether a mercantile firm may or may not be a good security in this Court in appeal cases; but as the question has been raised, we shall express our opinion. We think that there is no objection to it in principle. No doubt the Master intended, although it is not distinctly so expressed, to give the security of the individual partners as well as of the firm. But another ground of objection arises on the face of the report. It appears that Mr. Charles Reed is a person in embarrassed circumstances, and that the house would only become security on the express stipulation that the property was to be at their own uncontrolled disposal. Again the banian, who is the other security, is necessarily, from his situation, mixed up, in a great measure, with the firm, and with all its dealing and transactions, and we cannot regard him as independent of the firm. There is, therefore, in reality only one security to look to, which is this single trading firm, having the fund in question at its disposal. It must be observed, that however numerous the partners of a firm may be, we shall consider them all as constituting only one security. The Master may join another house of agency, or some other person as security. And we would suggest this as a general rule for his guidance and consideration,—that where the property exceeds one lac of rupees, he should require distinct and independent securities for each lakh.

Referred back to the Master.—Hurd., March 8.

FRIDAY, MARCH 8.

GOPENATH ROY V. SRIKUMTUTY SIKHOOSCHANDRY BAKSH, EXECUTRIX OF SHANLOLL TAGORE.

This was an action against the defendant, as widow and executrix, of Shamloil Tagore, upon a bill of exchange, at three months after date, for the sum of Rs. Rs. 2,500, of which Shamloil Tagore was the drawer, and Shamloil Tagore, deceased, was in his life time the acceptor. The defendant pleaded the plea of plene administratrix (or no asset in hand) only, admitting the debt demanded; and the plaintiff, submitting to the plea, replied, craving judgment of assets quoad, i. e. when assets should come to the hands of the defendant as executrix.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith, were for the plaintiff. Upon the case being called on, the plaintiff took his judgment as of course, the demand being thus admitted. Judgment of costs quoad acciderint.—HURKARU, March 11.

MONDAY, MARCH 11.

SONERS V. HASTIE.

The Advocate-General shewed cause against the order for enlarging the commission to examine witnesses in England in this suit.

Mr. Prinsep supported the order. One of the witnesses to be examined, Mr. John Hastie, was in a very precarious state of health when the last accounts arrived from England, and indeed had not been expected to recover at all. The attorneys for the defendant, Messrs. Wight and Boyle, were in daily expectation of hearing upon the subject from their inner in England, Mr. Wight, and he should only ask for a month at present, and if it became necessary, he should renew the application.

Sir E. Ryan said, that one month further time would be allowed, on payment of costs.

Order absolute to enlarge the time one month, on payment of costs.—HURK., March 12.

TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1839.

COBINAUTH PAUL VERSUS BOONAUTH PAUL.

Mr. Sandes opened the pleadings.

Mr. Leith stated, that this was an action to recover the amount of two hondas or bills of exchange for rupees 550 and rupees 600 respectively, of which one Dabey Persaud Dutt was the drawer and the defendant the acceptor per procuration. To counts on the bills, were added a count for money had and received. The defendant pleaded to the former that he did not accept, and to the latter, the general issue. It would be proved that one of the defendant's brothers had written the acceptance to one of the bills, and another brother to the other bill, and that the defendant had authorized them to accept by procuration, that they were members of a joint family, and partners in the same coolie.

Several witnesses were called by the plaintiff, and they deposed to the fact of the acceptance and of the authority given by the defendant. The acceptance to one of the bills was proved to have been written in the presence of the defendant himself. The proof, with respect to the other, was not so distinct, but it appeared that defendant and his brothers were in partnership, and that he had subsequently acknowledged his liability on both of the bills.

Mr. Prinsep appeared alone for the defence, and submitted that the plaintiff's Counsel had adopted a very circuitous and inconclusive mode of proving so simple a matter as an acceptance to a mercantile instrument. The learned Counsel accordingly addressed the Court in the first instance for a nonsuit, contending that the plaintiff had wholly failed to make out his case.

Sir E. Ryan said, that whether probable or improbable, there was clearly evidence to go to the jury.

Mr. Prinsep then said, that he would go into his case, and he was instructed that he should be able to disprove altogether the alleged joint trading partnership between the defendant and his brothers, and to shew that by whomsoever the acceptances in question were written, they were altogether unauthorized by the defendant.

The first and only witness, however, called by the learned Counsel, corroborated the statement of the plaintiff's witnesses, that the defendant and his brothers were joint in food, and partners in trade.

The Court were of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on both of the bills.

Verdict for the plaintiff, Co.'s Rs. 1,250, with interest.—HURKARU, March 13.

THURSDAY, MARCH 14.

THOMAS SANDES V. AGA KURBOOLIE MAMONED.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Cochran shewed cause against the rule nisi obtained in the early part of this term for setting aside the verdict for the plaintiff, and entering a nonsuit instead, or reducing the amount of damages. Some of the bills of costs which were the subject matter of the action, were in the name of T. Sandes alone, some in the name of Hogg and Sandes, and some in the name of C. Hogg alone; there were also items for conveyancing which were objected to, as not being taxed. The objection to the plaintiff's right to recover upon the bills made out in the name of Messrs. Hogg and Sandes, was that Hogg ought to have been joined as co-plaintiff, and the objection to the right to recover for the bills in Hogg's name, was that Hogg himself and not Sandes, ought to have brought the action. But the plaintiff had abandoned his claim upon all the bills which became due, during the actual continuance of the partnership, and the mere using the name of Hogg as a nominal member of the firm, after his interest had entirely ceased, did not make him a necessary party. The case of Guidon versus Robinson, 2 Campb. Rep., had been cited by the other side, in support of the position that an ostensible partner must be joined as a Co-plaintiff with the real partners. This was in point, no doubt, but in fact it has been since overruled. Chitty in the 1st vol. Pleadings, says, that this question was one of some difficulty, though now clearly established, and he cites this very case under a sed vide. The cases of Glossop v. Cohnan, 1 Starkie, Tord v. Elworthy, 14 East, and Kell v. Nainby 10 Barn. and Cress., are clearly the other way, and establish that it is competent for the plaintiff to give evidence that one who appears as partner is not really interested in the partnership. [The learned counsel were then proceeding to contend that conveyancing items were not taxable, when the Advocate-General intimated, that he had no intention of contesting that point.]

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, for the defendants, in support of the rule. The cases cited by the other side, are not applicable to this, because the sole question here is, with whom was the contract made. In this country, the warrant to sue, which is indispensably necessary to authorize the attorney or attorneys to act, constitutes the foundation of the express contract between the client and the attorney. In England it is otherwise,—because there, nothing more than a written retainer is ever given, and in most cases not even a retainer or written authority of any kind, so that the contract is only implied. The question, therefore, is, in whose names are the warrants of attorney? if they are in the name of Hogg, how can this possibly authorize Sandes to act or enable him to recover for his services? But another consideration arises; how did the dissolution of partnership take place? Was it advertised in the Gazettes, and confirmed by a deed of dissolution, and did the client, who had entrusted the conduct of his suit to the charge of the firm jointly, assent to its withdrawal over to the charge of a single partner? The question is not a mere technical one, nor is the objection founded upon a principle which does not affect the merits of the case; for the defendant may have a ground of set-off against the omitted partner or against the joint firm, which would not be available against the plaintiff alone.

The Court, at the close of the argument, intimated their intention to look into the authorities, and give judgment at a future day.

Cur. adv. vult.

DOE D. O'HANLON AND ANOTHER V. PALISZCQUE.

This is a "special case," the argument of which was appointed for this day, but it was postponed until Monday next, by leave of the Court, on the ground of the indisposition of the plaintiff's counsel.

Standi over—Affick, March 15.

Monday, March 19.

MUDDESMOHUN COPOORNAH V. MOHA RANEE DASSUNT COMARKEP.

The Advocate-General applied to enlarge the commission for taking the answer of the defendant. The affidavits stated, that the application was not made for the purposes of delay; indeed this was a cross suit in which the original defendant had filed a bill of discovery in aid of his answer, so that any delay would affect the party herself as being the complainant in the original suit. There was some difficulty experienced by the gentlemen to whom the commission was addressed, in obtaining admissions from the Rajbarree of Mirdwan, for the purpose of executing the commission, and this was the ground of the delay.

Mr. Clarke opposed the application, as quite unnecessary, the cross complainant being ready and willing, and having expressly offered, to take the defendant's answer without oath or signature. The commission was thus rendered altogether superfluous, and the Court, under such circumstances, could not possibly grant the enlargement prayed for. The answer was ready and might be filed forthwith without more ado.

The Court said, that as the defendant was willing to take the answer without either oath or signature, the commission became altogether unnecessary, and they certainly should not enlarge it.

Order discharged.

E. MACNAUGHTEN, RECEIVER, &c. V. PRISONCOOMAR TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke applied for further time to enable the defendant to put in his answer, to the bill filed by the receiver of the estate of Ladleymohun Tagore deceased. The defendant had been absent in Jessore, and had found it necessary to refer certain papers and documents, to instruct his solicitor in the preparation of his answer.

Mr. Princep opposed the application; a month had been already given, in addition to the usual two months allowed by the practice of the Court.

The Court granted three weeks' further time, on payment of costs.

Order accordingly.

CALLYPROBENED MOOKENJEE V. MALCOLM MACLEAN.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Laith, shewed cause at considerable length against the rule nisi obtained by the defendant, which was in the alternative either to reduce the damages, or to grant a new trial.

Mr. Princep and Mr. Clarke supported their rule at still greater length.

Sir E. Ryan. The Court is of opinion, that this rule must be discharged. The application, in effect, an application to grant a new trial, not on the ground of excessive damages, but on the ground that the verdict is against evidence. If we had believed the witnesses of the defendant, there would have been an end of the plaintiff's case altogether; but we did not believe them. Now the affidavits which have been put in since, tend but little to corroborate that testimony, because they consist of mere hearsay, and, if the deponents were in the situation of witnesses in the witness-box, such testimony would of course be inadmissible. As to the question of law, it is contended that the plea of the alleged demise of the locus in quo is established by the record in the former action, where the plaintiff recovered judgment for use and occupation of the land, from April 1834 to November 1835, with the exception of a period of six weeks. But this does not prove, but rather negatives, that there was any demise during the six weeks, and the trespass may have been then committed.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that he was not present in Court when the cause was tried, but he formed his opinion now upon the criterion, whether there was a probability of important additional light being thrown upon the case by granting a new trial, and, if so, whether it was owing to the default of the defendant that such additional evidence was not produced before. In his (Sir J. P. Grant's) opinion, nothing had been shown to satisfy the Court that a new trial would have the effect of throwing additional light on the matter, and he acquiesced in its refusal.

Rule discharged.

GREENUTTY SEEBONSONDARY DASSER V. GREENUTTY COMULMONEY DASSER.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Laith, shewed cause against the order nisi obtained by the complainant, that her petition of appeal be allowed. Upon the issue at law directed from the Equity side of the Court, a verdict had been found for the defendant, Comulmoney, and as there was a minute of their Lordships disallowing appeals against a verdict, the plaintiff, Seebonsondary, had applied, in the first instance, for a new trial on the Equity side of the Court, and upon the order of refusal, moved the appeal. The learned Counsel contended, that this was nothing more than an ingenious artifice to evade the general principle, and that it was in effect an appeal against the verdict itself. The issue out of hancery was directed for the purpose of satisfying the conscience of the Court, and for that purpose only, so that until the decree was made, or some ulterior proceedings had, there was nothing whatever to appeal against. Non constat that the Court would ultimately decide in consonance even with the verdict at law already found; and on the other hand, if a new trial were forced, and a different verdict compelled (as it were), this might make no difference as far as regarded the conscience of the Court, who was already satisfied, and non constat therefore that the ultimate decree would be in accordance with the second verdict. Until decree, therefore, the appellant had no locus standi. And what would be the grounds brought before the Privy Council at home, for the purpose of reversing on appeal, the decision which this Court had pronounced upon the issue at law? Nothing else than the second-hand depositions of the witnesses, who had been examined at the hearing of the issue, which would not be a whit better than the evidence taken in the Examiner's Office in the original equity suit itself!

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott supported their order nisi. This application was not a mere case, but strictly in accordance with the express provisions of the Charter. The 30th section allowed an appeal to the King in Council, "if any person shall find him, her or themselves aggrieved by any judgment, decree, order, or rule of the said Supreme Court of Judicature," under certain limitations and conditions therein specified. In the present case, it was an order of the Court, from which the party sought to appeal, and all the conditions and provisions required had been complied with. It was a mere whimsical fallacy to say, that the appellant was not aggrieved by the order refusing a new trial, and that the Court could not necessarily decree in consonance with the verdict at law, pronounced in the issue which had been expressly directed in supplemental aid of the proceeding in equity. The minutes of their Lordships, disallowing appeals against verdicts, did not touch this application, but was strictly consistent with it; for, this was not an appeal against a verdict, but from a distinct and substantive order of the Court upon the Equity side. The minutes of the Court runs thus: "We are of opinion, notwithstanding the case of Wooneshunder Paul Chowhry, v. Sremutty Wooljamney Dosses, in Clarke's Rules p. 172, that no petition of appeal against a verdict can be allowed. The appeal is directed to be by persons aggrieved by any judgment, decree, order, or rule of the Court;—words, which clearly do not comprehend the mere finding of a verdict, whether it be on the common law side of the Court, and afterwards to be carried into effect by a judgment, or (as in the case cited) upon an issue directed to inform the Court sitting in Equity, what decree or order it is to pronounce. It is not certain that the judgment, decree or order, will correspond with the finding, but if it does, the effect of an appeal against the verdict, is obtained by an appeal against the judgment or order founded upon it; for all the evidence and proceedings had in the cause appealed, are to be transmitted to the Privy Council, and they have therefore the fullest opportunity of deciding on the correctness of the verdict. This view of the question is strongly corroborated by the provisions as to security in which it is left to the discretion of the Court to direct the judgment, decree, rule or order, to be carried into execution, or that sufficient security should be given for the performance thereof, a provision which can have no application to cases, where no acts of the Court direct any thing to be done, which is the case with the mere finding of a verdict, until it is carried into act by the judgment, decree, or order of the Court. We are also of opinion, that no petition of appeal ought to contain any statement of the observations made by Judges, and that if these are stated at all, it is competent for the Court to reform the petition by directing the statement to be omitted. The only ground of appeal is, that the result is wrong, and this can only depend on the pleadings and evidence, and not at all on the arguments used by the Court, which ought not therefore to be stated as grounds of appeal. We think it desirable that Judges should exercise the power of reforming petitions of appeal themselves, and not refer them to the Master, for impertinence. And we think, in any case of appeal, they ought, at the request of either party, to furnish the parties with the statement in writing of their reasons for the decision they have formed, so as to give them in the most authentic shape, the means of arguing in support or impeachment of their decision without treating the reasons given for it, as material to themselves to the result of the appeal." It was apprehended, therefore, that there was nothing in this minute opposed to the principle of the present application, but that it was rather confirmatory of the arguments used for allowing the petition of appeal.

The Court said, that this was an important question, and that they wished to consider the matter more fully.
Cur. adv. vult.—Hutcheon, March 19.

THURSDAY MARCH 19.

AGA ABDOU HUSSEIN V. MOHAMMED HASSOON.

Mr. Norton opened the pleadings. The action was upon a promissory note, payable four months after date, for Co.'s Rs. 750, with interest at 12 per cent.; of which the defendant was the maker, one Shaik Sheriff the payee and indorser, and the plaintiff the indorser and holder. The defendant had pleaded a special plea, rather curiously worded, to the effect that the note had been delivered to the payee for a special purpose only (the settlement of a certain suit between him and one Rajjub Ally), which had never been accomplished, and that the plaintiff had notice of this circumstance, and took the note without valuable consideration. There were also money counts, to which the general issue was pleaded.

* Per Ryan, C. J., Gifford and Maikin, J. J. Filed 20th January, 1888.

Mr. Leith, for the plaintiff, submitted, that upon these pleadings, the issue was upon the defendant, and that the defendant, therefore, must begin. Bills of exchange and promissory notes prima facie import due consideration, and if the defendant attempts to impeach the consideration, and thus discharge his liability, the onus of proof rests upon him. This had been repeatedly decided in a recent case. Edward v. Jones, 7 Carr. and Payne 633. Mills v. Barber, 1 Mees. and Welsby 425. Mills v. Oddy, 2 Cr. Mees and Roscoe 103.

The Advocate-General apprehended, that at all events, the other courts must be abandoned by the plaintiff before he could call upon the defendant to begin.

Sir E. Ryan, decided upon the authority of Mills v. Oddy, that the issue was clearly upon the defendant, and that he ought to begin. The general issue being pleaded to the money counts, did not alter the cases, but of course upon those counts the plaintiff would be precluded from giving any evidence. His Lordship laughingly observed, that the right to begin was claimed, in the cases cited, as a privilege, but here the defendant seemed particularly anxious to concede his right to the plaintiff.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Prinssep for the defence) then addressed the Court. It was certainly extremely questionable in the present instance whether the right to begin, would prove a very valuable privilege, but he should, nevertheless, state, without reserve, the facts which constituted the defence upon which his client relied. At the time the note in question was given to Shaik Sheriff, there was a contemporaneous agreement between him and the defendant, that it was not to be enforced unless a certain litigation then pending between the defendant and one Rajjub Ally, should be favourably adjusted through the agency of the said Shaik Sheriff, the payee. This litigation was not adjusted, and the condition, therefore, remained uncompleted with, yet Shaik Sheriff, in breach of his agreement, chose to negotiate the instrument and indorsed it to the plaintiff; such an agreement certainly would not affect an innocent and bona fide holder, but he (the learned counsel) was instructed that the plaintiff had full knowledge of all the circumstances, and, moreover, gave no consideration for the note which he had now put in suit.

Shaik Sheriff himself was thereupon called, and examined at great length, but notwithstanding certain questions which might have been objected to as leading, and others whose rather obvious tendency was to impeach the testimony of the examinant himself, the examination in chief most completely proved the plaintiff's case, and made cross-examination quite unnecessary. Another witness was then called, but the learned counsel for the defence, finding themselves in the predicament of being unable to establish any case without contradicting their own witness in almost every particular, judiciously abandoned it.

The Advocate-General begged to mention, that the first witness had told a different story when examined in the insolvent Court upon the same matter.

Sir E. Ryan. He might have been made a witness for the plaintiff, (and you could then have contradicted him) if you had pleaded so as to put the plaintiff on proof of the indorsement.—There must be a verdict for the plaintiff on the Court upon the preliminary facts, with interest from the date at twelve per cent.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

HERNIM AND UX. V. DE SOUTA AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS OF A WILL.

In this case, a legal question of some difficulty had arisen upon a certain clause in the will of the testator, Mr. Mendon, whether a certain legacy was a lapsed legacy, by the death of the legatee in the lifetime of the testator, or was vested in the legatee in remainder. The executors were unwilling to pay over the money at their own risk (although the opinion of several Counsel taken by them, was in favour of the Court for their own security).

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the complainants.

The Advocate General and Mr. Burwell for the executors.

The Court decreed the executors to pay over; but they allowed them costs out of the estate, because they had a right to require the sanction of the Court's decree for their own protection.

Decree accordingly.

DOR V. FALIOLOUS.

The Court intimated, that in this case (standing for Thursday), which is a "Special Case" for argument, they should adopt the rule acted upon at home, and only hear one Counsel (the juniors) upon each side.

For the lessor of the plaintiff, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton are the Counsel; and for the defendant, there are three. The Advocate-General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith. It will be argued, therefore, by Messrs. Leith and Morton only.—Hark, March 20.

THURSDAY, MARCH 21.

MORON THE DEBITOR OF PATRICK O'HANLON AND JOHN WALLIN ALEXANDER V. NICHOLAS FALIOLOUS.

This ejectment was tried last sittings, when a nominal verdict was given, subject to the opinion of the Court, upon a "special case," the facts being admitted on both sides. The case was on this wise. An action having been commenced against one Rankinsen Collesah, a writ of sequestration, for non-appearance of the defendant, was sued out by the plaintiff, and the lands for which this ejectment was brought, were there, under seized and sequestered. After the sequestration, Rankinsen filed a petition of insolvency, and an order of adjudication was made, and the usual assignment executed on the same day. After the insolvency, the sequestrator obtained an experts judgment, and sued out a conditional expensas thereon; and at the Sheriff's sale the defendant in ejectment, who had full notice of all the circumstances, became the purchaser; and this ejectment was instituted by the assignees of the insolvent, to try the title. The order of adjudication was not complied with in certain particulars, and the defendant in ejectment, contended upon this ground, that the insolvency itself was fraudulent and void.

Messrs. Clarke and Morton were the counsel for the lessors of the plaintiff, and the Advocate-General, with Messrs. Prinsep and Leith, were the counsel for the defendant; but the Court intimated that they should only hear one counsel (the junior) on each side. The special case was accordingly argued this day by Mr. Morton, for the plaintiff. Besides the question of law, it has been attempted to establish the existence of fraud, from the mere non-compliance with the order of Court; and this must first be considered.

Sir E. Ryan. You had better go at once to the point of law.

Mr. Morton. The whole then depends upon the legal effect of the writ of sequestration, as given by the Charter. This writ of sequestration law, is unknown at home, and the only writ closely analogous to it, is the writ of distraint, as given by the uniformity of process Act. 1. The object of the writ is merely to enable the plaintiff to proceed in his action, and it is, therefore, nothing more, than a formal step in the routine of procedure. This object is intended to be attained either by coercing the defendant's appearance, or dispensing with it; and such being the sole object, it is sufficiently distinguished from the fiat facias, and all writs of execution, whose object is to give the plaintiff satisfaction for a proved debt, not to put him in the way of winning an alleged debt. An obvious distinction exists between mensu process writs against property, such as the writ in this case is, and final process writs. The latter contemplate no future event to give them efficacy, but operate per se, and therefore bind the property, while the former are conditional upon a subsequent event and do not transfer the property at all. An analogous distinction is taken by Lord Hardwicke in Hawkins v. Crook, 3 Ark. Rep. 593. But some cases go even further, and decide that no sequestration, whether to compel appearance or to enforce a decree, can absolutely change the property, whether it be upon mesne or final process. Bligh v. Darnley, 2 P. Wms. 621. The distinction between sequestrations and executions under fiat facias, is most aptly illustrated in Clark v. Withers, 2 Lord Raym. it is not clear, however, that even a fi. fa. will pass the property to the judgment creditor so as to prevent the insolvency from overriding it. For Lord Tenterden, C. J. in 9 Bingh. 281; and Guy v. Hitchcock, 5 New and Managing Rep. 11. Of the power and effect of the writ of sequestration under the Charter. The plaintiff has no power whatsoever to deal with the property, and the only effect of the sequestration, if it gives him any right at all, is to confer an inchoate and contingent right, liable to be subsequently divested. It is not a lien, for lien cannot be without actual or constructive possession. Heywood v. Waring, 2 Campbell. Again, it may be defeated by the mere appearance of the defendant, and putting in and perfecting special bail. Pyne v. Pyne, Clarke's Rules 151. The insolvency, therefore, ipso facto defeated the right, (such as it was) because, on general principles, it must defeat every right not absolute at the time. A non-suit would defeat it also, and a judgment which is a nullity (as in the case before the Court) as being obtained after the insolvency of the defendant, must have a parallel effect. But, finally, the Court cannot hold this sale good, without contravening the general principles of the bankruptcy and insolvency laws, that no act of the insolvent, whether of omission or commission, can prejudice the rights of his creditors. The insolvent might have pleaded his insolvency, pais darrein continuance, (Todd v. Masfield, 6 B. and C.) and not having done so, the laches may affect himself, but cannot possibly prejudice them.

Mr. Leith, for the defence. Considering this as strictly a bona fide insolvency, it cannot, even then be held to overrule the sequestration. It is a fallacy to say, that the object of the writ is merely to comply with a formality, for this Court always considers the sequestration as a security for the ultimate judgment. In the first place, then, there is a clear analogy between this writ and a common fi. fa. and, secondly, it will be shown, that the effect of a fi. fa. would be to bind the property, so as to give a title paramount to that of the assignees upon a subsequent fiat of bankruptcy or adjudication of insolvency. 1. The cases cited on the other side tend to lay down contradictory principles; for they seem to show first, that mensu process writs do not bind property, while final process writs do bind it; and then that neither have a binding effect. But if the argument for the absence of all analogy between a writ of sequestration and a writ of fieri facias, depends upon showing, that the former contemplates a future event, and therefore cannot operate per se; this is easily answered by showing, that the latter writs partake obviously of a similar character. The act which they contemplate, is the suing out of the venditionis expositum, which is the sole authority to sell. This is proved by the case (in the House of Lords) of Giles v. Greer, 9 Bingham, where it was held, that an extent at the suit of the crown takes priority of a precedent fieri facias at the suit of a subject; and the dicta of the Judges eight of whom delivered their opinions in affirmam, show that the execution of that writ is incomplete until the sale by the Sheriff. So are the King v. Giles, 8 Price, and King v. Cotton in Parker's Reports. Again, if the analogy is proved between this writ, and the writ of fieri facias, the case is at an end, for the authorities show that under the latter writ, the judgment creditor has a right paramount to that of the assignees under a subsequent commission of bankruptcy. Thomas v. De Sauges, 2 Barn. and Alderson. The question of the creditor's rights being thus affected by the laches of the bankrupt, does not arise; for the laches was anterior to the bankruptcy, as it consisted in omitting to enter an appearance, and thus allowing the sequestration to issue in the first instance. But the argument up to this point, has proceeded upon the supposition that the insolvency is bona fide;—the circumstances, however, show that it was fraudulent and void. The terms of the order of adjudication have never been complied with, and the insolvency, therefore, can only be inchoate and not complete. The assignments are mere voluntary assignments, and the assignees of the insolvent are not in any more favourable position than the alienees under an ordinary deed of assignment. The case of Gale v. Robert McClintock, Sheriff of Calcutta, in the year 1834, decided in this Court, is expressly in point. An action was there brought against the Sheriff for a false return of nulla bona, and a question arose between the sequestrators, under a subsequently issued writ of sequestration, and the trustees under a deed of assignment, and the Court held that the sequestration overrode the assignment; so the sequestrator recovered against the Sheriff. That case goes even beyond the present, and must decide it.

Upon the plaintiff's counsel rising to reply, the Court expressed a doubt, whether he was entitled; but after some discussion, the right was conceded.

Mr. Horton in reply. The case of Gale v. McClintock, is only intelligible on the supposition that the Court had grounds for considering the assignment to be fraudulent and void. Upon any other supposition, it labours under the serious defect of overproving the point; for it is impossible to hold that a subsequent sequestration can bar an honest assignment, without holding that it is absolutely impossible to make a valid and effectual assignment, which may not be defeated by subsequent events! Besides this, a voluntary assignment to trustees, before the Insolvency Court or the Insolvency Act were in existence, does not stand upon the same footing as an assignment directed by an express order of adjudication. No case has been cited to show that a sequestration binds property. The whole of the defendant's case rests upon a supposed analogy between the present writ and a fieri facias; but the analogy has only been shown in one particular, and the distinction is lost sight of, that the former is only for the purpose of proving an alleged debt, while the latter is to satisfy an established debt. With respect to the alleged fraud, which it is contended, vitiated the insolvency and order of adjudication there are two answers. 1stly. Even if the inference of fraud were warranted by the facts disclosed, this is not the proper mode of advantage of it, for the Supreme Court cannot except by way of appeal, take cognizance of the question of the alleged invalidity of an order of adjudication passed by the Insolvency Court, so long as it stands unimpeached there. 2ndly. But there is nothing whatever in the evidence before the Court to justify the presumption of fraud. There appears nothing more than a non-compliance with the order of adjudication, which, at the utmost, can only amount to laches, and no degree of laches can affect the validity of the order or of the assignments executed in compliance with it. The appropriate remedy is not an application to annul the order, but to enforce it. In point of fact there is no distinct proof even of laches; and the question ought not to be raised in this incidental manner, and between collateral parties.

The Court, at the close of the argument (which lasted about four hours) intimated that they should postpone judgment.—Hark, March 22.

FRIDAY MARCH 22.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

PLAID SIDE.

SHIBLOLL TAGORE V. INFAMOUSLY REFUSING TO OBEY, WIDOW AND REPRESENTATIVE OF SHIBLOLL TAGORE, DECEASED.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated, that this was an action brought to recover the sum of Company's rupees 36,406, (with interest) paid by the plaintiff for the use of the deceased Shamloll, being in satisfaction of a writ of execution issued on a judgment obtained in this Court by Connyloll and Gupauloll Tagore, against both Shamloll and Harloll jointly, but for which Shamloll was, in fact, by virtue of a certain agreement between themselves, solely liable. These parties, Shamloll and Harloll Tagore, were brothers, the sons and co-heirs of Ladley-mohun Tagore, deceased. After the death of their father Ladley-mohun, they had entered into mutual agreements, for the purpose of effecting a fair division of his estate and effects; and a fair apportionment of the liabilities and claims against the estate; and under these agreements the debt in question, upon which the judgment and execution by Connyloll and Gupauloll had been obtained was the proper debt of Shamloll, but it had been paid in fact by Harloll, who had advanced the money at his brother's special instance and request, and who now sought to recover the amount from the legal representatives of the said Shamloll. The defendant had pleaded only the plea of no assets; and the plaintiff, submitting to the plea, had replied, craving judgment of assets quando. The plea of plene administravit, standing alone upon the record, of course did not put the existence of the debt in issue, but, by implication, admitted it; yet as the declaration was upon the common money counts, where the damages never specially appear, being laid at a large arbitrary sum, (in the present case at one lakh of rupees,) it would be necessary to give proof of amount.*

Witnesses were then called to prove the sum paid by a draft on Messrs. Carr and Tagore, drawn by Harloll in favour of the judgment-creditors, and duly honoured.

Mr. Prinsep, who was instructed for the defence, cross-examined the witnesses, with respect to the account upon which the payment was made, and also the particulars of the agreements, and the arrangement entered into between the brothers!

* Query, nevertheless, whether any evidence at all was necessary, and whether, upon such pleadings, the plaintiff and particulars together, did not ascertain the amount for which the plaintiff was entitled to take his judgment in future.

The Advocate-General objected to this line of cross-examination, as being utterly inadmissible and irregular. The defendant's counsel was striving to impeach the claim, in the very face of his own admission upon the record!

Mr. Pringle contended, that his examination did not necessarily tend to anything more than a taxation of the debt; and he apprehended that it was open to him to reduce the verdict even to nominal damages, although he might not be allowed to bar the claim altogether. His learned friends, however, had themselves gone into unnecessary matters, and they could not object to the defendant following up the inquiry.

The Advocate-General said, he was quite at a loss to perceive how the plaintiff, by proving more than was necessary, entitled his opponent to prove what was inadmissible! He would submit it to the Court, whether it was competent for the defendant upon the sole plea of no assets in hand, to impeach the debt in the manner attempted.

Sir Henry Seton was clearly of opinion, that upon these pleadings the defendant could not be let in to any such defence.

A question afterwards arose, whether the plaintiff was entitled to interest, there being a count for interest.

Sir Henry Seton said, that according to the general rule at home, the plaintiff would not be entitled to interest. There should, therefore, be a verdict for the principal sum; but he (the learned Judge) would communicate with the learned Chief Justice and mention the point again to-morrow morning in Court.

Judgment of assets quando acciderint, for Rs. 36,406.
—Hark., March 23.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23.

Sir H. W. Seton sat alone this morning and took common motions.

In Harilall Tagore v. Seehoonsoondary Dabee, widow, &c. heard yesterday, his Lordship this morning intimated, that he had mentioned to the Chief Justice the point whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover interest, and that the Chief Justice concurred in the opinion that the plaintiff was not entitled.—Hark., March 25.

MONDAY MARCH 25TH.

WALSH AND OTHERS v. SLATER AND OTHERS.

Mr. Johnson moved in this cause, which is a cause, pending in the Holls Court in Ireland, for a commission directed to Henry Studholme Brownrigg and others, officers of H. M. 9th Regiment of Infantry, to swear Major Lewis Saunders Bird, to the truth of his affidavit of the services on Rensign James Cunningham, of the same Regiment, of an order to the Court of Chancery in Ireland, and also of a writ of subpoena to appear and answer in the said cause, and of a copy of the prayer of the bill of complaint.

Sir E. Ryan.—Under what authority do you move? I see that the order refers to a particular statute:—no, perhaps, you had better mention it again, and look into the act referred to.

DOCKRELL AND CO. v. SEAL AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate-General said, that he had to move in this cause, that the trial of the action (on the plea side) might be postponed on the ground of the absence of a material witness, and that, upon particular grounds this postponement might be without payment of costs.

Sir E. Ryan interrupted the learned Counsel, by observing, that the cause did not appear to be entered on the board at all!

The Advocate-General.—Then, it is not, my Lord, it ought to be.

Sir E. Ryan.—That depends upon whether specific instructions were given to that effect, to the Clerk of the Court. But it seems to me that you have all you want; by the very circumstance that the cause does not happen to be entered upon the common law board, as your application is to put it off at all events.

The Advocate-General said, that under the circumstances of the case, his purpose was not thereby equally answered. The cause had been down on the board last term, but had stood over to abide the result of a motion for an injunction, the defendants at law having filed a bill to restrain the proceedings: the motion came on for hearing at the end of the term, but the defendants at law declined moving to make their order for an injunction absolute. The learned Counsel submitted, that, according to the practice in England, remains ought to be set down without fresh instructions.

Sir E. Ryan.—But this is not a remains, and the officer could not regularly re-enter it as a matter of course.

Took nothing.—Hark., March 26.

TUESDAY, MARCH 26, 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Seton.)

WALSH AND OTHERS v. SLATER AND OTHERS.

Mr. Johnson again mentioned this cause, in which he had moved yesterday. The statute referred to in the order of the M. R. was 2 and 3. Will. IV. c. 33, enlarged and extended by 3 and 4. Will. IV. c. 82.

Mr. Clarke, as amicus curie, mentioned a case which was somewhat similar, in which he had moved before Sir Henry Seton.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the difficulty which occurred to the Court was with respect to the apparent and obvious anomaly of granting a commission to swear an affidavit in a matter not pending before the Court in any shape. How could they take judicial cognizance that the affidavit would not be a voluntary affidavit? The matter, however, might be mentioned again, if necessary.

SHEEMUTTY TARRAMONEY DORRIS v. SHEEMUTTY DON- NOPOORNAM DORRIS AND HUMBROCHUNDER HOLDEN.

This was an action on the common law side, the trial of which occupied the Court the whole day.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings, the plaint was in trover, and the defendants had pleaded, first the general issue, and secondly that the property was not the property of the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke, for the plaintiff, stated, that this action was brought to recover jewels and certain other property to a very large amount. The plaintiff was married several years ago, at a very early age to one Bharut-chunder Dutty, and upon that occasion her father presented her with several valuable jewels and ornaments as a marriage portion, and her husband and father-in-law also made her presents. Upon the death of her husband, she continued to reside with her mother-in-law, one of the defendants, until a quarrel took place between them about these very jewels, and she returned to her father's house. An action of trover was brought some time since in the Supreme Court, to recover the property in question, but the plaintiff being then under age, the action was laid in the name of her next friend as guardian:—in this, however, the plaintiff was nonsuited not because there was any defect in the proof of ownership, but merely because no other demand was proved than a demand made by the brother, (not the father, who was alone the real guardian) and the Court thought that such a demand and refusal were not sufficient to support trover. The defendants claimed here as executor and executrix of the plaintiff's father-in-law.

The first witness, Kishomohan Byack, the plaintiff's father, was then called for the plaintiff and examined at great length by Mr. Morton, this lengthy examination being required in order to prove each of the numerous articles in the plaint described and their respective value. In cross-examination, Mr. Leith extracted the fact, that this witness paid the costs of the present suit, and upon this ground he submitted that his evidence was inadmissible.

Sir E. Ryan. It is a thousand pities you did not take the objection before:—it would have saved us two hours of unnecessary labour.

Mr. Leith declared that he had not been before aware of the fact which had transpired, and that his question was quite a random shot.

Other witnesses were then called. It was proved that the plaintiff quarrelled with her mother-in-law (one of the defendants) about the jewels, and left the house because they were not delivered up, the defendant saying in excuse, that "she did not know where they had been placed." A notice (joint in its terms) to deliver them up was also proved to have been served upon the other defendant, Hurrochunder Holdar, and at the trial this was produced by the joint attorney for the two defendants. General evidence of their value was given (about Rs. 8,000) and most of the ornaments were specifically enumerated from recollection, by one of the witnesses, but he did not know the value of each. It was proved too that Ononopoorah had admitted them to belong to the plaintiff, her daughter-in-law. It was not shown in any way that they had ever been in the possession of the other defendant Hurrochunder.

Mr. Leith, for the defence, submitted in the first place, that the plaintiff must be nonsuited. With respect to Ononopoorah, there was no proof of conversion, and with respect to Hurrochunder, there were no proof of possession. Now both were necessary in an action of trover.

Mr. Clarke, contra, submitted, with respect to the former defendant, that the quarrel concerning the property sufficiently proved the demand, and besides that, she must be taken to be affected by the notice served upon her co-defendant, and now produced in the witness box by the joint attorney for the defendants. With respect to the other defendant, the possession of one executor was the possession of another, and Hurrochunder must be presumed, therefore, to have had possession of the property.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court had doubts whether the quarrel was not sufficient proof of demand and refusal, although his own opinion was that the plaintiff ought to be nonsuited. Upon the other points, they were unanimous against the plaintiff. There would be no nonsuit, therefore, but the defendant Ononopoorah would have liberty to move, and with respect to the defendant Hurrochunder Höklar, there must be a verdict for him, as this was an action of tort, and the act of one executor did not bind the other. This party therefore might now be made a witness for the defence.

Mr. Leith then commented upon the evidence, contending that there was no definite evidence of value but called no witnesses.

Sir E. Ryan said, that there must be a verdict for the plaintiff against the defendant, Ononopoorah Dowry, subject to the conditions before-mentioned. The only question in the meantime was the question of amount, and the Court would assess this generally at Rs. 8,000; for there could be no hardship in doing so, the usual option being given to restore the specific property, and so reduce the verdict to nominal damages.

Verdict for the Plaintiff, Co.'s Rs. 8,000, with liberty to move &c.

MUDDENMOHUN MULLICK AND ANOTHER, v. GURJEE AND OTHERS.

This cause, standing on the common law board, was struck out by consent.

Struck out.

MANUEL V. OWEN.

Mr. Clarke said, that he had just moved in this suit, to confirm the Master's Report, and he was now instructed to move to take the money out of Court. He only mentioned it, because the parties were anxious; but it appeared to himself clearly irregular and premature, because the order confirming the Report must first be obtained and indeed served, and it would regularly form part of the grounds.

The Court acquiesced.

Took nothing.

DOE V. FALLOLOGUS.

Sir E. Ryan wished to know whether any gentleman at the bar had a copy of Dowling and Ryland's Nisi Prius Reports, because these reports appeared to contain a decision closely analogous to the point argued in the above special case, and the Court were unable to meet with the book.

His Lordship also inquired whether the Court could be furnished with notes of the grounds of the judgment in Gale v. Robert McClintock.—Hurkaru, March 27.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27.

(Before Sir H. W. Selim.)

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF HURLOLL MITTER V. HILDER.

Mr. Leith moved, under the 1st Ejectment Rule, to enter an appearance for and confess the plaint in the name of the casual ejector. The rule requires an affidavit of the due service of a copy of the plaint and notice, and that the lands lie in Calcutta, or in the actual occupation of one who is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, setting forth the cause of jurisdiction. Now in the present case, part of the premises were not in Calcutta, and the actual occupant, who was a mere monthly tenant, was not personally subject to the jurisdiction, but the landlord, who was of course the actual owner of the lands, was within the jurisdiction; and as the ejectment was to try title, it was apprehended that an affidavit, that the landlord or tenant of the freehold (the real defendant) was subject to the jurisdiction, sufficiently complied with the rule, and that the Court might hold plea of the lands. There was also a clause in the mortgage deed (which was the title of the lessor of the plaintiff) making the mortgagors especially subject to the jurisdiction in respect of the property mortgaged, and there was a joint family dwelling-house belonging to the mortgagors, in Calcutta, in which one member of the joint family resided. It was submitted, that upon one or other of these grounds, the premises out of Calcutta were within the jurisdiction.

Mr. Cochrane mentioned, that this was a case in which he had just moved to let in the defendant in possession to take defence for a two-anna share.

Mr. Leith said, that his present application only extended to the remaining fourteen-anna share.

Mr. Cochrane begged to apprise his learned friend, that he should have a motion ready for him in the matter to-morrow.

Mr. Leith said that he should be only too happy, and he hoped his learned friend would send the fee!

Sir H. W. Seton intimated, that he wished to consider the matter, before he gave his opinion upon the point raised by the motion made by the learned Counsel.

Mr. Leith requested permission to wait upon his Lordship in Chambers, as this was the last day for setting down causes in the common law board for trial at the ensuing Sittings.

[Mr. Leith afterwards attended at the Chambers of the learned Judge, when his Lordship pronounced his opinion, that with respect to the land out of Calcutta, the jurisdiction was not sufficiently shewn. The cause was therefore set down for trial only with respect to the premises in Calcutta, the rest being struck out of the ejectment plaint.]

Refused.

Note. It seems from this, that an express clause of subjection to the jurisdiction of the Court, cannot, under any circumstances, make lands, (not otherwise within it) subject to the jurisdiction. It seems too, that the holder of lands out of Calcutta, although personally subject to the jurisdiction, may always defeat an action to try the title, by simply letting them to a monthly tenant or perhaps a tenant at will.—Qu?—Hurkaru, March 28.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

THOMAS SANDES V. AGA KURBOLIE MAHOMMED.

Sir E. Ryan pronounced judgment in this case. This was an action brought to recover the amount due for certain bills of costs; the warrants of Attorney were, some in the name of Sandes alone, others in the name of Hogg and Sandes, and others in the name of Hogg alone. A verdict was found for the plaintiff, with liberty to move to enter a nonsuit; and a rule nisi was granted. There was no plea except the general issue; but there is no doubt that nonjoinder may be taken advantage of under the general issue, upon the plain principle that a contract with A., is not a contract with A. and B. jointly, and the evidence, therefore, is obviously admissible under non assumpsit or the simple denial of the contract in fact. Now the general rule no doubt is, that all the members of a firm must be joined as co-plaintiffs; but the plaintiff here only sought to recover items which had accrued due after the dissolution in fact of the partnership, and the question is whether a mere ostensible partner must be joined in the action. We are of opinion that he need not be joined, and that evidence is admissible, that, although a party is nominally a partner, he is not in fact actually interested. This rule is established by Tad v. Birchley, 14 East, 210, and Parsons v. Croxley, 6 Espinasse. There is also a case in 1 Carrington and Payne's Reports, Davenport v. Rackstraw, which was not cited at the bar and also Evans v. Silverlock, Peake's N. P. C. 31. A case cited in Collyer on Partnership, p. 393, goes even further, and it is not necessary to go this length in upholding the verdict for the plaintiff. This is the case of Atkinson v. Laing (1 D. and R. Nisi Prius Rep. 16) where Lord Tenterden decided, that a partner carrying on business on his own account, but in the name of himself and his former partner, might recover alone even upon a contract made during the existence of the partnership. This doctrine, therefore, would even authorize the recovery in the case before the Court, for the (abandoned) items which accrued due previous to the retirement of Hogg from the firm. With respect to the argument urged that the defendant may be thus precluded from availing himself of a debt due from the firm, as a set-off, it is observable, that Lord Tenterden laid down in the case just cited, that if such a set-off or counter-demand existed, it would have been necessary to include the other partner as a plaintiff in the action. Another argument urged here, was that the suppression of the fact that there had been an alteration in the firm, while the former name continued to be used, amounted to a breach of professional confidence, as between attorney and client; but the cases of Orphan v. Wade, 2 Starkie, and Kell v. Nainby, 10 Barnwell and Crosswell, shew that there is no difference in this respect between the case of attorney and client, and the case of any other party, dealing with an ostensible partnership. The Court is of opinion, that the case is not affected by the question in whose name the warrants were given; because the real question is with whom was the contract made; and Arden v. Tucker, 4 B. and Adol. is strongly in point. It is only necessary to observe upon the case of Guidon v. Rabson, 2 Campbell's Reports 302, which was strongly relied upon for the defendant as an authority for the position that an ostensible partner must be joined, that the action upon a bill of exchange, and the name of the ostensible firm appearing on the face of the bill, there was a variance between the instrument declared upon and the instrument proved at the trial.

In conclusion, we are happy that the strict law fully corresponds with the justice of the case; for nothing has transpired and we have heard nothing urged, which could afford a justification for the ground or defence attempted to be established.

Rule for a nonsuit discharged.

SHELMUTTY COMULMONEY DASSER V. SHEMETTY SEEDOO-BOONDERY DASSER.

Sir E. Ryan. This was an application to make absolute an order nisi that the petition of appeal be allowed, and the appeal was against an order on the Equity side of the Court, refusing a motion for a new trial of an issue at law in which a verdict was found for the defendant. This Court have decided and recorded a minute to the same effect, (see a late number of the Hurkaru containing it) that no appeal against a verdict shall be allowed; and we still adhere to that determination, but we are not disposed to extend the decision to the present case, nor are we inclined to acquiesce fully in all the reasons which the Court there assigned as the grounds of their opinion; for some of those reasons, if recognized, would govern the case now before us. That decision itself, however, we still uphold; and it is observable, that it does not overrule any express decision of the Court for the opinion expressed in Woomaschander Paul Chowdry v. Sheemutty Woomulmoney Dasser, was merely an obiter dictum, the order being, in fact, upon other grounds, discharged. The power of appeal, is given as a privilege, and is to be construed liberally. It is curious to trace the right of appeal, from the statutes to the Charter of Justice. I has sometimes been thought that it is to the former, that we are rather to look, in determining the powers and jurisdiction of this Court; but my own opinion has always been, that the Charter more properly affords the criterion. Now the 18th section of the statute contains words ("judgment or determination of the said Court") of a much more exclusive and limited character than the expressions in clause XXXII, of the Charter ("judgment or decree, or decretal or other order or rule of the Court"); and the words used in our Charter, are similar to those used in the Charters of Madras and Bombay. In the case of Santacana v. Arderol, 1 Knapp 262, the appeal (from Gibraltar) was against a verdict, and although the Court disallowed it upon general principles, an objection was taken to the right to appeal, though the Reporter suggests, as a note, that the application ought to have been made for a new trial; and that the appeal ought to have been from the order of refusal (which is precisely the contrivance resorted to in the present case). The words of the Gibraltar Charter (See 2 Knapp 67) are much more limited than in our's; and this is a strong illustration, therefore, of the liberality with which the Courts construe the right of appeal. This Court has actually allowed the appeal in cases very similar to the present. In Rajah Ramlochan v. Bulram Chose, Notes M.S. of Hyde J., and Smoul's Rules p. 63, a petition of appeal was allowed against an order discharging a rule nisi for confirming an award; and the case of Surroopchunder Adu v. Ragonauth, also in Smoul's Rules, is precisely in point, being an appeal granted from an order refusing to set aside a nonsuit in issue at law directed from the Equity side of the Court. We are of opinion, therefore, that this petition of appeal must be allowed.

But a question arises of some importance, for the discretion of the Counsel for the appellant, upon which I shall offer a few suggestions, and it may be advisable to consider whether the appeal, although the right is admitted, is likely to be practically beneficial. In the case of Santacana v. Arderol, 1 Knapp 269, it was held generally that no appeal will lie from the judgment of the Court below on the sole ground that the testimony of witnesses had been improperly discredited; and although this decision has since been qualified, the same principle is favoured. The cases of Canepa

v. Larion, 2 Knapp, 276, and Ursak Sing v. Bony Fortaud, hold that there must be some clear and distinct point upon the merits, that the case must be so unsatisfactory as to require further explanation, or so improbable as to be palpably and manifestly unworthy of credit, before the Court will, upon a question of evidence, recommend a reversal of the decision; and that in all other cases, the Court will adopt the far safer course of adhering to the determination of the Court below. These suggestions are now thrown out merely upon the question of the expediency of the appellant availing herself in this stage, and under such circumstances, of her admitted right, and this is of course solely for the consideration of Counsel.

The Advocate-General said, that he had been brought in to oppose the application in the first instance irregularly upon notice. He hoped the Court would give the costs of this.

Mr. Clarke begged to mention, that the practice had always been to move upon notice, and not to move for an order nisi in the first instance. He did not mean to say that this was not wrong, but he had certainly acted according to precedent and had been misled.

Sir E. Ryan said, that under the circumstances, each party should pay their own costs of that application.

Order absolute that the petition of appeal be allowed.

WALSH AND OTHERS. v. SLATER AND OTHERS.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court remained of opinion, that they could not grant the commission applied for in this case. They would be very happy to aid, if possible, in carrying into effect the Order of the Master of the Rolls but they would not do what they had no power and authority to do.

Motion for a commission refused.—Hark., March 29.

INSOLVENT COURT.

MARCH 16, 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF SERGEANT J. THOMPSON.

The applicant having sworn to the correctness of his schedule, and there being no opposition, he was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF GEORGE DAVID BROWN.

This applicant having failed to serve notices on 18 of his creditors, put in an affidavit, setting forth, that he and Mr. Perry, the messenger of the Court, had for two days exerted themselves to find out the abode of these creditors, but failing in their efforts, the notices could not be served. The applicant was further opposed by Mr. R. F. Smith, one of his creditors. The Judge informed Mr. Strettell, the applicant's Attorney, that the affidavit sworn to by Mr. Brown and Mr. Perry, were too general, and he required the applicant to state specially why so many notices were not served. The further hearing of this case was postponed until the 20th April next.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

This case was postponed for a fortnight, to enable the Examiner to file his report.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARMER.

Mr. Strettell, the Insolvent's Attorney, applied to postpone the case until the next Court day, as the advertisements directed by the Court on the former sittings of the Court, had not yet been inserted. Application granted.

IN THE MATTER OF M. SCHLATTER.

Mr. Sandes applied to postpone this case, to enable his client to file a supplementary schedule, in consequence of his having received account sales from Europe by the last Overland Mail. Application granted.

IN THE MATTER OF SHAIKH ABDULLAH.

In this case, an application for an attachment was made by Mr. Sander, and granted.

IN THE MATTER OF JAS. CULLEN.

Mr. Boyle made an application on behalf of Thomas Holroyd, Esq., to be discharged from the Assigneeship to the estate of James Cullen, Esq. The application, owing to some irregularity, was refused, and the Judge informed Mr. Boyle, that if he were to renew the application in an amended form during the next Court day, the application would be granted.

IN THE MATTER OF JAS. MACLEAN.

An application was made on behalf of the Estate of the late Lieutenant J. Maclean, to have the deceased's portion of the dividend, accruing to the estate from the estate of J. Palmer, paid over to the deceased's Executor, Mr. D. Maclean. Application granted.

DIVIDEND.

A dividend of Co.'s Re-4 per 100 sicca rupees, was declared by the Assignee of the Court to be payable in the estate of John Palmer, deceased. This being the sixth dividend declared in this estate.

A first and final dividend was declared of Co.'s Re-2 per 100 Rs. 100, in the estate of Shaik Jerroup.

IN THE MATTER OF C. A. CAVORKE.

Mr. Strettell, the insolvent's Attorney, informed the Court, that in this case the insolvent had paid the sum of Co.'s Re-5,000 into the hands of his Assignee, and had requested him to pay his Attorney the expenses of a suit which the insolvent had maintained in the Supreme Court. This request Mr. Alexander, the Assignee, it appears, had refused, and demurred paying without an order of the Court. On the last Court day, an application had been made by Mr. Strettell for such an order, but the Court had declined to interfere in the matter. Subsequently, however, the Assignee had consented to pay the costs of this suit, with the exception of certain charges amounting to 200 rupees, which he objected to pay without a further explanation regarding them, which Mr. Strettell could not afford without referring to certain papers, and consequently required time. Application granted.

IN THE MATTER OF C. TROWER.

A motion was made by the Advocate-General on behalf of Charles Trower, Esq., now a prisoner in the Jail of Calcutta, applying for the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Mr. Pearson stated, that Mr. Trower had been arrested on the 15th of February, at the suit of Choones Lall Jahoree, and after he had been 15 days in Jail, he applied for the benefit of the Act. An adjudication was granted, but in the interim, detainers had been lodged against the applicant, by Govind Banoojee, Raja Buddenanth Roy, and Fyzoo Khansamah, and the hearing of the applicant's case has been fixed for the 20th April next.

Mr. Pearson has informed the Court, that Mr. Trower, after his arrest, with much difficulty obtained leave for two months from the 18th February, and a probability is, that if Mr. Trower, at the expiration of his leave, does not resume his official duties, he will eventually lose his appointment of Civil Auditor, and as the hearing of his case does not come on until after the expiration of his leave, should he not be able to resume his duties, and thus lose his appointment, the salary of which is 2,388 rupees a month, his creditors would thereby suffer the loss of the deductions which the Court would, on the declaration of his insolvency, order from his salary. Mr. Pearson, in addition to the above facts, stated, that Mr. Trower, during the period of his incarceration, is subject to a deduction of 1,500 Rs. per month from his pay. This likewise is a heavy drawback on the credit side of his estate, which, if he were enabled, by a discharge from custody through an order of this Court, to resume his duties, would cease and the estate be benefited thereby. This discharge Mr. Pearson was perfectly aware his creditors would instantly grant; but in so doing they would legally be debarring from any dividend made by the insolvent's estate, as the discharge would be a virtual absolverment of his debt to them. This consideration alone had prevented their releasing Mr. Trower from custody, and he, Mr. Pearson, with the consent of Mr. Longueville Clarke, the Counsel for the creditors, moved the Court to order the release of Mr. Trower, pending his adjudication, and previous to the declaration of his insolvency. Mr. Pearson admitted that this application was unprecedented, and he could not adduce any analogous cases, but this case was in some measure based on the principles of the 6th and the 23d Sections of the Act of Parliament, thus assimilating to cases wherein insolvents, on delivering assets to the amount of half of their debts, were entitled to their discharge from custody and pending their adjudication and eventual discharge. Mr. Pearson admitted, that in this case Mr. Trower could not put his assignee in possession of effects to the amount of half his debts, but as the case was granted on principles of equity and for the benefit of the estate, and with the consent of the creditors, he prayed the Court to grant the application.

Mr. Longueville Clarke, on the part of the detaining creditors, supported this application, and quoted 11th cases of Shaik Mohebullah and W. F. Hair, but the Court did not consider them to be analogous to this; nor did it consider the case of Jones, quoted by Mr. Leith, to assimilate to the present case.

The Judge, in passing his order on the application, admitted it to have been based on principles of equity and beneficial to the estate; but he regretted, that under the existing regulations, he could not comply with the prayer of this application. In ordering its refusal, he added, that as the case was one of such importance, he would consult the Chief Justice on it, and should his opinion differ from his (Sir W. H. Stetson's) he would inform Mr. Pearson of it, and grant the application. — Hurkaru March 18.

MARCH 30, 1839.

In the matter of James Jacobs—This Insolvent's case was referred for the Examiner's report, and it being completed to-day, the office copy thereof was delivered at half-past 11 this morning; Mr. Clarke, therefore, had not time to be prepared on behalf of his Client, one of the opposing Creditors, and the matter stands over to the next Court day.

The insolvent will have to amend his Schedule, in consequence of exceptions being about to be taken to the Examiner's report, as intimated by his Attorney, Mr. Strettell.

In the matter of Mackintosh and Co.—Order applied for and obtained by the assignee, to file accounts.

In the matter of Poole.—The like bid to declare a dividend.

In the matter of G. Rehelo.—The same as the last above.

In the matter of J. Palmer and others.—The Senior Counsel for the East India Company, obtained an order to realize some dividend payable from this estate.

In the matter of Mr. J. W. Sage.—This Insolvent is in Jail for not paying the monthly sum ordered to be paid, and on this day obtained an order for his discharge on the next Court day, the 20th of April, subject to such opposition as might be made; and this order is to be advertised in the public papers, the assignee consenting to it.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

THE HUGHLY COLLEGE.—The students of the Hughly College, were examined on the 23rd ultimo, by a deputation of gentlemen from Calcutta, who declared themselves highly gratified at the progress the boys had made.

PRIZES FOR STUDENTS.—Arrangements are in course of preparation, by Sir E. Ryan, the President of the Education Committee, to institute a prize of competition among the Senior Students of the principal seminaries of Calcutta. The merits will be tested by their respective qualification in producing an essay on a given subject, which will be read at the Town Hall before a competent set of individuals. The prize will be awarded to the successful candidate, by the Honorable W. W. Bird, Esq.

MEDICAL COLLEGE STUDENT.—Messrs. Cockerell and Co. are about to employ a native practitioner, selected from amongst the students of Medical College, for the Medical treatment of natives in their service. This will save many a poor fellow from falling a victim to the quackery of cobraujes and hakims, nine-tenths of whom are perfectly ignorant quacks.

THE FREE SCHOOL CHURCH BELL.—The bell of the Free School Church, while it was being tolled for morning service, cracked to such a degree, as to become now quite useless.

FIRES.—Several fires have occurred during the month, but the mischief done by the flames, comparatively speaking, has been trifling.

Several fires have taken place this week also; but the flames have been quickly extinguished, and the damage done to property, has consequently been trifling.

MURDERS.—Three murders have been committed during the month in Calcutta, in all which cases the murderers have escaped detection.

A BAD ACCIDENT.—A sad accident occurred on the morning of the 25th of February with the Calcutta hounds. After killing one jackal, the hounds were drawing for a second, when Mr. H. P. James, who was riding his favorite little horse Tiptop, put him at a very deep and broad ditch. The little horse got one foreleg on the opposite bank, but struck the bank with the point of the shoulder of the other leg, and has broken the shoulder bone, and driven the shoulder joint out of its place. Every thing has been done for him which Mr. Hughes could suggest, but the gallant little nag, it is much feared, must be destroyed.

ATTEMPT TO COMMIT FURICIDE.—An old man named Thomas Andrews, residing in Harpoota Lane, had a narrow escape of being murdered by his own son. It appears, that the son having contracted irregular habits, and not following, or endeavouring to get any employment, the father desired him to quit his house, more than once, but without effect. On the 8th instant, the son came home reeking, when the father insisted on his leaving the house immediately, saying, that if he did not, he would be turned out. On this the son went out, but soon returned and made a stab at his parent with a table knife, that he had brought with him; but, luckily, from his hand being unsteady, the blow did not hit the place aimed at, the right side, but was caught in the left arm. The son then accidentally fell, and the inmates of the house coming to the old man's assistance, the knife was wrenched from his hand, and he was put into the custody of the Police.

EXPOSING INFANTS IN THE JUNGLES.—A female, for having exposed her new born infant in the jungles, was sentenced by the Nizamut Adawlut to three years' imprisonment in the zillah jail of Behar, where the crime occurred, with labour suitable to her sex. The child was found by a Brahman who lived near the scene of exposure, and he, being childless, has adopted it. The mother, in mitigation of her crime, pleaded destitution, and the shame of publicity, the child being the fruit of an illicit connection.

MANSLAUGHTER.—A Mullate named Nicholas Clossum, native of Jamaica, was lately sent to the Police Office from the district of Burdwan, charged with the murder of Cokhur banian, a natives of Soomurdeighur. It appears that the deceased was most severely beaten by the orders of the prisoner, who is a superintendent of an indigo factory in Zilla Burdwan. The Chief Magistrate, after he had taken the evidence of 4 witnesses in the case, committed the prisoner on a charge of manslaughter, and sent him back to the Magistrate of Burdwan.

DACOITS.—About the ninth instant, the family dwelling house of one Bissanauth Holdar, at Luckheerai-poor, within the thanah of Rajbhat, zillah Hooghly, was, in the dead of night, stormed by a gang of dacoits, about twenty or twenty-five in number, all armed with swords, bludgeons, &c. They carried off every thing valuable that the house contained. On the day following, the case being reported by the Darogah of the division to the Magistrate, strenuous exertions have since been making to trace the offenders, but hitherto without effect.

On the night of the 19th February last, between the hours of eleven and twelve, the dwelling house of Muddun Suranar, of Joybagar thanah, coterah, zillah Hooghly, was attacked by a gang of dacoits, who carried off every thing they could lay their hands upon. Some of the men being armed with swords, others with spears, the inmates durst not offer any resistance. On the 25th the Darogah of the division, on it spoken to his credit, brought, in custody, before the Magistrate, several of the offenders, together with a portion of the property carried off, found in their possession.

AUDACITY OF A NATIVE.—A most daring attempt is now making by a native of considerable opulence, to establish a monopoly of traffic upon some of the Calcutta Canals, in the prosecution of which, repeated acts of robbery and piracy have been committed upon the boats in the Canals in open day; the boats sunk, and the cargoes either destroyed or carried away.

CHURRACK POOJAH.—The following orders have been issued by the Chief Magistrate, respecting the Churrock Poojah:—

"In consequence of discussions which took place last year, it has been determined that the Churrock Poojah processions, should in future, be so conducted as to cause the least possible annoyance. The quiet and respectable inhabitants of the Town of all ranks, residing in the Southern parts of Chitpore road, the Consols, and the Chowringhee Road, and persons passing to and from the neighbourhood of these places on their lawful avocations, have been annoyed and incommoded by these processions, by the noise and buffoonery attending them, and the crowds by which they are accompanied, and the police have in consequence received the authority of Government, to see that these processions, in coming from Kalsee Ghaut, are made to pass northwards along the Circular Road (which is thinly inhabited and not much frequented by persons on business) to the Colootollah and Machwa Bazar Roads, where they can enter the native town.

THE LUCK.—No. 4353, was drawn the lakh in the Calcutta Lottery.

PUBLIC CHARITIES.—Rao Rustomoy Dutt, has espoused the cause of the beggars and blind, with intense interest, and proposed some wholesome arrangements with the regard to the disposal of the funds invested in the District Charitable Society. He has suggested the propriety of dividing the society into four committees, whose business it will be to preside over the four quarters of the city, and with a view to place the prospects of the society on a sure footing, made it imperative on these members of the committees, to become subscribers to the fund. He has further proposed, that these committees shall be invested with the powers of distributing the stipend at their respective quarters, so that the trouble which was formerly imposed on the poor, is now fairly obviated, inasmuch as they are now paid at a place close to their respective residences.

Bahoo Muttelall Seal has given a parcel of land in Mirzapore for the Leper Asylum, and Rustomjee Cowarjee, Esq., has offered to build the huts for the purpose.

NUMS SINGH.—A private letter from Loodbhianh mentions, that a report had reached that station of Runjeet Singh's being again dangerously ill, and scarcely expected to linger much longer. Subsequent reports say, that the health of Runjeet Singh has so much improved, that it is now intended to reduce the force at the head quarters of the Si-Ind division.

COMMISSION DE LUNATICO INQUIRENDO.—On the 27th of February, pursuant to a Commission de Lunatico Inquirendo, the Commissioners, Mr. Longueville Clarke and Mr. Osborne, sat in the Supreme Court; fourteen jurors of highly respectable rank were impanelled, witnesses were examined, and after a patient investigation of seven hours, including an examination of the lunatic, Cossinath Pundit, who attended the Court in person, the jury found that Cossinath Pundit was of unsound mind, and had been incapable of managing his affairs for the space of one year past—that his malady was greatly increased by the use of deleterious and intoxicating drugs—and that inasmuch as he appeared to have experienced much inattention on the part of his family, they recommended him in future to the care of the Court. The Commission was then adjourned to 12 o'clock on Monday next, in order to give time to prepare the inquisition, when the commissioners and the jurors will assemble and sign the inquisition.

CRIMINALS' COUNSEL ACT.—The draft of an Act allowing prisoners the benefit of Counsel's address, as well in cases of felony as in misdemeanors, an alteration in practice, suggested by the trial of Mr. Ogilvy in the Supreme Court, is now published. The first section gives the prisoner the right of being heard by counsel, or by attorney "in Her Majesty's Courts of Justice, where attorneys practise as counsel." The second section allows the prisoner the benefit of "counsel, attorney or valkel," "in all cases of examination by a magistrate or justice of the peace." The third and fourth sections of the Act relate to the right of prisoners, under certain limitations, to demand, and be furnished with, copies of all the depositions, upon which they may have been held to bail or committed to prison.

THE STRAND MILLS.—These works were sold to Bahoo Mulla Lal Seal, on the 1st instant, for one lakh and twenty thousand rupees.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The following is a scale of maximum rates of subscriptions prescribed by sections 5 of the rules of the Medical Retiring Fund, which have been in operation from the 1st of January last.

Members of the Medical Board, Co's Rs.	256	0	0
Superintending Surgeons,....	170	10	8
Surgeons,	59	11	8
180 Senior Assistant Surgeons, ,	34	2	1
60 following ditto,	21	5	4
And all others,	12	12	6

Assistant Surgeons who have voluntarily relinquished promotion, are required to subscribe as Surgeons to the Military Orphan Fund, viz, 6 rupees per month.

EXTRAORDINARY SPECIES OF MANUFACTURE.—An extraordinary species of manufacture has been contrived lately, by an officer of Engineers, residing at Alunch. It consists of lace and veils, with open patterns in them, made entirely by caterpillar's. The following is the mode of proceeding adopted. Having made a paste of the leaves of the plant on which the species of caterpillar he employs feeds, he spreads it thinly over a stone, or other flat substance of the required size. He then, with a camel-hair pencil dipped in olive oil, draws the pattern he wishes the insects to leave open. This stone is then placed in an inclined position, and a considerable number of the caterpillars are placed at the bottom. A peculiar species is chosen, which spins a strong web; and the animals commence at the bottom, eating and spinning their way up to the top, carefully avoiding every part touched by the oil, but devouring every other part of the paste. The extreme lightness of these veils, combined with some strength, is, on the authority of an English contemporary, truly surprising. One of them, measuring twenty-six and a half by seventeen inches, weighed only a grain and a half, a degree of lightness which will appear more strongly by contrast with other fabrics. One square yard of the substance of which these veils are made, weighs four and a half grains, whilst one square yard of silk, of the same size, weighs one hundred and thirty-seven and a third grains; and one square yard of the finest net weighs two hundred and sixty two and a half grains.

THE EAST UNITED SERVICE JOURNAL.—This publication, which has been conducted with very considerable talent, and has contained some excellent articles, is about to be desunct.

CONVERSION OF A HINDOO YOUTH.—A pupil of the General Assembly's school, of the name of Hysack, about sixteen years of age, has relinquished the religion of his forefathers with a view to embrace Christianity. The youth is of a respectable family and connexions, and has been in the institution for some years. His father went recently to take him from the school, but he refused to leave it.

MECHANIC'S INSTITUTION.—The subscription list of the new Mechanic's Institution, shows a goodly array of names. Already no less than 2,200 rupees have been subscribed by the liberally disposed community of Calcutta, as donations to the new building, and about a hundred and twenty persons have enrolled their names on the list as members.

PSEUDO PERTAB CHOND.—The papers relative to the trial of the pseudo Rajah Pertab Chunder, have been received at the Nizamut Adawlat, from the Sessions Judge's Court at Zillah Hooghly. They are very voluminous, and this accounts for the delay in engrossing the copies for the perusal of the Superior Court. The opinion of the Mahomedan Law officer of the Court, is more favorable to the prisoner than the Sessions Judge's. Nevertheless both coincide in convicting the defendant of having set the focal authority at Culna at defiance. The opinions are attached to the papers submitted to the Nizamut Court.

MARRIAGE EXTRAORDINARY.—The Commercial Advertiser of the 20th instant, came forth under a double head, and announced to the public, that he had acquired that unusual appearance, by absolutely marrying his own "little brother!" In other words, the Commercial Advertiser, has manipulated the unfortunate Daily News.

COMMISSARIAT ALLOWANCE.—In consideration of the peculiar nature of the expedition on which the army of the Indus is at present employed, the uncommon and uncalculated expenses to which officers are subjected, and the responsible character of the duties required to be performed, the Government have sanctioned to all officers temporarily employed in the Commissariat Department, the payment of the full Staff salary attached to the situation of a Sub-Assistant Commissary General.

THE LANCIER.—The French brig of war Lancier, came off the fort on the 17th instant, giving and returning a royal salute. An Envoy from the French Court to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India, came out a passenger on board. He is here for the purpose of negotiating about India labourers.

SIR H. FANE.—Sir Henry Fane, it is said, will return immediately to these provinces. His object in going to Bombay, was merely to obtain a passage to Calcutta the first opportunity.

HAIL STORM.—On the afternoon of the 12th instant, a heavy shower of rain, accompanied with a hail storm, fell at and about the place called Jahanabad, in Zillah Hooghly. Considerable injury has been sustained by the crops of the season, and the people will greatly suffer in consequence.

CAPT. D. L. RICHARDSON.—Capt. D. L. Richardson has been appointed Aid-de Camp to the Deputy-Governor, Col. Morrison.

MILITARY ITEMS.—An increase of two Companies, has been made to the infantry portion of the Shekawattie Brigade, commanded by Major Forster, at the recommendation of the political agent at Jeypore; and the Brigade consequently now consists of two Regiments of Native Infantry, 670 strong, Cavalry 593, Horse Artillery 12, and Foot Artillery 129.

Letters from Cawnpore mention, that the General Officer commanding the division, had called for volunteer drafts from the corps of the line located within the limits of his command for promotion in the Infantry branch of the Legion, ordered to be raised for service in Jalaon, to the extent of eight Subadars, eight Jamadars, forty-eight Havildars, and forty-eight Naicks. The Legion is to consist of a corps of Irregular Cavalry, of four Reesallahs of eighty Sowars each, dressed in blue and armed with matchlock and tulwar; of a Regiment of Infantry of eight Companies of one hundred privates each, dressed in green and armed like Light Infantry, and of a Brigade of two 6 pounder guns, with the usual proportion of ammunition and stores.

STRAND RAILING.—At the suggestion of the Chief Magistrate, it is in contemplation to form a wooden balustrade, or railing, on the west side of the strand road, similar to that which now exists on the east, commencing from Baboo's Ghaut and terminating near the sluice of the Fort water-gate.

CLERKSHIP OF THE COURT OF REQUESTS.—The Chief Clerkship of the Court of Requests, has been conferred on Mr. McLeod, brother of the Chief Commissioner, in supercession to the claims of Mr. Uvedale, that is to say if long and efficient services can establish a claim. The salary of the situation, is 650 rupees per mensem.

THE MONORRUM.—This festival, which has from time immemorial, been attended with riots in the town of Calcutta, past off this year without any. A fracas nearly took place, as some hing like a pitched battle was to have come off between, the syces of Cook and Co.'s and Hunter and Co.'s stables; but the judicious arrangements of our active Superintendent of Police, effectually prevented the fight.

THE CATHEDRAL.—A proposition, which was made to Government, for reconstructing and enlarging the cathedral, has not met with their approval. They do not disapprove of it on the score of expense, but inconvenience.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—A letter from Jessore, received yesterday, states, that there had been no rain fit to sow with, and that the January and February's sowings were dying away from drought.

Complaints have since reached Calcutta of want of rain and sickly indigo plants.

MEDICAL STUDENT'S SKILL.—Ramanarain Dose, a student of the Medical College, lately saved the life of a native youth, who had, by a fall, received a severe concussion of the brain. The native doctors had given the lad up, and he was about to be killed by water joltes, when the Medical student operated on him, and restored him to consciousness, and ultimately to health. This is the first triumph of the Medical College, and must be highly gratifying to the Professors.

A PAGODA FOR PARSIS.—The above, which is to be a new thing in this country, is now being built at the expense of Baboo Rustonjee Cowasjee and Co., in Doomtollah street. It is to be an extensive building all the way from nearly the entrance into Doomtollah at the junction of two roads, i.e. the Chitpore and Doomtollah, to a great way northward, or from Doomtollah, towards Moorcheebah. A number of old tiled houses, formerly the shops of China carpenters and others, have been pulled down for the express purpose, and the whole of the building may be said to occupy 3 or 4 beegahs of ground.

THE ARMY OF THE INDUS.—The following is an extract of a letter from Camp at Roree, on the left Bank of the Indus, dated the 7th of Feb., 1839.—Mr. Macnaghten is in the camp of Shah Soojah at Shikarpore, and will advance towards Candahar as soon as the Bolan pass is clear of snow, whether any part of our own force can move with him or not. Such is the nature of the private intelligence from some officers of the Shah's army.

8th, 11 A. M.—A dispatch has just been received by Brigadier Roberts, from the Commander-in-Chief, which countermands the orders from our advance to Hyderabad, and directs that we remain in our present position. In a private communication His Excellency informs the Brigadier, that the Amers have given in. I should not be surprised if we are ordered to return to Agra forthwith. We cannot live here during the hot weather, and Mr. Montgomery will not require the Bombay Army and our own, to settle Shah Asaf on the throne of Cabul.

Letters from the 1st Division of the Army of the India, dated 12th ultimo, state, that the division was on its way to Shikarpore, where it was to halt for a day or two, and then proceed on to Candahar, where it was expected to arrive early in April. It was reported that Dost Mahomed was retreating to the mountains, and that the Candahar Chief would give in on our approach.

Every letter from the Northwest speaks in favour of the bridge of boats constructed by our Engineer officers to enable the Army to cross the Indus. The bridge is described to consist of two spans, one of 49 boats, stretching from Roree on the left bank of the river to the island of Bukkur; the other of 19 boats, communicating with Sukkur on the right bank. The former chain measures 1,100 feet, the latter 486 feet. The boats used are of all sizes, from thirty to sixty feet long, the largest and strongest being placed in the centre of the stream, where the current runs four or five miles an hour. A few trifling accidents only occurred in crossing this splendid bridge, arising from a little irregularity.

A letter dated the 22d February states, "The troops are in the highest health and spirits, and should the carriage but hold out, are in a state and temper to go anywhere or do anything. We are all anxious to get through the Bolan pass, as every day's delay here, will only tend to render that undertaking the more to be dreaded, from the increasing heat of the weather. The wants of the Commissariat are the only cause of our halt here. The whole Bengal force is now assembled here occupying the 35th Native Infantry, left in Bukkur. The Cavalry Brigade moves for the Bolan pass on the 23d. 1st Brigade 24th, 4th Brigade 25th, and 2nd Brigade with the Shah and contingent about the 2nd proximo. The Cavalry Brigade, is the talk of the Army; unable to take their own duties, a wing of a Native Infantry Corps is detached with them for that purpose, thus scripping whatever Brigade furnishes it. It has hitherto fallen most unjustly on the 1st Brigade. Surely the two Native Cavalry regiments could perform all Camp duties required from Infantry soldiers. It is said to be 10 marches to the Pass."

A letter from the 4th Infantry Brigade, dated Shikarpore, 24th Feb, affords the following intelligence: "We are to march from hence to-morrow, and hope to reach Dacca by the 8th or 9th proximo, after which we are to push on to Candahar with all speed. The Shah, with the second brigade, follows ours on the 2d proximo. Sir John Keane is expected here on the 4th. We have had some rain, a rare occurrence here, and it is now cool and pleasant. The Bolan pass is still covered with snow, but by the time we reach it, we hope to find it all clear for us."

A letter from Camp Jagon, two days in advance, dated 15th February, adds: "Here we are brought up at last, from the scarcity of water, and the brigades, in consequence, obliged to move again next Sunday to reach here on by single corps."

The following is an extract of a letter, dated Camp Pergapore, 15th March 1839:—

"The 3d Regiment of Foot or Buffs, marched from this Camp on the morning of the 7th instant, for Meerut.

Colonel Skinner, C. B., with part of his corps, left this for Hanoon the 9th.

Major General Duncan, and Staff, composing the Head Quarters of the Sind Division, marched from this Camp, under the usual salute, en route for Kur-naul, on the 11th instant.

The troops composing this Camp at present, consist of the Artillery under Brigadier Graham, C. B.

The 2d, 5th and 27th Regiments of N. I. with a wing of Skinner's Horse (the yellow boys.) The whole of this force is for the present under the command of Lieut-Colonel N. Wallace, of the 2d Regiment; being the Senior Officer in the absence of Brigadier Wymer."

"We are so near to Lahore, that a salute is seldom fired by the Maha Rajah, without our distinctly hearing it. In fact we are in the Sheik states."

A letter from Shikarpore, dated 2d March, says, "to-day, the order has come telling us that we are to go on to Cabool and to leave this after the Park of Artillery. Sir John Keane's A. D. C., has just arrived at Mr. McNaghten's tent, and the Bombay Troops are about 50 miles from this, so we shall see them in five or six days."

DOCKING ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of the Calcutta Docking Association, held on the 6th instant, at the office of the Secretaries, was very fully attended. The Secretary was called upon to read the report of the work done by the Company during the last twelve months, which showed the affairs of the Company to be in a very prosperous condition, and daily improving. The Meeting then proceeded to discuss several points contained in the report concerning the loss on the building of the Enterprise, the erection of a slip in the place of the present lower dock at Kidderpore, &c. The bought shares of the Association, amounting in number to forty-three, were purchased by several Members of the Meeting, at par. A proposition was then made by Mr. Homfray, that it appearing to the Meeting that closer supervision in the dock yard at Kidderpore, necessary, a superintendent be appointed on a handsalary, who shall have an interest in the Association shall be placed there in order to prevent in future such losses in the purchase of timber, &c. as have lately occurred. This proposition met with the approval of the meeting, and has been made over to the Committee, to be specially looked into by them, whether any saving can be made in the present establishment to meet this extra charge. It was found by the meeting, that no alteration could, by the rules of the Association, be made in the deed of co-partnership, at this present meeting, it was therefore decided that another General Meeting should be convened for this particular purpose. Major Henderson, it was resolved, should be required to send out a plan from home of the new slip, and to obtain the opinion of some experienced Engineer, whether such a slip was practicable or not in that spot.

DR. SPRY AND GODEVE.—Dr. Spry, at the meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, held on the second of March, in reference to the admission of the successful students of the Medical College, as Members of the Society, on terms of equality with the other members, said, that although these young men had undoubtedly passed an examination equally severe, if not more so, than that to which the members of the medical profession at home are subjected, that, from the subordinate situations they are destined to hold, viz, that of sub-Assistant Surgeons, he did not consider them fit to be placed on the same footing with other members of the Society, and he for one could not associate with them as such. Dr. Goodeve, as Secretary of the Society, reported what fell from Dr. Spry, and a great deal of virtuous indignation being hurled at Dr. Spry, for his illiberality, by several writers in the newspapers, that gentleman has entered into a correspondence with Dr. Goodeve, who he accuses of making him appear in the most unexorable light possible, by a garbled report. His own story of the affair, however, makes his case somewhat worse than Dr. Goodeve had represented it. We will not comment further on the subject, but merely remark, that the sentiment expressed by Dr. Spry at the Medical and Physical Society's meeting is strangely at variance with those uttered by him at the meeting to establish a Mechanics' Institution, and several other places.

ASYLUM FOR NATIVE LASCARS.—The meeting convened at the Sailor's Home on the 15th instant, to adopt measures for the institution of an asylum for native lascars, corresponding with that in existence for European seamen, was attended by about a dozen persons. Captain Vint was called to the chair, and much desultory conversation ensued, during which the impositions and cruelties practised upon the native sailors by the crimps, were feelingly dwelt upon. It occurred to the meeting, that the habits of the lascar, and the fact that most of them are residents in town and fathers of families, would render a Home for them useless, and frustrate the objects of the institution, unless it were connected with a registry office. The following resolutions were therefore agreed upon:—

1. Proposed by Mr. A. Grant, and seconded by Mr. C. Duane.—That it is deemed expedient by the meeting, to establish a Lascar's Home and Registry office, for the purpose of protecting the lascars belonging to, or coming this port, from the imposition practised upon them by the crimps.

2. Proposed by Mr. J. W. Cragg, and seconded by Capt. Thomson.—That a select committee be appointed for the purpose of enquiring into the best means for establishing a Lascar's Home and Registry office, and that they do report the result of their investigation at a meeting to be held this day fortnight.

3. Proposed by Capt. Balston, and seconded by Capt. Proudfoot.—That the following gentlemen be appointed a Sub-Committee for the purpose; Rev. T. Boaz, Mr. Charles Dearie, Mr. A. Grant, Capt. Thomson, and Mr. J. Young.

4. Moved by Captain Richards, and seconded by Mr. W. Clark.—That the committee put themselves in communication with Government, the Chamber of Commerce, the mercantile houses, &c., &c, in order to ascertain how far they may be disposed to afford assistance to the proposed institution.

5. Moved by the Rev. T. Boaz, and seconded by Captain Proudfoot.—That the Committee be empowered to draw up a slight prospectus, explanatory of the objects of the proposed institution.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.—At the sixth half yearly meeting of the Steam Tug Association, held on the 18th instant, the following resolutions were adopted.

1st.—That the accounts now upon the table be passed.

2nd.—That the Report of the Secretaries be approved and passed.

3rd.—That a dividend of one hundred rupees per share, being the equivalent of 20 per cent. per annum upon the capital, be paid out of the profits of the past half year, to the subscribers of the original capital.

4th.—That out of the further amount of profits for the past-half year, the sum of rupees 10,000, being the equivalent of rupees 50 per share, be paid on loan at six per cent. per annum interest, to assist in the completion of the new steamers, &c., and that the amount so lent, be returned to the shareholders of the original capital, from the future earnings of the joint capital.

5th.—That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Committee of the past year, and that the same gentlemen be re-appointed and requested to act as a Committee for the present year.

LA MARTINIÈRE.—At the half yearly Meeting of the Governors of that admirable Institution, La Martinière, held at Government House on the 18th instant, the following distinguished individuals were elected members of the Working Committee during the ensuing year:—The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop, the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, the Hon'ble Mr. Canton, the Rev. Mr. Charles and Doctor John Grant.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—Lieutenant Pottinger, who was reported to have been expelled from Herat, is still there, and on the best possible terms with Shah Kamran. It appears some differences had occurred between him and the Prince, which were subsequently arranged without much difficulty.

AGRA.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta is at present undergoing a prosecution at the suit of the Revd. Mr. Sturrock in the Arches's Court, on the allegation of having caused the complainant to read a certain prayer which he conceived to be contrary to the Litany, viz. that for British India. Report says that the Reverend prosecutor expresses much confidence in the termination of the suit, which he anticipates will be the means of causing the Right Reverend Father in God, to be relieved from his exalted office, and informs his parishioners, with much complacency, that the penalty of the offences with which he has charged the distinguished Prelate, is on a second conviction, twelve months' imprisonment.

The disposal of the subscription to the Metcalfe Testimonial, has occasioned much discussion amongst different subscribers, who do not altogether coincide in the proposal to make over the whole sum subscribed in the North Western Provinces to the Calcutta Committee; but who are desirous that some testimonial should be raised in the Provinces, to perpetuate the respect and esteem in which the late Lieutenant-Governor was held by all classes. Another section of the subscribers, with that out of the subscribed Funds a sum should be appropriated to the erection of a building at Agra, in which the Agra Public Library might be deposited, rather than suffer so useful and important an institution to languish and fall away, after all the trouble and expense which has been incurred in its foundation.

NEPALES.—Some Nepaulese were arrested a few days back in the city, and letters found on them, to the Rajpootana states; and rumour's thousand tongues are at work with the contents of these and another letter which was enclosed in a kinkob bag, and torn to pieces by its bearer, when he was arrested.

The following resolution was passed at the Metcalfe testimonial meeting, held on the 13th instant:—

That with a view to meet the wishes of several of the subscribers in the North-Western Provinces, to the Metcalfe Testimonial, disapproving and opposing the suggested transfer of the whole Funds, to the Metcalfe Building in Calcutta, and with reference to the recorded resolutions, passed at former Meetings, this Meeting are of opinion, that so much of the resolution of the last Meeting, stipulating that a Bust of Sir Charles Metcalfe, to put up in the Calcutta Library Building, be modified and that the amount estimated as the cost of the Bust or 6,000 rupees, be appropriated to the building at Agra, to be termed the Metcalfe Testimonial for the North Western Provinces, in which the Agra Public Library shall be deposited, and that the remainder of the subscription, after deducting the said sum, 6,000 rupees, be forthwith remitted to the Secretary of the Metcalfe Fund committee, to be added to the Metcalfe Library Building Fund, and that the subscribers be again solicited for the payment of their subscriptions outstanding, that the accounts may be finally adjusted as here is determined; that the following Committee be appointed to superintend and decide on the building of the Metcalfe Testimonial for the North Western Provinces. Major Terranceau, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Wells, Mr. Morland, Dr. Duncan, Mr G. J. Gordon, Capt. the Hon'ble H. Dalzell.

MOORSHEENABAD.—The following is an extract of a letter from Moorsheedabad:—

"I think it will be interesting to your readers to be informed, that another proclamation has been made out by our Magistrate, Mr. Lushington, the purport of which is, that every man must quench his fire and put out his light after 8 o'clock in the evening, under pain of being put into confinement for three Calendar months, and moreover to pay a fine of 10 Rs. This order, I am given to understand by enquiry, is meant only for the people of the huts and other buildings of combustible materials, and it is given out with a view to prevent the frequent occurrence of fire breaking out in this station.

The other evening I heard a chowkeedar howling out through the streets, "put out the lights," "put out the lights," and the light of a poor fellow who was at that time taking his victuals, was, in pursuance of this proclamation, forcibly put out by this Policeman, and thus he and his meal were left in darkness.

MUSSEERABAD.—A case of heavy pecuniary involvement, which has just come to light, has created a considerable sensation at this station. The party involved is a young officer generally reported to have possessed property at home, on which he drew to a very heavy amount. It now, however, appears, he had no property to draw against. It is even said forgery has been committed, and large sums obtained this way. A fashionable tradesman of Calcutta has, it is further reported, been duped out of jewellery to the amount of 12,000 rupees. The affair, it is thought, will give employment to the Judges of Her Majesty's Supreme Court.

ASSAM.—The following is an extract of a letter from Assam, dated March 13th.

"I have nothing to tell you from these jungles just now. The weather has been most overpoweringly hot lately, quite equal to May, with the thermometer up to 85 in the house. From Suddyah I hear nothing. An attack was made a few days ago, on one of our out lying picket guards, by a large body of men, but they were met by such sturdy resistance, that they lost 7 killed, and near 60 wounded; while another party, under a Native officer, coming up to the firing, stumbled on a new stockade of the Kamptees, and giving them two volleys, sent them flying, leaving the place full of dhows, spears, shields, and blood. Report says, Major Lester is likely to get the command of the corps, but others, more in the secret, say, the political agency will be, as it now ought, abolished, and a commandant only allowed. The Goorkah Subadar Major, who was promoted for gallant conduct three years ago, killed 7 of the party who attacked him, with one of the knives used by the Nepaulese, called tookoorias. He was a very brave little fellow, and as a mark of the sense entertained of his conduct, the rank of Subadar Major was, contrary to usage, sanctioned in his favor, though at the time the youngest subadar in the corps."

The following is a detailed report, by Lieutenant, Marshall, of the recent proceedings in Assam:—

Suddyah, March 6, 1839.—I have the honor to report, for your information, that leaving this on the morning of the 28th ultimo, accompanied by the Burha Ghau and his men, as also the Dhoanias, I proceeded to the mouth of the Noa Dehing, where I was informed the enemy had erected a strong barricade on the opposite side of the nullah. We arrived there about 2 P. M., and were immediately fired on. I ordered it to be returned, and getting ready the mortar, crossed a party over (in dinghies I had taken from this place for that purpose) under its fire, but they found the enemy had fled. As there was no road to De-lackmoonkh (where a small but strong stockade was erected) and that we would be obliged to cut one ourselves through trees and kugrah jungles, I encamped, after destroying the barricade at the mouth of the river, in grass jungle. Several of the sepoys, I am sorry to say, were wounded by panjas, but none by the fire of the enemy. The next morning we proceeded towards Derack, and on arriving near the nullah, were fired on from the stockade, and from a party of the enemy who had crossed over to a sand-bank on the opposite side of the Noa Dehing. Both fires were silenced, and crossing the nullah we took possession of the stockade, which had been abandoned. We suffered no loss on our side, but found lots of traces of blood about the stockade. I can only attribute our losing none of the men, to the heaviness of the tree jungle, which was so great, that the stockade was not discernible till we got close up to it; from thence we continued our march, and encamped on a sand-bank about 2 miles further on. We marched the next morning and encamped, about 2 and 3, opposite Kunga Gorah. It was impossible to make long marches the jungle was so dreadfully heavy, and we were obliged to cut away for the baggage elephants. Marched the next morning very early, and after a very harassing march, we arrived at a large sand bank about 2 miles from Moonglong, where I directed a party, consisting of 1 Subadar, 2 Havildars, 2 Naicks, and 50 Sepoys, 6 matchlock men and about 30 Doonias, to cross the river and group through the jungle and cut up the enemy in their retreat; while I would attack the stockade, under the fire of our guns (a six pounder and a small mortar.) We had not proceeded more than 200 yards, when a fire was opened on us from a strong barricade concealed in the jungles on our right, but it was soon carried, and one of the Doonias only, was severely wounded in two places. We had got about 100 yards further, when a very sharp fire was opened on us from a barricade on the left bank of the river, and continued for upwards of 10 minutes, until the Subadar's party had got across; but as I immediately ordered the men to sit down in extended order behind the grass jungle, by which means only one man was wounded, a matchlock sepoy. As soon as the fire was silenced, I proceeded to a sand bank, immediately in front of Moonglong, and a few dhows from the guns, I waded across with 80 men, to storm the stockade; but on getting there not a soul was to be seen. I imagine, that seeing they were going to be attacked from both sides, or the noise of the guns, was the cause of their not making a stand, as the enemy were between 5 and 600 strong, and the stockade was one of the strongest and largest I have ever seen, and capable of holding 8 or 900 men.

It is evident the enemy only expected to be attacked from opposite, as they had not only panjad the banks, but the bed of the river near the bank.

On taking the place, I posted sentries over the grain, and proceeded to a village of 7 large Singha houses about 2 miles higher up, and where I understand was another large stockade. On arriving there, I found nothing but the houses, which I burnt to the ground, then returned back to Moonglong, and encamped on the sand opposite. I sent all the elephants across to bring what grain was required, had the rest destroyed, broke down the Stockade, and burnt the place to the ground. I very much wished to have followed the enemy to Palangpang, Tang Sang, Tong and Koom-kee; but as the instructions contained in your letters of the 26th and 28th precluded me from doing so, I marched the next morning towards Suddenh.

I beg leave most respectfully to bring to your notice the able assistance given to me by Lieutenant ~~Prin-~~gault, commanding the Artillery, and Mr. Apothecary Prin-gault; the latter not only from the knowledge of the Assamese language and partial knowledge of the Singhos and the country, but from his assisting me in leading on men at the different attacks; as also the bravery and courage evinced by Subadar Lallhet Singh, who volunteered his services in every attack, and was ever first when there was anything to be done.

THE AFGHAN CHIEFTAIN ROOHULLAH KHAN.—A letter from Loodhiana states, that the Affghaan Chieftain Roohullah Khan, having been threatened with an attack from the Force under Now Nihal sing, had quitted the neighbourhood of Derah Ismail Khan, and betaken himself to the mountains, where he was maintaining himself and followers by plunder. The Kowur, with a view to wean him from his predatory habits, had offered him a jaghire; but so enamoured was he of the excitements of war and blood-shed, that he rejected the offer with scorn, and with 10,000 horse, joined his ancient friend Dost Mahommed, calling upon his relations, and all who were the children of Afghanistan, to march themselves under the banners, and, if necessary, sacrifice their lives in defence of the Ruler of Cabool, and in averting the impending doom of their common country. Many of Dost Mahommed's Omrahs, however, appear to have deserted him, and he is in other places described as helpless, with reference to his means of coping with the British force. The families of those Sindars who had deserted him, are stated to be in confinement. From the same quarter we hear, that the Eussool Zee, with Pendah Khan, of Durbund, at their head, and Fetteh Khan of Punjar, having taken offence at the conduct of Dost Mahommed's son, had sent proposals to Colonel Wade to pay him a visit, which would have taken place before, had not difficulties been thrown in their way by the officers of our Ally, the Lion.

NATIVE STATES.

LABOUR.—Amongst the latest of the Rajah's demonstrations of fidelity towards his trusty ally, the Company, was his refusal, in open Court, to receive a communication from the Nepal Rajah, on the ground, that the Company's enemies were his enemies, and their friends his friends. It is not said, if the communication was received afterwards by the "back stairs."

MADRAS.

METSON.—On the 6th instant, a splendid meteor was observed in Madras.

STEAM MEETING.—A meeting anent Steam navigation, was held on the 13th instant, and Lord Elphinstone presided on the occasion. The only business was to lay before the inhabitants a statement of the proceedings and correspondence of the standing Committee, and, death and absence having now diminished the number of the latter down to one member, to elect other gentlemen to fill the vacant places. This was completed; and the opportunity was seized for reiterating a declaration of the anxiety that exists here to see a comprehensive Steam communication by the way of the Red Sea, in preference to any other route, finally established. Thanks were also voted to the London Committee, to Lord William Bentinck, Sir Wilmot Horton and Mr. Caird, and to the Bengal Steam Committee, for their zealous and efficient exertions in the good cause.

BOMBAY.

THE SEMIRAMIS.—The Atalanta was to sail on the 22d ultimo, for the purpose of helping the Semiramis out of the predicament she has got into at Juggut, on the coast of Kattywar, news having arrived that the vessel had got ashore at that place about midnight on the 13th instant. She was high and dry, and there appears to be little probability of her being got off. Admiral Maitland will proceed in the Wellesley, for the purpose of rendering all assistance in his power. Cholera had broken out on board the Wellesley, and two men had fallen victims to it.

The Atalanta returned to Bombay on the evening of the 2d instant, bringing with her a large portion of the Semiramis' machinery, but nothing to inspire confidence that the vessel can ever again be rendered fit for service. She remains on the same spot, where she originally grounded, and, for the present, is not floated by the tide, but hope is entertained, that when every thing has been removed out of her, which has already in great part been done, and the high tides of the middle of the month arrive, she may yet float, and then there might be a possibility of saving her, as it appears she has suffered much less than was imagined, being in fact, in all but her false keel, unlamaged.

WAR WITH PERSIA.—It is said, that the Wellesley is destined against Bushire, with positive orders to attack the place, in consequence of the very strong representations made by Mr. McNeil to this Government of the equivocal and highly unsatisfactory conduct of the Shah lately in his relations with us, which has left us no alternative but to try the effect of a hostile demonstration. The Algerine is to follow to day, and a sufficient number of boats fitted for the purpose, will be collected to obviate the difficulty of vessels of the Wellesley's draught of water being unable to approach within gun shot of the town.

UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS' QUALIFICATIONS.—It is said that Government has resolved to establish a rule that all uncovenanted assistant shall henceforth possess an adequate knowledge of the languages of this country. The terms of the circular are, that upon appointment, or within six months after, the assistants, shall pass an examination in Hindoostanee, and that within eighteen months after passing in that language, or two years after appointment, he shall undergo an examination in the language of the country in which his duties may lie. A deduction of fifty rupees per mensem, is to be made from the pay of the individual, until he shall have passed in the first: after this, a deduction of thirty rupees only will be made until he shall have passed in the second. Both deductions, however, will be repaid, provided he be qualified within specified time, viz. six months for the examination in the first, and two years for the second.

THE REPORTED ATTACK ON BUSHIRE.—The Wellesley has proceeded to the Persian Gulph merely for the purpose of making some general demonstration of force in that quarter. She has not received any orders to attack Bushire, nor has she any present intention of so doing. Her pacific designs may be conjectured, from the fact of Lady Maitland having embarked with His Excellency.

SCINDS.—By the last accounts from Scinde, the army was to leave Hyderabad on the 9th instant, to proceed to Shikarpore. The Ameers had come down with ten lacs on account of the stipulated sum in the meantime, which Sir John Keane had forwarded, and seven of which reached Bombay in safety in charge of Capt. Pepper. There is a report that Col. Pottinger wishes the reserve of the Army under General Valiant, to be moved from Karachi to Tattah, that is from a healthy to a most unhealthy place, but it is doubtful if this arrangement will take place.

Letters from Scinde state, that Sir John Keane moved from Hyderabad on the 11th of Feb., having, as it was supposed, settled every thing in the most satisfactory manner. Considerable diversity of opinion exists as to the policy of the last step taken by His Excellency, that of refusing to visit the Ameers, or to receive them, except at his own tent. Every demand made by our Government upon these Princes, had been fully conceded and it could answer no purpose thus to reduce them to the lowest state of humiliation and contempt in the eyes of their own subjects. The Beloochees are, in fact, stung to the quick at what they consider the dastardly conduct of their Princes; and instead of increasing this feeling by degrading them still farther, we should labour henceforth to support the Ameers as our instruments and do all that we can to replace them in a respectable position in the estimation of their own subjects. Sir John Keane, at the head of the combined army, is not, it is said, the equal of the Ameers of Hyderabad even in their fallen state. The late conduct of Sir Henry Fane towards the chief of Bawalpore forms, it is contended, no precedent for the present case, the latter being a mere petty feudatory. The Ameers even offered to come to the East bank of the river, if Sir John would cross and meet them there; this, however, he refused to do and their humility, could go no further.

There are, at present, ten thousand Beloochees in Hyderabad bent upon wreaking their vengeance equally upon us and upon their own princes. There are also numerous encampments in the vicinity, of 200, 300 and 400 men who are no doubt inspired with the same sentiments.

POST MAHOMED.—By accounts received from Candahar in thirty seven days, it is stated that Kamran has arranged every thing with the British Government and given up Herat to their entire management, receiving, in return, a large monthly pension. It is said that four Englishmen, one of whom is Pottinger Sahib, have taken charge of every thing. A vakeel had been sent to Hyderabad by Dost Mahomed to the Ameers, accusing them of cowardice for having basely delivered up their country, and directing them to tell the British to come forward as fast as possible, as he was ready to meet, and fight them.

It is rumoured that Dost Mahomed's troops, under his brother, had approached near to Herat, expecting to find an ally in Kamran; on hearing that it had been given up to the English, he returned to Candahar. Persian troops had also been in the same quarter.

DURABILITY OF TEAK WOOD.—As a proof of the extreme durability of teak wood, and its adaptation to the purposes of ship building, a piece of it has been forwarded to the Chamber of Commerce, by a gentleman in the Civil Service, which, after more than twenty years' submersion, is perfectly sound. It is part of a boat, sunk in the year 1818, off the port of Cambay, and which, from the River Myhee having during the last year, shifted its channel, was left so near the surface that the owner was enabled, at low tide, to get her afloat. The boat, when the accident occurred, was returning to Cambay, freighted. She belonged to Atmerham Boledur, a merchant of the place, and had then built five years. She is now, to all appearance sound, and has neither suffered in nail nor timber, by her long submersion.

TRADE OF THE PERSIAN GULPH.—The intelligence communicated weeks ago, of the interruption to trade in the Persian Gulph, caused by hostilities having commenced among the Arab tribes at Bahrein, is confirmed. The belligerent parties are the chiefs of Bahrein and Apoothabee in the Persian Gulph; and British subjects are warned against risking their property by embarking it on board of vessels belong to either. It is with each other, and not with the British Government, that these Potentates are about to wage war.

SICKNESS AND MORTALITY.—Mortality is still prevailing in the island. While cholera is committing its ravages to a small extent in many parts, a kind of fever is carrying away some every day.

STEAM NAVIGATION.—It is said that a suggestion has been made to Lord Auckland, that the Steamers from this port to Suez, should, during the ensuing monsoon, make for the Laccadives in the first instance. It is thought, however, that, with our present vessels, the attempt would prove abortive. We understand that it has been suggested to Government, by one of our Naval Officers, that during the monsoon the steamers shall continue to ply between Suez and Aden, and that the communication between Bombay and Aden, shall be maintained by the sailing vessels.

THE ARMY OF THE INDUS.—Letters have been received from the army, dated Luckee the 22d, and Chulkee the 28th of February. The troops had passed the mountains at Sehwan with the loss merely of a few Camels. The exertions of the officers and men had been highly creditable. Accounts of the unheard of power displayed in blasting huge masses of rock, and, as it were, forcing a road through the mountains, will, it is believed, precede the arms of our countrymen and be productive of excellent moral results. The following is an extract from one of the letters:—

"We have had a very difficult job in getting over the Luckee Pass.—The climate and face of the country here is quite changed since we crossed the Pass. It is now quite cold again and the country extremely rich, with green grass and clover growing in it. I don't expect this will last long. Sir Henry Fane passed us at Luckee. We march now direct for Larkhna, and I should hope, will be at Candahar itself in two months."

BURMAH.

AKYAB.—During the month, intelligence from Akyab, to the 22d of January, have been received. Speculations of an unpleasant complexion were prevalent at that station, upon the absence of all information from or concerning Colonel Benson, for two months preceding that date. The account of the Suddya affair had just reached Akyab, and seems to have created a greater sensation than it otherwise would have done, in consequence of a report, which had spread from the Aeng Pass, that a party of 800 Burmese had appeared on our side the border and burned a small guard-house constructed there by the British. The numbers of this party, it was supposed, might be exaggerated, but little doubt was entertained, that the Burmese authorities having intelligence of a recent visit which the Commissioner and Commandant of the province had made to the Pass, had sent forward a party to reconnoitre.

RANGOON FEB. 18.—Intelligence to the 5th of February, from Rangoon, intimates, that the Yewoon has returned in triumph to Rangoon, though without any trophies of the victory over the rebels of which he boasts. Fresh troops are continually pouring into the place, however, and throughout the country the most active preparations for war are in progress, and no manner of notice is taken of our Resident.

It is said the Woondock is more alarmed at internal than external enemies. Troops are arriving from the capital. Perhaps the present state of the country will compel Tharrawaddie to patch up a hollow truce with us, that he may crush the rising spirit and further ruin the country.

March 2.—The Sharbundah arrived yesterday from Amerapoora, but had not seen any one attached to our Residency.

His Majesty conceives the Colonel to be more intent on personal points than national ones. He is indignant with some party or person, whom he suspects, and has advised the Colonel to adopt this straight-forward line of conduct. He probably begins to suspect he has made a wrong estimation of our intellectual powers. Benson is not a Bayfield. His Majesty has not sent to Rangoon so large a force to suppress the spirit of insurrection, as the Woon-douk required to have, because he did not wish to excite suspicion of any hostile intention against the English.

Some two thousand up-country troops have made, or are making, a cordon around the rebels who, when caught, are to be executed, with some 40 who are now in prison. Several attempts have been made on one house, to set it on fire. All the houses are being unroofed, to guard against fires.

5th March.—Ever since the second abortive attempt to effect a counter revolution, the Local Government and his Majesty's satellites, at Rangoon, have laboured to make His Majesty's warlike motives and actions reflect peaceable intentions. The supposed Russian diplomatic character, reported here on his arrival from the Capital, that three distinct armies were to be in motion under the command of the young Prince (Tharrawaddie's son), and for which His Majesty bully is said to have kicked him. This is an improvement on the Lynch Law.

A report prevailed, yesterday, that our Resident had quitted Amerapoora. Should the Resident take this step, this, together with our warlike attitude, will unnerve him for the moment, mainly owing, however, to the prevailing discontent amongst his subjects in which event nothing short of satisfaction for the murders at Moulmein and territorial acquisition as a future security and their reimbursement of our expenses, should prevent our proclaiming for the old King, so that whether we have war or peace, Rangoon and Basseen must belong to us or be under our influence.

Orders are said to be down, to execute some 40 rebels, together with more, which the royalist troops from Ava are in search of.

Three attempts have been made to set Rangoon on fire. From the Government having caused all the houses to be unroofed, this event is dreaded. I think the attempt may be connected with the liberation of the rebel prisoners.

This late insurrection being attributed to the crucifixion of the former rebels, another mode of punishment will perhaps be enforced on the present prisoners.

Report says, that the King says, that the Colonel may stop or may go at his pleasure.

MOULMEIN.—Intelligence to the 13th of February, has been received from Moulmein. Details of the reported insurrection near Rangoon are furnished. The Moulmein Editor says:—"On the 25th January, the Rangoon people were astounded by the information that a body of 3 or 4,000 men at Maubee, about 8 miles north of the town, had declared in favor of Tse-kye-medg, the young Prince. Who these men are, whence they came, or how they succeeded in making such a sudden appearance so close to Rangoon, is at present quite a mystery. The Local Authorities appear to have adopted prompt, vigorous, and successful measures, as on the same day a body of 2,000 men marched out to encounter the supposed rebels, and were followed the day after by another 1,000, the whole being under the command of the Yewoon or second officer of the place. The Yewoon returned to Rangoon on the 5th, having been preceded by bodies of his troops, who daily came in from the scene of their victories. He was accompanied by some hundreds of his men, having their muskets decorated with green leaves. He was received with all the honours of a conqueror and publicly thanked for his great services. He was rewarded by the Woon-douk with dresses, a gold cup and other things; but the most remarkable present made to him on the occasion, was a young lady to whom he had previously paid his devoirs without success, but who was now constrained by the Woon-douk to yield her hand to the gallant hero. To each petty officer, a present was made of five rupees, and to each armed man a head dress."

PENANG.

From Penang papers to the 26th of February, we learn, that the affairs of Quedah remained in statu quo, the Hyacinth, being still on her blockading station; but a deputation had arrived at Penang from the Siamese Government, with a polite request, that we would, according to treaty, have the goodness to do battle for them with the Mullays, at Quedah, while they settled their differences with the Cochin Chinese, and that we would also, retain possession of the country, until they, our faithful allies, were at leisure to resume charge of it from us. We hope our Government will not be obliged to comply with the request of the barbarian power. The lives of British subjects, should be esteemed as too precious to be wasted in obtaining territory for a people incapable either of governing or keeping possession of it. The following clause of the treaty between the British and Siamese governments, on which the Siamese it is said, have put a literal construction, would, however, imply, that we are pledged to interfere on the present occasion, in behalf of the Siamese:

"The English engage to the Siamese, that they will not attack, or disturb, nor permit the former Governor of Quedah, or any of his followers, to attack, disturb, or injure in any manner, the territories of Quedah, or any other territory subject to Siam."

MALACCA.

The Malacca papers received during the month, intimate, that the hot and cold springs of Malacca, seem to be attracting attention, and several have been pronounced to possess great medical properties. When the healing powers of these springs become better known, invalids who resort to the Straits for the renovation of their health, will be induced to frequent the settlement to drink the waters, and Malacca, which has been much neglected of late years, may again be thronged with visitors, as it used to be in its more palmy days.

CHINA.

Canton papers to the 19th of January, have been received during the month. The accounts of the opium market are still very unfavorable, and it is impossible to resist the conclusion, that the celestial Government is determined to put down the trade if possible. Another edict against the smoking of opium has been issued, and nothing is doing in that market. The Lintin deliveries up to the 8th of January, had been only 8 chests!! The general trade, which had been stopped, was not fully re-opened until the 15th. The Hong Merchant have adopted a new regulation with respect to securing ships, which will have the twofold effect of checking the importation of opium into Canton, by means of ships coming up to Whampoa, and secured by them, and of making the penalty of any such breach of the laws, fall upon the individual offenders, and not upon the whole trade of the port. The Hong Merchants will not secure a vessel until the owner has entered into a penalty bond of 20,000 dollars, to be forfeited and appropriated to the liquidation of foreign claims if any opium be imported on her, and the trade of the particular vessel to be stopped.

Although the trade has been re-opened, however, Ke-shen, Viceroy of Pe-che-lee, has recommended the Emperor to stop the entire foreign trade for several years, until the whole stock of opium in the country shall be exhausted, and then, when the foreigners come begging to be permitted to trade again, to impose upon them the condition of paying for all the goods they purchase in sycee silver, in order that all of the said precious metal which the "traitorous natives" have suffered to "leak out" of the country, may be brought back.

One fact stated in these papers, is curiously illustrative of the state of society and the character of the police in the Celestial Empire. It appears, that the police harpies being authorized to search houses for opium, had abused the privilege, not merely to the extent of harassing the people beyond all endurance in the mode of search, but by actually secreting opium about their persons, in order to leave it in the houses of individuals, to implicate them in a charge affecting their lives! The police myrmidons are supposed to have resorted to this practice in order to extort bribes. One very dreadful instance of the effects of the system is recorded among our extracts. An old man, whose son had been falsely accused and arrested, comes before the Magistrate to appeal against this iniquity, and to offer the bail of himself, and many friends for the prisoner, and his appeals and proposal being treated with contempt, dashes his brains out on the table. This, of course, the celestial functionary regards with perfect sang froid. The young wife then rushes to the tribunal, and being treated in the same manner, immediately cuts her throat. The affair has led to an investigation and a proclamation to quiet the alarms of the people.

Canton papers to the 26th of January, have been received during the week. They intimate, that the state and prospects of the Opium trade are worse, and in Canton itself the drug is perfectly unsaleable. The measures taken by the Chinese Government seem equally effective on the Coasts. Domiciliary visits were being made under the authority of the Viceroy, and the most disgraceful means resorted to, even to the satellites of power secretly depositing the forbidden article in particular houses, so as to lead to the conviction of the unfortunate owners. A violent spirit had shown itself among the people in opposition to the measures of government; meetings had been held, and resolutions adopted for the general protection, one to the effect that the gates should be shut and a search of the searchers made, which so alarmed the Viceroy that by proclamation he forbade any farther domiciliary visits. One letter, after speaking of the depressed state of the trade, says, "we cannot look for any improvement unless the popular discontent generally prevailing, should be manifested in much stronger terms than has hitherto been the case. Every part of the coast of China has been visited by vessels with opium, but without any success worth mentioning, the measures adopted to prevent the trade, being apparently as successful along the whole line, as they have been in this province."

SINGAPORE.

Singapore papers to the 14th of February have been received during the month. They give the following account of the punishment inflicted on the Malay chiefs by the U. S. frigate Columbia and John Adams sloop-of-war.

Commodore Read was at Colombo when intelligence was communicated to him of what had befallen the Eclipse.—he lost no time in repairing to the scene of the outrage, and appeared off Qualluh Batoo, about the 22nd of December last. He touched at this place for the purpose of prosecuting his inquiries, and was not long in ascertaining that almost every Rajah on the coast, from Muckie to Qualluh Batoo, was implicated in the transaction, and had received some share of the plunder of the Eclipse. Information was also obtained that one of the principal actors into the tragedy was at Qualluh Batoo, under the protection of the Rajah of the district, although it could not positively be brought home to the latter that he had actually been a sharer in the plunder. The delivery of the offender, and of the property brought with him to the place, was, however, immediately required by the Captain of the John Adams sloop-of-war in person. The Rajah did not deny that the party was on the spot, but attempted excuses for not being able to deliver him up, by representing that he was very popular in the place, and that there might be some risk in endeavouring to apprehend him and bring him on board. It was then intimated to the Rajah, that no excuse of this kind could be received, that no credit would be given to any representation of his that it was not in his power to seize and deliver up any man acknowledged to be residing within his jurisdiction, and that if he was not secured and sent on-board of the Columbia next day, the Rajah himself should be regarded as equally culpable, and dealt with accordingly. This threat having failed of effect, it was then determined to shew the Rajah, that such conduct would not be put up with, and the ships were hauled in as near to the forts as they could lie in safety, when they opened a cannonade on the town, which was kept up for a quarter of an hour, in the hope of compelling the Rajah to surrender the individual who had been demanded at his hands.

Thus proceeding still failing of success and the object contended for not appearing to call for stronger and more decisive measures, the squadron then proceeded to Muckie. This was understood to be the place from which the nefarious expedition had sailed, and to which the perpetrators belonged, while its chiefs were at the same time known to have sanctioned the outrage. Having arrived at the anchorage off Muckie, the surrender of the culprits and of the property taken, was demanded. The Rajah confesses that five of them were then in and about the place, and in the possession of part of the property, but expressed apprehension that they could not be taken, for the purpose of being delivered up to the Commodore. He was told that unless culprits were delivered up he should be considered as giving them his protection, and as being in receipt of a part of the property plundered from the Eclipse. These threats having been repeated here, as at Qualluh Batoo, without effect, and finding that no redress or satisfaction was to be obtained, a party of three hundred men and thirty officers, were landed from the squadron, who, in the short space of an hour and a half, completely destroyed the town.

There was no effusion of blood on either side, the inhabitants having, on the approach of the assailants, all fled into the jungle, although a battery mounting five guns, as well as the nature of the ground, offered means of resistance which might have caused some annoyance to an assailing force, if it failed of.

It was also ascertained, that another Chief on the Coast, had participated in the plunder, although none of the marauders were living in his territory. The share he acknowledged to have received was Dhs. 2,000, but wisely preferring to reimburse the money and escape the alternative awaiting his refusal, he compounded with the Commodore to pay the amount in two years,—an indulgence which was graciously accorded him.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

The attendance at the Theatre on Thursday night, was again nearly as meagre as on the previous benefit night; the audience was, however, to make up in some measure for the empty state of the benches, and to encourage the performers, far more inclined to applaud, than to decry, the efforts made by the performers for their amusement, and the whole entertainment went off pretty well.

On the drawing up of the curtain, Mrs. Tonson appeared, in the young widow, as Lucy, followed shortly after by her lover Splash. The re-appearance of "Master Modus," elicited general applause. His was certainly the best acting of the evening, but, as it damped by the emptiness of the boxes, and the dull and lifeless performances of one or two of the characters, who ought to have been as active as himself, he did not, in our opinion, "show off" to such perfection as we have before seen him do. His hits and witty expressions, which were thrown in here and there, were very amusing and took amazingly well, as they always do, keeping the audience in a roar of laughter. His imitation of crying also, in the part where he informs the young widow that his master has blown his brains out, was excellent.

Mrs. Chester's appearance as Aurelia Fairlove, drew forth rounds of applause from the audience; her song of "Why are you Wandering?" was most beautifully sung, as was also that of "I'll be no submissive Wife." "The dashing white Serjeant" was not introduced here, as mentioned, in the Programme. It is our opinion that the song "Why are you wandering?" ought not to have been introduced into the body of the play; it would have done much better to have had it between the acts, but as it was, there appeared no meaning for its introduction in the particular part of the play in which it was sung.

In EXCHANGE NO ROBBERY, or the Diamond Ring, "Master Modus," as Sam Swipes, and the Ex-Secretary as Sir Christopher, had it all their own way. Sam was a most excellent character for "Master Modus," to show his powers off to advantage, and his support of it was as good as could be wished; his change of voice from its natural state, was well kept up throughout, and the manners of a poor man setting himself up to be somebody, and wishing to pass himself off as Sir Christopher's lost son, (his sudden rise from poverty to greatness) was acted to the life. The force of habit in early life, was exhibited to all its strength in this character. Sam's clownish manners, and drinking snags, could not be laid aside, though he wished to prove himself a gentleman.

The character of Sir Christopher was well sustained by our ex-Secretary, but we noticed one fault in his acting, and that was his constant and unnecessary contortions of countenance and shaking of his cane, otherwise he was good. To us it appears, this amateur has a great liking to personate characters of shaking old men, and he sustains them well too, but we opine he generally overdoes the shaking and grimacing part of them.

Mrs. Black, as Mrs. Swipes, was as good as could be wished, though she had but little to do. She is an active, useful body and a great assistance to our small corps.

Mrs. Chester had very little to do in the character of Lepelia, but that little was well done. In this comedy she introduced with effect and advantage, the amusing song of "The Dashing White Serjeant," the conclusion of which drew forth general applause and an encore was demanded, and the song was repeated and met with undiminished applause.

The character of Sir Lennox Leinster, was a perfect caricature. Capt. Littleworth and L'Motte were lifeless personations, but Capt. Littleworth's song of "The Land of the West," was very pretty, and smoothly executed. This amateur has a very good and sweet voice, and we should like to hear it oftener on the stage than we do. The shifting of the scenery in this comedy was very bad, and the scenes very old and not at all appropriate. We are extremely sorry that Mrs. Chester has been so unfortunate in both her benefit nights—she is deserving of better treatment at the hands of the community of Calcutta, and, we trust, she will be more fortunate in future.—Herald, April 6.

EXAMINATION OF THE STUDENTS OF THE HINDOO COLLEGE.

The Examination of the Students of the Hindoo College, took place at Government House, last Saturday morning, Sir Edward Ryan in the Chair. The assembly was very large, a considerable number of natives, as might have been expected, being present on the occasion. But we were sorry to observe, that there was but a slight sprinkling of ladies. We can account for this circumstance, only by attributing it to the extreme heat of the day. Those ladies who did honor the Examination with their presence, must have been highly gratified with the prize-Essay, "On the influence of Female Society, in promoting the civilisation of mankind," which cited so many testimonies to the glory of the sex. As a piece of composition, it was really good, written in a free and flowery style, and would have done no discredit to one possessing greater opportunities than a young Hindoo

Of course no very profound argument could be expected, and indeed it was scarcely requisite, as the propositions therein set forth, would, we are sure, receive the immediate acquiescence of every man who understood the language in which they were conveyed. Happy would it be for India, if all his countrymen could be led to adopt and act upon the sentiments of his young author. This Essay (read by the Chairman) formed the commencement of the proceedings. A second one was read as a specimen of those which were considered inferior to that for which the prize had been awarded, and it proved that the successful candidate had not obtained the victory without a hard struggle. It appears that the prize was originally adjudged to another competitor; but it having been discovered, that in the composition of his essay he had made too free with the contents of certain books in the College Library, the award was rescinded. At a subsequent stage of the proceedings, Sir Edward Ryan addressed the class-mates of the youth who had thus attempted to over-reach the Committee. He exhibited to them the folly of such fraudulent attempts, which in the present instance had lost to their school-fellow the prize which he would otherwise have obtained, and was discreditable to his character, he having transgressed the rules of competition with an obvious intent to decide. Sir Edward further explained to them, that the proper way of using and profiting by the writings of others, was not by copying large portions of them and passing them off as our own; but that we should so study them as to make their contents a part of our own stock of knowledge. That it was from this stock alone we should draw, when we attempt a composition which we would claim as our own. After the essays had been disposed of, answers by one of the boys, to a number of historical questions, were read by the Lord Bishop, Sir Edward Ryan acting the part of catechist. These answers, it was said, had been written extempore, the respondent being cut off from all means of reference. If such was really the case, they displayed a profound knowledge of history, as well European as Asiatic.

Then followed the "Recitations" which were given by the younger boys, a great improvement, as we heard a gentleman remark, as it renders this part of the exhibition particularly interesting. The manner in which these youngsters played their parts, was highly gratifying to all present, as was testified by repeated bursts of applause. Their pronunciation was (almost without exception) correct, their delivery energetic, and their action appropriate and graceful. It would, we think, have rejoiced the heart of the "glorious Sir Walter," to have seen and heard a picturesquely attired, swarthy little son of the East, pouring forth those beautiful verses in "The lay of the last Minstrel," commencing with "Breathes there a man with soul so dead," with as much alternate fire and pathos as may be supposed to have animated the breast of the Scott when he added, "This is my own, my native land."

During the intervals of other business, the prizes were delivered to the successful candidates, by Sir Edward Ryan, who addressed a few words of encouragement to each. Altogether, the examination went off well and must, we think, have been a rich treat to those who look to the ~~the~~ ^{the} cause of Education for the moral and physical regeneration of the Natives of India. The meeting broke up at twelve o'clock.—Hurk., April 15.

EXAMINATION OF THE PUPILS OF THE ORIENTAL SEMINARY.

We attended the ninth annual examination of the pupils of the Oriental Seminary, at the Town Hall. Shortly after 10 o'clock, a. m., Sir E. Ryan took the Chair, assisted by the Lord Bishop and the Archdeacon. The boys of the first class then read passages from Milton's Paradise Lost; after which several questions were asked them by the Chairman and his two coadjutors, relating to the History of England and the History of the British Conquest and Settlement in India. The pupils were likewise asked some questions respecting the History of the American Revolution. These they answered tolerably well, but the queries regarding the late Peninsular War, they were unable to answer. They were then tolerably closely examined in Political Economy, Moral Philosophy, Optics, Hydrostatics, Pneumatics, Chemistry, Galvanism and Mathematics, and one of these demonstrated the 47th Problem of the first book of Euclid. In Astronomy they were not so very perfect. The prose and poetical compositions on various subjects, were then read by the Chairman, who said that many of them were excellent in point of style. One of the scholars recited with correct emphasis, an Ode in English, on Milton. This Ode was much commended by the Lord Bishop and the Chairman. The former added, that this was the first instance in which he had heard any poetical composition in the English language, the author of which was a Hindoo, read by the author. After this the second class read a few passages from Shakespeare's Othello. They explained, as they read, the meaning of the passages in the play. When the class had finished reading, Kuttar Mohon Ghose, a pupil of the 1st class, recited Lord Chatham's Speech on the American War. We do not recollect having heard any specimen of English recitation more ably delivered by any Hindoo youth. The recitations concluded by Insurchunder, a pupil of the 2nd class, repeating Collins's Ode on the Pastourel, and the Dialogue between Edward the 4th and the Earl of Warwick, from Home's play of the Earl of Warwick, repeated by Kelly Doss Deb, who performed the part of Edward the 4th, and by Subenath Ghose, who personated the Earl of Warwick, both pupils of the 5th class. The Dialogue went off pretty well, only we thought the voice of the boy who personated the Earl of Warwick, too effeminate for such a character.

After the recitations, the Lord Bishop and Sir Edward

Ryan distributed the prizes to the scholars, accompanying the presents with appropriate speeches. At about 20 minutes to 12 o'clock, the chairman rose and addressed the meeting. He said, that he was sorry to inform them, that owing to some pressing engagements, he and the Lord Bishop were compelled to leave them; but in thus taking his leave, he felt much pleasure in hearing testimony of the high degree of proficiency evinced by the scholars of the seminary, at whose examination he had the honor to pre-side to-day. Their proficiency in many departments of learning, was fully equal to what he had witnessed in any seminary in India, and what was more creditable to them, was the fact that this seminary is not supported by any public institution, but solely by private contributions. Towards the conclusion of his speech, he passed a well-merited compliment on Baboo Gourchurn Diddy, who is the originator of this Institution, and through whose exertions it is mainly supported, and who is, in fact, the sole active manager of it.

After the departure of the Bishop, Sir Edward Ryan, and the Archdeacon, the examination was resumed by Messrs. Montague and Rockford. The third class read from Pope's translation of the Iliad, and were questioned in the History of Greece, Arithmetic and Geometry, in all of which they appeared to be perfectly at home. In consequence of the length of time occupied in the examination of the three senior classes, it became necessary to abridge as much as possible, that appropriated to the junior ones. The 4th, gave specimens of their ability in Reading and Grammar, taking for their subject a passage in the Odyssey.

The 6th read from Gay's Fables, and gave ready and correct answers to Geographical questions, touching the situations of European states, their capital cities, &c. The 6th only read, while those yet lower were not subjected to any examination, as the time would not admit of it. It was, however, delightful to see the little fellows who had claims to them, coming smiling for their prizes, and doubtless many a Hindoo mother last evening rejoiced over these tokens of her son's proficiency in learning. Business did not terminate until 3 o'clock, thus extending through a period of five hours, too long a time to be pleasant, especially, at this season of the year.—Hurk., April 16.

DACCA GOVERNMENT SCHOOL.

The introduction of the natives of this country, into the paths of cultivated knowledge, and literature, and accelerating influence, derived through the media propaganda, of divers institutions established for that end, have lately begun to exhibit their anticipated fruits. From every Seminary of education, whether on elementary, or remunerative principles, we generally hear a cry, either of the superior efficiency of such and such a system, and the greater facility of his method; or, of the rapid improvement of the scholars, and the praise which a certain number of individuals were pleased to confer, upon the learned pedagogue, and his alumni. This is, however, not to be quarrelled with, as a moderate quantity of steam is allowed to every profession; but in the present instance I shall be guided by the results as they actually appeared before me.

The principal Seminary for the education of youth in this quarter, is that established by Government, consisting of upwards of 300 students, who underwent their third Annual Examination on Thursday the 4th instant, in the presence of the principal functionaries, and a few, of the most respectable European, and Native inhabitants, of the city. Amongst the former, I noticed Messrs. Grant, Cooke, Geo. Lamb, Bell, and Revd. H. Shepherd, who, were, apparently much interested in the issue. Besides the early associations, to which such a spectacle is calculated to give rise, other, and more important, thoughts naturally spring up in a reflecting mind.

From those Institutions, emanates the stream of education, which is to awaken the youth of this country from the lethargy of their fathers, and to purify, and cleanse their hearts from the dross, and impurity, of corrupt antiquity. It is to be hoped, that they may flourish and take deep root. They are the lights of the land—the city on the mountain. In them, we acknowledge the incarnation of the tenth avatar, which is to pour the sublimis of another morn upon benighted India.

The following appear to be the leading objects of instruction at this Seminary, English and Bengalee, Arithmetic, History, Geometry, Algebra and Geography.

The four junior classes, consisting of young beginners, were examined in English reading, translating passages into Bengalee, and worked sums, as far as the Rule of Three, which they went through in a creditable manner.

The senior classes, which are under the more immediate superintendence of the head Master, manifested a perfect acquaintance with what they read; analyzing grammatically, each sentence, and translated passages, selected by one of the visitors, with great facility. They solved questions in Algebra and Geometry, displaying great readiness in the former, and regularity in the construction of the diagrams. We were informed, that they could solve, any propositions from the four first Books of Euclid; but only three were proposed by the Gentlemen present, which were solved, in a manner calculated to show, that they perfectly understood what they did.

In Geography they displayed also a pretty familiar acquaintance, not only describing with readiness the situation of countries and their capitals, but tracing, with accuracy, each remarkable river from its source to the ocean in which it discharges itself. The solution of problems on the globe, were also performed with great expedition.

The specimens of penmanship, and the maps in particular, were executed with great taste, and accuracy; indeed, I think it scarcely possible that they could be excelled in any of the other schools.

Considering the utility of Geography in expanding the native mind, we cannot too highly approve of the plan which is adopted to diffuse a knowledge of this branch of study throughout the school.

The recitations of pieces selected from Shakespeare, and other writers, were performed in a becoming manner, and appeared to excite much amusement.

At the close of the examination, Mr. Sinclair, the head master, distributed the prizes, at the request of the visitors, to the most successful candidates, and sjugled out some for good conduct, a circumstance of no small moment in such an establishment. The gentlemen then retired, expressing themselves highly satisfied at the advanced state of the school.

It may be necessary to remark, that the prevailing pronunciation at the school is rather incorrect, which I believe is to be attributed to neglect on the part of those who had charge of the institution during its infancy. Some method seems wanting also to impart the study of language in a more speedy and effectual manner; for it will be found, that some of the learners are seldom able to understand much beyond their immediate lessons. A greater scope in this respect might certainly be allowed, than the mere limits of syntactical rules, which are undoubtedly better retained and applied after some acquaintance with a language than otherwise. They should be considered merely as a means for attaining a certain end.

Something more solid is wanted, and the degree of education requisite, seems to be, not that which would store the memory with an uninteresting catalogue of events, or solitary phenomena, to be forgotten when the discipline of the school has ceased; but rather that which would excite ideas, and leave the imagination free to set upon the resources of the mind. Instead of hurrying a student from one glimpse of science, to another, and filling him with an indigestible mass of crude abbreviation, and deductions; he should be made to run the whole course of every branch he undertakes. The works studied should be standard ones; for it is better that the pupils should acquire a thorough knowledge of one branch than a superficial acquaintance with many. The former would create an avidity for knowledge, and give a lasting stimulus to mental improvement: the latter only leads to vanity and affectation, and in the end is little better than ignorance.

These remarks are not intended to detract from the praise to which the conductors of this institution are entitled, for their unwearied labours, who certainly have proved worthy of their hire, and consequently merit every encouragement from their employers.—Humbart, April 15,

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, have much pleasure in publishing, for general information, the following letter from Timothy A. Curtis, Esq., under date the 19th January last, and of their reply dated 2d instant; as also Report of the Proceedings of a public meeting, held at the London Tavern on the 18th January, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Committee of which Mr. Curtis was chairman.

The Committee learn from private communications that Mr. Curtis and Sir Robert W. Horton, had each had an interview with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in connection with this important matter, and that they were about to have a joint meeting with Mr. Rice; whence it is but fair to conclude, that although, as stated by Mr. Curtis, "the Government and the East-India Company will only treat with a body already formed and ready for action, and not with a prospective Company," still there is no disinclination on the part of the authorities to communicate on the subject. Referring, however, to the above determination of the authorities, it is absolutely necessary that the Company should be formed forthwith; and the Committee have themselves had no hesitation in placing entire confidence in Mr. Curtis and the other gentlemen of the Committee appointed to organize a Company, viz. Messrs. J. P. Larkins, Jas. McKillop, and John Bagshaw.

It will be seen that Mr. Curtis expects, that the Committee will organize so substantial a subscription in Bengal, as will leave no doubt of the deep feeling and interest always expressed here in the success of this great enterprise; and he very justly observes that the people of England will surely expect, in a matter in which our local interests and personal conveniences are so much involved, that our contributions will equal the importance we have attached to the Question. The Committee have pledged themselves, as far as they are concerned, to urge upon the conditional subscribers their own unqualified persuasion, that the honor and consistency of the Indian Public, alike call upon us to respond frankly, and with confidence, to the expectations of the friends of our cause at home; and they, therefore, request a full Meeting of the Subscribers of conditional shares under the notice issued on the 2d September 1837, and of all others who feel disposed to further the present object at the Town Hall on Thursday next the 11th instant, at half past four in the afternoon precisely, for the purpose of taking into consideration the following documents; and the Committee will only add their opinion that, if this appeal is duly responded to, there can be no doubt that, in as short a time as is possible that which we have been so long earnestly seeking, will be attained.

By order of the Committee,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, 3d April, 1839.

London, 19th January, 1839.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq., Steam Committee, Calcutta.

SIR—The accompanying Report of proceedings of a general meeting held yesterday at the London Tavern, at which the Right Hon'ble Sir Robert Wilmot Horton, Bart., late Governor of Ceylon, presided; and the documents which will go forward with the present, and which I shall enumerate at the foot of the letter, will be sufficient to introduce me to your notice, and to account for my addressing you upon the present occasion.

I should not do justice to my own feelings, or to the merits of Captain Barber, the agent in London, for the Steam Committee of Bengal, if I did not commence my observations by saying, that it is to his persevering zeal, activity, and assiduity that India owes, in a great measure, the present position of the question of Steam Communication, via the Red Sea, between Great Britain and the three Presidencies; and I most sincerely congratulate my fellow subjects in India, on the progress which that question has made on the public mind in this country; which I trust will be confirmed by the readiness which will be exhibited in contributing to its being practically carried into effect, and responded to with alacrity in the Peninsula of India.

The Committee, to whose care the investigation of the important subject of Steam Communication with India via the Red Sea was confided, was composed of gentlemen, whose names were well known in India, with the exception of myself, and therefore would, have been a guarantee to your Steam Committee, and to every resident in India, that a desire to carry the measure into effect would accompany their labours, as to the most eligible way of so doing; and I think a perusal of the evidence, and the important answers elicited, will shew that they well fulfilled their duty. The question has been thoroughly sifted, and combining the information, now adduced, with that contained in the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons in 1837, it would seem that nothing now remains to be done but to carry it into practical operation. With that view, the General Meeting of yesterday has appointed Mr. Larkins, Mr. Bagshaw, Mr. McKillop and myself to take measures for the establishment of a company, and to solicit the co-operation of the Chambers of Commerce of the Principal Ports trading to India. To this duty we shall immediately apply ourselves; in the mean time, I must hope that your Committee will organize so substantial a subscription in Bengal, that will leave no doubt of the deep feeling and interest which are felt on your side of the water in the success of this great enterprise, and which can only be ensured by a strenuous and unequivocal effort in its outset. We have always understood, from Captain Barber, that the amount subscribed in Calcutta for the contemplated object, was equivalent to £140,000. Taking the proportions of Madras and Bombay, this amount of subscription would justify our expectation of at least £220, to 230,000 for all India, and a certain number of shares representing a considerable portion of that capital, will be reserved for India, in the proposed company; and in this calculation I hope not to find myself disappointed, as the people of England will surely expect, in a matter in which your local interests and personal conveniences are so much involved, that your contributions will equal the importance you have attached to the question. Your Steam Committee will, I am sure, spare no exertions to realize this expectation; and as I am happy to learn from Captain Barber that the Madras Committee have placed themselves in communication with you on the subject, the united efforts of those two important places cannot fail to produce the desired effect. As much time will be required in the completion of all the arrangements of the projected company, and as the communication between Calcutta and this country is, even with the present imperfect system, practicable in two months, I shall feel greatly obliged by any suggestions your Steam Committee, may be able to afford me in respect to the best mode of conducting the affairs of the Company at Calcutta. You will observe, by the Report of the Committee, that they recommend vessels of 2,000 tons each, and that all the boats should be of the same tonnage, both for the Bombay Station and Calcutta. The obvious reason of this is that, as necessity may require, or as it may suit the inconvenience of momentary arrangement, the Steam Boats may be changed from one station to another. The intention at present, is also to let the Steam Boat which brings the Mail, &c. from Suez (after dropping letters, passengers, &c. for Bombay at Aden) stop at Ceylon and Madras, merely to leave the Mails, Passengers, &c., at those places, and proceed to Calcutta, without changing boat, thus performing a trip of 4,800 miles. The great object in this arrangement is, first to obviate the inconvenience of passengers changing their luggage, &c. so often; and secondly, to afford all the opportunity possible of the frequent overhauling of the Steam Boats at Calcutta, where proper engineers and artificers are more readily and more certainly to be found than in Ceylon. Another essential consideration will also be the agency, and, as it should combine a practical knowledge of shipping and particularly Steam Boats, with the management of the pecuniary and general business of the Company, and as in all these cases economy and check are two important objects to attain, I should hope you will be able to offer me some useful suggestions.

We have still much to do in England before we can come fairly afloat. I think it is probable there will be subscriptions enough, but the plan must be contingent on the concurrence and contributions of the East India Company and the Government; and this offers the difficulty of obtaining subscriptions sufficient to constitute a Company before obtaining that concurrence; whilst, on the other hand, the Government and the East India Company will only meet with a body already formed and ready for action, and not with a prospective Company to be created upon their undertaking to contribute. This latter consideration will act as an additional stimulus to your Steam Committee to urge forward substantial subscriptions, and to transmit them at as early a period as possible. The first call will be 10 per cent.

Having so far introduced myself to you, as Chairman of the Committee of Investigation, and as one of those delegated by the General Meeting to form a Company, I shall conclude with assuring you that, though commercially unconnected with India, I take the liveliest interest in every way that can promote its social, political, and commercial prosperity and happiness; and am anxious to promote any thing that can add to the comforts, conveniences, and social intercourse of my Indian fellow subjects.

I have, &c.

T. A. CURTIS.

P. S. I find Captain Barber has already sent you the minutes of evidence and the Report; and the newspapers, containing the account of the proceedings of yesterday, which account is very limited, will be sent to night, and Capt Barber hopes to send the full particulars by the Marseilles Mail taken by a short-hand writer at the meeting.

T. A. C.

At a PUBLIC MEETING, held at the London Tavern, the Right Hon. Sir R. Wilmot Horton, Bart., in the Chair, to receive the Report of the Committee that were appointed on the 12th of October last, to investigate Captain Barber's plan, and any other that might be submitted to them, for establishing Steam Communication with India via the Red Sea.

On the chair being taken,

Mr. T. Curtis stated, that they had been called together that day, to receive the report of the committee that had been appointed at the previous meeting, and he could assure those who heard him, that the committee had faithfully discharged the duty delegated to them. He had never acted with a body of men with more satisfaction, nor had he ever seen more zeal and ability displayed in carrying out an object, than had been manifested with regard to this subject. It would be improper for him to say more than to call the attention of the meeting to the report which the chairman would read.

The Chairman said that he could corroborate all that had been stated by his honourable friend. The report which he held in his hand was the result of the labours of the committee, and, for his own part, he would say that they had performed their duty in framing it, and in taking the evidence on which it was founded, with admirable success and zeal. The labour which had been entrusted to them was by no means of a light kind, and the report had been drawn up, and the evidence taken, after a model of the proceedings of a committee of the House of Commons, before which he believed that it would be generally allowed the best mode of investigating a subject was pursued. He need hardly add that the report deserved their most serious consideration.

The right hon. gentleman then read the following REPORT.

"The committee appointed at the public meeting on the 12th October, 1838, to investigate the question of steam communication, have agreed to the following report:—

"Your committee having attentively considered the various plans for the establishment of steam communication with the presidencies of India and Ceylon, via Egypt and the Red Sea, by means of a private company, together with the explanations and suggestions submitted to them in the course of that investigation; and having had the advantage of much information on sundry points relating to the general object of inquiry, are strongly impressed with the importance so justly attached to this great and interesting object.

"Your committee are of opinion, that a monthly communication, combining regularity and dispatch, so ardently desired, but hitherto so unsuccessfully attempted, may be effectually secured through the instrumentality of a private association, and that by such agency alone can it be accomplished.

"To establish and maintain this communication, the committee consider that seven vessels, viz., four for the Indian, and three for the European side, of not less than 2,000 tons each, and 500 horse-power, with the necessary accommodation boats on the Nile and Mahmeedee canal, will be required; and from the information before them, they believe that these vessels may be built and equipped in the very best manner, including machinery of the most approved description; that the various depôts for coal, and all other needful buildings, may be provided on a gross outlay of £520,000; and that the annual expenditure on the undertaking, including interest upon the £520,000, at five per cent., with twenty-one per cent., for insurance and wear and tear, with charges for management in Europe, Egypt, and India, may be estimated at £250,000.

"In order, therefore, at once to place the undertaking in a position of undoubted efficacy to carry out the scheme with perfect success, your committee recommend, that the capital of the proposed company should not be less than £600,000.

"To meet the annual disbursements your committee consider that the projectors should look for returns from the following sources, viz., passengers, periodicals, specie, and valuable light parcels and an annual payment from her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, for carrying the mails and dispatches to and from the several presidencies of India and Ceylon and for a monthly conveyance of the mails to and from Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria.

"Your committee purposely refrain from specifying any amount of income, to be reckoned upon from these sources. It appears, however, from approved data, that from 3,500 to 4,000 persons pass annually between India and the United Kingdom; and it may, therefore, fairly be assumed that a large proportion of that number will avail themselves of superiority of accommodation, and the certainty and rapidity of conveyance which such a company would assure to them. The committee look also for a considerable annual sum from the conveyance of specie, periodicals, light parcels, &c.; and they feel themselves justified in the expression of their belief that the return from these sources will annually increase.

"With respect to the last source, your committee are decidedly of opinion, that any company, formed, with an adequate capital, for the purposes of carrying out the contemplated communication, would be entitled to receive an annual sum from her Majesty's government and the East India Company, for a limited period, not only for conveying the mails and despatches, but also in consideration of the vast benefits, political, social, and commercial, which such international communication cannot fail to confer.

"In the size of the vessels proposed, your committee have considered, not only the accommodation essential to the comfort of the passengers who form the principal source of return, but also the complete adaptation of the vessels for other service, should any contingency arise to interrupt the course by the Red Sea.

"As one of the inducements to the Red Sea route will be the comparative shortness of time in which the several passages to and from the respective presidencies in India can be accomplished, the following table may be taken, to show the extent of time to be occupied on the passage:—

"England and Alexandria, including touching days.
at Gibraltar and Malta.....	15
"Passage through Egypt to Suez....	5
"Suez to Bombay.....	15
—35
"England to Suez.....	20
"Suez to Ceylon.....	18
"Ceylon to Calcutta, touching at Madras	7
—45

"In the homeward voyage some allowance is to be made for quarantine; but your committee have to observe that the steamer will not perform it at Malta or any other intermediate port, but on arrival in England, and they confidently anticipate that agreeably to the custom which obtains in her Majesty's service, the duration of quarantine will be diminished by the number of days occupied on the passage from Alexandria to England. So that the objection, which only applies to the homeward voyage, will not generally affect the computation beyond an additional five days.

"In consequence of its forming part of the plan submitted by Captain Barber to the committee a considerable portion of their attention, in the course of the inquiry was directed to the subject of iron steam-boats, but notwithstanding the strong testimony borne to the increasing advantages which are anticipated from the substitution of iron for wood, in the construction of steamers, and generally in marine architecture, the committee do not feel that present experience warrants their recommending its adoption for vessels of this class, and for the distant employment contemplated in the plan recommended in this report.

"Your committee carefully abstain from offering any opinion which might lead to the indulgence of unauthorized expectations of profit, but they have no hesitation in expressing their belief, that with the resources of capital already admitted to, and under efficient management, the project may be carried into effect with undoubted important advantages to India and the United Kingdom, and with every prospect of a reasonable return for the capital employed.

"In concluding their report, your committee desire to record the sense of obligation which they feel to the Right Honorable Lord W. Bentinck for his readiness in favouring them with the plan contemplated by his lordship; they likewise sensibly appreciate the information afforded by the several gentlemen who were so good as to comply with the committee's request, to attend for that purpose; and they feel it to be especially due to Captain Barber, to bear testimony to the zeal manifested by him in discharging the trust reposed in him by the Bengal Steam Fund Committee, as well as to the valuable assistance he has afforded throughout the proceedings of this committee.

"London. 18th January, 1839."

The following resolutions were then unanimously agreed to:—

Moved by Charles Woodcock, Esq., B. C. S., seconded by Major General Biggs, Madras Army.

1. That the Report now presented by the Committee appointed at the last General Meeting of the 12th of October, 1838, held at the Jerusalem College House, be received.

Moved by Sir John Rae Reid, Bart., M. P., seconded by T. C. Smith, Esq.

2. That the daily increase of a quick and certain intercourse between Great Britain and her immense possessions in the East India,—whether the subject is considered politically or commercially,—renders it highly necessary that the intercourse should be sustained by a private company, whose sole object would be to afford such means of conveyance of letters, newspapers, and periodicals; and such accommodation to passengers as shall insure a constant and certain monthly communication between Great Britain and the three Presidencies of India and Ceylon;—and whose future views may be directed to the extension of that communication, to the Straits, China, the Mauritius, and Australia.

Moved by Major Oliphant, Madras Engineers, and seconded by Robert Neave, Esq., B. C. S.

3. That experience has already shown that the route by way of Egypt and the Red Sea, offers the quickest and most eligible channel of communication with India and Ceylon, and that with proper management and uniformity of arrangement, it might be effected with undeviating regularity.

Moved by Robert Small, Esq., and seconded by Charles Kerr, Esq.

4. That T. A. Curtis, J. P. Larkins, J. Bagshaw and James Mackillop, Esqs., be requested to take measures for forming a Board of Direction, and preparing a Prospectus to carry out the proposed company, and that the East India Association of London, and the respective Chambers of Commerce of Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, Bristol, and Birmingham, be respectively invited to co-operate with the proposed Company.

Moved by J. Bagshaw, Esq., and seconded by Timothy A. Curtis, Esq.

5. That the thanks of this meeting are due to the Steam Committees of Calcutta and Madras, and to the other advocates of Steam Communication with India on a comprehensive plan, by way of the Red Sea.

Moved by Mr. Ridgway, and seconded by Major Oliphant, Madras Engineers.

6. That this meeting appreciate the services of Mr. Waghorn, and the advantages conferred by his zeal and perseverance in promoting the communication with our Indian possessions; and this meeting feel that it is due to Mr. Waghorn to record their sense of his conduct by cordially thanking him for his unremitting attentions to the wants of all persons interested in the important object.

Moved by G. G. De H. Larpent, Esq., and seconded by J. P. Larkins, Esq.

7. That the thanks of this meeting are pre-eminently due to the Right Honorable Sir Robert Wilmot Horton, Bart., for his patient, able and impartial conduct in the chair this day.

ROBERT WILMOT HORTON, Chairman.

To T. A. Curtis, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

Sir,—I have the honor, by the direction of the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 19th January last, which reached Calcutta yesterday (Sunday) afternoon.

The Committee have lost no time in giving to the report of the Committee of which you were Chairman, and the gratifying proceedings of the public Meeting at the London Tavern, held on the 18th January, the best consideration which the shortness of the period prior to the departure of the next mail, viz. to-morrow, enables them to afford. They have perused your letter, the report of the Committee, and the resolutions of the public meeting with feelings of the most intense satisfaction.

They are gratified at the testimony borne by you to the persevering zeal, activity, and assiduity of their Agent, Capt. Barber, and they accept with cordial thanks, your congratulations on the progress which the question has made in the public mind in England, which they are well aware is not in a little degree owing to your disinterested exertions. On their own parts, the Committee feel earnestly desirous, and they cannot doubt that the public at large will be equally so, to manifest their grateful confidence in those who have laboured so assiduously and so disinterestedly in the good cause at home.

The Committee, therefore, although the details of the scheme are still incomplete, will, after publishing the present correspondence, and the proceedings of the 18th January last, at once call a full meeting of the conditional subscribers in the list adverted to by you, at which the public generally will be invited to attend; and the Committee will then urge the shareholders, as the most conclusive proof of the sense we entertain of the warm feeling in favor of the comprehensive scheme exhibited by your meeting—as due to our own honor and consistency, and as manifesting in the most unquestionable manner the unabated and intense interest we feel in the settlement of this vital question, to pay up immediately an instalment of 10 per cent., on their respective shares, as shareholders in any scheme under which steamers will start monthly, viz. the Mediterranean and Red Sea, for Ceylon, Bombay, Madras and Calcutta, in the manner contemplated by your proceedings, held on the 18th January last, and which scheme may afford, in the opinion of the London Committee, the fair prospect of a moderate return upon the capital invested.

This Committee entirely concur in the expediency of large Steamers of 2000 tons being employed; and in their being all of the same size and for the reasons assigned by you; in addition to the very important one, that intermediate depots for coals will not be required and a great consequent saving will take place.

Touehing the Indian management, it is a question which requires considerable deliberation; and, pressed as they are for time, the Committee would not now desire to commit themselves to any opinion on the subject; perhaps it may ultimately be found that the simplest and most economical course will be the appointment of an Agency House to conduct the business of the Company at each of the several Presidencies, subject to rendering accounts and receiving instructions at half yearly meetings of the resident shareholders, reports being forwarded to the Home management. There will never be more than two Steamers at Calcutta at the same time, and an House of Agency is fully competent to the transactions of every thing connected with them. Upon this subject, however, the Committee will deliberate further.

That the Steamers shall at all times be in an efficient state for service can be best provided for, in the opinion of this Committee, by a clause in the agreement with the public authorities, that the vessels shall, after each voyage, be surveyed and reported upon by the public officers of Government Engineers as well as Marine Surveyors, with whose directions the Agents should be bound to comply; these officers might or might not be paid for such surveys and reports as may be agreed upon.

There are only two other points referred to in the Report of your Committee on which this Committee venture to offer remark.

The first is the proposed carriage of the Gibraltar and Malta Mails; for as the Steamer is to touch at those places it is presumed they are to carry the Mediterranean Mails. On this the Committee would observe that of course delay must take place, and it is feared at home inconvenience in respect to Passengers. If it could be arranged that the Steamer should proceed direct between England and Alexandria, it appears to this Committee that it would be preferable. This is, however, a mere suggestion. Probably it may be held necessary to connect the whole Mediterranean intercourse with that to India. If necessary it must of course be done; but if not absolutely necessary, the Committee are of opinion that the direct course would be preferable.

The report refers to the necessary accommodation boats on the "Nile" and "Mahmoodes Canal." This Committee have already thrown out a suggestion to Capt. Barber whether it might not be practicable and advantageous that such of the Passengers as left India proceeding direct to England together with the mails, &c., should pass from Suez across the Isthmus direct to the Mediterranean, there to embark on the English Steamer. The Committee refer you for the grounds on which this suggestion is offered, to Capt. Barber, who has been put in communication with Mr. Walne, the British Consul at Cairo, on this and other matters connected with Egypt. One great advantage arising from this arrangement would be the saving of all the expense on the Nile and Mahmoodes Canal. Very little additional expense would be caused by the transit from Suez direct to the Mediterranean, than would be required between Suez and Cairo; and if the English Steamer was placed under proper surveillance and allowed no intercourse with the shore beyond the receipt of the direct passengers, mails, &c. from India, there would be the least possible pretence for Quarantine: the plague never having been known to exist at Suez, and the route thence to the Mediterranean being through the desert; and entirely free from intercourse with any town.

The present proposal is, that the communication shall be monthly, the Committee hope that by this is meant every 28 days, or according to the Lunar month. They would much urge that being the regular period of departure, instead of once in every solar month.

The utter insufficiency of the present system cannot be more clearly shewn than by the present actual mail. Yesterday your letter under acknowledgement was received; in your postscript you say that Capt.

Barber has already sent the minutes of evidence and the report, and that the newspapers containing the count of the proceedings of the meeting of the 18th January, would be despatched on the date of your letter. Neither of them has arrived, nor can they be depended upon with any certainty for two or three days, or after the latest safe date for despatching letters by this mail.

In conclusion, the committee desire me to express their unbounded gratitude to you for the invaluable aid you have afforded to the cause in which they have been so long engaged. It is scarcely possible for persons at home to appreciate the full extent of the comfort and happiness which a certain and rapid communication with this remote country affords to many thousands of their European fellow subjects here; while to our native brethren, bound up as their fate is with the interests and prosperity of this great and splendid country, the beneficial consequences of certain and rapid communication with the heart of that Empire, whereof India is the noblest branch, are wholly incalculable. When, therefore, the communication we now so confidently anticipate shall be effected, you may conceive how much we shall have to be thankful for; and you may be assured, Sir, that the remembrance of those who have, like yourself, come forward with such disinterested zeal on this great question, will not cease to be associated, the gratitude of an entire people, with the most important measure ever devised for their social improvement and general prosperity.

I have, &c.

C. B. GREENLAW;

Secy. Com. N. B. S. F.

True Copies,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secy. N. B. S. F.

Town Hall, Calcutta, 2d April, 1839.—Hark. April 5.

APRIL 15, 1839.

Notwithstanding an oppressively hot afternoon, nearly three hundred friends and supporters of the cause of Steam Navigation in India, assembled at the Town Hall, in pursuance of the notice published in the newspapers.

At a little before 5 P. M. Dwarkanath Tagore, seconded by Mr. H. M. Parker, called Mr. Cockerell to the chair, and the cheers that followed announced the approbation of the meeting.

It was not necessary, observed the chairman, to call attention to the subject for which the meeting had been convened; for he was certain no one present could be ignorant on that point; he would, however, in compliance with established usage, read the requisition by which the meeting had been called. He then read the notice, and said he would omit the reading of the other papers connected with the subject, which had been published. He concluded by inviting those who had resolutions to move, to address the chair.

Mr. LONOUVILLE CLARKE.—I have been requested by my friend our Secretary, to open the business of this day, by proposing for your consideration the first resolution. I wish that my friend had committed it to other hands, to some one less frequently heard in these Halls, and whose station in the services of society would deservedly give him with you, more weight, than that to which I can aspire. But, gentlemen, my friend, Mr. Greenlaw, not only expressed, but more than urged on me, the performance of this duty, and I felt, what I believe every man who hears me feels, that I would but shame the honest heartiness I entertain for this great measure, if I shrunk from any task, which our zealous, indefatigable and inestimable Secretary desired me to attempt. (loud cheers) The resolution which have to move is this.

Resolved, with reference to the determination of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, only to treat with a body already formed and prepared to establish a comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India, by way of the Red Sea, it is the opinion of this meeting, that such a Company should be forthwith established, on the most substantial foundation.

I need not detain this meeting by entering into any detail of the persevering efforts which have been made by the Inhabitants of India to establish permanently Steam Navigation with Europe. It became evident on the very earliest attempts, that assistance in Europe was indispensable, and the great object has been to obtain that aid, by exciting in England a strong feeling in favor of the plan. Petitions, memorials, and pamphlets, backed by private communications, have followed each other in rapid succession, and contributed to the great work of agitation, agitation. In Lord William Bentinck we have found a faithful and powerful auxiliary, and the influence and exertions of Mr. Curtis, and the unwearied zeal of Captain Barber, have hastened the wished for crisis. The letter which has been read to you by our chairman, has apprized you, that Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, have refused to treat with any but an established body I think them right, for if Steam Communication be required by the people of England and India, it behoves the people to commence the work, and not ask for assistance until they have performed something themselves. It was in consequence of this determination of Government and the India Company, that the great meeting of the 12th of October was held in London, and it was there that Capt. Barber, our Agent, announced, that when the proceedings of that day were known in Calcutta, there would be no lack of means to carry the object into effect. The time has now arrived when you must stand by your Agent, eye and stand by yourselves—when you must show that you have not made promises which you are not prepared to perform,—that you have not made speeches to which there is no response but the echo,—that your professions are not hollow and empty,—that if you could agitate, you can also act, and if you fill the press with paragraphs, you have now your purses to hand over, and will pay for the shares you have pledged yourselves to take, (loud cheers.)

Now is the time for action; agitation has done its work; there is no want of zeal, no want of unanimity, no want of skill, no want of talent, no want of experience, money is all that is wanted. Money you have promised, and let our friends and supporters in England, see that we are really hearty in the cause by faithfully redeeming the pledge we have given, (Cheers.)

The advantages of a permanent steam communication between England and India, have been so often and so well described, that it is needless to detain the meeting by dwelling on this point; but one remark I cannot refrain from making, called forth as it is by the present state of politics in Europe, and the great change which appears to be taking place in British interests. Scarce half a century has passed since England lost her American possessions, then emphatically called the brightest jewel in her diadem; by the glorious abolition of slavery her West Indian Colonies are hourly depreciating in value, the vast Provinces of Canada seem to be slipping from her grasp, and every Mail brings fresh accounts that each continental town is rivaling her in what she has been hitherto unrivalled, in arts, manufactures and trade. This sketch is true. The prospect is gloomy, but England may still cheer herself by looking to her eastern possessions; there her influence is felt and supremacy acknowledged, through countries containing ten times as many square miles as compose the British Islands, and five times the number of their united population. There are soils unsurpassed for fertility, products which for ages have constituted the world's wealth, and all the capabilities of this mighty population and vast continent, yet in their infancy. It may be, that the attention of those at home, the far-seeing and deep-thinking, has at last been roused to the great changes taking place in British interests, and has made them turn to the East as the land of promise. There is but one obstacle, the distance, the vast tract of sea, and the Cape of storms, which will not, I believe, be ever overcome by schemes like Sir John Ross's, which are not much thought of here; but this geographical obstacle can be readily vanquished by the Red Sea navigation, and steam will prove the bridge which will unite England to India. But it is not British interests which are alone concerned; when the energy, capital and skill of that great nation are brought to the threshold of this country, improvement will spread through every department, and the artisan and the cultivator of every grade will be benefited, as the qualities of the products, and the demands for them increase. To the European it is of more importance; he has come to India for fortune, and with the prosperity of the country, his own is linked; but he may have dearer and stronger ties, wife, children, parents friends will be no longer beyond the possibility of reach, and the period now occupied in a homeward sea voyage will bear him to them, bring him back, and permit him to remain with them for as long a time, as both the trips consume. To Britain, to India, and above all to you, my fellow countrymen in India, is the steam communication of immeasurable importance. Is there one who hears me who does not feel, and acknowledge it? (cheering.) Then let me again remind you that now is the time, that the crisis has arrived, that England has come forward to accomplish the great work, that she has called upon you for the performance of your pledge, that if you fail to perform it, every claim that you have on her will be dissipated, but if steadfast to your faith, you act within the hour, you secure the co-operation of England, her Government, and the India Company.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures — (cheering.)

Gentlemen, the tide is now in full force and in your favor, and it is your duty not to let slip the vantage. (Loud cheers.)

Dwarkanath Tagore, in rising to second Mr. Clarke's resolution, found it scarcely necessary to say anything upon the subject which that gentleman had so fully and ably commented upon. He would only say a few words regarding his own countrymen. Among other advantages which they would derive from the establishment of Steam Communication between the two countries, it should be remembered, that England was the last place where their grievances, whatever they be, could be redressed, and that every step taken towards reducing the distance between the two countries, was an advantage gained in obtaining redress, which under the circumstances that had hitherto prevailed, every body knew, could not be obtained but after years delay and seldom in a satisfactory manner. He therefore hoped his countrymen would now come forward to support the measure that had been set on foot, by taking shares.

The resolution was then put and carried unanimously.

Mr. FERGUSON.—The object of the Resolution which I am about to submit for your approval, is the conjoining the conditional subscriptions which were made here about two years ago, to those which we hope have been liberally made at home, and thus to cement the plans and unite the efforts of all engaged in this important measure.

The Committee nominated at home, are Mr. Curtis, Mr. Larkins, Mr. Mackillop and Mr. Bagshaw; the three last are well known to us from having been long resident in India, and the first most favorably recommended to us, by the deep interest he has taken in a matter not otherwise affecting him than as one feelingly alive to all that concerns the social and moral position of his distant fellow subjects.

I think we could not make a better selection, and to prove our continued earnestness in the cause and readiness to act, it is finally proposed, that an instalment, say 10 per cent., should be immediately paid up in the names of the Trustees, to be disposed of as may be hereafter decided on.

Resolved.—That Messrs. Timothy A. Curtis, John P. Larkins, James McKillop and John Bagshaw, having been appointed a Committee in London, to organize such a Company, the conditional subscribers, having entire confidence in those gentlemen, and feeling earnestly desirous to manifest, in the most incontrovertible manner, their intense and undiminished interest in the scheme of Comprehensive Steam Communication between great Britain and India, do forthwith pay up ten per cent. on the amount of their subscriptions, or at the rate of Rs. 50 per share of Rs. 500, into the Union Bank, to the Credit of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, as Trustees of such Company.

Mr. GREENLAW rose, in the midst of loud and continued cheering, from every side, and said, he felt much pleasure in seconding the resolution moved by Mr. Ferguson. He then adverted to the progress which the cause of steam had made, during which, although there were some occurrences which had disappointed his expectations, there had occasionally been much to afford gratification; but never had he so much cause to be gratified as now, when the people at home had come forward effectually to set the work a going; when, from the numbers by whom he was surrounded, he had full proof that there would be no want of aid and assistance from Calcutta; and he was satisfied that there would be no hesitation in their passing the resolution. But should there be, which he did not believe to be possible, any one or more persons indisposed to aid in the letter and spirit of that resolution, he was happy to say that what he held in his hand, might be considered as passing it by anticipation.

When the committee determined to appeal to the Indian Public, to come forward at once with bond fide subscriptions, and to pay forthwith an instalment of 10 per cent., he had thought it right to ascertain what the people of Calcutta might be disposed to do. He had accordingly referred to as many persons as he could conveniently call upon, and the result was, that he held in his hand the consent of 121 firms and individuals, to subscribe for 1,262 shares, or rupees 6,31,000 (cheers.)

There were several gratifying features connected with the list. First, the greater part of those who have now subscribed positively, have subscribed for more shares than they did when subscribing conditionally; when called upon to put their hands in their pockets, they had not been contented to hold to the number of conditional shares—they had not reduced them, but they had

* Mr. Greenlaw by mistake said 7 lacs increased them in many cases by more than doubling them (loud cheers.)

At the top of the list stood the house, of which the zealous, active, and worthy chairman was at the head. He had led off by subscribing for one hundred shares, or half a lac of rupees; (continued cheers,) the conditional shares taken by the house had only been thirty-seven. This noble example had been followed by four other houses, each subscribing for one hundred shares, viz. Boyd and Co., Carr, Tagore and Co., Fergusson, Brothers and Co., and Lyall, Matheson and Co.; and the other houses had generally subscribed liberally. Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co., had taken fifty shares; but there was one individual subscription which should not be passed over without notice. One native gentleman had subscribed for fifty shares. It was Mutty Lal Seal, (much cheering).

Another gratifying feature was the fact, that the 1262 shares now subscribed for, which had been obtained within a week, and the first instalment of 10 per cent. on which he hoped to have collected by the end of the present week, amounted to half the whole amount conditionally subscribed throughout the continent of India, with the exception of Madras. He had said that he had never before risen in that Hall with so much gratification as on the present occasion, and had he not shewn sufficient cause for that gratification?

Another gratifying feature in the list, was the number of native subscribers. These amounted to 34 out of 121, and they had subscribed for 121 shares or rupees 61,500. There would have been many more, but he had not, of course, the same opportunity of referring to native gentlemen as he had with others. He hoped that he had shewn sufficient cause to induce the meeting readily to pass the Resolution, and having done so, he should now content himself with seconding it.

MR. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.—Gentleman, in consequence of what has fallen from Mr. Greenlaw, regarding the unanimity which prevails in India on the subject of Steam Navigation, let me take this opportunity of remarking, that the same unanimity extends to England. Of this, a remarkable instance was offered at the great meeting in London on the 12th of October. Of the numbers who were there assembled, there were only two in whom a difference of opinion was found. One was Mr. Larpent, who moved an amendment; the other was Mr. Ridgway, by whom it was seconded. I have not the honor of having any personal acquaintance with Mr. Larpent, but no man can respect him more than I do, for the high character which he deservedly bears as a merchant and a citizen. But I cannot say, gentlemen, that my respect for his character, extends to his logic, as I have rarely met with a more amusing specimen of reasoning than is furnished to us in the report of his speech. I presume that it will be conceded to me, that this great steam plan, can only be carried into effect by the English Government, the India Company, or a Private Company. The object of the meeting was to form a private company, but it was evident that Mr. Larpent did not admire this plan, for he said, and I am adding his own words: "With respect to the present plan, he felt bound to express his doubt as to whether a private company could perform the service so efficiently as it would be by the Government. He confessed that he should hesitate as a merchant to treat this important subject to the management and control of any single and irresponsible body." Disliking, therefore, to trust a private company, you will naturally suppose, that Mr. Larpent had discovered something more attractive in the management of the Government, or of the East India Company. But no such thing. No Private Company had been formed; he could only, therefore, distrust them on the ground of anticipated inefficiency. But Mr. Larpent did not deign to indulge in anticipations about the Company and the Government; like a bold man and a keen observer, he discovers and exposes their backslidings, not anticipated, but committed. Of the "East India Company" he says, that he thought they had "failed in their duty in not causing efficient steamers to be built for the Red Sea, and also in taking the steam boats off this duty for military and political purposes." A grave charge, gentlemen, and which we in India know to be true. Then of the Queen's Government, he says, "that there could be no doubt as to the injurious nature of the contract entered into with the General Steam Navigation Company. The letters sent by Mr. Waghorn, through France, were received seven or eight days before those conveyed by the Steamer."

How then stands the case as stated by Mr. Larpent. There are but three bodies by whom the Steam Navigation can be conducted. The India Company have acted, and they have built boats which were inefficient, and instead of employing them, they have taken them off their duty. The Queen's Government have acted, they have only made a Postal Office contract, which is of most injurious nature, and has been beaten by the private enterprize of a single individual. The last body of all the private Steam Company has not yet been formed,—they have done nothing for better or worse; but, anticipating their errors, Mr. Larpent, as a merchant, hesitates to trust them (a laugh). In short, gentlemen, nothing could please him, and as you may well suppose, such a style of reasoning did not much please the meeting; whereupon Mr. Larpent grew more reasonable, and withdrew his amendment; thus evincing that the only opposition offered failed to make even the opposer himself, steady to his purpose.

The CHAIRMAN, adverting to what had fallen from Mr. Clarke, regarding Mr. Larpent's conduct on the occasion, did not think that gentleman had acted so inconsistently as his friend Mr. Clarke had made it appear. He certainly admitted, that there was some inconsistency on the part of Mr. Larpent; but he did not think it was quite so bad as Mr. Clarke had stated. He then put the resolution to the vote, and it was carried unanimously.

MR. G. HARDING, seconded by Mr. Burkinyoung, moved

The following resolution.

Resolved.—That the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, be authorized to remit, by the earliest opportunity, after receipt of the Prospectus drawn up by the Committee appointed for that purpose in London, to the Directors of such Company, whatever sums may have been paid in up to the date of its despatch, to be subject to such Rules and Provisions as may be established in regard to subscriptions for Shares in England.

MR. J. CRAIG, considered the remitting of the money to England an objectionable course; by so doing he thought this community would lose every opportunity of controul over the funds, and would not be able to build any steam vessels here, which he considered very desirable, in consequence of the superiority of them to those built in England. What was the use, he asked, of remitting money before it was actually wanted in England, and he recommended, to the consideration of the meeting, the propriety of keeping the funds here.

MR. H. M. PARKER.—I believe that I can reply to my friend Mr. Craig's questions, and I feel persuaded that my reply will convey the sense of this meeting. Our proposition then, to remit the money, proceeds from our wish, our anxiety, our determination, to show our full, free and entire confidence, in our friends at home, (cheers.) After what they have done they deserve this at our hands, (cheers.) But where is a single reason for withholding such confidence? The merchants and men of mercantile influence in England have come and are coming frankly and numerous-ly into the scheme of comprehensive steam navigation. Bristol alone proffers a hundred thousand pounds, if the scheme be a good one. Now, I would ask, are the men engaged in this undertaking, people who would cast their money into the sea, or incur certain personal loss merely for the sake of promoting a beneficial intercourse between Great Britain and India? I will venture to say that they will do nothing so Quixotic, and if we cannot confide in them as friends, which God forbid we should not! we may safely confide in them as merchants and men of business. But if my friend Mr. Cragg and others here assembled, have read the correspondence our committee has had with Mr. Curtis, they will not have forgotten how our assurance on behalf of the British Indian Public, (an assurance here happily and proudly realized) was worded. We expressed our conviction that the Indian public would joyfully acquiesce in any scheme for a quick and constant communication between the two countries by way of the Red Sea, which should, in the opinion of the London Committee, afford the fair prospect of a moderate return upon the capital invested. Mr. Cragg adverts to the expediency of building a couple of the steamers in India, and assigns what appear to me excellent reasons for the measure. I have not so good a mercantile head as my friend, but I will venture to say, that the London Company will be composed of men who properly understand the value of a pound sterling, and neither of fools nor spendthrifts. To such men, I repeat, we may safely confide this matter, as well as others, with a full assurance that if it is better and more profitable to build the Steamers adverted to in India, they will so be built. Thus much speaking of the concern as a merely mercantile speculation, we may confide in our friends at home, we may confide in the interests which will be embarked in it there, as giving us assurance that there will be at least every reasonable prospect of its success in a gainful point of view. But as we have a higher and dearer interest at stake than that involved in a few rupees, more or less, of profit upon our shares, so have we higher and nobler motives than ordinary for confidence in the London Committee. They have shown themselves true, staunch, and indefatigable friends to our great cause,—friends deserving of our most unqualified trust. Again, therefore, let me express my anxious, my earnest hope, that this meeting will testify, by its proceedings, the most implicit reliance, and the most entire confidence, in those whose names are a guarantee for their honor, and whose past exertions demand our warmest gratitude (cheers).

CAPTAIN THOMPSON hoped there would be no jobbing in this case, as there was in many others, (hear, hear, and some laughter). He saw no reason why the funds should not be retained and steamers built here. The Indian built vessels he thought far better adapted to these seas than any that could be constructed in England; he, therefore, strongly recommended the adoption of the measure, and hoped there would be no jobbing.

CAPTAIN TAYLOR said, that so long as the funds remained here, interest could be obtained upon them, and he, therefore, thought the money might be allowed to remain until required in England.

After CAPT. TAYLOR had sat down, Mr. CLARKE stated that he thought the word required in the resolution objectionable. This made it imperative on the Committee to send the money to England, no matter what might occur. He would move, as an amendment, that the word authorized be inserted. This would vest the Committee with a discretion, and it could not be placed in better hands. The method of managing the funds should never be discussed at public meetings; for the greater the number, the greater would be the diversity of opinions, and the less opportunity for deliberate consideration. The sole object of a general meeting, was to provide the funds, and to elect a trusty committee for their management.

CAPTAIN HARRINGTON thought the question was confined within very narrow limits. The entrusting of 14 or 15 thousand pounds to the committee appointed in London, was the sum total of the whole, and he did not think that any objection could be raised on that score.

MR. GREENLAW observed, that he understood something had been said touching the expediency of building some of the steamers here, and of requiring of the parties at home that it should be done. He, of course, from his infirmity, could not exactly know what had been said; but as the subject had been adverted to, he would observe, that he had long thought, on the whole, that it would be better to build the vessels in England; but the late examination of the Forbes, after ten years' service, when she might with truth be said to be nearly as good as the day she was launched, had caused a thorough change in his opinion. He now thought that all the Indian Steamers should be built here; but as we can scarcely, in all India, subscribe even a third of the whole amount, we could not controul the acts of the parties in England; therefore, all that we could do, was to furnish the parties at home with the fullest possible information; to suggest and recommend, leaving to them to adopt such of our suggestions as they might think proper; and we might confidently rely on their doing that which would be most beneficial.

The resolution was then put in the form suggested by Mr. Clarke, and carried unanimously.

CAPTAIN TAYLOR moved the following resolution.

Resolved.—That this meeting, feeling anxiously desirous to co-operate with the conditional subscribers, in every measure testifying the unabated desire existing in the country for the speedy establishment of the comprehensive scheme, do recommend to the public at large, to adopt all measures which may be most likely at this juncture to show the unceasing interest with which this vital question is regarded by Her Majesty's subjects in India.

No particular remark was called for in support of his resolution; for in this part of India it was fully admitted, that the comprehensive scheme would alone answer. Therefore, all that he would urge on the public, was to be unanimous in their support of the cause, and to pay down the money, which was now the only thing wanted to ensure success.

The above resolution having been seconded by PROBONO COMA TAGORE, was carried nem. con.

CAPTAIN TAYLOR would call the attention of the meeting to one particular, which had not yet been taken into consideration on the present occasion; this was the delay and difficulty of crossing the Isthmus; but he would assure the meeting, that means had become available, by which these obstacles could be successfully surmounted. The power of camels in draft had lately been tried and found to be very great indeed. He had not long ago witnessed the success of this in the Upper Provinces; and he felt convinced that by this means one might easily go across the Isthmus with his wife, children and all, comfortably, and in the short space of 12 hours; indeed this journey appeared to him capable of being rendered as easy as a trip hence to Barrackpore.

MR. CLARKE, adverting to the interest which Mr. Cockerell had always evinced in the cause of steam communication between England and India, and to the support his firm had now given to it, proposed the usual vote of thanks to him as the chairman on the occasion; after which the meeting was dissolved.—End., April 17.

MEETING OF THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.

About six hundred individuals, assembled at the Town Hall last Tuesday night, to hear Mr. G. W. Johnson deliver the introductory lecture to the Mechanics' Institution; but there were very few ladies present. A little after half past seven, Mr. Johnson made his appearance, and, in the absence of the President, was introduced to the meeting by the Revd. T. Boaz. The lecturer was received with enthusiastic cheers from the assembly. After order had been restored, he delivered the following very instructive lecture.

Gentlemen,—I must be permitted, before I enter upon the subject of my lecture, to do justice to my own feelings, by expressing my high gratification, at being selected by this society, to deliver before its members, the lecture which is to greet them on their first assembly; and I must further give utterance to my feelings by congratulating the members of the Institution on the auspicious circumstances, under which, it rejoices me to see, we are entering on our career.

I have no doubt but that that career will be productive of advantages similar to those which have followed the exertions of congenial societies in other quarters of our globe, for no reason can be enforced to convince us, that Englishmen, (and the descendants of Englishmen) dwelling on the banks of the Ganges, cannot derive improvement from the same source which yields it to them on the banks of the Thames and of the Tweed.

There was a time when institutions like the present were looked upon with an eye of jealousy—were even denounced as schools of sedition, and as nurseries of opinions which were to break down all social order. The experience of twenty years has shewn the fallacy of these fears, and has established the soundness of that more worthy opinion, that the increase of an artisan's knowledge never decreases his worthiness as a man.

So far, indeed, from this being the case, all mental philosophy, all history, shew, that a nation is virtuous, civilized, and orderly in proportion as knowledge is diffused among the bulk of its people. I need only quote the British Isles as an example. Look at Scotland and England, and contrast them with their more ignorant sister—Ireland.

The result could not be otherwise, for, in proportion as an individual (and nations are but aggregates of individuals) acquires a taste, a love for reading, for literature, for science, so in proportion does he become less prone to more vicious and more degrading sources of amusement. In proportion as a man is attached to the quiet and enduring pleasures of life, so much the more domestic does he become, and never did he who loves his home prove either a bad citizen, or a disturber of that state which contains the spot, with which are associated all his unregretted pleasures.

Now, of all the departments of knowledge there are none so interesting,—none so enlarging of the mind,—none so useful as that of science. Whether with the Botanist we woo her acquaintance in her fairest form,—whether, by the Chemist's magic aid, we extract from her most hidden secrets; or whether with the Astronomer, we sweep through space, thousands of systems deep, still, science has the same effect upon the human mind. It is the source of delight—expansion, and improvement.

"Knowledge," says one who was deeply versed in our nature, "knowledge expands the spirit, exalts the faculties, refines the taste of pleasure, and opens innumerable sources of intellectual enjoyment." It may be repeated without satiety, and continually reflected upon with renewed pleasure.

Science, then, might justly be loved and pursued for its own sake, for the sake of the contemplation of those harmonious, mutually dependant, and illuminating truths, from the contemplation of which every well regulated mind derives an elevating and unselfish delight.

But, science also claims our sedulous attention upon other grounds, among the most prominent of which is, the aid it affords to the practice and improvement of the arts of life, and it is on this ground that it is cultivated in societies like the one we have just founded.

Art is but the application of knowledge to a practical end. If that knowledge is derived solely from experience, the art is empirical; but, if that knowledge is arranged and reasoned upon,—if the facts are traced to principles, it acquires the higher dignity of scientific art. Knowledge, thus improved, cannot be enjoyed by the few. A despot, as has been but too often witnessed in this country, may extort the riches and monopolize the arts of his subjects for his own personal use; he may spread around him an unnatural splendour, and live in preposterous contrast with the general wretchedness of his subjects. But, in a land of freedom, where science is the Promethean spirit of the arts, and these are pursued on a well organized system, the comforts and luxuries which have been invented and improved must be enjoyed by the millions, they cannot be circumscribed to the use of one tyrant.

The foolish outcry against the improvement of the manual arts by the introduction of machinery, has at length passed away; because it only required to be shewn, that although the artisan who adheres to the old system must necessarily be injured, yet the improved modes enable fifty other artisans to be employed in his place. When hand-weaving was exclusively followed, calico sold three shillings a yard, and Manchester contained about 200 weavers; machinery, by lowering the price of this article to a few pence, has so increased its consumption, that in the town I have mentioned some thousands of weavers are now employed.

The foolish outcry against the improvement of the manual arts by the introduction of machinery, has at length passed away; because it only required to be shewn, that although the artisan who adheres to the old system must necessarily be injured, yet the improved modes enable fifty other artisans to be employed in his place. When hand-weaving was exclusively followed, calico sold three shillings a yard, and Manchester contained about 200 weavers; machinery, by lowering the price of this article to a few pence, has so increased its consumption, that in the town I have mentioned some thousands of weavers are now employed.

If any one among our friends, possessing a mind not sufficiently elevated to comprehend the more refined pleasures and remoter benefits of science, enquires, what good proceeds, what practical advantage can be derived from such pursuits, we have ready answers, by referring him to the cotton manufactory of England; to the steam vessel which brings his monthly correspondence from the west; to the conductors who guard his house from the discharge of atmospheric electricity; to the quinine as well as the narcotine which deprive our most prevalent disease of its fatal tenacity, and we might enumerate many other striking instances of the application of science to the arts. These are her gifts to man, and if she had conferred no higher benefits than those I have enumerated, they alone are such demonstrations of her almighty power, that she would well be worthy of that high praise, of that ardent pursuit, which she has acquired and still obtains.

But the gifts of science to us have been countless, and although time will not permit me to mention more than a few others which can prominently be traced to her beneficent hand, yet it is not too much to maintain; that it is owing to science alone that all the arts have advanced, within these few years, so rapidly towards perfection.

Such being the pleasures and advantages to be derived from science, it was suggested to the intelligent artisans of Glasgow, that if they sought instruction in that field of knowledge, they could not fail speedily to appreciate the importance of pursuing its cultivation. From a mere school class, they gradually increased to such an array of numbers, that they determined to form a society, to appoint their lecturers; and to have a Library, Museum, and Laboratory of their own. They carried out this determination, and have the satisfaction, and the enduring fame, of having established the first and most flourishing of Mechanics Institutes. London followed the example, and there are now hundreds of similar societies in England and Scotland—some few even in Ireland and France, and a still greater number in America. They have fulfilled the expectations which suggested their formation. They have improved the mental, the moral, and, consequently, the physical condition of the manufacturing classes. They have made these classes not only happier as men, but have added strength to the state, by rendering them more useful citizens, not only by making them more attached to their father-land, but by aiding the genius of invention which characterises them as a class. "Cheerish," says M. de Boufflers, "the genius of invention in a country, and there you will establish an imperishable prosperity. Every discovery and invention will exalt it among its competitors, and its superiority will increase exactly in proportion as the blessings of philosophy and peace are spread over the world."

Coinciding in this opinion, anxious by every means to aid the numerous societies already founded, all having one common object (the improvement and elevation of this country) we have united to form this "the Calcutta Mechanics' Institute." Of its ultimate success, Gentlemen, I have no doubt, we shall only require in the commencement of our career, to be active and united—remembering that success is to the diligent, and that union is strength.

I have hitherto alluded but slightly to the benefits which science has conferred, and is capable of conferring, upon the arts, and I must ask your patience while I dilate upon this, somewhat more at length. I have already mentioned the Steam Engine, that unwearied minister of power which has aided England to attain, and to preserve, that commercial pre-eminence which is here among all the nations of the world. To science does our glorious country owe this mighty instrument. Watt, who so much improved it as to be entitled to the merit of being its actual inventor, was a watchmaker. But he loved, and was ardent in the pursuit of knowledge, and, from the chemical lectures of Dr. Black, he acquired that acquaintance with the laws and phenomena of heat, which enabled him to construct the engine which not only gained him a princely fortune, but entitled him to rank among the best benefactors of England, and, through England, of the world.

Franklin was only a printer, but he was studious to acquire more knowledge of books than the mere arrangement of the types from which they are printed. Of all the departments of sciences the one in which he most delighted was electricity, and, by a train of just reasoning, "this playmate of the lightning" identified that electricity of the sky with its weaker development in our laboratories, and has enabled us to disarm it of half its afflicting power.

Davy, from being the son of a humble stone mason,*

* See Dr. Parr's Life of Sir H. Davy. Other authorities deny that he was a stone mason, but all agree that Davy's early circumstances were very indifferent. Dr. Davy says his father was a carver of wood.

raised himself, by his ardent pursuit of science, to be ranked with the aristocracy of his native land, and to the still more enviable dignity of being one of the first among her most talented sons. The discoveries which he made in almost every branch of chemistry, are too various to be here enumerated; but if I were asked to put my finger upon the most worthy discovery given to us in the present century, it would be extended to Davy's safety-lamp. That blessing to the miner was no result of accidental observation, but arose from a beautiful series of inductive reasoning, sustained by accurate experiments, which may be proudly quoted as an example of the progress we have made in experimental philosophy.

The effect of the explosion of fire damp in coal-mines, had long been known and deplored, and it was fearfully anticipated that these explosions would occur more frequently, in proportion to the daily extended progress of the miner in his subterranean operations. By one explosion in a Newcastle colliery, no less than 101 miners perished in an instant, and no words can describe the accumulated misery which consequently devolved upon the hundreds constituting their ruined families. Urged by the heart-rending cry, Davy grappled with this mine-fiend, and tracing out, step by step, in a series of researches beset with danger, the secrets of his nature and his power, he was at length presented by our fellow countryman to the astonished and grateful miner fluttering and furious, but disarmed within a cage.*

The foregoing illustrations are taken from Chemistry, but let it not be supposed that Science is so limited in her power to benefit the arts, as to possess but that single lens through which to impart her light. Geology has done much in teaching us where to search for minerals, for serviceable stones, and for water, without a chance of disappointment. Had the Geologist been previously consulted, the thousands of pounds which were lost in searching for coals in Sussex, might have been saved. He could have readily shewn that a regular coal-bed is not to be found in the Hastings' sand.

Astronomy would have wrought her measure of benefit to the arts, had she contributed to none other than to navigation. That Science has enabled the Mariner, by the aid of an instrument a child may sustain, and on a footing no more stable than a vessel's deck, to measure the apparent distance between the sun and the horizon, or between the moon and a star, from which he is able with certainty to calculate, where he is on the trackless expanse of ocean. This, observes Herschel, cannot but appear to persons ignorant of physical astronomy as an approach to the miraculous. Yet the alternatives of life and death, wealth and ruin, are daily and hourly staked with perfect confidence, on these marvellous computations; which might almost seem to have been devised expressly to shew, how closely the extremes of speculative refinement and practical utility can be brought to approximate.

It would be vain to attempt to demonstrate within the limits of a lecture, how much the arts are indebted to the science of Mathematics. To this, the navigator owes his logarithmic tables, and not an educated civil engineer or architect but knows, how much he is indebted to the same science for a facile method of calculating the strength and modes of sustaining his structures, from the temporary scaffolding to that of the most gigantic and permanent of palatial edifices.

Let no one think that, a knowledge of any science can be of no utility to him, however unconnected it may seem with his particular pursuit. There is a beautiful relationship and connexion between the sciences which renders them all in some point of contact co-assistant, and being so co-assistant, they are necessarily useful to the arts more closely allied to each. The mathematician, with surprise and pleasure, sees his abstruse calculations of numbers and space applied to the forms of matter by the chemist. The astronomer has long been indebted to the mathematician for a power to weigh the masses of the planetary bodies, and to compute the revolutions of the systems in which they revolve. And now; the chemist and the mineralogist receive a similar power; to enable them to calculate the weight of ultimate atoms, and the proportions in which those atoms combine. The geologist's observations again, in various ways, enable the mathematician to correct his calculations, and perfect his means of enquiry. It is curious too, that geology should have been useful in confirming the description given of a palm by a modern botanist, the accuracy of whose description was doubted, until it was pointed out by the geologist, that the fossil remains of an antediluvian pine, exhibited a similar peculiarity of formation. As mathematics aid chemistry so proportionately do they benefit the arts connected with the latter science, and geology being assistant to mathematics, we see that there are other connecting links, which render this intimate alliance of the sciences and arts more intricate and interwoven.

Some tough objector, descending to particulars, may ask, how can chemistry be of use to a watch-maker? Our answer is ready. Chemistry discovered the different rates of expansibility possessed by different metals, and a knowledge of this fact has enabled the watch-maker to introduce one of the greatest of modern improvements in the construction of pendulums, and the balance wheels of chronometers.

It seems quite as improbable that magnetism, which gives the sailor his unerring guide, the compass, should also be the means of saving the needle-maker from pulmonary consumption. Yet such is the fact. The minute particles of steel ground from the needles in the process of sharpening, were inhaled by the workmen and produced a constitutional irritation which usually brought them to their graves before the age of forty. Gauze veils were tried, but found of no avail, the ferruginous dust passed through its pores. The happy suggestion was at last made, of employing masks of magnetized steel wire, and now the air, respired through this sieve, has every particle of steel attracted from it, and the workmen are no longer the early victims of the most insidious of diseases.*

Facts such as these, gentlemen, illustrate one of the truest of axioms. Knowledge, whatever may be its kind, is never useless; that which we acquire to-day, may not be available to-morrow, or even on the next day; but stored up in the memory, we have all had sufficient experience to know, that it will turn to account in some future day, or month, or year, and that at a time, perhaps, when we are least anticipating its aid. Nothing is so trivial as to be unworthy of notice, for it is a prerogative of science, to detect some "good in every thing." Galileo, induced to a train of thought upon motion, from noticing the oscillations of a lamp suspended from the ceiling, was led to the invention of the pendulum, which, though at one time ridiculed as a "Swing Swang," has been gradually improved until, in the hands of Captain Kater, it has become the most accurate standard of time and space. Newton's casual attention to the descent of an apple from its parent branch, led him to the discovery of the universal law of gravitation,

"That very Law which moulds the tear
And bids it trickle from its source;
That Law which keeps the earth a sphere
And guides the planets in their course."

* Sir W. Herschel.

The soap bubble, blown by an infant, led Cavallo to suggest the only machine by which man has been able to reach the higher regions of our atmosphere; and the changing colours reflected from the surface of the same fragile toy of our childhood, led another philosopher to the discovery of some of the most beautiful laws which govern the transmission of light.

To the benefits accruing from the study of Natural History I have not yet alluded. This omission, however, has not been because these benefits are few, but because they are, in general, less immediate; and because its most prominent blessings to us, are in the health which it wins to those who are its students, and the moral good it has effected in leading them from things created to the "Great Cause of All." The Botanist has given to the arts some of our most beautiful dyes, and some of the most efficient remedies of our pharmacopoeia; the Zoologist has in many instances suggested to the agriculturist modes of improving his breeds of cattle, and how to secure his crops from the ravages of predatory insects. As a source of pure pleasure and health, there is no pursuit equal to that of these sciences. The tediousness, to many persons, of a country life, is proverbial, but did we ever hear this complaint from the lips of a naturalist? "Never," is Swainson's emphatic reply. To him every season of the year is doubly interesting; for, independent of those changes apparent to all, there are others which bring peculiar delight to himself. Each season, each month, has its successions of new animals and plants, and when the weather is such as to preclude active research, he has previous acquisitions to arrange, — previous notes to compare, amplify and apply.

Gentlemen, I must draw my observations towards a conclusion, not from a want of subjects to illustrate and enforce my theme, but because I must not tax your patience too severely. I have warned you from the error of thinking any species of knowledge undesirable, and I will now warn you all, from one equally injurious, namely, that suggestion of inactivity rather than of modesty "I cannot benefit the Mechanics' Institution." Now, so far from this being the fact, there is nothing so certain as that, among all those who are now assembled before me, not one individual could be found, who is not acquainted with some morsel of useful knowledge unknown to those around him. Every man is capable of making observations, and would we only note down any phenomenon, any thing new that occurs to us, and seek for its cause, either in books, or from others, we should store up knowledge and make discoveries at a rate which to the torpid ("who have eyes but see not") would scarcely appear credible.

Let one instance be a sufficient illustration. A French soap manufacturer had observed (what soap manufacturers had observed for ages before him) that the residuum of the alkaline liquor used in his trade, corroded his copper boilers. He mentioned this fact to a chemist, and this man of science, in that refuse residuum, detected iodine, one of the most singular and important of Chemical elements. From the soap boiler's alkali it was traced to the sea plants from which that alkali was obtained. This led to its detection in sea water, and thence to its discovery in sponge and all other marine products. A physician then remembered that burnt sponge had proved successful as a remedy in glandular diseases; and this led to the discovery that iodine is the most efficacious of applications to goitre, and similar complaints. Such were the consequences of an observation, in the first instance, apparently so trivial, and it is thus that any accession to our knowledge of nature is certain, sooner or later, to make itself felt in some practical application. A benefit conferred on science by a casual observation or shrewd remark of an unscientific or even illiterate person, infallibly repays itself with interest, though often in a way which could not at first be anticipated."

Such, gentlemen, being the advantages to the arts of life which are to be derived from science, and science being the exclusive object of this Institution, I have, I think, established a strong case, justifying your exertions, and demonstrating the claims of the society upon a more general public aid. It is one of the means by which to obtain a great beneficial change. Let me then successfully urge upon you to act unanimously and with single mindedness in its support. Let every member resolve to overcome that false modesty which would restrain him from contributing his portion of knowledge, however small, in his turn, to the society. We shall learn even by the effort to teach. Let none be deterred by the fear, that to make any progress in the physical sciences, expensive apparatus, or models, are necessary. Nothing is farther from the truth. Very many of the Chemical experiments of Dalton and Henry were made in broken household glasses; and in mechanics the principle of the lever, says Dr. Gregory, may be shown by a foot rule, and some penny pieces, and that of the other mechanical powers by means equally simple. By thus cultivating science you will never injure your present resources, and will yet be increasing your means to improve them in future; for "knowledge," most truly, "is power."

Every barber, it is true, may not by this attention to science become a mechanician like Arkwright; every ryot may not become an astronomer like Fergussan; every drummer-boy may not be equal to Herschel; every lawyer may not excel in Mechanics, like Smeaton; nor every cabin-boy become an engineer, like Nicholson. You may none of you attain to such excellence, but of this you may be certain, that you will all be improved. By the study of those sciences which will be cultivated in this Institution, you will assuredly find increased sources of knowledge, success, and happiness. Let this reflection also, cheer you to exertion: England is indebted for her pre-eminence among nations, not to her physical numbers, for these are comparatively weak, but to the intelligence, virtuous habits, and morality of her people. If her sons in this Eastern hemisphere would rival, her in morally sustained power, they must base their efforts, as did their western forefathers, on the acquirement of knowledge, and an adherence to virtue. If they do this earnestly, if they carry out those good works, the embryo of which are so numerous around us, they cannot but succeed, and then in a period from which we are not separated by any very long series of years, Hindoostan may be reckoned among those countries which are considered as the truly great, because truly worthy.

Let us not be deterred by the coolness of friends, or the sneers of the enemies, if such there be, of this Institution; but let us, amid all changes and vicissitudes, be sustained by reflecting upon the soundness of the design we would carry into effect, and by the rectitude of our intention.

Moreover, let us not be disheartened if our progress at first is not rapid. "Rome was not built in a day," is an apt admonitory to the impatient. Neither let it be concluded that we are doing nothing, if brilliant and astonishing results do not follow the progress of our Institution. Be assured its influence, like that of others of similar intent, cannot fail silently to produce its harvest of good.

Lastly, let me earnestly recommend you to be prompt and regular in your support of the Institution which you have this evening met to welcome. In whatever form are our contributions, let us present them at once. It is an old adage that "he gives twofold who gives quickly."

* Sir W. Herschel.

If we feel the evil spirit whispering that "to-morrow will do", let us at once reply "to-morrow is found only in the almanack of fools." In a word, then, let us promptly, and in union, do our utmost to support this our Institution, since we have seen that it must be an instrument of refined pleasure, of pecuniary profit, and of legitimate power to our fellow-country-men, aiding them to take a higher station among the civilized nations of the Earth.—Hurkaru, April 13.

At the conclusion of the Lecture, the Rev. Mr. Boaz moved, that the thanks of the meeting be presented to Mr. Johnson, for his valuable and eloquent support of the Institution, in the lucid and appropriate address which they had just heard. The motion was seconded by Dr. Corbyn and carried unanimously amidst loud and reiterated cheers.

Mr. Johnson, in acknowledging the honour they had done him, expressed his readiness to forward, by any means in his power, the objects of the institution.

The Rev. Mr. Boaz moved, that Mr. Johnson be requested to allow the excellent Lecture which he had now delivered—the first Lecture of the first Mechanics' Institution in India,—to be printed at the expense and for the behoof of the members, and circulated throughout the world.

The Rev. Mr. Morton, in seconding this motion, expressed his pleasure at hearing Mr. Johnson refer them "from nature up to nature's God. It was true, as had been emphatically said, that "knowledge is power;" but knowledge must be sanctified to the cause of virtue and morality, or so far from rendering its possessor a benefactor to his species, it would render him obnoxious to his fellow men. He was happy to perceive, that in Mr. Johnson's address, this beneficial tendency had not been lost sight of. He hoped that Mr. Johnson would be prevailed upon to allow his Lecture to be published.

Mr. Johnson expressed his willingness to accede to the request.

Mr. Boaz said that he must warn his friend Mr. Johnson against going away with the idea, that all those now present were members of the Institution. This the first lecture was a gratuitous one, but all who were admitted to the next and every succeeding one, must be really and bona fide members,—must have their tickets and pay for them. He would, therefore, recommend all present to wait upon Mr. Grant without delay, and secure for themselves the rights and privileges of members. There was one other observation he had to make,—he was sorry to see so few of the fair sex in the assembly. He was afraid that it had not been generally understood, though they had done all in their power to make it known, that every man was at liberty to bring with him his wife, his daughter, or, in default of either, his sweet-heart. He recommended that every gentleman there present should forthwith become a member, and then that all should bring their wives, daughters and sweet-hearts, so that the house might be filled.

Mr. Johnson lamented the prejudice which prevented the ladies of Calcutta from mingling in assemblies such as this; but he hoped that this unnecessary and foolish reserve was soon to be done away with. As a lawyer, he was fond of precedents, and he was happy to say that on this point he was not without them. At Winchester and Norwich, where they had two of the most flourishing Mechanics' Institutions in the world, one half of the company assembled at the lectures, consisted of ladies.

He trusted that the meetings of the Calcutta Mechanics' Institution would be the means of breaking down this barrier, and would be honoured by the attendance of those whose presence would lend them an ornament and grace.

The Reverend T. Haz, was afraid they would think him an interminable speaker, but he must make one other proposition, which was that all those ladies who were then present, should constitute themselves honorary members of the Institution for life.

About half-past 8, the meeting broke up, the majority of them apparently highly gratified; but we heard several individuals express their disappointment at the lecture. This, perhaps, was caused by their expectation being wound up to too high a pitch, coupled with the circumstance of Mr. Johnson's being frequently interrupted in the most interesting parts of his lecture, by sudden bursts of applause from the meeting, which marred much of the effect which would, no doubt, have been otherwise produced by the lecturer's eloquence.—Hurkaru, April 11.

THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office on Monday the 8th instant

PRESENT.

Committee.—T. Dickens, Esq.; W. Storm, Esq.; G. Vint, Esq.; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; Rajah Radhakanth Bahadur; Raja Rajnarain Roy Bahadur; Cowar Nutechurn Ghossaul; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Baboo Prasannocomar Tagore; and Moonshay Mohamed Ameer.

Members.—Baboo Bishnauth Muttyloll, and Baboo Dibyprosaul Roy, Dewan of Ranny Kattawanny.

The gentleman proposed at the last meeting was unanimously elected.

The following gentlemen were proposed as Members of the society.

Proposed by Dwarkanauth Tagore, and seconded by G. Vint, Esq., T. J. Taylor, Esq., of Calcutta.

Proposed by Baboo Prasannocomar Tagore, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq., Baboo Nubhocomar Chowdhury, zemindar of Shirpore, Zillah Mymensing.

Proposed by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and seconded by T. Dickens, Esq., Baboo Radhaposaud Roy.

Proposed by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and seconded by Baboo Prasannocomar Tagore, G. F. Remfry, Esq., of Calcutta.

Read a letter from A. Henderson, Esq., dated London 25th January, proposing to establish a branch society in London.

Resolved that the Society will view with pleasure the co-operation of a branch Society in London.

Read a letter from A. Rogers, Esq., dated London 22d January, with a pamphlet on the cultivation of flax in India.

The Secretary was directed to write to Messrs. Rogers and Henderson, thanking them for their communications, and informing them that the society will avail itself of their offer of establishing a regular correspondence with the proposed society in London.

Read a letter from certain zemindars of Rungepore, announcing the establishment of a branch society.

Proposed by Moonshay Mohamed Ameer, and unanimously agreed to, that a letter be written to Government, requesting the extension of the vernacular language, and begging that the language used in the courts may be that commonly understood by the people and free from high sounding Sanscrit and Arabic terms.

Resolved, that a call be made on the members for their subscription for the present year of twenty rupees. Two copies of the Police report received from Government were presented to the committee.

Resolved, that a letter be written to F. J. Halliday, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, for modifying the regulations of the sale of land for arrears of public revenue, and affording greater facility to the zemindars on the recovery of rent from the royots.

The following resolution was moved by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and unanimously agreed to: that the valuable services rendered by the late George Alexander Prinsep, Esq., to the landholders society, his constant endeavours to promote its welfare and extension, and in particular the very able and diligent assistance afforded by him in preparing and conducting the correspondence with Government, relative to the resumption of rent-free tenures, gave him, while living, a just claim to the cordial thanks and gratitude of all our members. And on the occasion of his sudden decease, we feel it to be an act of justice due to his memory while it is a melancholy satisfaction to ourselves, to record the just sense we entertain of his merits and of the great loss the public has sustained by the premature death of one of the most active, liberal, intelligent and public-spirited men in India. Further resolved, that the Secretary be directed to send a copy of this resolution, with a letter expressive of the sincere condolence of the members here present, to Charles Robert Prinsep, Esq., the eldest brother of the deceased.

WM. COBB HURRY,
PRASANNOCOMAR TAGORE,

Henry. Secys.

Hurk., April 16.]

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 10th April, 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, President, in the Chair.

PRESENT.

Messrs. W. Storm,	The Rev. C. Driberg,
" W. K. Ewart,	Messrs. W. P. Grant,
" H. Piddington,	" N. Staunton,
" Joseph Willis,	" D. W. Speed,
Col. McLeod,	" G. F. Speed,
Dr. Strong,	" W. G. Johnson,
Baboo Sookhien Malliek,	" T. B. Keble,
Nawab Tehowar Jung,	" C. Trebeck, and
Major Carter,	Dr. Spry.

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were read and confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The following Gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members:

Charles Cardew, John Hughes, Allan Webb, C. J. Richards, Arthur Smelt, and W. H. Elliott, Esqrs., and Lieut. James Wemyss.

The Motion No 1, which stood for discussion, was one by Mr. Piddington, "that the Secretary be authorised to incur the small expense necessary to provide for the formation of a cabinet of soils," was carried.

Motion No. 2, by Mr. W. P. Grant, that the Society restrict the prizes offered for bulls in the current year, to bulls of the Devonshire breed, was lost.

The names of the following gentlemen were read, as candidates for election at the next General Meeting :

W. S. Hudson, Esq. — (Deputy Collector at Mymensingh), proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. Storm.

W. C. Braddon, Jr, Esq., (Firm of Hagshaw and Co.), proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Geo. Hill, Esq., proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. Storm.

J. C. Kiernan, Esq., proposed by Mr. G. F. Speck, seconded by Mr. Storm.

The President called attention to the Report of the Cattle Committee, which was then read. The Committee stated the primary object contemplated by the institution of the Cattle Committee to be, to "improve the breed of cattle in India." This improvement they considered to consist mainly in an endeavour to raise the fattening qualities of the indigenous bullock, as well as to obtain a greater abundance of milk.

The indigenous breed of India excel, the Committee thought, in beauty of symmetry and the possession of great capabilities for draught, besides the valuable quality of a ready adaptation to a rough and scanty fare. To set about their work in safety, the Committee considered that they should be guided by the experience attained from cattle breeding in England ; as it is in that country, that the greatest attention has been paid to the art. While the Committee, therefore, were desirous to avoid any charge of partiality towards the countries whence they wish to derive cattle, and in a catholic spirit, have laid the exhibitions open to Africa, America Europe and Australia, yet, from the well established merits of the English breeds, the Committee were induced to lean with a favorable bias towards that quarter.

The short horns, the Committee thought, were ill adapted for the climate of India, owing to the present low state of Agricultural husbandry, and the same objection to a certain extent applied to the long horns. The polled Cattle are hardy and good.

The next class that the Committee looked to, was the middle horn breed, and in this they thought, that a reasonable hope may be entertained of finding those qualities most likely to supply the deficiencies in the indigenous breeds — the grand secret of breeding being to suit the breed to the soil and climate.

When the ground is not too heavy, the Devonshire oxen are unrivalled at the plough, and the climate is the mildest in England. They have a quickness of action, which no other breed can equal, and which very few cart horses exceed. During harvest time and in cutting weather, they are sometimes trotted along at the rate of six miles an hour. They possess moreover great docility of temper, and also stoutness and honesty for work. Their next quality is their disposition to fatten, and in this respect very few rival them. They do not, indeed, attain the great weight of the short horns, but, in a given time, they acquire more flesh and with less consumption of food, and the flesh is beautiful of its kind.

This the Committee thought a quality much wanted in this country, for although no beef can be better tasted than that of the small (Guanees) bullocks of India, yet they were by no means economical beavers to fatten.

The Committee have purposely abstained from allotting prizes for imported cows, inasmuch as the improvement of the indigenous breed is the object sought and not the introduction of an entire new class.

The Report concluded by recommending that public notification of the schedule of prizes be given in the London Times, for the information of persons residing in England, who may take an interest in promoting the Agricultural Husbandry of India, and also in the India papers — that copies also be sent to the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and to the East India Agency-rooms in London.

The Report and Schedule, after undergoing some modification, was adopted and passed.

Approaching exhibition of Horticultural prize Fruits.

The Secretary next submitted a schedule of prizes for the best fruits to be exhibited at a show which is fixed to take place early next month (May,) of which due notice will be given.

LIBRARY.

A copy (No. 9) of the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, was presented on the part of the Society.

MUSEUM.

Horticultural and Floricultural Department.

1. — A basket of five apples, weighing collectively 29 ounces, from the garden of Mr. Finch, at Shalpoore Oondoo, in Tirhoot, presented by Mr. Finch.

2. — A basket of two pears, grown in the garden of Mr. Charles Steer, at Kishnagar.

The above fruits were much admired for their beauty and flavour.

3. — A fine specimen of beet-root, grown in the garden of Mr. Barlow, at Hudgelee, with a memorandum of the mode of preparation, drawn up by that gentleman, presented by Dr. Smith, on behalf of Mr. Barlow.

4. — A bag containing 32 lbs. of lucerne seed, presented by Colonel C. C. Smith, of the Cavalry.

5 and 6. — Two packets of the celebrated prangos seed, of Moorcroft, and a small packet of melon seed from Iskandoh, forwarded by Dr. Falconer, from Thibet and Cashmere.

7. — A parcel containing five pieces of manufactured Mazzogurree Silk, and a specimen of the plant (adhakorea tetraethera), on which the worm (phalaena cynthia) thrives, presented by Dr. Wallich on the part of Captain Jenkins.

8 & 9. — Two parcels of mixed dahlia seeds from Lieut. Krke, and another containing vonothua mirabilis, from the same Officer, all from the valley of the Dhoom.

10 & 11. — Four plants of the tree yielding the fine black varnish called chest-tsee (melanorrhæ usitata, will.) and two plants of a very pretty flower, the name of which is unknown, presented by Captain Macfarquhar of Tavoy.

These plants had just been landed from the Ganges, Steamer. Three were in good health, but two were apparently dead.

12. — A box containing four fine mango trees, commonly known as the Bombay mango, presented by Captain Talbot of Bareilly.

13. — A specimen of cotton grown in the Mymensingh district, presented by Mr. Hudson, Deputy Collector.

The cotton was very short in staple and pronounced to be of a very inferior quality.

14. — A specimen of the wood of the dammer tree, presented by F. E. Strong, Esq.

ASSAM TEA. — Despatch of the Court of Directors to the Bengal Government.

The subject which next engaged the attention of the Meeting, was the despatch from the Court of Directors, which had been placed at the disposal of the Agricultural Society by the Bengal Tea Committee, regarding the cultivation and quality of the tea grown in the Province of Assam, forwarded from this country in February last year.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.—No. 12 of 1838.

Our Governor-General of India in Council.

1st. We now reply to paras. 49 to 52 of your letter dated the 12th March, 1838, together with the letters and paras. noted in the margin,* in which you bring under our consideration your further proceedings respecting the cultivation of tea in Upper Assam.

30th Jany., 1837, paras. 18 to 29
3d April, 1837, .. 11 to 20
4th Sept., 1837, .. 29 to 34
20th Oct., 1837, .. 38 to 43
12th Feb., 1838, (whole) No. 5
26th dito, 1838, (ditto) .. 6

2d. The knowledge attained by Mr. Bruce, the Superintendent of tea culture, with respect to the proper mode of manufacturing the tea, and the further discoveries made by him and others of the existence of extensive plantations especially with reference to the fact that the genuine green tea plant of China is indigenous to the Singloa Country, is highly important and very satisfactory, and we approve of your having authorized the Tea Committee to procure persons from China, acquainted with the peculiar process of green tea manufacture. We have forwarded to the Royal Asiatic Society, copies of the printed report by Mr. Bruce, received with your letter of the 26th February, 1838, and have otherwise circulated the tract as suggested by you.

3d. We submitted the samples of tea received with your letter dated the 12th February 1838, to several Houses of the first character in the London trade, and also to Mr. John Reeves, formerly the East India Company's Tea Inspector in Canton; and, from the replies received, we are enabled to furnish you with the following opinions and observations thereon. 1st crops nuttuck tea forwarded by the Tea Committee under date the 12th December 1837, and marked.

- (A) Souchong No. 1, Majoo Gohynes, shady tract.
- (B) Do. No. 1 Chubwa, sunny ditto.
- (C) Souchong No. 1, Deenjoy, ditto.
- (D) Paho No. 3, Tingri, shady ditto.

(A) "This tea is somewhat similar in appearance to the tea denominated Kang Maey. It is some well made and well twisted leaves, but is too unequal in size from the mixture of large leaves."

(B) "Is a differently made tea, more approaching to Congou or Souchong Congou kind. It has a dull brownish line and rather broken leaf, mixed with pale leaves. These latter should be picked out, and then it might be called Congou." A

"This sample appears the worst of the four, but brighter black and more perfect leaf is desirable." A

(C) "Is a somewhat similar tea, but better of the kind. It has a good proportion of well made and well twisted leaf in it, but a proportion also of pale leaves which should be picked out." "The leaf is too brown, but it is larger and better made than B."

(D) "This, though called Pekoe, is similar to A. The leaf is too large, unequal, and brown for Pekoe tea; The ends of the smaller leaves (the Pekoe) are of a yellow cast instead of white; but there is in this a good proportion of well made leaf. The downy ends are too short. The flavor is light and pleasant, but the strength of A. is wanted. The leaves of all the above (A., B.,

C., and D.,) shew after infusion, that they are good and young. Those of A. and D. appear like Pekoe, and of B. and C. like good Congou."

4th. The samples above commented on, formed enclosure No. 9 in your letter to us, dated the 12th February, 1838.

5th. This sample, the Assam Ka-hunk Sou-chong, 2d Crop, shady tract, in canister, forwarded by Tea Committee, under date the 30th December 1837.

largest sent, formed enclosure No. 15 in your Letter above quoted, and is thus reported on. "This sample holds out a prospect of being convertible into an useful tea. There is a large proportion of well twisted leaf in it, but, like the other, the leaf is too unequal in size, to be duly appreciated in this country; if more white leaf was left in, it might pass for a Pekoe tea. It is a dull, brownish black leaf, possessing good strength and good flavor though musty, but the leaf is considerably too large and ought to have a bright nearly black appearance, instead of the dullness it has." "The defects of this tea are, 1st, a deadness, or dullness of appearance. 2dly, a great inequality in the size of the leaves, being what the Chinese would call Tachar and Sou tea. 3dly, a mixture of pale leaves. The first might probably be got rid of, and a greater brightness of leaf produced, by a longer continuance of rubbing while the tea is being fired in the pans. The brightness of tinge in the green teas is thus produced. The inequality of size may be remedied by cutting down the large leaves as the Chinese do with the larger leaves of the green tea when they want to make Young Hyson, and thus bring the tea to a more even appearance. The pale leaves must be picked out, as the trade set themselves at present very decidedly against mixed leaf teas."

6th. This sample formed Assam Souchong, for enclosure No. 19, in your letter before quoted, and is forwarded by Mr. Bruce, from Suddeya, under date the 11th Aug. 1837.

A much inferior tea and will only rate as low Congou. The leaf is large and coarse, uneven, dull, brownish-black, mixed with large pale leaves, and has less of the well made leaf and is more of the Congou kind. It has a little smokey smell, and flavour, which probably arises from the charcoal not having burnt clear, or "as though it had been cured with green wood. The expanded leaf after immersion does not look so young or so good as the other samples."

7th. On the whole, we consider the samples sent very encouraging, and we have much satisfaction in being enabled to add, that, although the quantity of each sort is considerably too small for the purpose of forming an accurate judgment of their relative value, we are assured, by the respectable parties to whom we submitted the samples, that teas of this kind, if properly manufactured and packed, would be readily purchased for consumption in this country.

8th. Particular care should be taken that the wood is of such a description as will not communicate any scent to the tea. We find that the leaf of all the samples we received "possesses much substance, and though so large and full grown, yet, when expanded, appears to be young, and therefore has all the necessary qualifications for forming an useful tea."

9th.—It is suggested by Mr. Reeves, from whose report, which is concurred in by two of the principal Houses in the Tea Trade, we have, for the most part, quoted, that it might be "better to confine the manufacture to one denomination, and call that Congou, letting the young shoots of the leaves expand on the trees until the hair is off them, and mixing them with the other which would give strength and body to the Tea, or a small portion might be gathered in the less expanded state and be called "Pekoe." The first mode would probably be the best in a commercial point of view, say to make only one sort, and that Congou, and thus form a good black leafed tea, such as the tea trade want just now."

10th. We are informed, that the samples received from you may be valued relatively as follows :

A—1s. 10d. to 2s. per lb.
B—1s. 5d. "
C—1s. 6d. "	} The Muttock, enclosure (No. 9.)
D—1s. 7d. "
1s. 8d. to 1s. 10d. per lb.	} Assam Ka-hung Souchong, 2d crop, shaddy fact, enclosure (No. 15.)
1s. }
the lowest price for common Congou,	} Assam Souchong from Suddeya enclosure (No. 19.)
3d

11th. With respect to the manufacture, in addition to the remarks already transcribed, we transmit to you some observations by Mr. Reeves on the mode adopted by the Chinese,* together with his remarks on Mr. Bruce's account of the manufacture in Assam, which you will forward for the information of the Tea Committee.

12th. We know that the establishment employed by Mr. Bruce, is comparatively small for the undertaking, and that having only two tea makers, he states he is unable "to collect the tea leaves at the proper season, the time occupied for gathering at one place is so great that the leaves become too old before he can reach another plantation," and this circumstance may account for some of the remarks introduced by Mr. Reeves.

13th. We observe, however, that you have, to a certain extent, provided for this; but, although we do not hesitate to sanction the expense incurred on this account, as well as the addition to the salary of Mr. Bruce and other pecuniary arrangements hitherto reported to us, it must be borne in mind that the establishment must not be increased beyond what is absolutely necessary to bring the trial to a fair practical issue; which, when generally known, the speculation will doubtless be taken up with avidity by the Commercial Capitalist.

18th. With respect to the packing and the particular description of tea most likely to suit the London market, considering the importance of the subject, we have deemed it advisable to transmit to you, by the ships named in the margin, two quarter chests of the best chops made by Howqua for the

* This tea is still East India Company,* namely, made by Howqua, but one of Ec Hop and one of the of an inferior quality. Fat. These will guide the manufacturers in Assam, as to the size and colour of the tea, and the best and most approved mode of packing.

19th. When you find yourselves in a condition to do so, you will ship six quarter chests of tea, approaching as nearly the description of the chests now sent to you as practicable and similarly packed, and you will consign them to Mr. William James Thompson, of Dunster Court, Mincing Lane, to whom we shall give directions to offer them to the Trade. Previously to which, however, or simultaneously with it, you will send to us, as a number in the packet, not less than a quarter chest of the same tea, in order that we may test the same before we permit any of it to be offered for sale.

20th. Although we are disposed to concur with you in opinion, that the prospect of introducing tea into this country, grown and manufactured in our own territories, is highly encouraging, and we may hope that with due attention and perseverance, the objects contemplated by us in the first view we took of the subject may, without much apprehension, be considered as in a fair way of attainment.

21st. We desire that you will communicate to the tea Committee, to Mr. Bruce, to Mr. McClelland, and Dr. Griffiths, our approbation of the zeal and ability they have evinced, the former in the conduct of this experiment, generally, and the three gentlemen above named in particular, for the able reports they have respectively furnished on the subject.

We are, your affectionate friends,

(Signed) J. L. Lushington.	(Signed) Wm. Young.
" R. Jenkins.	" Hy. St. G. Tucker.
" H. Shank.	" Hy. Alexander.
" J. Petty Muspratt.	" T. Thornhill.
" John Shepherd.	" George Lyall.
" J. Warden.	" John Cotton.
" John Masterman.

London, 26th September, 1838.

The attention which is now engaging the minds of Commercial Capitalists on the subject of this new speculation, makes it desirable, in the opinion of the Society, that the utmost publicity should be given to the measures in course of adoption for establishing this lucrative and inviting culture, and in returning the thanks of the meeting to the Tea Committee, for their communication, the Secretary was further requested to solicit copies of minutes of proceedings which the Committee themselves have adopted up to the present time, as the Secretary of the Committee had intimated, "that he should be most happy to communicate to the Society, copies of such other interesting documents as they may receive connected with the tea culture in this country." Establishment of a Public Garden at Secundra, near Agra.

A communication from the Commissioner at Agra was read, intimating that a public garden had been formed at Secundra, and placed under the care of Mr. Kuine, formerly of the Seharunpoor Establishment. The area of Secundra is described to contain excellent soil, with good water, and promises to be a most advantageous nursery for the supply of the country round. The Commissioner's application to have seeds sent to him, had been, the Secretary mentioned, complied with, and a large assortment of every kind in the Society's Museum despatched to the address of the Superintendent of the Public Gardens by the last steamer.

Prangos and melon seeds from Thibet and Cashmere.

Dr. Falconer, in a highly interesting despatch to the Secretary, communicates the despatch by dök of a small packet containing melon seeds from Iskardoh, and some excellent seeds of the Prangos pabularia or Prangos grass of Moorcroft, collected by Dr. Falconer, in his recent tour through the valley of Cashmere and Thibet. The melons are described to be of an excellent quality, and have a most delicious flavour, like Bokhara and Yarkund. They enjoy a high reputation throughout the neighbouring countries. The Prangos pabularia Dr. Falconer found growing extensively around the valley in Cashmere, occupying the sloping sides of hills, also in vast abundance in the valley of Gores upon the Krishna Gunga, between Cashmere and Thibet, and in the country of Hussoorah or Astore, which occupies the eastern side of the Indus, opposite Gilgit. He says that it is every where known by the name of Prangos, and its celebrity in these countries is chiefly owing to the search which has been made after it by Europeans. Neither in Cashmere nor in Gores—nor in Iskardoh—nor at any point where Dr. Falconer came upon it, could he find out that it was collected as a winter forage for cattle or sheep.

This will appear in the monthly proceedings of the Society.

In Cashmere the Affghans are said in certain seasons of the year, to feed their horses on it for a short time, as part of a course of training, but if the seeds happen to be given to any extent, they lead to blindness.

Dr. Falconer did not visit Droz, where Moorcroft chiefly collected it, (vide vol. 1, Transactions of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India) but he gathered all the information he could regarding it, and in that part of Thibet, Dr. Falconer pronounces the Prangos plant a most valuable production.

The reconciliation of Dr. Falconer's experience with the observations of the lamented Moorcroft, appears to be thus—"The country about Droz is exceedingly bare and bleak, in the expressive phrase used to me in describing it—sokhteh sungtah—a burnt up tract of rocks—and the sides of the hills leave very little grass or other herbage convertible into fodder, but are sheeted over with the Prangos and a species of Artemesia, and the Thibetians, in the absence of other herbage, are compelled to collect these plants, which nature, with a kind provision, has endowed to a considerable extent with nutritious qualities. But in the other parts of Thibet, where I went as at Gores and Astore, there is great abundance of the grasses and other rich herbage, and the Prangos, although, also in abundance, is neglected. The same is the case in Cashmere." With regard to its prophylactic virtues against rot in sheep, as described by Moorcroft, Dr. Falconer was unable to obtain any satisfactory proof.

Dr. Falconer, in conclusion of his valuable communication, mentions his intention of forwarding a collection of fruit trees from the public gardens at Saharunpore for the Society.

Further illustration of the Resources of Assam

On behalf of Captain Jenkins, Dr. Wallich presented to the Society a very valuable communication from that Officer, consisting of an original paper with an English translation annexed, together with five pieces of the Mezangurree silk, to which the paper relates. Also two specimens of the adakhrea tetraonthera on which the worm producing this sort of silk feeds.

This variety of silk manufacture, is highly esteemed by the Assamese gentlemen and the native members of the Society, who furnishes the account, states, that the produce from 1000 cocoons is generally estimated at 20 tolahs of silk (nearly half pound), and the price which the silk fetches is from 6 to 8 rupees a soor,

* Darjeling.

Colonel Lloyd, in a letter to the Secretary, states, that Cotton is largely cultivated by the Hill people in Sekin, and by the Mechees who inhabit the forest at the foot of the Mountains, but that the plant is of a very inferior description. In consequence of this, Colonel Lloyd applies for seeds of different descriptions for introduction into these States. The Secretary stated that he had complied with Colonel Lloyd's requisition and forwarded to him an extensive assortment of cotton seeds.

For the various presents and communications offered on this occasion, the thanks of the Society were given to the respective Donors.

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary.

[Hurkara, April 12.]

MADRAS AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of the Monthly Meeting of the Committee of Management of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society held at the Garden on Saturday the 30th March, at 5 o'clock P. M.

Read letter No. 4. from C. B. Thomas, Esq., forwarded to the Secretary of the Horticultural Society, stating that he had forwarded per Saturn two glazed cases, the one containing 4 Gooseberry the other 4 Current plants, besides some Hop roots, Filberts, Walnuts and Plum-stones. The Gooseberry and Current plants, he wished to have sent to Bangalore for trial in the Horticultural Garden there, or to the Neilgherry Hills, in the event of the Society having any ground on them. The Hops he thinks should be similarly disposed of, as he does not think they will succeed on the plains.

Resolved.—That the cordial thanks of the Society, are due to Mr. Thomas, for his very public spirited endeavours to introduce the Hop into India, and to improve our stock of fruits, and that the following draft of a letter (No. 5) in reply be adopted.

Read letter from Mr. Masters, in reply to the Society's letter, offering him the situation of Superintendent of the Garden, which he declines unless the Society can make it convenient to defray his expenses to Madras, and ensure him a monthly salary of 500 rupees. Such a charge being incompatible with the limited funds of the Society, the Secretary, in conformity with the resolution passed last meeting, addressed Lieutenant Munro, requesting him to engage for the Society, as the next best, the services of Mr. Davis, whom he had previously recommended to their attention as being "intrinsically honest, civil and obliging, willing to learn, and desirous to improve himself." He was taught by himself to graft, bud and march, and understand well, the management of vegetables, and the taking care of seeds and bulbs.

Resolved. That the measures adopted by the Secretary, for procuring a superintendent for the Garden, be approved.

Read letter from Captain C. Taylor to the address of the Secretary, forwarding a box containing 5 plants of the yellow chilli for the garden, in the hope that they by attention to "their growth, might be improved, and if increased in quantity, might become propagated over Madras, and be found a great acquisition, by those fond of this kind of spice." The plants have been planted out in good soil, under slight shade, and are very healthy. They have already matured several Capsules, and are now covered with flowers and young fruit, whence it is hoped they will mature a good crop of fruit, and so ensure their preservation among us.

Resolved.—The thanks of the Committee, be conveyed to Captain Taylor for this donation.

Read a letter from Dr. Wallich to the address of Dr. Wright in reply to a private one from him, expressive of the wishes of the Society to enrich their garden, and through it, the gardens generally of Madras, with fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs. Dr. W. expresses his anxiety to give his most cordial support to the efforts of the Society, and to second, to the utmost, their laudable endeavours to improve the Horticulture of Madras. In furtherance of these assurances, he has already forwarded packets, containing nearly 180 different kinds of seed (many of which have been sown,) and offers, on receiving authority from the Society to incur the expense of boxes, to send growing plants. He says "I think you should have growing plants, for after all, that is the way of introducing, speedily, horticultural rarities. Say the word, and pay for the boxes, and I will supply you in princely style." The Secretary brings to the notice of the Meeting, that the charge for boxes is 10 Rupees each, and that he in anticipation of receiving authority to incur to a moderate extent, the charge, had requested Dr. Wallich to send two boxes, containing good varieties of fruit trees, of whatever kind, he might think best, leaving the selection to him. This he did on the grounds that our present supply of such is very scanty, and that when raised from seed, their growth is always low, and the chance of procuring good varieties from this source, is very uncertain.

The Committee approve of the measures adopted by the Secretary, for improving the Collection of fruit trees and

Resolved.—That the thanks of the Committee are prominently due to Dr. Wellich, for his very valuable contribution of seeds, and that the Secretary be requested to communicate the same.

Resolved further that the plants raised from these seeds, and from all others similarly communicated, be, after supplying the garden, distributed among the Members wishing to have plants, and the remainder sold for the benefit of the garden.

In conformity with the 6th Resolution of the last meeting of the Committee, the Secretary lays before the meeting, the Bills for seed, there alluded to.

Resolved.—That the amount of the bills be recovered; and that, on the receipt of the Annual supplies of seed now written for, notice be given of their arrival, in order that Members wishing to participate in their distribution, may send in applications for what they may require.

The Committee avail themselves of this opportunity of intimating to Members, that those wishing to receive annual supplies of seed, direct from England or the Cape, may by sending lists prior to the 1st of January in each year, have the seeds required, commissioned along with the Society's supplies, free of all charge, except that of the seedsmen.

The Secretary brings to the notice of the Committee, that, with reference to the proposed act, prohibiting the importation of foreign Sugar into the Madras Territories, he has recently attentively examined the plot of Mauritius Sugar Cane in the Society's Garden, and is of opinion, that there will remain, after planting the piece of ground prepared for a new plantation, several thousand sets, which might be advantageously distributed to Cultivators, gratis, under condition, that they be bona fide cultivated for the production of Sugar. The Canes are generally of the finest description, and of very large growth. It may be further stated, that judging from the favorable result of this trial, it seems probable the Society will have for distribution next season, as many as 20,000 sets of this very valuable variety of Sugar Cane.

Resolved.—That the suggestion of the Secretary for the distribution of the Sugar Cane, be approved, and that he be authorized to distribute them in the manner proposed, after having duly noticed in the newspapers, that they are to be distributed.

Read a paper (No. 6) by the Secretary, addressed to the Committee of Management, urging the necessity that exists, for the Society to possess a well qualified Superintendent, to manage the garden, and ensure exotics the most skilful and judicious culture, as being the only certain method of successfully introducing those that may be acclimated; and of determining such as cannot; proposing further, to endeavour to procure such a person, direct from Europe, and recommending, that the funds required to pay for his passage, and expenses to this country, be raised by subscription among the members.

Resolved.—That the Committee approve of the suggestions of the Secretary, and recommend his proposal to the favorable consideration of the General Meeting of the Society.

Resolved, That the Committee, in submitting these proceedings to the sense of the Society, preparatory to publication, are of opinion, that they are adopting the most effectual method of carrying into effect, the following Resolution, passed at the last Annual General Meeting of the Society, and hope, and trust, that this appeal will not prove to have been made in vain.

Resolved.—That the Meeting view with much regret, the diminution of Subscribers to the Society, and the depressed state of its finances, and do therefore record an appeal to the Community at large, to step forward to aid so valuable an institution, in realizing the many public benefits it is so well calculated to promote—and that the General Committee adopt such measures as it may seem desirable, to give publicity to this appeal."

(Signed.) A. TULLOCH.

MADRAS, 30th March 1839.

Chairman.

No. 1.

To Mr. J. W. MARTENS,

CALCUTTA

Sir.—Under instructions from the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras, I beg to inform you that the want of a well qualified Superintendent for the Garden, has been long felt; and that it is the anxious wish of the Society to remedy this deficiency in its establishment, at any cost commensurate with its means. In the belief that your talents, and practical acquirements point you out as a fit person for the charge, and that you are now out of employment in Bengal, they are desirous of engaging your services, and will esteem it a favour, your informing them whether you are willing to come to Madras, and on what terms you would consent to be employed.

It is probably desirable, with the view of at once enabling you to make up your mind, and saving the time that might be lost through a lengthened correspondence, to inform you that the Garden occupies an area of about 8 Acres, that the soil was originally of the most indifferent description, but that through the exertions of the Society, aided by the outlay of large sums of money for its improvement, it is at present in a very good condition, and, as the fairest means of estimating its qualities for the more usual purpose of the Garden, is found to produce medium crops of nearly all the culinary Vegetables, and annuals, that have yet been tried, and lastly, that the progress of shrubby, and arborescent plants, though not quite equal to the other, are not materially behind them.

In mentioning that kitchen vegetables have of late been extensively tried, it is not with the view of conveying the impression that it is the wish of the Society to make them a principal object of culture, on the contrary they are desirous rather of rendering the Garden a nursery for the introduction here of valuable plants of a more permanent character, though at the same time, they are anxious to improve to the utmost the method of cultivation pursued here, for the production the other more temperary, though not less valuable inmates of the Garden, by the institution of such courses of experimental cultivation, as may seem likely to enable the grower to counteract the disadvantages of a hot and dry climate. These, it is hoped, if conducted by a person of your well known and duly appreciated qualifications for the task, will afford a better prospect of leading to satisfactory results than if less skilfully directed. Such being the objects which induce the Society to desire your aid, and being, they hope in accordance with your own wishes for the improvement of Indian Horticulture it is requested, you will favor them with an early reply, stating, in the event of your being willing to accept the Office of Superintendent, the most moderate terms on which you can take charge of the office, to enable them to determine whether they are such as the financial circumstances of the Society will admit of being accepted

I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,

(Signed) R. WIGNOT,

MADRAS, 8th February, 1839.

Secretary.

No. 2.

To the Secretary of the Mysore Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

SIR,—Owing to a pressure of public duty, I have hitherto been prevented carrying into effect the Resolution No. 5, passed at the last Annual General Meeting of the Madras Agricultural and Horticultural Society, by acknowledging the receipt of your proceedings, and intimating that I have adjusted the balance due to the Mysore Society, by Cashing their order in favor of Mr. Ochterslooy.

Under instructions from the General Committee, I beg leave to direct your attention to those proceedings, published in the Spectator newspaper of the 23d instant, in which it is particularly stated, that for the future the Madras Society have determined to direct much of their attention to the improvement of orchard and ornamental horticultural, in preference to persevering in the culinary branch beyond what may be found absolutely necessary as a means of enriching the soil of the garden, and carrying on such courses of experimental culture as may be deemed likely to improve the qualities of our culinary vegetables.

With the view of carrying into effect these resolutions, the Madras Society desire me to say, that we are particularly desirous of receiving seeds of all kinds of fruit trees, cultivated in Bangalore, for the purpose of being sown here, in the hope, that plants raised from seed in this climate, may prove better adapted for it than those which have been sent in a growing state from Bangalore.

If, therefore, you could procure for us, during the present season, supplies of peach, apple, grape, loquat, strawberry, &c. seeds and generally seeds of ornamental trees and shrubs, we shall esteem it a particular favor. The sooner they can be sent the better as we are anxious, by early sowing, under suitable protection to have them well advanced before the next Monsoon season, at the commencement of which they ought, in the estimation of the Madras Society, to be planted out, and thus be allowed ample time to acquire sufficient strength to enable them to resist the injurious effect of the ensuing hot season.

I have, &c.

(Signed) R. WIGNOT,

MADRAS, 27th Feb. 1839.

Secretary.

No. 3.

To the Secretary of the Bombay Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

SIR.—I have the honor, under instructions from the last general meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras, to communicate the subjoined resolution of the Society No. 6.

“Resolved.—That the thanks of the Society be recorded for the two copies of the proceedings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Bombay.”

I am further instructed to avail myself of this opportunity of mentioning, that the Society, considering the garden in a fit state to admit of their following out, to the utmost extent, one of the objects originally contemplated in its formation, but which, owing to the imperfections of its soil, has hitherto been in abeyance, that, namely, of rendering it a nursery for the introduction into this presidency of valuable tropical plants and trees of all kinds, whether esteemed for their qualities as fruit trees or on account of their value in the arts. Should it be in the power of the Bombay Society to aid the Madras one in carrying into effect these objects, by the contribution of seeds of fruit, timber, or ornamental trees, it should be their endeavour to reciprocate the advantage as often as opportunities offer, though they regret to say that, for the present their means of doing so are but limited. One example may be mentioned in which it is believed the Bombay Society may most beneficially aid the lovers of fruit gardens on this side of India. In Madras many of our fine old mangoes are dying out, and it seems in every way desirable, that these should be replaced by new supplies. Grafts, therefore, from young trees of esteemed varieties, will be highly appreciated. They might, with perfect safety, be transmitted, if planted in glazed boxes, similar to the one of which a drawing is herewith transmitted, each of which might accommodate from 4 to 8 plants during the short period they would require to be enclosed. The seeds of old and firmly established fine varieties, might prove equally valuable, by perpetuating the variety from which they are taken. This course is a less certain method of propagation, but is not without its advantages as a single really good sort thus obtained out of many failures, might, by grafting, be extensively distributed, or might even become a permanent seedling variety. On this side of India, such an occurrence as that of propagating a fine variety of the mango by seed, is almost, if not altogether, unknown; whether it is equally so in Malabar, is a point on which the Madras Society are not informed, and would be glad to have the benefit of your experience, for, if it is the practice on that coast; to raise mangoes from seed, or if it is known that good varieties can be so propagated, there, it becomes desirable, that both seedling plants and seeds from Bombay, should be tried here, to ascertain whether the deterioration so invariably observed in the case of seedlings raised on this coast, is attributable to soil or to climate, or both together.

This, the Society presume, may be ascertained by sowing, along with the others, a few seedlings, planted in pretty large tubs, in which some might be kept as dwarf until they fruit, while others are grafted on bearing trees to bring them sooner to a bearing state, be which to ascertain their respective qualities, as produced in their own original soil, and altogether separated from it. As these are truly interesting and practical subjects of enquiry, for the determination of which the co-operation of both societies is necessary, the Madras one trusts, that it is unnecessary to make any apology for the trouble they are imposing, by soliciting the aid of the Sister Society of Bombay, to conduct them to a final and, it is hoped, useful conclusion.

I have, &c.

(Signed)

R. WIGNOT,

MADRAS, 23d March 1839.

Secretary.

[Spectator, April 13.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 6th April, 1839.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were ballotted for and elected.

J. Sullivan, Esq., M. D.; T. C. Hunter, Esq.; W. Jameson, Esq.

W. B. Webster, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, was re-admitted a Member of the Society.

Letters were read from—

Charles Griffith, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, stating that he had the pleasure to present a copy of Home on Tumours for the Library, together with some duplicate Nos. of the Society's transactions.

From the Royal Asiatic Society, returning thanks for the 3d and 4th Nos. of the Society's Journal, and pro-seuting in return a copy of the last No. of the Asiatic Society's Journal.

A communication upon Lithotomy, by Dr. Macinnon, was presented by the Medical Board. This was accompanied by several specimens of calculi, removed at different times by Dr. Macinnon, in addition to those already forwarded by him.

The following papers were then read and discussed,

Dr. D. Stewart's report upon vaccination.

Dr. Goodeve's case of operation for strangulated hernia.

H. H. GOODEVE, M. D. Secretary.

Medical and Physical Society.

Hurkara, April 11.]

RENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceeding of the Second Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund for the year 1839.

At a Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on Monday the 9th April 1839, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

PRESENT.

H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D., in the Chair.

John Sawers, Member Medical Board, Thos. Smith, Do., Frederick Corbyn, Garrison Surg., Fort William, Alex. Garden, M. D., Presidency Surgeon, H. S. Mercer, Marine Ditto,	{	John Grant, Apothecary General, Henry Chapman, Assis- tant-Sur. Genl. Hospi- tal, Walter Raleigh, Do., and Jas. Gregory Voss, M. D. Asst. Marine Sur- geon.
--	---	--

Messrs. Sawers, Smith, Garden and Chapman.

The Secretary read the Proceedings of the last Quarterly General Meeting, held on Monday the 14th January 1839, and the following Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management for the past quarter.

REPORT.

Bengal Medical Retiring Fund Office,

Calcutta, 8th April, 1839.

The Committee of Management have received intimation, in reply to their letter of remonstrance, dated the 31st May 1838, addressed to the local Government against the admission of Veterinary Surgeons as Subscribers to this Fund, that the Hon'ble the Court of Directors have declined compliance with the prayer of certain Veterinary Surgeons for permission to become Subscribers.

Mr. Surgeon Wm. Grime, who retired from the Service on the 9th March last, and for whom an annuity was reserved, as noticed in the last Quarterly General Report, has proceeded to Europe, without having paid up the balance required to make up his half value of an annuity, he has not, therefore, been admitted an annuitant.

By the Secretary's letter, Circular, No. 203, of the 10th December, 1838, the votes of the subscribers were required for the election of four Managers for the next year, in the room of Messrs. John Sawers and A. Garden, the two Senior Members, who retire in rotation, agreeably to the condition prescribed in Article XIV. of the Fund Rules; and of Messrs. Thomas Smith and Henry Chapman, who were elected in the course of last year to fill up vacancies by the departure from Calcutta of Dr. James Ranken and Mr. Surgeon C. C. Egerton, resigned, and go out under Rule XV.

The state of the Poll for the election of Managers is as follows:

A. Garden,.....	65	{	S. Nicolson,.....	14
T. Smith,.....	60		G. Craige,.....	13
J. Sawers,.....	50		W. Cameron,.....	11
H. Chapman,....	48		J. Colvin,.....	11
J. Hutchinson,....	27		H. H. Goodeve,....	11
D. Stewart,.....	26		N. Wallich, Se- nior,.....	11
H. H. Spry,.....	24		F. Malcolm,.....	7
G. Angus,.....	22		C. Campbell,....	6
J. R. Martin,....	20		W. Sherriff,.....	5
W. B. O'Shaugh- nessy,.....	17		W. A. Green,....	4
C. C. Egerton,....	17	A. Webb,.....	2
W. Findon,.....	16	J. Esdaile,.....	1
J. G. Voss,.....	14	C. Mottley,.....	1

having the largest majority of votes, have been re-elected members of the Committee of Management.

With the above letter of 10th December last, a requisition from Mr. Neil Maxwell, an Annuitant on this Fund, for payment of the Annuities quarterly instead of half yearly, as laid down by Article XXIX, was circulated for the votes of subscribers.

The state of the poll on this question is as follows:

For Quarterly payment of Annuity..... 113
For Half-yearly ditto,..... 10

Majority for Quarterly payment..... 96

The majority of votes as above having declared for Quarterly payment of annuities, the Committee of Management, pending the expected opinion of a professional Actuary, recorded the following Resolution at their Meeting, held on the 18th February, 1839.

Resolved.—That as the Table of the value of Annuities in use by the Fund (Vide Article XXIII. of the Rules) is calculated, with reference to payments of Annuity ceasing with last payment previous to demise, and annual payment of the same, the present practice observed by the Fund, of paying its Annuitants by half yearly instalments without any addition on account of such prompt payment, or for payment up to date of demise, the further change to quarterly payments of Annuities be suspended, until the expected receipt from Dr. A. R. Jackson of an Actuary's opinion.

The Committee have the pleasure to submit to this Meeting, the following letter received from Dr. A. R. Jackson who was delegated to consult a professional Actuary agreeably to the votes of subscribers noticed in the Quarterly Report read on the 8th Jan. 1838.

To GEORGE HILL, Esq.,

Secretary to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund,
Calcutta.

SIR.—I should have written you long ago, but having nothing further to communicate than the fact that as soon after my arrival in England as my arrangements permitted me to visit London for a time, I delivered into the hands of a competent Actuary, the various documents connected with our fund. I thought it a pity to incur the expense of postage overland.

I have now, however, the pleasure to acquaint you, for the information of the Managing Committee and Subscribers at large, that I have a few days ago received a very satisfactory report from the gentleman to whom I committed the task, Mr. Griffith Davies, of the Guardian Life Insurance Office, which as it is now, is so heavy, I cannot forward it by Overland Mail, but shall do so by sea as soon as I can; in the mean time, in consultation with Messrs. G.G. Campbell, John Turner, and the Agents of our Fund, Messrs. Cockerell and Co., I have determined upon printing it, as there are points on which I should wish the Court of Directors and Board of Control to be informed, and which I can effect in no other way than by laying before them the printed matter, manuscript being, in general, so bulky and difficult to get through. I have therefore adopted a suggestion, that as I should be obliged to incur expense for a few copies, I might as well include a little more, and have a sufficient number thrown off for distribution in India, which I commenced doing, and which I shall forward by the earliest opportunity, drawing on the Committee of Management for the expenses, which steps I hope will be sanctioned by them and approved by the Service at large.

Before going farther, I may detail some of the more important part of Mr. Davies' report.

1st. He considers the minimum subscriptions, as fixed at present, will eventually be quite sufficient and more than sufficient, but that just now more must be paid by the Seniors or else they must be content to receive a lower rate of pension. This of course they will not willingly to do, and it becomes a question how to provide for the difficulty. Mr. D. has thrown out a hint, that the Court may perhaps be persuaded to give us a donation equal to the extent required, or an annual grant for the requisite number of years to commence with till the Fund can maintain itself, which he shows it will do within a certain period; if the Court will not consent to give us the money, perhaps they may be induced to lend it in advance to set us fairly agoing, and this we ought certainly to ask them. I shall exert myself to the best of my ability to attain the object, but as a single person, I can scarcely hope to do much, and therefore would urge that a request to that effect be forwarded through the Local Government to the Court of Directors, as soon as possible by the Committee of Management; if you will send me a copy of my letter or memorial, I shall be ready to circulate it, and in the meantime, I shall go on doing what I can to prepare the way for it.

2nd. In speaking of the arrangements for the payments of the present Seniors, viz., that they must either pay more, or receive less, Mr. Davies says—“It is manifest, therefore, that in granting to the senior members annuities equivalent to double the improved amount of their previous payments the Society must incur a debt on their account, can only be made up at the expense of the juniors, and if this be the case, it cannot be safe or prudent to grant such annuities with further pensions of £150 per annum, as presents into the bargain, as appears to have been proposed by the Agra subscribers.” There are a variety of other things which I cannot enter into without going over nearly all the Report, and that I could not do to be within the restricted weight for postage, but if I can hear of any person going overland, I shall endeavour to get a copy or two sent in that way as soon as ready. The first proofs from the printer only reached me yesterday; no longer time shall be lost than I can possibly help. Mr. Davies got the documents from me the beginning of August, and I only got them back this month, about a week ago; but as he is considered a first rate man, and was employed by the Bombay Civil Service, and is now also employed by the Madras Military Fund, I thought it better even to have the delay, and secure his assistance, acquainted as he necessarily is from those circumstances with Indian mortality.

I have, &c.

(Signed) A. R. JACKSON.

No 9, Osburgh Terrace, Regent's Park, }
London, December 21st, 1838. }

By the same overland Mail that brought the preceding letter from Dr. Jackson, was received, under a frank from one of the Court of Directors, one single copy of the pamphlet containing “Report on the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, by Griffith Davies, November 29th 1838.” From having only one copy of this Report, the Committee of Management have not been able to give it that attentive perusal and consideration that the importance of the subject demands. On the receipt of printed copies of the Mr. Davies' Report that Dr. Jackson purposes to send out by sea, a copy will be immediately furnished to each Division of the Army for the information of subscribers. In the meantime, however, the committee of management beg to give a Summary of the report.

The rates of mortality shown by the Northampton Table, published by Dr. Price in 1783, being greater than the rates of mortality found from actual and calculated deaths amongst retired officers of the Indian Armies, residing in Europe, as determined by Mr. Christie, Actuary London Universal Assurance Society, from data obtained at the East India House; it follows, that the value of an annuity, calculated according to Mr. Christie's Table, will be greater than the value of an annuity on the same life, determined according to the Northampton Table; hence Mr. Davies considers the scale inserted in Article XXIII. of the Fund Deed, for the valuation of annuities granted by the Fund as too low; he, therefore, recommends the propriety of adopting the Mortality among the retired Military, as the basis on which to value annuities, adding the correction to be made on account of annuities being payable half-yearly, and of their being continued up to the annuitant's death. The following Table exhibits the scale recommended.

Showing the value of Annuities, reckoning Interest at 6 per cent., as laid down by Section XXIII. of the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund Rules, and that proposed to be substituted by Mr. Davies, with the difference of advance on former value, on account of reversions on single lives, according to the rate of mortality among retired officers of the Indian Armies, and the increase per cent.

Age.	Value of Annuity of £300 in sicca rupees at present charge, as per Fund Rules Article XXIII, being the same as the Northampton Table.	Value of Annuity of £300 in sicca rupees by Mr. Davies' Table, increased on account of being payable by half yearly instalments and up to the day of the death of an annuitant.	Difference in advance on former value.	Increase per cent.
40	32,115	35,083	2,968	9.2573
41	31,767	34,680	2,913	9.1698
42	31,419	34,257	2,838	9.0327
43	31,068	33,825	2,757	8.8740
44	30,705	33,375	2,670	8.6956
45	30,330	32,919	2,589	8.5361
46	29,940	32,451	2,511	8.3967
47	29,523	31,977	2,454	8.3121
48	29,121	31,491	2,370	8.1351
49	28,689	30,990	2,301	8.0518
50	28,251	30,495	2,244	7.9430
51	27,819	29,979	2,160	7.7644
52	27,387	29,453	2,066	7.5802
53	26,940	28,929	1,989	7.3609
54	26,481	28,392	1,911	7.2061
55	26,010	27,849	1,839	7.0707
56	25,527	27,303	1,776	6.9455
57	25,029	26,742	1,713	6.8440
58	24,519	26,175	1,656	6.7599
59	23,997	25,593	1,596	6.6503
60	23,460	25,008	1,548	6.5964

Mr Davies grounds his calculations on the supposition, that every survivor, when entitled to an Annuity, will take it; that the whole of the Medical Service were subscribers from the commencement of the Fund, and that there is no cessation of payment by subscribers absent from India, the erroneousness of which assumptions must be obvious to the subscribers.

From the rate of casualties of the Service, Mr. Davies shows, by calculations, that to maintain the complement of the Medical Establishment to 350 of its present strength, it is necessary that an average annual admission of 18-895 be made. Taking the average age of these admissions at 24, according to the per centage mortality from Major Henderson's data of the 18-895 admitted, 17-200 will attain at 26½ years, the grade of Senior Assistant Surgeons, or, in other words, stand within 160 on the gradation list of Assistant Surgeons, 10,842 at about 39½ will become Surgeons, and at about 51½ years 6,591 will survive to become Superintending Surgeons, and nearly one out of every two, would become members of the Medical Board at the age of 53. According to this computation, he classifies the 350 Medical Officers on the Establishment, at the origin of the Society, and he finds that among any class of a higher age than 37 at the origin of the Fund, "more than one half may be expected to survive the supposed age (51) of retirement, and consequently the benefit of survivorship, in the Subscriptions of their fellow members of the same age, who may happen to die before the retiring age, cannot, among those classes, produce double portion to the survivors of them." Hence, he affirms, that the Fund, in making up from its own resources the half value of the Annuity to the class of subscribers who were of the age of 37 and upwards, at the commencement of the Fund, in January 1833, gives more than it receives by the lapses of members of that class, and it is this deficiency that is to be made up, which Dr. Jackson suggests the Service should memorialize the Court to lend the Fund. Mr. Davies is decidedly of opinion, that the only safe way of establishing the Fund on a permanent foundation, would be, to make the collective payments of the Members of each class, with interest thereon, as nearly as possible, sufficient to provide the Annuities held out to the survivors of them, when it may become their turn to retire. The adoption of this proposition will, of course, alter the present constitution of the Medical Retiring Fund, since a growing permanent capital of Unappropriated Funds, will be brought into existence (the maximum amount whereof Mr. Davies estimates at sicca rupees 23,10,850) which the present rules did not contemplate, beyond providing with current subscriptions, what number of annuities could be available after retaining 50,000 sicca rupees for contingencies, and making up any deficit in the value of Appropriated Funds.

From the above explained classification it is inferred by Mr. Davies, that the minimum subscriptions required by Section IV. of the Fund Decree, are amply sufficient for those who are admitted as Members on the first joining the Service, provided their subscriptions, with accumulations thereon, were to be kept for providing annuities for the six Members of them, that may be expected to attain the retiring age of 51.

Mr. Davies observes that the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, can afford to grant annuities of nearly double the amount, which could be secured in Europe by the same annual subscriptions, and this advantage he continues, should, in his opinion, "stimulate the Service to exert themselves to the uttermost to establish their valuable Institution on a permanent basis, so as to perpetuate its benefits to future generations, which cannot be done if the present Members be allowed to entail on the Fund, any material liabilities chargeable on their successors." Mr. Davies, in reference to the advantageous terms on which annuities are obtained from the Fund, notices, "on comparing the terms charged by the Government for an annuity on life of fifty-four, and that which I recommend the Society to charge, it will appear, that if the Senior Members of the Service were individually to pay up the full value of their annuities, they would thereby secure to themselves annuities for about three fourths of what would be required for such annuities in this country."

There is now in circulation, for the votes of subscribers, an application from Mr. Surgeon John Davidson, to become a subscriber.

Adverting to the Resolution of the last Quarterly General Meeting, to refund to Dr. Swinney, the difference between the value for his annuity as paid by him, and that now payable by the cancellation of Art. XXIII. of the Fund Rules, the Committee of Management beg to state, that they are canvassing the votes of subscribers by circular, as to whether the refund of the sum of Co.'s Rs. 9,250-2-7 as per margin,* is to be made to that Gentleman.

* Dec. 28, 1837.—Amount received from Dr. J. Swiney, this day, Co.'s Rs.	22,804	11	4
Deduct half value of an annuity at his age of 54 years, Sn. Rs. (26,481) a moiety whereof is Sn. Rs. 13,240 8 or.....	14,123	3	2
Amount overpaid,	8,681	8	2
Jany. 31, 1839.—Add Interest on Co.'s Rs. 8,681-8-2 from 28th December 1837 to 31st January 1839, being 1 year, 1 month and 3 days at 6 per cent,	568	10	5 49
Amount to be refunded to Dr. Swiney, Co.'s Rs.	9,250	2	7 49

The Committee of Management, having found it expedient to require a Life Insurance from Subscribers who fall into arrears from absence in Europe, passed a Resolution—"That in addition to the provision of Rule IX. Subscribers returning from furlough will be required to furnish the Security of Life Insurance for arrears, as prescribed in Article III. of the Regulations," which is now in circulation for the votes of Subscribers.

By Order of the Committee of Management,
GEO. HILL,
Secretary M. R. F.

Proposed by Dr. Vos and seconded by Dr. Spry.

Resolved.—That the Report now read, be received and adopted.

Resolved.—That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the chairman.

(Sd.) H. H. SPRY, Chairman
[Hucknau, April 17.]

SUPREME COURT.

SITTINGS AFTER SECOND TERM OF 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Scott.)

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF BUDDINATH GHOSAL, I. JOHN ALEXANDER DEVERALL.

Mr. Leath opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated, that this was an action of ejectment to recover 600 bhegals of land in the talook of Rogapore. The title of the lessor of the plaintiff was derived under the perpetual pottah from the Rajah of Burdwan. Notice had been given of intention to dispute the jurisdiction, and this would be met in the first instance by proving that the defendant was a British subject resident within the limits of the Company's charter. This, it was apprehended, would be the whole case necessary to be proved for the plaintiff.

Mr. William Derrick Sovereign Smith, the sworn interpreter of the Supreme Court, was called to prove the jurisdiction. Obeychurn Chatterjee, the plaintiff's gomastah proved the granting and execution of the pottah 32 years ago by the Rajah Pertab Chunder. It appeared, that the lessor of the plaintiff continued in possession until recently, when the defendant took possession. Several other witnesses were called, and examined and cross examined at great length. The defendant's counsel were apparently endeavouring to shew that there had been a suit instituted in a Mofussil Court, in which the question of title had been actually raised between the parties, and bound for the defendant, but the Court said, that this could not be proved by mere hearsay, and that the record must be produced.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Clarke) then addressed their Lordships for the defence. The defendant's case is not a denial altogether of the plaintiff's right, title and interest in the land, but consists in a derivative title from him. The pottah under which the plaintiff claims is not disputed, but it is alleged and will be proved, that the plaintiff himself granted to the defendant, an under-pottah for seven years, and that the term has not yet expired. The circumstances of the case are these. The pottah in question was granted to Mr. Deverall, and he cultivated the land as part of his indigo-factory, but a dispute having arisen between the parties, the matter came before the Foudjarry Court:—this Court, having only criminal jurisdiction, could not of course decide the question of civil right, but it will appear from the record, that the instrument of demise or under-pottah, granted by the lessor of the plaintiff to the defendant was, produced in the Foudjarry Court, for the record verite of it. Proceedings were about to be taken in the Dewanny Court, and the under-pottah was transmitted for that very purpose, but, strange to say, the instrument became suddenly non est intuitus, and without doubt it was spirited away by the lessor of the plaintiff or some of his.

Equally strange was it, that the two subscribing writ to the original document, had since been arrested and tried in the Zillah Foudjarry upon a charge of disloyalty, unquestionably trumped up by the plaintiff solely to shut out their testimony, —true, they have been convicted, and sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment, yet this conviction was upon suborned evidence, and the appeal is now pending in the Sadler Nizamut, but of course they cannot be produced as witnesses? It is apprehended, however, that proof of these circumstances will let in secondary evidence, and proof of a copy of the original document, with the record of the Foudjarry Court, ratifying the original, will establish the defendant's case.

Sir E. Ryan. Before you go into your case, it may save time to state, that there is an objection in limine, which appears to the Court to be fatal? In proving copies, you cannot possibly be in any better position than in proving the original, and how can you do so without calling the subscribing witnesses?

* Mr. Prinsep. Certainly not, my Lord, if they were within the jurisdiction.

Sir E. Ryan. I have yet to learn, how any person being any where within the provinces of Bengal, Behar and Oussa, is beyond the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, as a witness, and out of reach of the process of subpana.

Mr. Prinsep. Being convicts, perhaps they may be deemed civiliter mortui, and inadmissible as witnesses! But how are we to get them out of the custody of the law?

Sir E. Ryan. By habeas corpus, of course. I myself granted the writ of habeas ad testificandum, in Mr. Ogilvy's case, when Rajah Pertab Chunder (under trial at Hooghly) was required as a witness here for the prosecution.

Mr. Prinsep. I think, my Lord, that there was an application made to Government, and that it was with the consent of Government.

Sir E. Ryan. Of Government? I am not aware, that there were any obstacles to the execution of the writ or that any could possibly exist. I considered the case of course, and I was of opinion then, as I am now, that the Supreme Court had full power to grant it without the control or consent of Government or of any power whatever.

Mr. Clarke said, that he had moved for the writ himself in that case as Counsel for the prosecution, and that his learned leader was under a misapprehension in supposing, that the consent of Government was in any way applied for. The Secretary to Government was communicated with merely for the purpose of making arrangements as to keeping the Rajah in safe custody while in Calcutta, and he was committed accordingly into the charge of the Magistrate of the twenty-four Parganahs.

Mr. Prinsep. Well, my Lords, if the Court is of opinion, that the attendance of these witnesses is indispensable, there is an end of the case, for they are not forthcoming.

Sir E. Ryan. There is no doubt on the subject—the law is clear. There must be a good verdict against you.

Ferret in the lesson of the plaintiff.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30.

RECEIVER NObinmoney Dabee v. HURLOLL TAGORE, Plaintiff, &c.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, appeared in this case on behalf of the Receiver of the Estate of Radhoyamohun Tagore, deceased, to support an application, upon notice, for an order that the Master here move to postpone until the first day of next term the sale of the Talook of Mohemshye, belonging to the estate advertised by him for sale, under decree, on Monday next the first day of April 1849, and that the receiver be at liberty, in the meanwhile, to dispose of the said talook on Puttance or perpetual lease, and that it be referred to the Master to inquire whether such disposal of the talook will be for the general benefit of the estate, and whether a sufficient sum would thus become presently available without resorting to the absolute sale thereof. There were affidavits by the receiver and his Attorney, setting forth the present state of the general assets and debts, and outstanding claims in favour of the estate, and liabilities and claims against it, and stating that both the present and late receivers (W. H. Smout and Elliott Macnaghten, Esquires, had, upon the best information and advice which they could obtain, come to the conclusion, that it would be highly advantageous to the estate if the talook in question were to be leased, as proposed, on puttance, that the fine or premium thereof would probably be about a lak of rupees, and the annual rent reserved not less than fourteen thousand; whereas if sold absolutely the estate would not fetch more than a couple of lakhs and that the assets thus available in a short time would very probably be amply sufficient to meet all the outstanding charges and liabilities. The late receiver had in fact taken upon himself to let the talook for two years at an annual rent of Company's rupees 17,000, and Hurloll Tagore himself (the defendant in the suit) had become the lessee, holding, however, in the name of Gopeynauth Roy, his agent. It was true that the present application was opposed by Hurloll and certain of the creditors, but if the Court were satisfied upon the disinterested and conjuncting representations of the Receiver, that it was for the benefit of Radhoyamohun's family and of the estate in general, it was apprehended that their opposition would not be regarded.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Osborne) for the complainant in the suit, Nobinmoney Dabee, who was a legatee) and three of the creditors, opposed the application. It was rather singular that the only party in favor of this singular application, was the receiver himself, and that all the interested parties, creditors and legatees, were vehemently opposed to it! No doubt the Receiver was disinterested in his proposal, and acted to the best of his judgment, but he was quite a stranger to the merits of the case, having become Receiver only within the last few weeks. The application in reality was the application of Seeboon-sunkery Dabee, the widow of Shamloll Tagore (Hurloll's brother, lately deceased, and for her sole benefit and advantage! But what were the terms of the decree in the cause of the 18th of July last? The decree was absolute that the estate should be sold immediately on the expiration of the period limited for the payment of the debts, legacies and costs, and yet here was an application (the time having elapsed and the claims not having been discharged) in the first instance to postpone the sale, and ultimately to dispense with it altogether, substituting instead a Puttance lease,—and this too not merely without the consent but in direct opposition to the expressed wishes of the creditors.

He was then stopped by the Court. Several other counsel appeared for other parties.

Sir E. Ryan. We think it quite unnecessary to hear your argument further, because we are clearly of opinion, that under the terms of this decree, the Court has not the power of granting such an application without the consent of all the parties. The rule must be discharged, and in the usual manner.

Discharged with costs.

[The sale of the Mohemshye Talook, under the decree of the 18th of July last, will accordingly take place this day (Monday.)]

(Before H. W. Seton, in chambers.)

RAJEEPLASAD DOSS v. DOSSOORUT SING AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton appeared on behalf of the defendants, to shew cause against a summons taken out by the plaintiff, to strike out the allegation of actio nem non, and the prayer of judgment contained in a special plea of justification, under Rule 10 of the new Rules. The plea was for an aggravated assault and the plea justified certain specific parts only of the assault alleged on the ground of moliter manus impositus, the general issue being pleaded to the residue. It would have been erroneous to have omitted these formal parts, because Rule 10, in express terms, only dispenses with them where the plea goes in bar of the whole generally.

Mr. Nott, contra, in support of the rule, contended, that the formal allegation and the prayer of judgment were unnecessary. The pleadings taken altogether, went to the whole action, and it was not certain that the special plea of justification did not furnish a defence to the entire plaint, for it justified an "assaulting generally, and the action was for an assault. In the case of Rind v. Higginson, & Nevill and Manning, it was held that in a plea which only went to one count, and not to the whole plaint, the allegation and prayer were unnecessary.

Sir H. W. Seton, thought that the only question was whether the plea went only to part, and his Lordship ultimately decided that the allegations were not dispensed with by Rule 10, and that the summons must be discharged.

Discharged—Hurl., April 1.

MONDAY, APRIL 1.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Seton).

CHRISTOPHER MARTINE AND OTHERS V. ROBERT SPANKIE AND OTHERS—AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

These consolidated causes came on for further directions on the Master's Report.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane for the Government. The parties had no dispute concerning the terms of the decree which the Court would be asked to make except in one particular. [The learned Counsel then referred to the minutes of the decree which had been mutually agreed upon.] It was proposed by the Counsel for the City of Lyons, that immediately after the payment of the costs, the residue of the fund should be divided into three equal parts or shares, and that one part thereof should be paid to the trustees of the School and College of Lucknow (H. T. Prinsep and F. Macnaghten, in their official capacities), one other third to the trustees of the Calcutta charity, and the remaining third to Mr. John Abbott, the constituted attorney of the Mayor of Lyons, for the purposes of the Lyons charity. Now the whole residue would be about 17 lakhs, and it was submitted that twelve lakhs would be amply sufficient to divide now, instead of the sweeping divisions thus contemplated. The cause would require to be referred again to the Master and brought before the Court at least once again; and further funds would be required to be reserved for the repair and completion of Constantia House, under the terms of the testator's Will.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Nott for the City of Lyons, contended that the time had arrived, and that the present was the most favourable stage, for making the distribution of the residuary fund contemplated by the seventh article of the decree of the Supreme Court of February 1832.

Mr. Osborne for the next of kin, said that his interest was now identified with the city of Lyons, by virtue of the compact entered into between the Mayor and the next of kin, that the sums to which each might be ultimately decreed entitled, should form one common fund, of which (after defraying the charges, &c.) four-fifths should be taken by the next of kin, and one-fifth by the City of Lyons. This compact had been ratified by a royal ordinance of Charles the Tenth of France, and had been recognised in the Privy Council upon the appeal from this Court, heard in December 1836.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court would consider the point which appeared to be the only question upon which all parties were not agreed. There were one or two subordinate points which had been suggested, upon which a reference to the Master would be necessary, but upon these he might be able to make his separate Report.

DOE ON THE DENISE OF MEAH MOOSDEAN V. CONNOLLY DUTT.

This was an action of ejectment. The lessor of the plaintiff claimed under an instrument of sale executed by one Beebun Raur, which it was alleged was afterwards abstracted by the vendor. The plaintiff failed, however, in making out his own case, and the defendant was not called upon.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith for the plaintiff.

Mr. Prinsep for the defence.
Nonsuit.

SREENUTTY ARUNDMOYE HOMONEY AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS, &c. V. MIBLE JOGGOO JAUN AND OTHERS.

This was an action for Rs. 611 being the principal and interest due on a Bengal mortgage. The particulars gave credit for the sum of Rs. 193 paid in account.

Messrs. Prinsep and Barwell for the plaintiffs.
Verdict for the plaintiffs.

ROBERT HOLLOW V. DAVID THOMPSON.

Mr. Sandes opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep, for the plaintiff, said, that the action was for trespass upon the case to recover damages for a nuisance in obstructing a certain drain, alleged by the plaintiff to be a public drain; and as the defendant had only pleaded the plea of liberum tenementum, i. e. claiming the drain as freehold, the obstruction was admitted, the only question in issue being in the right, and thus, it was a prebended, was on the other side.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defence, acquiesced in the issue being upon him. The learned counsel stated, that the defendant claimed the drain in question, as a private drain, and he was instructed that he should be able to shew that the drain was not accessible except through the premises of the defendant, that it had always been considered a private drain, and that the Police, who had power to abate as a nuisance any obstruction to a public drain, had not interfered with the stopping up of this, and lastly, that it had always been repaired at the private expence of the owner of the defendant's premises.

A great number of witnesses were then examined for the defendant; who proved a lease and release of the premises from one Fraser many years ago, and also shewed distinctly, acts of private ownership by himself, of the drain in question. The plaintiff then called a counter host of witnesses, who proved equally distinctly that several acts of public ownership had taken place in respect of this drain, for a long series of past years.

Mr. Clarke contended, in reply, that the defendant had clearly made out his case, and that it stood uncontradicted by the evidence on the other side. All that the plaintiff had proved was an easement, or right from prescription in the locus in quo, and this, even if sufficient to establish his case, where the plaintiff is for an injury to such easement or prescriptive right, was altogether inapplicable to the present pleadings, where the only question was the right of property.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the issue was upon the defendant, and he might have proved his case either by direct evidences of title, or indirectly by acts of ownership. Of the former, the lease and release of the premises were the only proof; of the latter, there was proof of certain acts from which ownership might be implied. On the other hand, if the plaintiff's witnesses were to be believed, the drain had been used for many years. The Court were of opinion, that the defendant had not succeeded in shewing that the drain was his private property; and they should, therefore, give nominal damages for the plaintiff, which would, of course, be sufficient, because if the nuisance were not abated, he might resort to an ulterior remedy.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Note.—His Lordship did not notice the objection that the plaintiff had not in fact contradicted the evidence of the defendant, and that he had only proved an easement on private property, which would be inapplicable to the pleadings. Suppose the plaintiff had replied that he had an easement, instead of traversing the liberum tenementum; it would have been a departure, and plainly demurrable. The decision, therefore, must have proceeded either upon this, that the defendant wholly failed to make out his title, directly or indirectly, or else that the plea of liberum tenementum here took an immaterial issue.—Hurkaru, April, 2.

TUESDAY APRIL 2.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF HURLOLL MITTER V. EDWARD HILDER.

This was an action of ejectment, which came on to recover a fourteen-annas share of certain premises in Calcutta, and came on ex parte against the casual ejector. It was in this case that the special application was made a few days ago, under the 1st ejectment rule, to enter an appearance for and confess the plaint in the name of the casual ejector for premises out of Calcutta, but the court being of opinion that the facts appearing upon the affidavit did not show that the lands were in the actual occupation of a person subject to the jurisdiction, the last mentioned premises were struck out of the plaint, and the ejectment was set down for the premises in Calcutta only.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the lessor of the plaintiff.

Verdict for the lessor of the plaintiff.

NITTANUND SHAW V. JOGHURRY DORR.

This was an action on a Bengallee bond, and came on ex parte.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Osborne, for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff for Co.'s Rs. 4,516.

ROYCHUND SHAW V. DITTO.

This was a similar action for the same amount, and came on ex parte also. The court put some questions to the witness, to ascertain whether the plaintiffs in this and the former case were not partners and joint in trade and dealing, but the contrary was sworn.

Messrs. Clarke and Osborne for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff Co. Rs. 4,516.—Hurlorn, April 3.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1839.

IN RE MUHTUB BEEBEE.

Mr. Morton moved for a writ of habeas corpus, to be directed to William Coates Blacquiere, a Magistrate and Justice of the Peace for Calcutta, to bring up the body of the abovenamed Muhtub Beebee, illegally and unlawfully detained in custody by the order and authority of Mr. Blacquiere. The affidavit of Mr. William Hawkesworth, upon which the motion was made, stated, that Muhtub Beebee and her husband, Sheikh Bachoo, who were Mahomedans, had lived upon bad terms; that the husband had treated her with great cruelty and violence; that the wife had recently procured a Persian instrument of separation, since which they lived separately; that the husband had endeavoured to compel her to return, and had at last applied to Mr. Blacquiere at the police office, who, after endeavouring in vain to prevail upon the wife to return, had committed her to custody (it was not known where) and had detained her against her will ever since. It was apprehended that this imprisonment and detention were wholly unauthorized and illegal.

Sir E. Ryan inquired, whether there was not some regulation which gave jurisdiction to the Magistrate in such cases.

Mr. Morton said, that he believed there was a Regulation which empowered the Magistrate to act in cases of forcible abduction or seduction of native married women.

Sir E. Ryan referred to the Regulation in question, which only gives a jurisdiction to the Magistrate against a party guilty of the abduction, where a married woman is enticed away or forcibly carried off. His Lordship observed, that if the Magistrate had here imprisoned the party with whom the woman was, previously to the proceedings at the police office, and if the writ of habeas corpus had been applied for in order to his liberation, some explanation might have been at once suggested. It did not appear, however, under what authority Muhtub Beebee herself was detained, and she was, therefore, entitled to the writ that the matter might fully appear to the satisfaction of the Court. As it was out of term, the application ought properly to have been in Chambers, and it would be better now to move it before a Judge in Chambers, and to make the writ returnable there.

[It was afterwards moved before Sir J. P. Grant in Chambers.]

Writ of habeas corpus granted.

DOE, ON THE DEMISE OF HOLROYD AND ALEXANDER, ASSIGNEES OF KANJULOLL BANENJAM AND ANOTHER, INSOLVENTS, v. GUNGA DABOO.

This was an action of ejectment to recover possession of two dwelling-houses and nine cottages of ground situate at Banatulla, in the town of Calcutta. The property in question belonged to Gocoolchund, the grandfather of the insolvents, who carried on business in his life time jointly with his grandsons, and upon his death his grandsons continued to carry on the trade and him, and remained in possession of the premises, until their insolvency in 1834. The defendant was their mother and claimed under an alleged noncupative bequest from her father-in-law, the said Gocoolchund, under which bequest the insolvents were alleged to have been constituted the maliks or trustees of the property for their mother's benefit and behoof. The defendant called two witnesses, but their testimony was so contradictory, that the Court declared, that they could give no credence to it whatever.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith, for the lessors of the plaintiffs.

Mr. Clarke for the defence.

Verdict for the lessors of the plaintiff.

RICHARD HOWE COCKERELL AND OTHERS v. JADUCHUNDER SEAL AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated that this was an action brought by Messrs. Cockerell and Co. against the defendants, who were the brothers and native merchants of some consideration, but who had suffered largely, in common with many wealthy merchants, from speculations in the opium trade. The action was to recover a considerable balance (Rs. 43,000) for principal, interest and commission due to the plaintiffs upon an agreement for the delivery by the defendants of a quantity of Coosimbaser silk saris, for which the plaintiffs had advanced about Co.'s Rs. 35,000, but of which the defendants had only delivered silk to the value of about Rs. 15,000. There would be some difficulty in proving the agreement itself, because the only subscribing and explaining witness was one Beharry Loll Day, whom it had been found impossible to serve with a subpoena, and it would be shewn that repeated attempts had been made and had proved unsuccessful. It was apprehended, however, that upon proof of the peculiar circumstances of the case, the Court would allow the agreement to be proved in the circuitous manner which was alone left to the plaintiff: Fort v. Walker, 4 Barn and Alderson's Reports. There were, besides the special count upon the agreement, counts in the plaint for money had and received and money paid, and with respect to these at all events no difficulty would arise, because the plaintiffs would only have to shew the sum paid, and quantity of silk which had alone been delivered.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton were the defendant's Counsel, but Mr. Clarke mentioned, upon the Chief Justice inquiring who appeared for them, that they had not been instructed to defend the action now, because proper notice of trial had not been regularly given.

Sir. E. Ryan said, that the Court of course had nothing to do with that matter at present; all that they had now to do was to try the cause. If, however, the plaintiffs' counsel were not quite satisfied that the trial would be regular, the safest course would undoubtedly be to strike it out of the board for the present.

The plaintiff's counsel elected to proceed.

The case was then gone into at considerable length. It was shown that repeated attempts had been made unsuccessfully to serve the subscribing witness with a subpoena. Evidence was adduced that he was the nephew of the defendants and had acted as their agent generally. Proof was then given of his handwriting and that of the defendants. A good deal of correspondence was afterwards put in, and the advance of the money by Messrs Cockrell was shewn, and the total quantity of silk which had been furnished by the defendants at different times, in pursuance of their contract.

The Court said, that there must be a verdict for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

The Advocate-General applied for an immediate writ of execution.

Sir E. Ryan said, that after the intimation from the counsel for the defendants, the Court certainly would not be disposed to grant immediate execution.

Mr. Clarke rose and said, that he had no hesitation in taking entirely upon himself the responsibility of having advised his clients not to appear and defend the action, because he was satisfied that the notice of trial would prove to have been insufficient and irregular.

Verdict for the plaintiffs for Co. Rs. 43,000 — Hark., April 4.

THURSDAY, APRIL 4.

GOODASUN SAIN V. LOCKENAUTH MULLICK.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings. The action was brought to recover damages for alleged criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife, and the damages were laid at Co.'s Rs. 20,000. The defendant had pleaded the general issue.

The Advocate-General. May it please your Lordships. The Court has heard the nature of the present action, in which the plaintiff, who is a Hindoo, seeks to recover damages for the seduction of his wife. The present may perhaps be the first instance upon record of an action of this nature brought by a Hindoo plaintiff; but I need scarcely urge upon the Court, that this is immaterial and that no distinction can possibly be made on the ground of difference of complexion. A native, who seeks compensation for his domestic happiness thus destroyed, is equally entitled to redress at the hands of the Supreme Court, administering English law in a country governed by Englishmen. Nay, I will go even further. I will even contend that a native has a claim for higher damages in proportion for such an injury, than a European would have under similar circumstances. When the wife of a European proves unfaithful, her husband may resort to the Ecclesiastical Court to rid him of the nuptial tie, but I am not aware of any such remedy which is open to a native under similar unhappy circumstances. But I ask for heavy damages upon other grounds. There are in the present case circumstances of peculiar aggravation, which will be gradually unfolded as my statement proceeds. In the month of April 1823, the plaintiff was married to his wife, Rajcomaree, who was then only nine years old. They did not live together for some time; but in the year 1828, they had lived as husband and wife for about two years, and a son was then born, who died shortly afterwards. Until the year 1837, nothing whatever had transpired which could in any way affect the purity and chastity of the plaintiff's wife. In the month of February in that year, the plaintiff became unwell, and was recommended to proceed up the country for change of air and he went up accordingly, unaccompanied by his wife. It might perhaps be necessary in the case of Europeans to account for the circumstance that the husband proceeded alone, but among natives the circumstance is easily explainable, because it is neither customary nor convenient for the wife to be the companion of her husband upon his temporary travels. But in fact a good reason can be assigned; for the lady was far advanced in pregnancy at the time. It will appear, that the plaintiff at the time of his departure, left all necessary directions for the comfort and proper maintenance of his family during his absence, and his conduct towards his wife seems to have been always marked by peculiar kindness and care. It seems that the plaintiff was accompanied by one Nilmony Addy, the uncle of his wife, of whom further mention will be presently made. At Benares the plaintiff became exceedingly ill;—the native doctor absconded, and there were other circumstances which induced a suspicion, that an attempt had been made to poison the plaintiff. I must admit, that there are no tangible circumstances which appear necessarily to implicate the defendant himself in any conspiracy to poison my client; yet certain it is, that upon his return from Benares, he found the defendant in possession of his house, property and effects, and it will presently appear, that the defendant continued to interfere in a rather extraordinary manner. Let us now consider who defendant is. It will be found that he is a native of considerable wealth, and his name is not unknown to the Court, as connected with certain equity suits. He is not a single man, nor has he the hey-day of youth, to extenuate the crime of adultery. The plaintiff, upon his return from Benares, was in a deplorable state of physical weakness, and mental imbecility. —he was immediately lodged in a separate room by the directions of the defendant, debarred from all intercourse with his friends, and precluded from entering his own zenana, while, in aggravation of all, he constantly witnessed the entrance of the defendant into those sacred apartments, of which he was the rightful master. It was during this period that the adultery was committed. Now I must entreat your Lordships to remember with what sanctity this native customs and prejudices have invested the zenana or female apartments. Your Lordships are aware of the strict rules regarding it, that even the process of this Court does not invade its precincts, and that its pollution is the greatest evil which can befall a native. Among Europeans, when a married man is the victim of conjugal infidelity, the blow may be fatal to his domestic peace and happiness, but his character is not gone,—he continues to hold his rank and station in society. In the present case, too, the insult and degradation to which he was subjected, were paraded before the victim; and for this, I can in truth conceive no other motive than the hope of aggravating by conduct so atrocious, the mental malady under which he laboured. It will appear in evidence, that one Samchund Seal, a friend of the plaintiffs, was entrusted by him with the entire management of his affairs previously to his departure to Benares, and that it was this person who first remonstrated against the state of thralldom in which the plaintiff was kept. A man of the name of Gourchund Thakoor, appears to have been a material assistant and accomplice of the defendant, and to have played a rather conspicuous part throughout. To this man, Samchund threatened an application to the Supreme Court. Gourchund knew well what he had to dread, if such an application were made, and the consequence was that very soon afterwards, the unfortunate plaintiff was removed to the lunatic asylum of Mr. Beardsmore. Such a course may perhaps have been warranted by the state of mind in which the defendant was at the time; but by whose directions and under whose management was the removal effected? Without any consultation or communication with his own relations, the plaintiff was removed by this Nilmoney Addy, the treacherous uncle of his wife, Gourchund Thakoor, the bribed accomplice, and the defendant himself, his wife's paramour! An express stipulation about the payment of the expences which might be incurred, was made with Mr. Beardsmore by these parties. The plaintiff had friends and relations of his own, and I should like to know what could have induced this officious interference of the defendant, and these other persons, who were comparative strangers. A commission of lunacy was afterwards held, and the plaintiff was declared to be not in his right mind;—nor indeed is the result much to be wondered at. The commissioners, however, recommended (I am told at the instance of the Jury) that his wife's relations should not be permitted to have access to the plaintiff. I am instructed, however, that every thing continued to be managed, under the direction and superintendence of the defendant. At this time he seems to have acquired complete control over the wife's person, and to have carried on his adulterous intercourse night after night. It may perhaps be suggested, that there is an apparent difficulty in explaining how the defendant could thus have become acquainted with a purdah woman, and how he could have originated an intimacy which resulted in this adulterous connexion? But it is to be observed, that females have free access to the zenana and that they may be bribed. It will appear in evidence, that the mother of the guilty woman, has herself been a bribed accessory to her daughter's shame; that she was removed, in fact, by the direction of the defendant, to the house of her mother, and that the mother suffered him to be resident there, while he held the daughter in a state of adultery. All the attendant circumstances of this case afford no extenuation whatever, but abundant aggravation. Adequate compensation is impossible, for pecuniary damages can never repair the deep injury which has been inflicted (I will not say upon the caste, for that is too technical an expression, but) upon the character, rank and station in society of the plaintiff, and upon his happiness and peace of mind. I submit, therefore, with confidence, that if we succeed in establishing by evidence the facts which I have opened to the Court, the plaintiff will be entitled to receive from your Lordships, the full damages which are claimed in his declaration.

Samchund Seal, examined by Mr. Prinsep. I am a dealer in goods. I know the plaintiff. In February 1837, I was entrusted with the management of his affairs, on the occasion of his going away to Benares. He had been long married; his wife's name was Rajcomarree, and he had no other wife. I was directed to pay the expences of the Thakoor, and all necessary expences, and Rs. 500 were left for the expences of his wife's lying in. I know the defendant to be an opulent man. When the plaintiff returned, he was in a state of very great debility, and his mind and intellect were disordered. I continued to manage his affairs for some time after his return. I saw the defendant one day afterwards, in the month of Assaure, at the house of the plaintiff, and on the following day I was debarred from entering the house. The durwan said there was no hookum that I should come in, and since then I ceased to manage the plaintiff's affairs. I never saw the wife appear in public before the plaintiff went away, but since his return I saw her once or twice. I went to the house on a subsequent occasion in the month of Cartick, hearing that the Baboo (the plaintiff) was very ill. He was suffering from violent diarrhoea, and his mind was much affected. He had received no medical aid up to that time. I communicated upon the subject with Mr. Anley. I know Gourchund Thakoor, he is Mr. Humfray's head writer. I saw him at the house of plaintiff in the dulaun, and the defendant was there at the same time. About ten or twelve days afterwards, the plaintiff was removed to the asylum. The defendant asked me what his property consisted of, and what his rents amounted to. On one occasion afterwards, I was in the house of the plaintiff, and I saw the defendant in Rajcomarree's room. They were sitting together on her bed. I saw them through the key hole of the door. There was no lock to the door, but a large key-hole. I saw them very plainly, and I was quite certain of the identity of the persons whom I then saw. The asylum to which the plaintiff had been removed, was Mr. Beardsmore's at Bhawanipoor. He remained there about a year. There was a commission of lunacy afterwards attended before Mr. Dickens and the Jury. He became much better afterwards.

Cross examined by Mr. Clarke—I know Bustom-churn Addy and Cassinauth Mullick. The latter is the defendant's brother. The plaintiff did not marry his wife in the house of the Mullicks but in the house of her own father. I do not know that the Mullicks were looked up to as the patrons of the family. The plaintiff's wife is connected with the Mullicks. (The learned counsel examined the witness at considerable length, in order to show that there were sufficient and obvious reasons why the defendant should take upon himself to interfere in the management of the affairs of the plaintiff, and upon the Court suggesting that this matter appeared to be gone into at unnecessary length, Mr. Clarke said, that by the case opened on the other side, his client seemed to be accused by implication, not only of adultery, but of a conspiracy to poison and rob the plaintiff.) There was a zenana in the house of the plaintiff. It was in the interior part. All the upper rooms had English locks, and not clamps and padlocks. When I saw the defendant in Rajcomarree's room, it was about a gunta and a half after dusk. This happened a few days after I was forbidden to come to the house. The plaintiff had then returned from Benares. He was in another room of the house at the time. I saw on that occasion, in the house, only the durwan and a female servant. The latter was in the compound. She did not see me peeping through the key hole. I did not tell her of it. I told nobody until about six weeks afterwards, when I told it to Gourchurn. I afterwards told the plaintiff, when he questioned me upon the subject I know one Nundumony, who was a woman of loose character. The plaintiff did not keep her, but he used to visit her. There was a female of the same of Rajcomarree, who was once with him for two or three days. There is a Christian woman who now drives about with him in his carriage; she is the wife of a person who has the charge of his billiard table. I never knew of quarrels between the plaintiff and his wife. I did state before the Commissioner on the commission of enquiry, that after the plaintiff's return from Benares he used often to send her away when she came into his presence. I never stated that there were quarrels. I never heard of his turning her out of the house in 1834. I have received the rents of the plaintiff, I have never accounted for them.

Shaikh Jameer, examined by the Advocate-General. I am not now in the service of the plaintiff. I had been employed by him as a bricklayer, and at the time of his going to Benares, I was made durwan. I never saw the defendant at the plaintiff's house before the latter went to Benares. I saw him in the dulaun after the plaintiff's return one day. After sitting there for a short time, he proceeded into the interior of the house. He forbid my following him. I never knew other men go into the interior parts of the house. The defendant was afterwards in the constant habit of entering the apartments of Rajcomaree, and at all hours. He used to give directions that people should stay away, and that a watch should be kept. He gave me these directions. Sometimes he staid all night. I saw them together several nights in the room of Rajcomaree herself. I used to go and peep through the key-hole. (The witness described that he had seen the act of adultery committed.) I told the last witness of this; but he would not believe it at first. On one occasion, he himself looked through the key-hole, and saw the occurrence as I have described it. The plaintiff was taken to Mr. Beardsmore's asylum under the directions of the defendant, and he staid there about a twelve month.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. The room in which I saw the defendant and Rajcomaree, was a lower room. It was in the zenana. There was no lock to the door. There had been a lock, but it had become imperfect and was taken off. It was through the hole which was formerly the key-hole that I used to peep. There was nothing to prevent the other servants in the house from looking in the same manner. The bed is in such a position that it may be seen through the key-hole. There was a light in the room. (The rest of his evidence was not material.)

Isaac Beardsmore, examined by Mr. Prinsep. I remember Soodasun the plaintiff, being lacerated under my charge. It was not at the asylum, but a house in the neighbourhood, that he was placed. The defendant and Gouroochurn Thakoor gave the directions. Gouroochurn was the negotiator with me, and agreed with me for the amount.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke. I brought an action for the expenses against the plaintiff, and he filed a bill in equity against me.

Muddoonobdun Addy, proved that the plaintiff's wife, Rajcomaree, was now living with her mother, Soodamoney Dossie, where she had been for the last six months, and that the defendant was in the constant habit of going there, often at ten o'clock, and remaining till midnight. The defendant was considered the manager and patron of the family.

Gouroochurn Sawun was called upon his subpoena. It was proved that the subpoena had been duly served and that the witness was in Court yesterday. This witness had been formerly a khansamah in the service of the plaintiff, but was now in the service of the defendant.

This closed the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Clarke. May it please your Lordships. I congratulate my learned friend upon the novelty of his situation, and upon his being the first English Counsel who ever introduced a case of this nature into an English Court of Justice, where a Hindoo plaintiff seeks to recover, by an appeal to English law, a compensation which the law of his own country does not award.

Sir E. Ryan.—Not so, Mr. Clarke. There was a similar action tried many years ago in this very Court.

Mr. Clarke.—I was not aware of it, my Lord, I must confess.

Sir E. Ryan wished to observe, that there was no evidence given of the fact of the marriage, and this was a material question for the consideration of the Counsel.

The Advocate-General said, that as the General issue alone was pleaded, he apprehended that the fact of the marriage was not in issue.

Sir E. Ryan referred to a case in Carrington and Payne's Reports, in which the contrary opinion was held; but his Lordship said, that the Counsel were of course to conduct their own case as they thought proper.

General proof of the marriage of the parties was then given. Mr. Clarke said that he should not impeach the insufficiency of the proof, but should admit the marriage; if however no evidence had been given, his learned junior and himself had fully intended to have gone for a nonsuit.

Mr. Clarke proceeded. I must own that I cannot see how natives are to be deemed, entitled to such a remedy. The civil action to recover damages against a seducer is almost peculiar to our own law. By the Mahomedan law, indeed, the injured husband, it is said, may kill both adulterer and adulteress. By the Hindoo law the guilty party is criminally amenable, but I deny that he is ever held liable to damages in a civil action. An Englishman cannot resort to an Ecclesiastical Court or to Parliament, to procure a divorce, without first having recourse to this remedy at law, in the form of an action to recover damages. He is thus driven to it, as it were, however repugnant it must be to his own feelings to institute a proceeding, which is thus instrumental in giving publicity to his own disgrace. But my learned friend is incorrect in saying that the Hindoo has no remedy, where he is the victim of conjugal infidelity. The Hindoo is even better situated; for he may discard and renounce his unfaithful wife—from the moment of the adultery, she ceases entirely to have any claim upon his property, or right to his support and protection. My learned friend said, that a Hindoo was entitled to even heavier damages, because the wrong was even more grievous! I cannot draw a distinction, for to me the injury appears so enormous, as to admit of no gradations; but the right to demand redress for that injury may be affected by many circumstances. And it is affected here most materially, by one circumstance, which has already appeared in evidence, but of which I shall give still more cogent proof. If his wife were guilty, her guilt would be attributable to the plaintiff's own misconduct. He himself appears to have been systematically guilty of the grossest profligacy and immorality, and if she had erred, it would have been under his example. But I shall comment presently upon the nature of the testimony which has been given to establish the defendant's guilt, and show how utterly devoid of probability the whole story is from beginning to end. The interference exercised by the defendant in the affairs of the plaintiff, has been already explained by their own evidence, and I shall produce evidence to clear up the matter more completely. The defendant's family was intimate with the plaintiff and the defendant himself was regarded as their patron. It is a strange feature in the case, that until Soodasun's return from Benares, the defendant is not even accused of an attempt to perpetrate any of the enormities which are afterwards charged against him, and surely if robbery and seduction were the objects which he contemplated, he would rather have availed himself of the favourable season of the husband's absence, than thus waited for his return. The treatment which the plaintiff received at the defendant's hands, is evidently the very reverse of the treatment which would have been adopted if it had been wished to put him out of the way, for the defendant sends him to Mr. Beardsmore's asylum for the express purpose of restoring him to health and reason. But this is not objected to, forsooth, though my client is taunted with having adopted this course upon his own responsibility and without consulting his near relations! If he acted for the best, it matters not who were consulted or who were not consulted, and the result justified the means, for he presently returns comparatively cured. My learned friend has been pleased to indulge in many general aspersions, of none of which is there a particle of proof, and no attempt even made to elicit one corroborating circumstance throughout the whole examination. My client is accused by implication of being accessory to an attempt to poison on the Benares journey. Of this there is no tittle of evidence nor indeed anything to induce suspicion in a rational mind. I verily believe the plaintiff himself never entertained the notion, until he had lost his wits, when his disordered fancy straightway conjured up, confused visions of plunder and poison and seduction;—for I can only attribute my learned friend's exaggerated narrative, so little supported by the witnesses whom he has called, to the incoherent ravings of his client's still wandering intellect. The aspersions thrown out against the mother of Rajcoomaree, are equally unfounded. Her daughter is indeed living in her house, and surrounded, as I shall shew, by her own relations and friends; but I am at a loss to know how the charge has been made out, that the mother has been an accomplice and an accessory to the daughter's infamy and disgrace! (The learned Counsel then commented at great length, and with very great ingenuity, upon the evidence of the two witnesses who disposed to the act of adultery, shewing the contradictions and discrepancies in their testimony, and the improbability of their story. Alluding to the plaintiff as "unfortunate," he thus proceeded:) I call him unfortunate, because I most seriously doubt whether Mr. Beardsmore has quite accomplished the difficult task of curing his insanity and to suppose him still insane is the most charitable hypothesis, after witnessing his conduct and demeanour while standing beside his Counsel in this Court where indeed it is not usual for a plaintiff in such an action to be at all,—a self-complacent witness of his own disgrace. When the only piece of indecent evidence was given, (evidence which if true would, of course, have offered revolting proof of his own wife's infidelity) the countenance of this gentleman was expressive of the highest merriment and delight; and when my learned friend, the Advocate-General, in his eloquent address was decanting in pathetic and moving terms upon the deep injury which had been inflicted upon his client's domestic happiness and peace of mind, I could not forbear turning round to contemplate the face of this much injured man, and to contrast the glowing description with the grinning reality! The evidence which I have produced, cannot of course contradict the direct testimony of the two witnesses who have sworn with such assurance to the act of adultery, because I cannot prove a negative; but I rely upon the gross improbability of their tale and the contradictions which their evidence exhibits. It is not credible that the defendant, a wealthy man, would thus have gratuitously placed himself in the power of a common durwan, a man who was elevated to that post from the capacity of a ticca brick-layer, and even if the charge were true, the evidence could have been bought off for a few rupees. But my client did not attempt to tamper with these false witnesses; he did not dread a fictitious case, but feeling confidence in his own innocence, he has fearlessly allowed the false and improbable charge to furnish its own disproof, and he now asks a verdict at your Lordships' hands.

Soorjeeoomar Sain was the first witness called, and he was examined by Mr. Leith; but neither in his examination in chief nor in the cross-examination were any matters elicited very material to the main point. He stated that before the plaintiff went to Benares, he used to have his victuals cooked in an outer house, and never took his meals with his wife. During plaintiff's absence at Benares, Samchund Seal and Gopeenauth Seal, always used to visit at plaintiff's, but not after his return. Rajcoomaree had been blamed for some familiarity with Gopeenauth Seal. The defendant was regarded as the patron of the family, and had managed the plaintiff's affairs. Rajcoomaree was now living in the house of her mother; her mother was there, and several of her relatives. (This witness was himself a relative of Rajcoomaree.)

Nilmoney Adey stated, that he was Rajcoomaree's paternal uncle, and that Rajcoomaree, previously to and since her marriage, had often been at the house of the Mullick's with the full knowledge and consent of her husband. This witness stated, that Rajcoomaree had defrayed the expences of her husband's returning from Benares, by pledging her jewels, and that she had also said Mr. Beardsmore.

Tarramoney Raur, and Rajcoomaree, (not the wife) two modest young ladies, of some pretensions to good looks, were next put into the witness-box, and stated that they had been visited by the plaintiff, the latter within the last two months, and consequently since the commencement of this action.

Chuckun Sing, was called upon his subpoena.

This closed the case of the defendant.

The Advocate-General, in reply. I have been accused of opening certain facts to your Lordships, which I have given no subsequent evidence to support. I admit it; but it was because I paid attention to the intimation of the Court that we were going into evidence apparently relevant. All the material and important facts, I contend, however, that I have most amply substantiated, and that they have been met by nothing which has been shown, upon the other side. What is the case which has been set up by the defendant? Why, first, that there has been no criminal connexion between the defendant and the wife of the plaintiff, and then that the guilt of the wife has been extenuated by the profligacy of the husband!

Mr. Clarke rose and said, that he had never used directly or indirectly any such argument.

The Advocate General.—Then, why have common prostitutes been introduced into the witness-box, and why has the Court been insulted by the presence and the unblushing confessions of such women? Was it to justify or to extenuate infidelity which never had existence? (The learned Counsel then commented at some length upon the evidence.) It seems that one Chuckun Sing, has been subpoenaed, and why has he not been produced, why has he not appeared? My learned friend has himself afforded the explanation, for he has passed a most equivocal compliment upon his client, which I shall take the liberty of reiterating. Luckeynauth Mullick is much too wise and too wealthy to allow a witness, whose testimony could tell against him, to appear as a witness in this Court! The same reason has doubtless prevented the appearance of the female servant; she might have proved what my friend calls a negative case, if the facts sworn to were really untrue, but she is wisely withheld also. We have learned, forsooth, that the defendant has been regarded as the patron and protector of the family:—indeed! a rare account he has rendered of his patronage and protection. It would have been better policy to have been silent upon this subject altogether, until the adultery had been first disproved. My Lords, I ask heavier damages upon this very account, for it affords an additional item in the sum total of aggravation. I have been accused of aspersing the mother without giving any proof in support of the charge; but if my story is true at all, the mother is cognizant of the adultery. That the daughter is allowed to live in the house of her mother, I do not blame, but that the visits of her paramour at that house should be tolerated and encouraged, I do blame. I shall not further trespass upon your lordships' attention, for I feel that I should be only wasting the time of the Court in protracting my comments upon a defence so feeble.

The case was not closed until half past six o'clock. The court deliberated about a quarter of an hour, when their lordships' verdict was thus pronounced by.

Sir Edward Ryan.—This is an action of trespass for criminal conversation, brought by one Hindoo against another. I shall first allude to the questions of law.

FRIDAY APRIL 5, 1839.

Two facts were formerly necessary to be proved, the marriage and the act of adultery. It appeared to me doubtful, whether it did not continue necessary, even under the New Rules, the general issue alone being pleaded. Thus is stated in Lutwyche on the General issue, and it was so held in Holway v. Abel 7 Carr and Payne, where Littledale J. ruled, that in an action for seduction of a female servant, the fact of the service might be impeached under "Not guilty." I do not however, pronounce any positive opinion upon the point, because it is unnecessary, general evidence of the marriage having been given, and the fact of the marriage having been admitted by the counsel for the defence. Then arises the question whether a Hindoo can maintain such an action. Upon this point, I shall state what is my own opinion. There was one case of a similar nature in this Court, it seems, very long ago. I have caused a search to be made among the precedents, and I find in Mr. Justice Hyde's Notes the case of Coorgoo Mull v Ramkissen, 17th of November 1778, where the plaintiff in a similar action was nonsuited, on the ground merely of defective proof of the fact of the marriage. But this I cannot consider any authority upon the question of Hindoo law, (supposing it applicable) because it was long before Hindoo law was much known in this Court, and prior to the translation of Menu, and the publication of the many excellent text-books, which have since appeared upon the subject. Now Sir T. Strange, vol. I p. 46 lays it down thus:—"That criminal conversation with another's wife is, with the Hindoos, strictly speaking, a crime, punishable as such, by ignominious tonsure if committed by a priest, while in the other classes it may extend to the life." But he adds, that "in the King's Courts it would be actionable, not falling within the description of either of the two subjects in determining upon which these are to administer native laws." Macnaghten, in his treatise on Hindoo law p. 61 says, "adultery is a criminal, but not a civil offence, and an action for damages preferred by the husband, will not lie against the adulterer." So Colebrooke says, that the adultery is criminally punishable both in the man and woman, but that damages are not civilly recoverable. There are other authorities which shew that as regards Hindoo law, this action is not maintainable, and the regulations are conformable. It will therefore be a ground for the defendant to move, upon the point referred to by Strange, as to whether the action can be sustained in the King's Courts; the statute of Geo. III only provides that the law of the defendant is to be administered in cases of contract and inheritance. We shall certainly give a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty however to the defendant to move. We are of opinion, that the witnesses for the plaintiff are credible, and we are the more inclined to believe the story from the mode in which the defence has been shaped. The immorality of the plaintiff himself, or his cruelty to his wife, could have been urged with no other view than as a ground of mitigation, and not in contemplation of disproof of the charge. The negative here might have been proved by establishing an alibi or by calling in witnesses, to show the actual falsehood of the charge, the other persons who were in the house at the time when the alleged acts took place. No attempt has been to do so. Then with respect to the amount of damages, we consider that the circumstances of aggravation have been so far established that the defendant is proved to have taken advantage of the imbecility of the plaintiff. So we assess the amount at three thousand rupees.

Verdict for the plaintiff Co's Rs.—3,000.

On Friday, the Chief Justice intimated, at the rising of the Court, that judgment would be given on Monday morning in the "Special Case," (Dos v. O'Hanlon and another v. Patillogus) argued last Term.—Hurk. April 6.

SODDASUN BAIN V. BREEMUTTY SODDAMONEY DOSSETT, WIDOW AND REPRESENTATIVE OF BUSTOMCHURN ADDY.

This was a rule to shew cause why the judgment entered up in this cause for Co's rupees 1839, upon a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, and the writ of hieri facias issued thereon, together with all subsequent proceedings, should not be set aside. This motion stood over from last term, and was taken as of the term.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, shewed cause on behalf of the plaintiff. The Court would have some recollection of the names of the parties in this action, and indeed of the deponents upon whose affidavits the motion was supposed, from the proceedings which had occupied so much of their Lordships' attention on the preceding day. The plaintiff here was the plaintiff in the action tried yesterday, and the defendant was the mother of his wife, Rajroommarree. The warrant of attorney upon which the judgment in question had been entered up, was dated 16th of June 1832; it was authenticated by the mark of the defendant, and witnessed by Bismumber Bose and Backaram Thakoor, whose express affidavit of its execution in their presence, appeared before the Court. The Prothonotary had certified that an appearance was entered for the defendant on the 15th June of 1832, by Mr. George Wodsworth, an attorney of this Court, and that judgment had been confessed on the 22d day of the same month. Except the affidavit of the defendant herself, who swore that she had never executed the warrant, there were no affidavits in contradiction. Nilmoney Addy, Denoo Dass, and Luckhy Dosser, only swore that they were not aware of any debt due from Bustomchurn Addy to the plaintiff, and that Bustomchurn, shortly before his death, declared in the presence of the plaintiff, that he had further debts to pay nor dues to receive. It was apprehended that the Court would discharge the rule at once, and that there was no ground whatever for even directing an issue.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Osborne) supported the rule, and contended that the Court could not avoid directing an issue. The affidavit of the defendant herself was sufficient for this purpose, for she swore distinctly and positively that she did not employ Wodsworth as an attorney, that she never executed any such warrant of attorney, and knew nothing of the suing out of the fi. fa. until January last, when she was served with an order nisi for an alias fieri facias, and that the whole was in fact a false and fraudulent proceeding. The defendant, it was to be observed, was a markswoman; and she was sued too, not for a debt due from her personally but in her representative capacity. She had sworn that Bustomchurn was not indebted at the time of his death to the plaintiff, and this was directly corroborated by the depositions of the three others. It was impossible for the Court to decide without going into an issue.

The Court seemed, at first, unwilling that the expense of an issue should be incurred where the sum was so small. But they stopped the learned counsel, and after some discussion an issue was directed, the rule to stand enlarged in the meanwhile until the first day of next term, to abide the result of the trial. The Court saw no reason why the trial should not take place during the present sittings.

Mr. Clarke said that he could not possibly be ready.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court saw nothing to justify delay, and they had a full right to impose terms at their discretion. If there were any special grounds, they might be brought before the Court upon affidavit. At present none appeared. All the witnesses were in town (they were all in Court yesterday!) and all the pleadings on a feigned issue, might be drawn in the course of a few minutes. The Court would, therefore, fix Thursday next, the last day of the Sittings, for the trial. The affirmative in the issue, would of course be upon the abovenamed plaintiff in the action, who would be the plaintiff in the issue.

Issue directed, and rule enlarged until next Term, to abide the event.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

PAREUTTY GHOSE V. BHOLONAUTH MITTER AND OTHERS

(This case came on yesterday, but it stood over upon a suggestion of Mr. Justice Seton, who wished to look into the authorities upon a point raised.)

The bill was filed for a foreclosure. The mortgage was an equitable mortgage of the pottah of a certain dwelling house and land, situate at Mouza Arpooly, in the town of Calcutta, for the securing of a loan of Rs. 2,900. The bill had been taken pro-confesso against all the defendants, except Goculchunder Mitter, an infant.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith, appeared for the complainant, and asked for a decree, that the immediate sale of the mortgaged premises should take place, and that the Registrar should compute principal and interest, and that the amount due should be paid to the complainant, the surplus (if any) to be paid over to the defendants, and the deficiency to be made good by them.

Mr. Barwell appeared for the infant.

Sir H. Seton suggested, that it was a question whether in the case of an equitable mortgage, the decree ought properly to direct a sale or a foreclosure. In Pain v. Smith, 2 Mylne and Keene 417, the Master of the Rolls (Sir John Leach) held the equitable mortgage entitled to an immediate sale of the estate. In Parker v. Housfield, 2 M. and Keene 419, the Master of the Rolls (Sir C. C. Peryke) decided that in the case of an equitable mortgage the decree ought to give to the mortgager six months to redeem, but it does not appear whether a sale or a foreclosure was there directed to take place after that period, in default of payment, but the leaning seemed to be against the sale. And in Brackley v. Jessop, 7 Simon 438, the Vice Chancellor said that the decree in Pain v. Smith was manifestly wrong. So much for the ordinary rule. But the circumstance of the decree being taken pro-confesso against the defendants (all but the infant) is a ground for allowing a sale; and in the case of Scholefield v. Hensfield, 7 Simon 669, the Court directed a sale because it appeared to the infant more beneficial than a foreclosure. Upon this ground, therefore, the complainant would be entitled to a sale in the present instance. It is observable that in the case last cited, it was held, that the decree need not allow the infant a certain day (six months after coming of age) to shew cause against the decree, in the case of a sale (though necessary in the case of a foreclosure):—but this was because the recent statute of 1st Will. IV. abolished the “parol demurrer” at law, and this was acted upon by analogy in Courts of Equity. As the statute in question did not apply to this country, the analogous doctrine could not be extended here; the infant, therefore, would be given a day, to shew cause against the decree, after coming of age.

Mr. Clarke mentioned the disadvantages which would accrue if the sale were postponed. There could be no doubt it would be for the benefit of the infant, or if the Court were not satisfied it might be referred to the Master to inquire.

Sir H. Seton, did not at all mean to say, that a postponement of the sale would be rendered necessary. The matter might be mentioned again.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton at Chambers)

DINMONEY DABER V. MUDDOOSODDUN BANNTALL.

Mr. Morton shewed cause against a summons, calling upon the defendant to allow the plaintiff to inspect a certain deed of Release, pleaded by the defendant to an action upon an agreement. There was no affidavit of grounds, and it was apprehended that such an application was not only never a motion of course, but required very particular and special grounds to support it.

Sir H. Seton said, that the question seemed to be, whether the plaintiff was not entitled as a matter of course to oyer of an instrument which had been pleaded by the other party with a prefert in curia.

Mr. Morton submitted that there was a most material distinction between craving oyer, and demanding inspection of an instrument. In the former case the party only required a copy (and thus the defendant was not unwilling to furnish at the plaintiff's expense) but in the latter case the original deed itself was required. Now he had no difficulty in guessing that the present application was grounded upon a real or pretended suspicion that the release in question was a fraud or a forgery!

Sir H. Seton said, that he had been given to understand as much, when the summons had been applied for.

Mr. Morton said that the circumstances ought to have been fully and distinctly set forth in an affidavit of grounds, which might be met. At all events a party who applied upon no grounds, was clearly not in a better position than one who applied upon even insufficient grounds. Now the case of Chetwind v. Murrell, 1 Bos. and Puller 271, was directly in point to shew, that a suspicion of forgery was not a ground upon which the Court would entertain such an application.

Sir H. Seton was clearly of opinion that the rule in its present form could not be supported; but his Lordship thought that the plaintiff was entitled, at his own costs, to receive a copy of the release. (And a subsequent order to that effect was made.)

Discharged with costs.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant, in Chambers.)

IN THE MATTER OF MUHTUB BEEBEE.

Mr. Clarke, on behalf of Mr. Blacquiere, appeared before Sir J. P. Grant in Chambers, with the return to the habeas corpus in the above case. The return set forth, that at the time of the coming of the writ, and since, the said Muhtub Beebee had not been, and was not in the custody, power, or control, &c., of the said W. C. Blacquiere, and that he could not, therefore, bring in the body. But no mention was made of the original commitment and detention, or of the cause thereof.

No objection to this return was taken by Mr. Morton, who had applied for the writ in the matter. The fact is, the lady had been liberated within an hour after the writ had been moved for.

[Note. It seems that where the party has been released before the coming of the writ, the return is sufficient without shewing any cause for the caption and detainer. Rex v. Bethuen, Andrews' Reports, 281. See, however, 2 Wilson's Reports 154. But it is otherwise, if the detainer has not ceased until after the writ is served. Where, to an alias habeas corpus, the return was, that the party had been bailed between the issuing of the first and second writs, the Court held that the cause of commitment ought to have been returned, although the body could not be brought into Court; and an attachment was granted for the insufficiency of the return: Salmon v. Slade, 3 Bac. Abr. 433.]—Hurk., April 8.

MONDAY APRIL 8.
IN EQUITY.

FARDUTTY CHURN GHOSE V. DUDLOVAH MITTER AND OTHERS.

Sir W. H. Seton again mentioned this case (see the Hurkaru of yesterday) and said that the decree might be drawn up for an immediate sale, but (for the reason already assigned) with a day to be given to the infant defendant to shew cause against it. It was quite obvious to the Court, that a sale would be more beneficial to the infant than a foreclosure, and for this reason they should dispense with a reference to the Master. At the same time, the only cause which the infant could shew upon coming of age, would be the want of such reference: the complainant, however, would probably have no objection to incur that risk, such as it was.

Decree accordingly.

ANUNDNARAIN GHOSE V. BISSUNBER HOLDAR

The bill in this case was filed by the mortgagee for a foreclosure, and contained the usual prayer. The cause now came on for hearing upon bill and answer.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke for the complainant, said that the principal of the original debt secured, was only Rs. 30,000, (since accumulated by arrears of interest to Rs. 40,000) while the mortgaged property was worth about two lakhs. The mortgagor was anxious for time to pay up the money, and to this the mortgagee was disposed to consent, instead of pressing for a foreclosure. A decree would therefore be taken by consent, under the sanction of the Court, that twelve months be given to the defendant to pay the principal and interest now due, with the accruing interest on the accumulated sum, and that in the meanwhile a Receiver be appointed.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Nott for the defendant.

Decree by consent accordingly.

The Chief Justice intimated, that judgment would have been given this morning in the case of Doe v. Pullaloga, had it not been for the absence of Mr. Justice Grant: it will be given to-morrow Tuesday (this day.) The Chief Justice also said that their Lordships would probably be able to come to a decision in Rajah Gopsemukun Deb's case, before the beginning of next Term, in which event they would come into Court during vacation, and deliver judgment.—Hurk., April 9.

TUESDAY APRIL 9.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF P. O'HANLON AND J. W. ALEXANDER V. N. PULLALOGUS.

This was a "Special Case," and was argued last Term (See the Hurkaru of March 22d) by Mr. Morton for the lessors of the Plaintiff, and Mr. Leith for the defence. The Court delivered Judgment this morning.

Sir Edward Ryan. It is not necessary to state all the facts of this case. Suffice it to say, that the defendant in ejectment claims as the vendee of the Sheriff, who sold the property of the insolvent, by virtue of a writ of venditioni exponas, sued out upon an ex parte judgment against the property in question, which had been previously seized and sequestered, under a writ of sequestration for non-appearance, under the Charter:—the insolvency and assignment were prior to the judgment, but subsequent to the sequestration.

The principal question (and indeed the only one which I shall consider) is, whether, assuming the assignment to the assignee of the insolvent to have been valid and binding from its date, such assignment overrides the sequestration. It is material in the first place to look at the Charter itself. The Charter provides (cl. XV.) that, upon the return of non est inventus to the writs of summons or capias, and a verification by the plaintiff of his demand, the Court shall award a writ of sequestration, directed to the Sheriff, commanding him to seize and sequester the houses, lands, goods, effects, and debts of the defendant, to such value as the Court shall consider reasonable and adequate to the cause of action so verified as aforesaid, and the same to detain till such defendant shall appear, and abide such order of the Court as if he had appeared on the former process, and in the event of the defendant not appearing on the last day limited, the Court "is authorized to proceed ex parte, to hear, examine and determine the plaint and cause, and give such judgment therein, and award and order such costs as aforesaid; and if judgment shall in such case pass for the plaintiff, the Court is authorized" to issue a writ of venditioni for the sale of the sequestered lands, goods, &c. and to make satisfaction out of the produce thereof, to the plaintiff for the duty so recovered, and his costs, and to return the overplus, if any there be, after satisfying the judgment and costs; and if the sequestered property shall be insufficient, the Court may award the ordinary process of execution, in order to make good the deficiency; but if judgment shall pass for the defendant, the Court is authorized to award the costs of suit, and the expenses of the sequestration against the plaintiff. The charter, in giving this writ, evidently looks to the case both of the defendant and of the plaintiff.

This process is entirely peculiar to this Court; it is not known at home, either in law, or in equity. At Common law the plaintiff could not proceed without the defendant's actual appearance. This is to a certain extent modified by 12 Geo. I. c. 29, altered by 5. Geo. II. c. 27, which empowers the plaintiff upon affidavit of personal service, to enter a common appearance, or to file common bail; but this only enabled him to proceed after personal service. At common law, successive writs of distringas might have been issued against the goods of the defendant, and the successive issues sold, to compel appearance, but they could not have been applied in satisfaction of the debt; and by 10 Geo. III. c. 50, the proceeds of the issues levied, may be applied to pay the costs of the plaintiff, but the surplus is to be retained until the defendant shall have appeared, or other purpose of the writ be answered. By the uniformity of Process Act (2 and 3. Will. IV. c. 39.) this is much extended, and the plaintiff is allowed to proceed in certain cases, without personal service. But the object of the writ of distringas as given by that statute, is only to compel appearance*, and not to give security to the plaintiff; for the levy is limited to forty shillings, whatever may be the amount of the demand, and the act is silent as to what is to be done with the issues levied under the successive writs of distringas, and indeed, it seems that upon the appearance being entered, the defendant is entitled to have his goods back again (Smith v. Macdonald, 1 Dowl. 688.) It is observable too that the writ of distringas under the uniformity of Process Act, can only reach goods and chattels, while the writ of sequestration under our Charter, extends also to lands and to choses in action.

* Or else to dispense with it—Qu?

The writ of sequestration under the Charter, has also been likened to the sequestration on mesne process in Equity; but that writ gives no security to the plaintiff, for the property sequestered is restored to the defendant upon appearance. Now under our Charter, the sequestration has always been held to stand as a security. When issued upon a capias, it is only discharged upon bail being perfected (the bail thus being the substituted security) and when issued upon a summons, the appearance of the defendant, and filing common bail, does not discharge the sequestration, but it stands as a security, to await the ultimate judgment. It is quite clear that no writ at the suit of a subject, can touch the sequestered property, because it is in custodia legis: (Payne v. Drew, 4 East, and also Rustomjee Cowasjee v. Dodsworth, Smollett 211 n.)

But it is contended for the lessors of the plaintiff, that the right of the creditor is only inchoate, and that the assignment, being prior to the judgment and actual sale, defeats the sequestration. Now it certainly seems to me that the right of the sequestrator is not more inchoate than the right of a judgment creditor upon execution executed, i. e. upon seizure under a writ of fi. fa. The great authority upon this point, is the case of Giles v. Grover 9 Bengeh. 128, in the House of Lords. From this case (which decides that goods seized under a prior writ of fi. fa. may be extended at the suit of the Crown) it is clear that mere seizure under the writ does not actually transfer the property out of the debtor, although it is equally clear, that, "as between subject and subject, the execution is executed by the mere act of seizure, and the sale cannot be stopped by any subsequent proceedings." (Per Littleton J. one of the two dissentient Judges, 9 Bengeh. 240.) And Tindal C. J. in the same case (id. p. 265) acquiesces in the doctrine that the goods are bound by the delivery of the writ to the Sheriff, as against the party himself, and all claiming by assignment from, or representation through, or under him." It appears to me that the same reasoning applies to the present case.

Now, let us see what are the decisions in this Court itself, upon the effect of the writ, and that the sequestration is to stand as a security to await the payment. In Holdar v. Fenwick (Notes of Chambers J. and Smollett's Rules 211) the Court refused to discharge the sequestration, when the defendant had been taken into custody at the suit of the sequestrator, but in a different action. In Horsley v. Cotton (Smollett, 211) the sequestration was discharged and the goods were released, only on the bail-piece being filed, which of course was a substitution of securities. In Phillips v. Jones (Smollett 212) the Court refused to discharge the sequestration even upon the defendant surrendering himself into the custody of the Sheriff: because, the plaintiff would thus be deprived of his satisfaction out of the produce of the goods sequestered. Again in the case of Mullick v. Macintosh (Dicken's MSS. Notes) one of the points raised was, that this writ of sequestration was in no way analogous to an execution at law, and that it did not give such a lien as would support a bill of discovery in respect of the property; but Macnaghten C. J. said, that it operated first as bail, and then (upon the venditioni being sued out) as an execution, and Russell J. said it was not merely a mesne process to compel appearance, but was intended to be subsidiary to the execution, being given for the whole amount of the plaintiff's demand. This case is not cited for the sake of the judgment (because that went upon different matters) but on account of the dicta of the judges, which shew what was then considered to be the nature and effect of this writ. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the writ so far creates a right or lien upon the property, that a subsequent assignment by the debtor, whether voluntary or otherwise, cannot affect the right of the creditor nor render null and void, the sale under a venditioni upon the subsequent judgment.

The question of this being a purchase by an Attorney of the Court, and at an undervalue, is not for our consideration in the present instance. If the parties think they can succeed on the other side of the Court, they can of course raise the question by filing a bill in equity. There must, therefore, be a judgment for the defendant.

Sir J. P. Grant concurred with the learned Chief Justice. The mere appearance of the defendant, would not have the effect of discharging the writ, and releasing the sequestered property. It was not merely a writ of mesne process;—it was mesne process, to compel the appearance, and final process, to satisfy the demand. The case of Giles v. Grover decided, that a writ of execution did not absolutely change the property, for that the right of the Crown continued paramount to the right of the subject, even after the seizure, but it also decided, that the debtor could not by any act of his own, defeat the claim. The question raised concerning the validity of the order of adjudication, might require consideration, if it had been necessary to decide it. The question raised about the attorney for the sequestrator being the purchaser of the property, was not for the consideration of the Court as a Court of law. He (the learned Judge) was clearly of opinion after some consideration, that the judgment must be for the defendant.

Sir H. W. Seton entirely concurred in opinion with the rest of the Court.

Judgment for the defendant.—HURK., April 10.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10.

SEEDBOONKERY DABEE, WIDOW, &c. v. HURLOLL TAGORE.

The Advocate-General, for the defendant, on this case being called on, said, that it came on ex parte against his client, but a notice had been served on the complainant's attorney, of the defendant's intention to apply to the Court for leave, upon payment of all costs, to come in and clear his contempt, and file his answer. The learned Counsel hoped that the Court would consider that this notice had the effect of tying up the cause, in the same way as an order nisi.

Sir E. Ryan.—It is quite out of the question, the notice is not before the Court in any shape or way. The cause must proceed, unless the parties consent.

Mr. Nott (the junior Counsel for the complainant) then proceeded to open the bill. (This suit arose out of the fraternal and external squabbles of Shamloll and Hurloll Tagore, the bill having been filed by Shamloll's widow and representative, Sreemutty Seedboonkery Dabee.)

Sir E. Ryan, addressing the complainant's leading Counsel, inquired what benefit was expected to be obtained by getting an ex parte decree now, as the defendant would apply to the Court to-morrow, to be let in to clear his contempt, and file his answer; and although not grantable as a motion of course, the Court would probably let him in upon the usual terms. As it was, he had offered to pay all the costs, what more could he do.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17.

Mr. Prinsep said, that a bill had been filed by the Receiver of the estate of Laldaymohun Tagore (appointed in the suit of Nobinmoney Dabee) against a certain party, for an account, in which the sum claimed was not less than three lakhs and a half. Now there was ground to apprehend that steps would be taken by the defendant, Hurloll, to discharge the Receiver, and so defeat that suit. The complainant had actually offered to let the defendant in, upon an undertaking to allow the Receiver to continue in possession, and to take no steps to discharge him.

Sir E. Ryan.—Those terms are certainly most reasonable. What has the defendant's Counsel to say to this.

Mr. Leith said, that in the absence of his leader (the learned Advocate General, who had left the Court,) he could not take upon himself to give any consent. Besides he begged to remind his learned friend, that there was no prayer in this bill, for the appointment of a Receiver.

Mr. Prinsep begged his learned friend's pardon. There was a prayer that the Receiver in the other suit, should be continued.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the terms offered appeared most reasonable, and such as the Court itself would in all probability impose upon the defendant's applying to be let in. A junior Counsel might take upon himself the responsibility of a senior, in his leader's absence. It was observable that under the new Equity Rules, there might arise some difficulty in letting in the defendant at all, after the ex parte decree.

Mr. Prinsep observed, that he had been fully aware of that, and therefore felt himself in a position to impose terms.

Mr. Leith then undertook to consent, provided that the appointment of the Receiver did not extend to certain lands held by Hurloll, under agreement with Shamloll. He wished to observe, however, that the equity suit in question instituted by the Receiver (Prosonnocomar Tagore is the defendant) was altogether an useless one, and an unnecessary charge upon the estate.

Mr. Prinsep begged to state, that he had been perfectly satisfied both of the reasonableness and utility of the suit in question.

Sir E. Ryan.—With that question we have nothing to do at present. I may mention, however, that the institution of a suit in equity, ought always to be a serious matter of consideration for the receiver; it is usually done only at the instance of some party concerned, or under the express sanction of the Court. I can only say, with respect to the receiver's motion the other day concerning the postponement of the sale directed by a decree of the Court, my own opinion inclined to charge him personally with the costs.

Let the order be, that the cause be struck out, that the defendant have leave to clear his contempt, and file his answer within a week, and that the receiver in Nobbinmoney's suit, be continued on in this suit, in respect of all the property, except the lands held by Hurloll under the agreement. Order accordingly.

MIRZA MEHNDY MISKEY v. AGA KURDOOLIE MAHOMED
Upon this case being called on, no Counsel appeared for either side; so it was struck out of the Equity Board. The cause had been set down ex parte, and it was intimated that the complainant had consented to let in the defendant, upon payment of costs. Struck out.—Hark., April 11.

SEENBOONDERY DOSSIE v. COMULMONEY DOSSIE.

Mr. Clarke applied for a month's further time to put in the defendant's further answer. The learned counsel believed that there was no opposition.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith, for the complainant, believed that there was! This was a very cool application, and very coolly made. Repeated motions had been made for further time in this cause, and an extension seemed now to be considered, quite a matter of course. The bill was a widow's bill for maintenance, and was originally filed so far back as the year 1831. Last year an issue was directed, to try the validity of the will set up by the complainant, and in March last the issue was tried, and a verdict found for the defendant at law (the complainant in equity.) The defendant in equity had pleaded to the bill, and the plea was overruled, but allowed to stand for an answer, with liberty to except. After the trial of the issue, the defendant in equity allowed several months to pass without amending, whereupon the complainant filed exceptions, which amounted altogether to the number of sixty-two. Since that time nearly a twelve month had passed, and the defendant had continually applied for further time. Now it really could not be said, that the delay was attributable to the vast pressure of business in the Supreme Court totally absorbing counsel's time!

Mr. Clarke said, that he had a very short answer to give to the opposition of his learned friends. The interrogatories were so ingeniously complicated and minute, that the preparing of the answer, and the examination and comparison of the numerous and lengthy schedules which were requisite, would be the work of rather more than an hour!

The Advocate-General at last consented to allow the month required, upon payment of costs, and upon the express understanding that this was to be the last application of the kind.

Order accordingly.

BODDASUN SAIN, v. SUDAMONEY DOSSIE.

The Advocate-General for the plaintiff, moved to postpone this issue (which stood for this morning) on the ground of the absence of a material witness.

Mr. Clarke said, that the most curious part of the matter was that his learned friend had been urging the case on, when the counsel for the defendant applied to have it postponed, on the ground of insufficient time to prepare the defence!

The Advocate-General said, that the witness in question was in Court on that day, but had left Calcutta two days ago, before the plaintiff had been able to serve the subpoenas.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the plaintiff must pay the costs of the day. The issue would stand over until next term.

Order accordingly.

BREENUTTY ULLUNOMONEY DOSSIE v. RAMBARUCK MULLICK AND ANOTHER.

This was a motion on the Equity side, for the payment into Court by the defendants of certain monies admitted to be in their possession, and for the appointment of a Receiver. The defendants not being ready, a fortnight's time was given by consent; it will come on before a Judge in Chambers.

Stood over by consent.

THE MARTINE CAUSE.

Sir E. Ryan, stated the minutes of the decree which it appeared proper to the Court to make in this cause, which came on during the sittings on further directions. The cause was referred back to the Master on several points.

Decree accordingly.

This was the last day of the Sittings. A Judge will sit in Chambers on Tuesdays and Fridays as usual. The Sessions commence next Wednesday, the 17th instant. — Saturday, the 15th of June, is the first day of next term.

SESSIONS, APRIL 17, 1839.

(Before Sirs E. Ryan, J. P. Grant, and H. W. Seton.)

LIST OF THE GRAND JURYMEN.

Foreman, J. W. Grant, Esq.

R. Hunter,	W. W. Kettlewell,
J. B. Biss,	T. H. Gardener,
W. R. Young,	W. C. Hurry,
R. Thomas,	G. U. Adams,
J. L. Russel,	W. Patrick,
R. J. Bagshaw,	A. Gilmore,
C. Fagan,	Carrapiet Jacob,
J. Jackson,	Comanath Bose,
A. W. D. H. Larpent,	Kallysunker Palet,
E. White,	Radakanth Deb,
G. Alexander.	Prossouno Comar Tagore.

After the Grand Jury had chosen their foreman, the presiding Judge, Sir J. P. Grant, addressed the Jurymen. He said, that he was sorry he could not congratulate them that the Calendar of the present Sessions, was divested of any crimes of a heinous nature, for there were no less than three indictments for murder. With the exception of these three cases, he was happy to inform them, that the other cases were not so numerous as during the former Sessions, nor of a complicated nature. They consisted chiefly of cases of burglary and petty thefts and in most of them, the accused persons were detected in the commission of the crime for which they are to be tried. Nor is the value of the property stolen considerable. Nevertheless, he begged to impress on the minds of the Jurymen, that on weighing the evidence which would be brought before them in most of these cases, they were not to let the smallness of the amount stolen bias their opinion, for in a moral point of view, the theft of a petty sum is equally criminal as stealing property to a larger amount; and it is not unbecoming the highest tribunal in any country, to try any case of felony, no matter how petty so ever it may be, and it is in fact the duty of the legislature, to use its utmost efforts to suppress these petty thefts, which if left unpunished, often lead to and encourages hardened villains to the perpetration of more serious offences, and tends materially to endanger person and property, and in fact to a poor native a brass water pot or a metal plate, however trifling it may appear to us, is as much prized, and its loss as severely felt, as the loss of more valuable articles would be to the wealthy; and they are equally entitled to be protected by law from being plundered.

With regard to the three cases of murder, he was sorry to say that one of them, if the evidence which has been adduced in it already, is to be credited, is of a very aggravated nature. In it the Jurymen will have to examine a witness, who, it appears, was an accomplice in the commission of the crime. True it is, that testimony of this nature is generally received with much suspicion, yet it sometimes becomes absolutely necessary, from the circumstances of such murders being generally committed in secret and hidden haunts, and from which all persons are carefully excluded, except the accomplices in their perpetration, to admit one or more of them to become witnesses for the prosecution; and if their testimony is consistent and supported by the depositions of the other witnesses, then it is admitted, as evidence in law; and it is the province of the Grand Jury simply to determine whether there is sufficient evidence adduced in the cases brought before them, to send the prisoners up to take their trial before the Petit Jury, on the indictment preferred against them. The Judge further noticed, that in this case there will be another circumstance to which he begs to draw their attention, viz., one of the witnesses for the prosecution is the wife of one of the prisoners. It is established both by the English and the Mahomedan law, from political motives, that the wife can in no case give evidence either for or against her husband, nor the husband against the wife. Therefore it was essentially necessary for the Jurors, in taking her depositions, to divest their minds of impression caused by that part of her evidence, which might affect her husband, and act only upon that which may relate to the other prisoners implicated in the charges. The Judge added, that he was sorry to inform the Jurors, that he had witnessed, in many cases where the Petit Jurors, from the best intentions no doubt, but from their ignorance of the law in such cases, had mixed up evidence which affected one prisoner only, with the whole case, and by it had seized their verdict and pronounced the prisoner Comally guilty, whereby the Court was compelled pro forma, to pass sentence on those prisoners who were not legally affected by the evidence on which the said verdict had been formed, and then to suspend its execution, and appeal to the Royal Mercy to set aside the sentence recorded against those prisoners. The remark, the Judge observed, bore strongly in cases of confessions of a prisoner. These confessions legally affected only the prisoner who made them, and could be in themselves no evidence for or against those who may be arraigned with him in the indictment.

With regard to the other two cases of murder, they were divested from the aggravating circumstances which he was sorry to say attached to the other case. The learned Judge added, it was a privilege of the Grand Jury in case of indictments for murder preferred before them, if they did not consider the facts adduced in the evidence sufficient to constitute the crime of murder, in which case it is absolutely necessary that malice premeditated should be proved; but if they at the same time consider the crime to constitute manslaughter, then to alter the indictment and send the prisoner up to the Petit Jury, to be tried for the latter offence; for he it remembered, that the indictment on which the prisoner is tried, after it has been presented to the jurors, is their indictment, although presented by an officer of the Court. The Judge then laid down the law regarding manslaughter, which he said was where any person, as a father chastening his child, or a master his servant, does in so doing exceed the limits of the law, and causes the death of any person unintentionally, or where any person being struck by another, retaliates and kills the assaulter at one blow, it is manslaughter. Again, if the jury thought that the prisoner had only accidentally inflicted death or had perpetrated justifiable homicide, they can ignore the bill at once. Justifiable homicide, he said, was where a person in the act of preventing another from committing an illegal act is forced to kill him; for example a jailor may shoot a prisoner who attempts to break from jail, if he has no other means of preventing his escape; or a person being attacked by an armed highway robber, and being apprehensive of his life and property, in self-defence shoots the robber, in these two instances the death is considered justifiable homicide. Again, accidental homicide is where any person in the execution of any lawful act, and with all due precaution and care, causes the death of any person, the death is accidental; but if the caution is wanting, then the crime is manslaughter; but if the act was in itself illegal, and the death of a person not intended to be killed ensues, then the crime is still murder. For example, if a person shoots at one man intending to murder him, and the ball hits and kills another, the crime is murder; or where a person fires into a crowd. In one of these cases, a part of the evidence, the Judge said, will be the deposition of the party whom the prisoner in the case is alleged to have killed, taken by a Magistrate on oath, before the prisoner, who had the means of cross-examining him. These depositions, after the deceased's death, in such cases, are admissible as evidence at law. After this remark, the learned Judge said, that he had nothing further to address to the Jurors at present, and permitted them to retire and investigate the indictment to be presented to them.—Hurk., April 18.

TUESDAY, APRIL 23.

Before Sir J. P. Grant.

George Morgan, the runaway convict, was brought up for trial this morning. The prisoner, who was very respectably attired, and wore a black band round his forehead, seemed to await the issue of his trial with the greatest composure. The indictment was to the effect, that the prisoner having been, on the 19th April 1838, sentenced to seven years' transportation to the coast of Marahan, did, on the 21st of August 1838, make his escape from the vessel in which he was bound to the place of exile, and was found at Coringa, on the 20th March 1839.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Mr. McGann identified the prisoner, who had been convicted, together with one Lloyd, at the second Criminal Sessions of 1838, of having stolen a musical box from a Mr. Tipping, for which they were sentenced to seven years' transportation. Prisoner was brought back to the Police office in custody, on the 2d instant, for having returned before the expiration of the period for which he had been transported.

Herold, the Deputy-Gaoler deposed, that he delivered the prisoner, with nine other convicts, to the commanding officer of the H. C. S. Amherst, on the 22d of July last.

Mr. H. V. Weston, 2d officer of the Amherst, remembered the prisoner having been brought on board, about the 22d or 23d of July last. Morgan, as well as the other convicts, who were brought with him, was in irons when delivered to him. The prisoner was in the vessel when she arrived at Rangoon, and remained on board until the vessel was unmoored, but was missing next day, when the vessel was about to sail.

The prisoner expressed his wish to put a few questions to this witness, which he did, in a clear, bold voice, and in good English. They were as to the witness's knowledge of the prisoner being on board at the time they were unmooring. The witness was aware of his having been on board at the time, from having then seen him on the fore-castle, but how employed, he could not recollect.

The prisoner was first missed at daylight, on the morning when the vessel left Rangoon in tow of a Steamer. His irons had been taken off owing to his having been found very useful as a carpenter. Being required to do something to the chain cable, and not being immediately forthcoming, search was made for him, but to no avail. Witness never saw him on board afterwards.

Geo. W. Gardner, was chief mate of the Emily, which vessel he quitted at Coringa in January last.

Prisoner was delivered into his charge by Mr. Smith, the Collector at Coringa, and he came to Calcutta in a native sloop, with prisoner in custody. He had never seen prisoner at Coringa.

Questioned by Morgan. You say you brought me from Coringa, and you say you never saw me in Coringa? Witness replied, that he had been delivered to his charge on board the vessel in Coringa roads.

He had previously seen him in gaol at a place about eight miles from Coringa.

The prisoner again questioned the witness as to when and where he had first seen him. Witness said that as he was passing the door of the gaol, he had seen prisoner standing inside. Ten days afterward he saw him on board the sloop. When witness went on board prisoner was there in the custody of a file of sepoy and several peons. In answer to questions put by prisoner, witness said, Morgan had been delivered to him by the peons as a prisoner, but that not understanding the language, he had had no conversation with them. They merely gave him a note, from the Master Attendant, for Mr. McFarlan, the Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. The prisoner was delivered to him in irons, and they were not taken off until his arrival in Calcutta.

John Balcolm, 2nd Mate of the Emily, came from Coringa with the last witness and the prisoner. Never knew nothing of Morgan afore he see'd him aboard the sloop. He had had some talk with him during the voyage, in which Morgan had told him, that he had been either cooper or carpenter on board some vessel which he had quitted at Coringa. This witness caused some mirth in the Court, by the manner in which he occasionally apostrophized the prisoner, when not quite certain of the correctness of his own memory; and by the unsophisticated way in which he volunteered his testimony to the good conduct of the prisoner during their voyage.

Mr. Weston was re-examined by the Judge. The other convicts were delivered up at Amherst, but he did not know to whom. The vessel afterwards proceeded to Kyook Phoo in Arracan.

Questioned by the prisoner—There were nine other convicts besides prisoner—seven Hindoos and two Mussulmen. Their provisions were provided by the Company. Hindoos of course were not allowed so much as Mussulmen. The prisoner was not entered either as a Mussulman or a Hindoo, but as a Christian. He could not say why he should be fed like a Mussulman. The prisoner had requested to be allowed more food, and he had told him that he should have what had been sent on board for him. He had not a list of the stores sent for the convicts, but he knew there was dhol, gram, and curry stuff. He did not remember what the Mussulmans were allowed. He did not recollect telling prisoner that he was entered as a Mussulman and could not be allowed more than those of that class. The prisoner had been lodged with those with whom he came on board. Witness did not know why prisoner, being a Christian, was treated as a Hindoo or a Mussulman, except it was by his own choice.

The Prisoner. Do you know whether a man would choose to be treated as a Mussulman, or as a Christian?

Witness.—I don't say it was your choice.

Prisoner.—It was not.

The evidence for the prosecution being closed, the prisoner was asked if he had anything to say in his defence, on which he addressed the Jury as follows:—

Gentlemen of the Jury, I believe I am a Christian. I was born and brought up as such. I was born within the tropics, but received the education of an European. The man who was tried and sentenced along with me, was sent to New South Wales while I was sent to the Coast of Martaban. On board the ship I was treated as a native, though I am a Christian. When the ship arrived at Rangoon, the temptation to escape from her was very strong, and I could not resist it. I did not use violence in making my escape. The mate of the ship says he saw me on the fore-castle when they broke ground, but I was gone before then. I saw the ship when she was going down in tow of the steamer. If I had been treated as a Christian, I should not have attempted to escape.

Mr. King, the Gaoler, was questioned by the prisoner. Morgan was treated like an European while in gaol, and he never refused Christian food. His habits and manners were entirely European, and he was treated as such. He behaved himself very well while in custody of witness, and he had sent a report to that effect on board the Amherst along with him.

The Judge briefly summed up, and the Jury, after a short consultation, gave in a verdict of guilty, at the same time recommending the prisoner to the mercy of the court.

Sentence postponed till Saturday.

Puchun, and Chumnn Sweepers, were tried for having caused the death of Fakeerah Mehter, in February last, by striking him across the arm with a ruler in Hyderabad.

Panch Kowree, Sweeper, deposed, that he and the deceased one evening met the prisoners in Kyroo Mehter's Lane. The prisoners told Fakeerah if he wanted a wife, they would introduce him to one. In the way Chumnn tripped up deponent's heels, and Puchun assaulted him with a ruler. Fakeerah interfered and deponent escaped. Subsequently he returned, on hearing Fakeerah's cries, and saw him bleeding in the arm, and the prisoners in the custody of the peons of the Toltullah thanah. Fakeerah, in Puchun's presence, accused him of having wounded him in the arm and broken it, and added that Chumnn had thrown the ruler away. The prisoners were partially drunk at the time, but they made no reply to the charge.

The evidence of the peon who arrested the prisoners, and the dying depositions of the deceased, which were proved by Mr. Samuels and Mr. McCann, and taken at the Native Hospital by Mr. McMahon in the presence of the prisoners, were read and corroborated the testimony, and accused Puchun of having struck prisoner and broken his arm.

Mr. O'Brien, the head assistant to the Native Hospital in Chandney, deposed, that when Fakeerah was brought to the Hospital he had a wound on his arm. At first the wound did not appear to be dangerous, and deponent has known several similar wounds to heal, but it sometimes happens, that one in a 100, lead to a lock jaw, and this unfortunately did so, and the prisoner died from that lock jaw occasioned by the wound in his arm. Previous to his demise, when deponent apprehended the lock-jaw, he warned deceased of his approaching end, and Mr. McMahon, the Magistrate, on being informed of it, came to the hospital, and took Puchun's deposition in the prisoners' presence.

This closed the case for the prosecution. The Judge suggested to the Jury, that there was not a tittle of evidence to criminate the first prisoner, and the Jury returned a verdict of acquittal in his case.

The prisoner Puchun, denied the charge in toto, and said that he had been to an arbitration feast amongst his tribe, where he drank a little, and afterwards he called on Fakeerah, whom he took to introduce him to a second wife, he being a widower. On the way the deceased treated them with some grog near the Chandney Choke, and then parted peaceably, leaving Fakeerah in the house of his intended wife.

The other prisoner, who was liberated, supported by his evidence, this defence; and the Naib of Toltullah added, that the deceased had refused to lodge a complaint of the assault at the thana, or to go to the hospital; but said he would complain against the prisoners the next day.

The Jury, after a short retirement, returned a verdict of not guilty.

The Judge, after commending this verdict on account of the discrepancies of the evidence of the prosecution, and advising the prisoner to be in future more cautious in his conduct, and not to get into like mischances and to avoid excesses, as he may not always escape so easily, dismissed him.—Hark., April 24.

APRIL 24, 1839.

THE QUEEN V. GREENMONTRO.

For Murder.

The prisoner attempted to kill Monnee, his wife, by cutting her throat. She however escaped death, and the evidence adduced leaving no room for a shadow of doubt, the prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to be executed on Saturday.

The next case called, against Petumber Sing, was for embezzlement. Accuser was on bail, and did not appear. Recognizance forfeited.

The Court went into one other case between natives for assault, which stood over from the last Sessions and the parties compromised it; therefore, by consent, a verdict of not guilty was returned. There are but two other cases for murder, which will be gone through by to-morrow and the day after, and the Court adjourned this day at a $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 P. M.—Hark., April 25.

25TH APRIL, 1839.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant and a Petit Jury.)

Munneer Ooldeen and Thakoor Doss were indicted for the Murder of Choonee Tairah, on the 17th February 1839.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

In this case Mr. Pearson, on behalf of the prosecution, made a motion to free the Prisoner Mooloo Ghose from this indictment, and permit him to give evidence on behalf of the Prosecution. Mr. Pearson added, that he would have made this motion before the Grand Jury, but they had returned the true bill before the motion could be made.

The Judge replied, that the application was of a novel nature, but as he knew something of the case himself, from the depositions before him, and the reliance he placed on the Advocate-General's statement, he acceded to the motion.

The Judge, after hearing and citing some authorities on this point, from Amos's last edition of Phillips's Law of evidence, in criminal cases, and Lord Haime's Doctrine of the Law of approvers, by the latter of which it appeared that any prisoner, may, at the discretion of the Court, be allowed to turn an approver before the whole evidence in the case has been heard, or before he pleads guilty, or the verdict is given. His Lordship added, that he wished he had had more time to determine this point, but as he must now decide on this short notice, he considered that the prisoner in question may not plead on the indictment, and give his evidence, conditionally; that if he speaks the truth he will obtain his pardon, otherwise he will be tried on the present indictment. The Judge said, that if Mr. Pearson, on his of the prosecution, would put this prisoner on his trial on this indictment, and offer no evidence against him, he must be acquitted, otherwise he should be loath to have a verdict of acquittal recorded in his favor, for the express reason that should he not give a true evidence, he may not be released from the hands of justice.

The Advocate-General added, that there was no express promise made to this prisoner of pardon, but still some hopes were held out to him.

The Judge replied, that this case is analogous to that of Thurtell for the murder of Weare, in which the Magistrate had granted one of the prisoners, Hunt, a conditional pardon if he turned King's evidence, for which the Judge censured the Magistrate, as he had not the power to promise this pardon, without the consent of the Judge. After a short discussion, this prisoner was admitted as an approver on the terms suggested by the Judge, and the other two prisoners only were put on their trial. After the Jury had been charged with these two prisoners, Munnooroddeen and Thakoor Doss, and the prisoners, pleaded not guilty. The Judge suggested to the Counsel for the prosecution, that perhaps it would be better to take the verdict in the case of the prisoner, Moodhuo Ghose, before he was admitted as an evidence in this case for the prosecution. The other two prisoners were temporarily removed, and Moodhuo Ghose arraigned on the indictment.

After the Jury had been charged on the prisoner's case, the Advocate-General informed the Jury that there will be no evidence offered against this prisoner. The Judge then informed the Jury, as there is no evidence against this prisoner, they must acquit him.

The Jury accordingly acquitted the prisoner, and he was discharged from this prosecution.

Mr. J. Cochrane, the Queen's Counsel, in a short speech, stated the nature of the case.

Mr. J. Pearson, the Advocate-General, stated the importance of this case, as it regarded the justice of the country, and the prisoners of the bar. He then explained the law relative to what the law termed King's evidence. He then briefly related the leading features of the case, which, as they are more fully detailed in evidence, we have omitted here, and drew their attention to the leading features of the case, and explained the law affecting them. With those remarks he left the case in the hands of the Jury.

Moodhuo Ghose deposed. I look at the prisoners and recognise them. I was arrested with them in this case. I do not know the English months, but I know the days of the week. I met Thakoorloss on a Sunday at the meeting of the four roads near the Chandney, at about 7 o'clock, a. m., in company with Choonee Tarrah. I knew Munnooroddeen before that day. He was a chokeydar of the Jorah Bazar thana, and I lived within his beat. I saw Munnooroddeen one day near my house, regarding a loan I wished to negotiate, to enable me to defray the expenses of my brother's marriage ceremony, and the next day I went with Thakoorloss to Munnooroddeen's house. Munnooroddeen replied, the ayah, my wife, is out, let her return, and I will consult her, and give you a final answer, if you will call on me in a few days. I met the next day Munnooroddeen in the bazar, as I was going in company with Thakoorloss to meet him, and in the way we met Choonee Tarrah. Thakoorloss accosted her, and asked her where she lived. She replied, that she was living in the house of a tanner, whose name she mentioned, but I forget it. Choonee Tarrah added, come some day and visit me; and Thakoorloss said, why defer it to another day, I will accompany you there and see it now. Munnooroddeen and I then went to the house of Munnooroddeen's masters, situated to the west of a church in Collingah. This occurred a few days previous to the Sunday on which I met Thakoorloss and Choonee Tarrah in the meeting of the cross roads near the Chandney Choke. The day after I accompanied Munnooroddeen to his Master's house, I met Munnooroddeen's wife at her house. Thakoorloss was with me then. The Ayah told me that she had not received her wages, and would not receive it for 10 or 12 days to come, and if she could borrow the money from her fellow servants, she would accommodate me, otherwise I must wait a few days. On that day Thakoorloss slept at a house in the Chandney Choke to smoke, and I returned home. The first day I saw Choonee Tarrah's house, was on the Sunday I have already mentioned. Thakoorloss on that day said to me, if you wish to see Tarrah's house, come, we will go. We met Tarrah on our way near her house at a betel and arica nut seller's shop, and on our expressing our wish to her she said, let me take my purchase home, and I will return and take you to my residence. After she had been gone some time, and Thakoorloss desired me to go to a door which he pointed out to me and call Tarrah, I at first declined to do so because I was dirty clothed and was early, but on his repeating the request, I called Tarrah and she came. Thakoor Doss wished me and Munnooroddeen, who was with us, to accompany them and Tarrah to Munnooroddeen master's house near the grain shops in the Jaun Bazar. The house is on the south side of the road and the entrance is towards the

I at first said I have to take my master's cows to pasture, but on his pressing me and saying he would not detain me, I went. On our arrival at the house Munnooroddeen opened the parlour at the gate, and when we entered it Tarrah locked at it and said, how can I here such a house as this is an English house, the house was empty and somewhat in a ruinous state and single storied. Thakoor Doss drew Choonee Tarrah attention to some plants, and then took Choonee Tarrah inside the house and sat down on a cot in a room and made Tarrah sit on his lap. Thakoor Doss then desired Munnooroddeen to go and see if he could procure the money for my brother's marriage expenses, and return quickly, and ordered me to take a chillum and get some tobacco and replenish it, and he added I would get fire from some syces in the neighbourhood; but not succeeding in getting it then, I proceeded further and got it from a sweetmeat seller's shop, and in about a quarter of an hour I returned, and I saw Thakoorloss sitting on Tarrah's knee with his left hand holding her throat, and he had in his right hand a vial in which was some liquor, and he was applying it to her nose. They were both on the floor. Seeing this I got frightened. I attempted to go away, but I met Munnooroddeen at the gate, which was put to, and as I attempted to go out he seized me and pulled me into the house. I asked Thakoorloss and said to him what are you doing, what have you done. Thakoorloss abused me and said what is that to you, why do you interfere. At that time there were only Munnooroddeen, Thakoorloss and Choonee Tarrah in the house. Thakoorloss then struck me, and Munnooroddeen said if you are not quiet, I will serve you the same as I did another person whom he named. When I saw Choonee Tarrah lying apparently dead, and witnessed Thakoorloss's outrageous conduct, I ran away. In this stage of the evidence, the Judge, by the request of the Counsel for the prosecution, cautioned him and said that the Court had already his former statements before it. The prisoner persisted in his statement, and said it tallied perfectly with what he had stated before. At the time Choonee Tarrah accompanied me and the prisoners to the house in Jaun Bazar, she had a silver chain round her waist, and silver bangles on her feet, and a gold chain on her neck; what became of the jewels I do not know. On the following day Munnooroddeen and Thakoordoss came to my house and Munnooroddeen told me take these 4 Rs—this is all that I have been able to raise for you as yet. I never saw the corpse of Tarrah Choonnee afterwards, and neither of the prisoners ever afterwards mentioned her to me. I do not know whether there was a well in the house, where Tarrah was taken by Thakoor Doss. When I saw Choonnee Tarrah in the Durruimtollah bazar, Tarrah said she was about 20 rupees in debt. When Thakoor Doss took Choonnee Tarrah to the house in Jaun Bazar, he was richly clad as a Bahoo. I have known Thakoor Doss for the last one or two years. My mistress formerly lodged in his house. When Munnooroddeen offered me the 4 rupees, I said I require 10 rupees, and declined to accept the proffer. I never saw them after that day. Munnooroddeen did not tell me how he had raised the 4 rupees, and I never questioned him on the subject. As I saw Tarrah Choonnee lying with her tongue lolling out, after I had returned with the fire, I concluded that they had killed her, therefore I never questioned them regarding her, I mean by they, Thakoor Doss, as Munnooroddeen was not present when I returned.

F. W. Birch deposed. I am Superintendent of the Calcutta Police. I remember that a corpse was found in a well in an empty house in Jaun Bazar, on Sunday the 24th February 1839, near the shop of the gram dealers, and close to the 1st lane in Jaun Bazar. I proceeded to the spot, it was then an empty house. Mr. Potter had lived in it last. The corpse was a female corpse, I saw it dragged up and assisted in dragging it up. It was very far decomposed, and there were worms in it; the smell was very offensive, her features were perfect, but her eye balls and tongue had protruded. She was a very fair, and rather a stout woman. Her knees were tied to her waist, and the rope by which the knees were tied, went round her neck and middle, and tied her hand to her knees. There were stones attached to the corpse. Dr. Bain was present when the corpse was dragged up, and he examined the it and can speak how long the deceased must have been in the water before she was dragged up. I investigated this case, and the last witness, Moodhoo Ghose, gave his statement first, and few days Munnooroddeen also gave his. They both gave their statements voluntarily, and no inducements were held out to them. I examined four or five females who had lived in the house with Choonnee Tarrah. Neither of the two prisoners who gave their statement, conditioned for their lives when they gave their statement. I told Moodhoo, that I could not hold out any hopes to him; but I told him that if he stated the truth it would be taken into a favorable consideration. It appeared to me that as Moodhoo gave his statement first, implicating Munnooroddeen, Munnooroddeen from a spirit of revenge made his implicate Moodhoo. I was present when Munnooroddeen gave his statement subsequently before Mr. McFarlan. It was voluntarily, and without any hopes being held out to him. This paper is it. The prisoner understood whatever writing was explained to him. The corpse had a blue indelibly impressed mark on her face, between the eye brows, it is a very common mark amongst the lower classes of the Hindoo woman in the upper provinces.

Questioned by Munnooroddeen. I never promised to release you if you confessed the truth. You in your statement exonerated yourself of the murder, and accused Moodhoo of it.

Questioned by Thakoordoss, I never promised to release to you if you confessed. I asked you, if you would tell anything, and you replied you knew nothing about it, and you were not fool enough to confess anything, even if you did know it.

Anundoo Raur, deposed. I have lived for the last eight years in the house of a person named Banoo Choonnee.

Tarrah lived in the same homestead with me, ever since last Bysack, and we lived together eight months. She was older, fairer and stouter than me, and had a mark on her forehead. I remember going on a Sunday to a house in Jaun Bazar, where I saw a corpse. I could not recognise the features of the corpse, but I saw a tattooed mark between the eyebrows. The corpse stunk very rank, and I could not remain long. I cannot recognise the gentlemen who were there. Calcutta females do not tattoo themselves, but the girls in the neighbouring villages, do it generally. I do not recollect the Sunday previous to the day on which the corpse was dragged out of the well. Some days previous to this, two persons called on Choonnee Tarrah, and they conversed with her, and about four or five days after that, a person who had a great quantity of powder on his face, went away with Choonnee Tarrah in the morning. Deponent looks at the prisoner Thakoordoss, and the witness Moodhoo Ghose. These were the persons who called on the last occasion, they came at about midday and smoked and went away, on one occasion intermediate to the first visit, and Parramonee went away with them. They came one evening to Choonnee Tarrah's house, and stayed there about one hour, and talked with Choonnee Tarrah on her money affairs. The next morning, Moodhoo Ghose called for Choonnee Tarrah at about 7 A. M., it was a Sunday. She put on her jewels, viz, two anklets valued at 10 rupees, the neck chain 19 rupees, and the waist chain 12 rupees, she then locked her house and went out with Moodhoo Ghose. I never saw Choonnee Tarrah since that time. This was the first instance in which Choonnee Tarrah stayed away for a length of time from her house. I never saw Munnooroddeen in Choonnee Tarrah's house. I have both purchased, and seen similar ornaments as Choonnee Tarrah wore, bought and sold by other persons.

Dhunmunnee deposed. I resided in the same house with Anundoo Raur, and Choonnee Tarrah. She lived in the house from Bysack last until Falgoun, in which month she went away about 6 or 7 o'clock one morning, and I have never seen her since. The bearded man, Moodhoo Ghose, is the person who took her away. Thakoordoss used to visit her occasionally, for about a week previous to her departure. When Choonnee Tarrah went away, she had on a pair of silver anklets, a silver waist chain, and a gold neck chain. I saw a corpse taken out of a well in Jaun Bazar. I could not recognise the corpse. There was a mark between the eyebrows of the corpse similar to one that Choonnee Tarrah had. Choonnee Tarrah was neither fat, nor lean, fair, nor dark but between those extremes; the mark on the forehead is one very common amongst the lower classes of the Hindoo females.

Puddoo Raur, deposed. I resided in the same house with Choonnee Tarrah in the Chadney Choke Bazar. I recognize Moodhoo Ghose and Thakoordoss. They used at times to visit her. One day in Falgoun last, Choonnee Tarrah put on her ornaments in the morning and went away with Moodhoo Ghose. I never saw her since.

R. H. Bain deposed. I am Surgeon to the Calcutta Police, I examined a female corpse in a house at Jaun Bazar on the 24th February last, the body was taken out of a well in the compound; the house was a lower roomed house. The first Jaun Bazar lane is close to it, and some rice merchant's shops are near it. Mungloo, nab of the Jaun Bazar thana, pointed it out to me. When I examined the body it was much swollen and far advanced in decomposition and very offensive; the legs were crossed and bound up with a cord round the body, the tongue had protruded, and the eyes pushed out of their sockets. These effects would undoubtedly be produced by strangulation, and as there were no wounds on the body, and marks of a cord round the neck, I could not but conclude that the person had died from strangulation, I suppose the corpse could not have been less than a week, and not upwards of 10 days immersed in the well. A week's immersion in this weather in this country, produce those effects. A person accidentally falling into a well, could not have these marks. The features were much disfigured; there were some bricks attached to the corpse, with a cord round the neck; there was an indelible mark on the forehead of the corpse between the eyebrows. Strangulation either with the hand or by a cord would cause the tongue and the eyes to protrude.

Hurrischunder Kur, deposed. I am a hawkar of wooden sandals. I recognise Thakoor Doss and Moodoo Ghose. On the 7th or 8th of Falgun last, I saw these two persons in company with another person standing near some stable, close to the grain shops in Jaun Bazar. I live in Kumartollee, I knew Moodoo Ghose and Thakoor Doss for some time previous to this. I asked Thakoor Doss why he was standing here, and he replied, that he had some business with a durwan in the neighborhood.

The next witness, Peerun Ayah, having been proved to be the wife of the prisoner Munneeroddeen, she was called, and having deposed to that effect, her evidence was dispensed with, as she could not be a legal witness in this case.

Goluck Sirdar deposed. I reside in Jorahbagaun, I sell rice, and am the proprietor of some houses, on the rents of which I live. I knew Choonee Tarrah for a long time. She lived in Falgun last in the Chaudney Choke Bazar. Anundoo and Dhumonee lived with her. I lent once Choonee Tarrah 10 Rs., and she had never liquidated the loan. I know both the prisoners and Moodoo Ghose. On one occasion, I saw them all three in Tarrah's house, and on the last occasion Moodoo only, Thakoor Doss used to dress extremely well, and had the appearance of a Baboo.

The prisoners declined examining this witness as to any point.

Ahmed Ally, Thanadar, deposed. I know Bhoobanmohun Sing Polar, he was examined before Mr. McFarlan prior to the commitment of the prisoners, they were then in custody of the Police. The prisoner Munneeroddeen was in custody in my thana. I had a conversation with him on the day in which the Podar was examined before Mr. McFarlan. I was proceeding from the thana to the Police Office to make my report, and my peon had brought Munneeroddeen out. He requested me to take him to the Magistrate, and he would disclose all he knew about the murder of Choonee Tarrah. Before this I had questioned him regarding this matter, but I did not give him any advice or say that it would be better for him to make a disclosure. I did not hold out any inducement to him to confess. He said that he was confined on a charge of the murder of Choonee Tarrah this was 10 or 12 days after his confinement. He was consequently taken to the Superintendent of Police and examined. On the way Munneeroddeen told me, if I would take him to the house of Bhoobanmohun Polar, he would get him to restore the articles which were taken from Choonee Tarrah's body. I proceeded with him to the podar's shop, and when we arrived there, Munneeroddeen said to the podar, this person pointing to me, will purchase, the gold neck chain and the silver armlets which we sold to you, let him see it, he has brought money to pay them. The podar replied, that he had sold the articles subsequently; and on his persisting in refusing to produce the articles, I informed him, that I was a thanadar, and desired him to shew me his entries of the purchase and the sale of the articles by him. The podar replied, I have an entry of their purchase by me but not of their subsequent sale. I then took the podar and his books to the police office, and he was examined on the subject by the Chief Magistrate and the Superintendent of the Calcutta Police.

Bhoobun Mohon Singhee, podar, deposed—I deal in gold and silver articles, and am a money changer and lender. I reside in the New Bazar, near Roop Lal Mullick's residence. I recollect that on the 11th Falgun last, four persons well dressed came to my shop. They said that they had a pair of silver-broken anklets weighing 8 Sica weight and a gold broken neck chain wg. 10 sa. rs. for sale. I paid 8 Co's rs. for the anklets, I gave sa. rs. 5-10-3, and made an entry of the purchase as a ready money transaction at that time in my book on the 11th Falgun corresponding with the 21st February last. The anklets were cut into 8 or 10 pieces—some of them retained their original form, and some were flattened. The prisoner Thakoor Doss resembles one of the sellers, but I cannot speak positively as to his identity. Munneeroddeen came to my shop with the thanadar, but whether he or Moodoo Ghose were the persons who came dressed like Baboos to sell the jewels, I cannot precisely tell. Munneeroddeen asked me to sell the jewels to the thanadar, and replied I have already parted with them.

Zoolfecar Ally, naib of the Jorahallah thana, was then called, because his name was on the back of the indictment. The Advocate General said, he was subpoenaed to prove the date on which the corpse of the deceased was found in the well. Captain Birch has already proved that, so his evidence for the prosecution is not required, but he is put in the box to enable the prisoners to question him if they wish it.

S. Potter, an Assistant in the Government Savings' Bank, deposed. He knows the house in Jaun Bazar, in which the corpse was found on the 24th February last. It is situated in the Jaun Bazar road, near some grain sellers' shop, close to the 1st Jaun Bazar lane. I occupied it for 2 days on the occasion of my marriage. I left it on the morning of the 10th of February last at about midday; the key of it was in my possession last on that day. The house is a lower roomed one, and has a well in it. I know Munneeroddeen and Peerun ayah, she is his wife, and my father's ayah. To her I left the house. I gave the key to the syce of my opposite neighbour. I don't know his name, but I could recognize him. When I gave the key to the syce, I ordered him to give it to Munneeroddeen, who had charge of the house, because my father was then in jail. As the ayah could get no accommodation in the Jail, her husband was therefore left in charge of the house, and had a godown allowed him in it to cook his and his wife's meals. Deponent here recognizes the man to whom he gave the key of the house. I never got the key back again.

Durrant Ollah deposed. I am a syce in the employ of Mr. Phillips, residing in Jaun Bazar, close to the house in which the corpse was found in Falgun last. I am generally out all day with the conveyance, and very little at home, but I remember I saw one day in Falgun last, the prisoner Munneeroddeen walking up and down the lane. Munneeroddeen had charge of that house. I never received the key of that house from Mr. Potter. I have served as a syce in that neighbourhood to Mr. Phillips 12 years. As a durwan in charge of that house, he must necessarily go in and out of that house, but I never noticed him; but I believe I did see him go into it when Mr. Potter was in jail, but ever since Mr. Potter's release, I have never been into that house, and have never seen Thakoor Doss or Moodoo Ghose.

Omarbun Biswas deposed. Munneeroddeen was Mr. Potter's durwan. He used to deal at my shop. I am a retail grain merchant, and have a shop in the Jaun Bazar, near the house which was in Munneeroddeen's charge.

Tarrah Moonee deposed, that she lived in the same house with Moodhoo Ghose, the witness in this case, in Falgoon last. She remembered Thakoordoss and Munneeroddeen, the prisoners in this case, smoking with Moodhoo Ghose in a woodman's shop. Moodhoo Ghose on that occasion, asked Thakoordoss to procure him a loan of 16 rupees, to enable him to defray the expenses attending his brother's marriage ceremony. Thakoordoss replied come along, I will get it for you. Thakoordoss, Munneeroddeen and Moodhoo Ghose met occasionally, for one month after this, at this woodman's shop, which is near Moodhoo's house. Thakoordoss used then to dress extremely well, like a haboo.

Sheikh Surrief deposed, I sell wood, and my shop is near Moodhoo Ghose's house. The prisoners Thakoordoss and Munneeroddeen, used to call at Moodhoo Ghose's door, and call him every third or fourth day, and Moodhoo used to come out and meet them and they used to converse and smoke at my shop. This they did every third or fourth day, during the months of Mang and Falgoon last. They used to come well dressed.

Goonroochurn Ghose deposed, I am the brother of Moodhoo Ghose. I recognise Thakoordoss, he used to visit my brother. He came one Sunday morning and said to him, if you require any money for the expenses of Goonroochurn's wedding, come with me and I will procure it for you. Moodhoo Ghose was very intimate with Thakoordoss, and the latter used to visit him every fourth or fifth day. About a fortnight after Thakoordoss had offered to lend this money to my brother, the prisoners were arrested.

The Advocate-General said, there were two witnesses who had shops near the house where the corpse was found, and where Moodhoo lived last; they deposed, that they took no notice of persons who passed and repassed their shop in Falgoon last.

Kadurbux, Mr. Potter's kidmutgar deposed. I brought the key of the house in Jaun Bazar from Mr. S. Potter senior, and gave it to Mr. S. Potter junior, and some days after this, he left it with his father Mr. Potter senior, where it remained two days, and then Munneeroddeen called at Mr. S. Potter's and took the away key of the house in which the body was. It was one week before the discovery of the corpse in the house, that I gave the key of it to Munneeroddeen.

Cherans Ulee, deposed. I am a kidmutgar to Mr. S. Potter junior. My master was married there; as some of my clothes were left there, I got the key of the house from Munneeroddeen to get my clothes, and then I gave the key to Kadurbux, who gave it to Munneeroddeen. It was about ten or twelve days after my master's marriage, that the corpse was found in that house.

D. McFarlan deposed. I am Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. I examined the prisoners Thakoordoss, Munneeroddeen and Moodhoo Ghose, in this case, they were correctly explained to the prisoners, and they put their marks to them. There were neither threats nor promises held out to them on the occasion of their making them; on the contrary I warned them that what they might say they might be hereafter used against them.

R. Habberly, the interpreter to the Chief Magistrate, deposed, that he explained to the prisoners the contents of these papers. They are true statements of what these prisoners said, they were warned before they made them, and neither threats nor promises were held out to them on the occasion.

The examination of Munneeroddeen taken before me, D. McFarlan, one of Her Majesty's Justices of Peace, on the 23rd March 1839, saith, Peerun Ayah is my wife, she is in Mr. Potter's service. When Mr. Potter went to Jail he desired me to stay in the Jaun Bazar house, and look after it till his return. I was there 3 months. We removed our things there on the 9th February. The day on which Mr. Potter junior was married, the key of the premises was left in charge of Mr. Phillip's syce Duraballah. He gave it to me on the 10th February last, and I to Peerun on the same day, it then was with Cherazullee and Kadurbux, and I again got it and gave it to Peerun. Thakoordoss, and Moodhoo Ghose used to visit Duraballah. One day Thakoordoss, Moodhoo Ghose, and Moorheeram met in Mr. Potter's house. Thakoordoss talked of renting it, and they, I heard, brought women. They brought the mother of a girl to see the house, and made an advance to her. The old woman disappointed Thakoordoss. They then went to two others girls, but they would not come, and one of the girls went to Moorsheadabad. Thakoordoss desired Moodhoo to go and get a chillum, he went, but did not obtain one. When the woman came, I was ordered to withdraw and go and pay 18 Rs. On my return, I heard Moodhoo calling me, I went in and saw Choonnee Tarrah dead. I was about one hour absent. They were tying her corpse with my cat ropes into a bundle, and wanted to put it in a jar. On my interiering, they beat me, and they returned in the evening, and said they would take it to the Ganges, but they tied ropes to it and threw it in the well, and said when the bones separated they would take it to the Ganges, and in the mean time he would pay 50 Rs. a month for the house. About a week after this, the Ayah seeing flies in the well, looked in and screamed out that there was a corpse, and I by her desire went and gave information to the Jaun Bazar Thana; but I did not relate these facts then. Tarrah when she came to the house, had jewels on her body, silver anklets and body chain, and a gold neck chain. When Tarrah was dead, her tongue and eyes protruded. Thakoordoss said he had strangled her, and that he had, before, been tried for a murder. Here the Judge said this statement could only affect Munneeroddeen, and as the rest related to Thakoordoss it was not read.

This closed the case for the Prosecution.

Munneeroddeen in his defence said the other prisoner wanted to rent my Master's house for 50 rupees a month, and asked me to raise a loan of some rupees to get his brother married. I went to see my wife on the subject, and when I returned, Moodhoo told me what had occurred. Thakoordoss beat me, and said, that he would be off, but if any of us confessed we would all be hanged. I was once tried with Petnabher Ghose for murder. He confessed and was hanged, but as I denied, I escaped. I was tried on this affair before Mr. Greenlaw, but as Thakoordoss could not be found, I denied all knowledge of this affair.

Thakoordoss, who, in his statement at the Police, had denied the charge, said, that if I had in open day committed this murder, I must have been detected; it is not probable that in so populous a city as Calcutta, I could beat two men stouter than me, kill a woman, and then get off when the thana was so near, and then still live in Calcutta. The story is altogether improbable, and trumped up by Munneeroddeen and Moodhoo Ghose, to get themselves released and involve me in this affair.

Moosea Mahomed, thanadar of the Bow Bazar thana, deposed, that the prisoner Munneeroddeen was formerly a chokeydar of the Jorah Bagan thana. He was discharged, and then I lost sight of him until some years, when I saw him brought in custody from a zilla court on a charge of dacoity.

Ramdhone, potatoe hawker, deposed, that he knew Munneeroddeen as a chekeydar of the Jorah Bagan thana. What his private character is I know not. He did his official duties well. He left that situation five or six years ago. I have known him since, and seen him occasionally, but I was never intimate with him.

This ended the case for the defence.

The Judge addressing the Jury said, the two prisoners were tried for having on the 17th February, killed Choones Tarrah, by strangulation with their hands. The second count states the same crime, laying the death to strangulation by cords. It is for you to consider whether the prisoners killed the deceased, and whether it was strangulation by the hand or rope. Gentlemen, this is a case of a painful nature, that a woman was found strangled in a well, is, beyond all doubt. The Advocate General has already informed you, that the evidence for the prosecution could not be completed without the testimony of an accomplice. In this kind of evidence, more especially in cases which involve the witness's life and character, he will not always be ready to give a full and clear account of all he knows. Therefore, although the laws admit the evidence of an accomplice, it ought to be received with the utmost caution, and the law has left the question of its credibility to be decided entirely by the Jury, who will judge from the manner of his giving it, and how far it is corroborated by other evidence, as to its credibility. The Judge then detailed the evidence given in this case for the prosecution and the defence, pointed out the leading features of it, and commented learnedly on it, laying down the law of the case. In noticing the evidence of Moodhoo Ghose, the learned Judge said, that there were several discrepancies between his evidence as given at the Police office and that given here. He added, that he did not consider it right that he should read the Police statement of Moodhoo Ghose, to the Jury; but thus far he would inform them, that Moodhoo Ghose's evidence, when he came to the actual point relating to the commission of the murder, varied considerably from his statement given before Mr. McFarlan. Under these circumstances, he sent it in for the Jury to appreciate how far his evidence is credible, and how far it is supported or contradicted by the testimony of the other witnesses examined to-day. The learned Judge further informed the Jury, that in weighing the evidence in this case, he must desire them to draw this distinction, that any statement made by the prisoner can only be adduced in evidence against him, and it cannot possibly affect the other prisoner.

His Lordship, in conclusion, remarked, that a woman was put to death by strangulation there is not a doubt, and that a woman had a few days previous been missing is also true. It is for you to decide, whether the body found murdered is that of the woman that was missing. The story, it is true, is supported by the evidence of an accomplice; and although such testimony is received with great caution, yet when it is supported by other circumstantial and corroborating testimony, it is not to be rejected. It is for you gentlemen, added the learned judge, to decide how far the circumstances revealed in this case have brought the guilt home to the prisoners; if you think that they are guilty of the crime, then whatever might be the circumstances under which the evidence of the accomplice has been given in this case, and your feelings on it, you are bound to return a verdict of guilty against the prisoner; on the other hand, if you entertain the slightest doubt of the guilt of either one or both the prisoners, it is your duty, notwithstanding the duty you owe to Society, to do your utmost to suppress the perpetration of such heinous crime, to give the benefit of that doubt to the accused party, and not to convict any person unless you are fully convinced of his guilt.

The jury retired at about 6 o'clock P.M. and after half an hour's retirement, returned a verdict of guilty as a principal in the murder against Thakoor Doss, and Munneeroddeen guilty as an accomplice.

After the verdict had been given.

The learned Judge addressed the Jury, and said, that there could be no accomplice in a case of murder. When the accused is present, and has a knowledge of the commission of the crime, and aids and abets it, that person is a principal; but the accomplices are of two natures, before and after the fact; the accomplice before the fact, is, when the person has a knowledge of what is about to be perpetrated, and although he neither aids in its commission nor is present at it, yet he fails to reveal his knowledge of it to the authorities to prevent its commission; and an accomplice after the fact is, when a person obtains a knowledge of the commission of the murder, and instead of using his endeavours to apprehend and bring the criminals to Justice, endeavours to screen them, and conceal knowledge of the crime.

After this explanation, some of the jurors said, that the meaning of their verdict tended to acquit the prisoner Munneeroddeen, whilst others said, that it was quite the contrary. The judge said, he had nothing to do with meanings; the jury must give a verdict of guilty or not guilty, and if they disagreed amongst themselves, they had better retire and come to a decision. The jury then retired and after a short time gave their verdict, Thakoor Doss guilty—Munneeroddeen not guilty.

After this verdict had been recorded, the judge addressed Munneeroddeen, and informed him, that the jury had acquitted him; whether he is guilty or not, it is for his conscience and God to decide, but at present he is discharged.

The judge then addressed Thakoor Doss and said, the jury has found you guilty, and no one who has heard the case can entertain any doubt of it, a more atrocious case I never heard, and it would be wasting time to address you any longer, the painful duty remains to me, to order the last sentence of the law against you. The prisoner was then ordered for execution on Saturday morning.—Hurkaru, April 26.

FRIDAY, APRIL 26, 1839.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant, and a Petit Jury.)

Nicholas Clausen, tried for the manslaughter of Ookur Coolie, at the Indigo Factory of Soomundagur, in Zillah Burdwan, on the 17th February 1839, by wounding him with the shaft of a spear.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Counsel for the prosecution—Messrs. Pearson and Cochrane.

Counsel for the defence—Mr. Leith.

Mr. Cochrane read the indictment briefly.

Mr. Pearson then stated to the Jury the leading features of the case, with some trite remarks on it, which, as it will be more fully elucidated in the evidence, we have abstained detailing here. The case, he observed, would not occupy their time long, and was not a complicated one.

The witnesses were ordered out of court.

Surrosettee Bewah deposed. I was a resident at the factory of Mr. McLean, at Soomundagur, in Zillah Burdwan. I am the widow of Ookur. He was murdered in my presence on the evening of the 5th Falgun, by the prisoner. The prisoner went Budden, a choker employed at the factory. He called us to help him, for the prisoner was murdering him. My husband was a cooly at the factory. He and several others saw Budden beaten. The prisoner was beating Budden close to his bungalow. When we heard Budden cry, we came to his aid. The prisoner, seeing us, held up the bamboo with which he was beating Budden, and threatened to break our heads, if we interfered. After the prisoner had desisted beating Budden, he entered the bungalow, and Budden crawled to us. Fakirchand and Lochun held him by the armpits, and carried him into the factory office, where they sprinkled water over his face; he desired us to warm his body with our heated palms, particularly over the bruises, which, he said, pained him. Whilst we were doing so, the prisoner entered the office with a spear in his hand, and said, what are you whispering you rascals, I will beat you all, if you do not go about your business. When we heard this, we fled, and the prisoner pursued us. My husband being the hindmost, the prisoner overtook him, and felled him to the ground with the spear handle. My husband, on falling, entreated the prisoner not to beat him, as he was a cooly, and had done no harm; but the prisoner assaulted him violently with kicks and blows, although he begged of him to desist. My husband then fainted, and the prisoner left him and returned to the bungalow. I went up to my husband and found him dead. This happened shortly after dusk.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. I cannot tell how far the hut was from the office. All the buildings attached to the factory are contiguous. I cannot speak precisely as to the distances. The murder of my husband was shortly after Budden was beaten, which was at dusk. We were then at our meals. Budden was employed under the prisoner. I am not aware why the prisoner beat him. We fled through fear. When I saw the prisoner beating my husband, I stood aloof, and remonstrated with him. I said, do not kill my husband, and make me a widow. I am the mother of five infants. There were ten or twelve coolies present, and not one hundred; the greater part of them were employed at the factory. Fakirchand and Lochun were amongst them. They had no sticks in their hands. There are women employed at the factory, and a great many coolies; how many, I do not know. My husband was running in a westerly direction, when he stumbled, and the prisoner overtook and struck him. There is a ruined home near the spot where my husband fell. It is to the south-west of the bungalow in which the prisoner resided, and there is a dry ditch close to it. It is bounded by a mound formed of earth excavated from the drain, and is the boundary of the factory in that direction. The drain is to the west of the bungalow, and it runs north to south. There is a creek towards the east of the factory: it also runs north and south. Kunchantollah is the principal factory. This creek is not now navigable from the Soomundagur factory. No Europeans resided at Soomundagur with the prisoner. The persons who work at the factory are delegated bundwars. My husband's caste was different from theirs. He was a native of a village, seven coss distant from the factory. The others were from distant parts. When the coolies ran, Budden likewise ran with them. When I inspected the corpse of my husband, the other coolies kept aloof. Through fear none of the coolies beat the prisoner—they only went up to the fence of the bungalow. They did not go close to the prisoner nor did they attempt to rescue Budden. I witnessed the whole of the transaction. If any person had beaten the prisoner, I must have seen it. My husband was not indisposed a few weeks before his death. He worked at the factory on the day of his decease. How long the prisoner has been the Superintendent of the factory I do not know. I was engaged at the factory in Maaugh last, and he then superintended it.

Re-examined by Mr. Cochrane. I was not present when Mordonmodun doctor dissected my husband's corpse. Chand peon carried the corpse to Burdwan. I remained at the factory.

D. Macfarlan, deposed. This is the prisoner's examination. He gave it on the 13th March last. The prisoner spoke English. It was read to him by Mr. Habberly, and he put his mark to it. Mr. Habberly witnessed it. No threats or promises were held out to him. He gave it voluntarily.

R. Habberley confirmed the deposition of the Chief Magistrate.

This statement was read. I am a native of Kingston, in Jamaica. I left it young. I was formerly a seaman. I came in the Bombay three years ago to this country. I first served Mr. Turner, and then Mr. McLean, at the Soomundagur factory. I did not beat Ookur, but Budden for disobedience. He cried for help, and the coolies came and beat me. I fled and hid myself in a hedge. I went the next day to the principal factory, and heard that Ookur was dead, and saw his corpse. I have marks on my hips and shoulders caused by the assault of the coolies. Rainzaun is my gomastah and witness.

This statement established the jurisdiction. The judge was of opinion that all persons born within the British territories were considered British subjects in this country, and only those born of native parents within the East Indian possessions were exempted from the jurisdiction of this Court whilst residing in the Mofussil, and perhaps it would be better for the prisoner to be tried by a jury than to remove his case to a Zilla Court.

Budden Chokedar deposed. I was attached to the Soomundagur factory when Ookur died. He was a Bundwar. At about 3 p. m. I went to the Kunchantollah factory, and returned to the Soomundagur factory and went to make a salam to the prisoner, who abused me and asked me where I had been all day. I replied that I had been to the principal factory. The prisoner then came out with the shaft of the spear in his hand, and asked me, where is Lochun, the new Chowkedar, and the letter. I said, I know nothing about either. The prisoner then sprang forward, seized me by the hair of my head, and held me against the post of the verandah, and began to beat me. He struck me with the end of the shaft on the temple, he also beat me with his fists. I cried, forbear, Sir—desist—I am murdered—I am dying; but he regarded not my entreaties. I then bawled out to the coolies to come and assist me, as the Superintendent was killing me. When they heard my shrieks, they came running towards me. The prisoner seeing them approach, threatened them; therefore they stood and stood near the fence of the verandah, and requested the prisoner not to beat me. The prisoner continued striking me, and on receiving a punch from the shaft on my belly I fainted, when the prisoner left me and went into his bungalow. I afterwards crawled towards the coolies. No body interfered to rescue me or assisted the prisoner. Some of the coolies, when I reached them, supported and carried me to the factory office, where they sprinkled water on my face, whilst some were warming my breasts with their heated palms. When the prisoner came into the office, he abused them, and said, what are you whispering you scoundrels, and laid up the stick to strike them, but the blow did not alight on any body, seeing this, we all fled, Ookur happened to be the hindmost, and stumbled opposite the prisoner, who struck him with the staff on his back above the waist, and felled him. He then kicked and beat him with his fist. Ookur groaned and said, do not beat me, I am a poor inoffensive cooly. The prisoner then left him, and went towards his bungalow. After his departure, I went up to Ookur, and endeavored to lift him up. I then perceived that he was dead. Ookur's wife, Surrootty, was present when her husband was killed. I am not sure whether she saw me beaten. When Ookur was assaulted, no person attempted to approach the prisoner, and I am sure no person attempted to rescue him, or assault the prisoner. Chand was at that time Burkandaz of the Pooophool sub-thana; he saw the body in my presence, and carried it to Burdwan, where it was dissected. I did not see its dissection, I was then at the factory.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. I was not absent from duty the day Ookur's death took place. I met the prisoner shortly after 3 p. m. on that day in the fields, and told him I was going to the principal factory; he replied very well. He gave me no orders on that day. I do not know whether there are two persons named Lochun employed at the factory. I only know one, he is a tiller, and he had that day been digging the fields. Neither the prisoner nor Ramdhon gomastah gave me any directions regarding a chit on that day. I am a chokeedar of the Soomundagur factory, and I am sent occasionally to the principal factory to receive orders. There may have been a new chokeedar appointed that day, but I did not hear it, nor knew to what chit the prisoner alluded. There was no intimation given me that I was to be discharged for neglect of duty. I was not impertinent to the prisoner before he struck me. I know not why he struck me. Perhaps during my absence at the principal factory the prisoner might have wished me to carry a letter for him, and this might have vexed him. I can assign no other reason for his beating me. I am sure this was the staff with which the prisoner struck me, and afterwards Ookur. The first blow he struck me on the nose, which made it bleed—after hitting my temple, it slipped on my nose. He subsequently struck me with his fist. I saw no doctor come to the factory to examine the corpse of Ookur. I never consulted one. The prisoner has been about three years employed on these factories, when he came there, the factories belonged to Mr. Turner. He was first employed at the Soomundagur factory, but when Mr. McLean purchased the concern, the prisoner was removed to the factory at Culna, and after an absence of six months, he returned to the Soomundagur factory, and has ever since remained in charge of it. The prisoner superintends the coolies at the Soomundagur factory, and receives his instructions from the principal factory. There are about 20 coolies employed at the Soomundagur factory. When I screamed 10 or 12 of them came near the place where I was beaten. Here this deponent named most of them. It was half an hour after, I had been moved to the office, that the prisoner entered it. Who brought the water and sprinkled it on my face I did not know. The fire was not brought into the office. As the coolies were bringing it the prisoner entered it. Ookur's wife was then present. The heat was applied to my body. I do not believe any of the women saw me beaten. Ookur's wife was present when he was beaten. I had a short stick, such as chowkeedars generally carry about them at night. I use it in the day to drive off cattle from the fields. The coolies work with country spears. I was not among the coolies in the office previous to the prisoner entering it. I likewise ran off with the other coolies. The moon was descending when the prisoner entered the office. There was no place nearer than the principal factory, from which the prisoner could have obtained assistance, in case he had been attacked by the coolies. There were no Europeans living in the same factory with the prisoner.

Lochun Bagdee, Holve, Harro, and Fakirchund corroborated this witness's evidence.

Chand deposed. I am employed as a barkondaz, at the Pooophool sub-thana, near the Soomundagur factory in Zilla Burdwan. On the night of the 6th Falgun last, I saw the corpse of Ookur near the cross-roads by that factory. It was at about 9 p. m. Hearing at the thana, a tumultuous noise proceeding from the factory, I went there and Surrootty pointed out to me the corpse of her husband Ookur, who she said had been murdered by the prisoner. I took the body to the native hospital at Burdwan, where Muddoonoden doctor dissected it in my presence. I had only been stationed eight days at Pooophool thana, when this murder occurred. I did not know Ookur personally. Mr. Leith declined to examine this and the two next witnesses.

Muddoonoden Doss, native doctor, attached to the Burdwan jail, deposed. I remember that Chandburkandaz brought on the 17th February 1839, a corpse for dissection. I examined it and found two black marks, one three fingers square near the shoulder, and the other behind the kidneys. On opening the body I found on the left side of the breast, and in a slanting direction, a coagulation of about one and half pounds of blood, below the skin, nine fingers long, and four in breadth. The coagulation was from the region of the heart, to the regions of the lungs. Under the breast-bone, the heart had been convulsed at its lower extremity, and the liver injured. There was another coagulation of blood over the lungs. I conclude from these appearances, that the deceased must have been struck over those parts of his body, which caused his death. The other parts of the body and the head were healthy.

R. H. Bain, Police Surgeon, deposed. I am both Surgeon and Physician. I have heard the evidence of the last witness. I consider the description of the injuries on the corpse by him sufficient to cause death. Blows from a thick stick, or kicks, might occasion such injury. The bursting of the heart causes instantaneous death.

Sheikh Ramzaun deposed. I am the Gomastah of Mr. McLean's factories at Burdwan. I was not present when Ookur died. I was then at the Kunchennuggur factory.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. I did see the prisoner on the night of Ookur's death: he came to me at the principal factory, and shewed me two marks, one on his hip and the other on his shoulder-blade. I did not see any injury on his head, nor were his clothes torn. Kunchennuggur is about one mile from the Soomundagur factory. The prisoner never came to the principal factory except on this occasion.

Re-examined by Mr. Cochrane. After I had heard the prisoner relate how he got the bruises, and the cause of his coming to Kunchennuggur, I proceeded with him towards the Soomundagur factory, but we met the Police authorities in the way, who arrested the prisoner on a charge of murder. Mr. McLean, junior, resides at the principal factory.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner, in his defence, said, a quarrel had commenced between Budden and me. He called the coolies to assist him. They came and attacked me with sticks. I ran for refuge, and concealed myself in a hedge near the factory. After the tumult was appeased, I proceeded to the principal factory to state my grievances to Mr. McLean. And in his absence, I saw the Gomastah, shewed him the bruises on my body and my tattered clothes, and related to him an account of the fracas. He consented to accompany me to the Soomundagur factory. On our way thither, I was accused of having murdered a cooly, and taken into custody. I denied the charge, and said, I had beaten Budden chokeydar, but no coolies: on the contrary they had assaulted me.

J. Boyle deposed. Mr. McLean engaged me to conduct the prisoner's case. He told me he did not without the circumstances connected with Ookur's death, but he believed the transaction to be a conspiracy. He gave the prisoner an excellent character, and said that he was the most faithful servant he ever had. I believe his statement to be correct.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pearson,—I consider coolies entitled to legal protection, but their oaths are not so creditable as Mr. McLean's statement. Mr. McLean was prevented by emergent business from quitting Bardwan, therefore he could not come to Calcutta and testify on prisoner's behalf. He was aware the result of the trial must materially affect the prisoner. Ookur did not kill himself to uphold a conspiracy, but in the tumult and confusion he might have been accidentally killed by some of the coolies, who might have subsequently charged the prisoner with the murder. I have reasons for this conjecture.

The judge desired Mr. Boyle to confine himself to his professional business, and let the administration of law and justice be conducted by those who were entrusted with them, and they would form their own conjectures.

During Ramzaun and Mr. Boyle's examination, Mr. Leith put questions to them, the replies to which would tend to elicit an evidence from them what they had heard from the prisoner and Mr. McLean relative to this affair. Mr. Pearson objected to this procedure, and added, hearsay testimony could not be admitted as evidence. The Judge concurred with Mr. Pearson on the impropriety of putting such questions, and Mr. Leith acquiesced.

This ended the case for the defence.

The learned Judge then summed up, and in an elaborate speech detailed the evidences of the witnesses examined in this trial, drawing their attention to the material points, and explained the law applicable to them. He particularly observed that the transaction on which this trial is based, there was, of as regretted, no Christian evidence, consequently, the prisoner is necessitated to rest his case solely on the testimony of these coolies, who were fellow workmen, but that circumstance is not in itself sufficient to improve their evidence. With these remarks, he submitted the case to the consideration of the jury.

The jury, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty. After the verdict had been recorded, Mr. Leith put in two letters, alleged to have been written by Mr. McLean, giving the prisoner a good character.

The judge declined to receive these letters, it being contrary to practice, but he remarked, he doubted not that the prisoner had borne a good character formerly. He then proceeded to pass sentence on the prisoner thus.

Nicholas Clausem, you have been tried by a jury, who gave great attention to your case. I believe you struck the deceased when actuated by anger excited, no doubt, by the previous quarrel between you and Budden chakeydar. You did not, whilst striking him, contemplate his death, but that it was occasioned by your assault on him, there is no doubt. The evidence against you is clear and uncontradictory. I shall not on this occasion pass on you the heaviest sentence which the law authorizes in cases of aggravated homicide. The sentence against you is, that you be imprisoned in the common jail of Calcutta for a period of two calendar years.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Areenooddeen, who was convicted for stealing a watch, had, in consequence of his youth and a great temptation, been recommended to mercy. The judge, in concurrence with this recommendation, and the prisoner's former good character, entreated him in future to endeavour to uphold that character, and recover that disgrace which the present theft had entailed on him, and then sentenced him to three months' imprisonment in the house of correction.

Moondeen, another youth, convicted of robbing an old, helpless woman, when asleep. The Judge said, it is evident from the circumstances elicited in his trial, that he was a tool in the hands of more experienced villains, from whose company it was requisite to separate him, sentenced the prisoner to transportation for seven years to the South-east Coast of Martaban.

George Morgan, convicted of having returned from transportation. The judge addressed him thus. George Morgan, you stated yourself that you had escaped from the ship you were in, and returned to this country, you also stated that you were of Christian parents and not born within the tropics, which you did not prove before the Chief Justice in your former trial. You have in this case proved that you are of European habits, though you may not be an Englishman. You will now be transported to one of the colonies allotted to Europeans, but as you have committed a capital felony, your punishment must be increased. The prisoner was then sentenced to 14 years' transportation to Van Dieman's Land.

After this, another prisoner, who had been acquitted by the jury, was discharged by proclamation.—Hark., April, 30.

INSOLVENT COURT.

April 20, 1839.

(Before H. W. Leith, Esq., Knight, Commissioner.)

IN THE MATTER OF G. TROWER, SEC.

Mr. Leith said that the Insolvent's Salary is 3,000 Rs. a month, at present subject to monthly deductions of 500 rupees to Government for some liabilities, the assignee therefore prayed the court to allow the assignee at present 2,000 rupees a month from the Insolvent's salary, until the stoppages to government from the Insolvent's salary have ceased, after which he submitted the instalments be made 2,500 rupees a month.

Mr. Pearson, on behalf of the Insolvent, said, that he had no objection to this proposition, only he begged that the Court would allow the Insolvent the first 2 month's salary clear of deductions, to enable him to procure these comforts which the Insolvent in this case must necessarily require. The assignee and the creditors both consenting to the proposition, and there being no opposition, the insolvent was sworn to the correctness of his schedule and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF CAPT. CHARLES FOWLE.

Mr. Leith applied for the usual deduction of one half of the Insolvent's salary for the benefit of his creditors.

Mr. Marshall, on behalf of the insolvent, applied that 2 months pay be allowed to the insolvent free of all deductions, to enable him to join his Regiment at Arracan.

Mr. Thompson, on behalf of the detaining creditor, opposed this application. He said that the insolvent, whilst in custody, had offered 2,000 Rs. to his creditor to compound his debt, therefore if the insolvent had the command of that sum, he could not be in want of funds to join his regiment.

The Insolvent replied, that since his incarceration in jail he has been put under stoppages in his salary. Instead of 478 rupees he has been receiving 213 rupees during the 6 months and 20 days he has been in custody. He added that he had made every exertion to secure the payment of his debts by offering policies on his life, and if they had then accepted these terms, their debts would have been fully secured them, and he would have got a free passage to Arracan, whereas he must now pay for it.

Mr. L. Clarke remarked that in the case of Major Spiller the Court had discharged the Insolvent, and allowed him 2 months' time to put his case in a stronger light, to claim and obtain the prayer of his petition. Therefore he suggested, that the Court might in this case allow the discharge of the Insolvent at present and allow him 4 months' time to make out a stronger case for himself, if he could.

Mr. Marshall said, that the Insolvent had in his Assignee's hands some money, and he prayed at the Court to order the payment of his costs from them.

The Court replied, that they could not grant this application as it would be establishing a strange precedent. The Insolvent was then discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF T. MORAN.

Previous to the examination of this insolvent, Mr. Peterson, the Counsel for the opposition, begged that the insolvent's brother, who is a witness, be ordered out of Court. The insolvent deposed, I have been in jail two years. I shall be twenty-five years old next August. I received 18,000 rupees from a suit I won in the Supreme Court. I did not receive this money until I was of age. In less than twelve months from that time I was in jail. I did not receive the money. My brother received it by my order, and formed the talook by a power from me. The money was invested in Company's paper by the Accountant-General of the Supreme Court. The power was dated either the 3d or 4th January, 1836, three or four days after my being of age. I gave the power to my brother, because I considered the case against Colonel Pollock to be an unconscionable one, and therefore I gave the power to conceal my direct interference in it. In that case sued Mr. Robertson, my mother, Colonel Pollock. I did attend my Attorney's office ten or twelve times during the progress of this case. I had expectations at that time, that my mother would come to immense property, and I contemplated returning the money to Colonel Pollock afterwards. I directed my Attorney not to compromise the case against Colonel Pollock, without getting the whole of the debt, and 5 per cent. interest, and the costs in full. My mother's expectations from the estate of her last husband, Walter Butler, who was a common soldier and died in 1824, were large. I hold in my hands my mother's will, in which she bequeaths to me all the property she may recover from her last husband's estate. The will is dated 8th July, 1836. I have not taken out a Probate, because my mother died insane. I did in 1838 believe, that my mother was to receive some money from some property bequeathed to Walter Butler by his first mother. The Registrar of the Supreme Court took out an administration to my mother's estate, and I, wrote to the Registrar and informed him, that my mother had left a will with me. Father allowed it to her. Mr. Butler said in my presence, that the property he expected was in Ireland. I did give the receipt for the money to my brother. My brother told me, that the money was lying idle in the Government office, and the interest accumulating, and to draw it out, and he drew out a receipt and desired me to copy and sign it. I imagined it to be to Government, copied and signed it. The receipt was dated May 1836, and my brother, I believe, received the Company's paper. Looks at a Government promissory note and admits that the paper bears his and his brother's signature, and after some hesitation, Insolvent said, this is one of the papers my brother received, for me in July 1837. I stopped the payment of this paper and endorsed it in February 1837 in consequence of my brother writing to me that he would institute proceedings if I did not remove the stoppage. I afterwards submitted the case to Mr. Cochran, and by his advice I endorsed the paper to my brother. I did submit the paper to Mr. Leith likewise, who gave a confused opinion on it, and advised me not to endorse the paper. He likewise said at that time, that either I, my brother or both of us, must have acted fraudulently in this case. I have never received any portion of this money from my brother. Looks at a paper. These papers are mine and my brother's case, written in my brother's hand, and I consented to these papers being submitted to Counsel. My brother's statement is false. I believe that there is a seizure of my property from the Sheriff's Office on behalf of my detaining creditor, Mr. W. Dacosta. I heard of this from my brother, but although I heard it, and knew it to be false, yet I did transfer the paper to my brother. I never heard Mr. Liechfield's name. I served a blank endorsement, and the name of Liechfield was interlined subsequently. I got two opinions from Mr. Leith, but they not being satisfactory, I, conjointly with my brother, made over our case to Mr. Cochran, who gave a more favorable opinion, and I then endorsed the paper. I do not know Mr. Cheppendale. I wrote his name and residence down by my brother's dictation. I made no enquiries as to who Mr. Cheppendale was. I did this after I was told that the power of attorney was not sufficient. There were two papers. I endorsed them both to my brother in one day. After I knew that Cheppendale was an assumed name, and that this conduct was fraudulent on his part. In the opinion I laid before Mr. Cochran, I did not inform him that the name Cheppendale was an assumed name. I am not aware whether I did so to Mr. Leith's or not. I knew before I submitted the case to Mr. Cochran, that his was a fictitious name. I am on good terms with my brother, and he pays the expenses of my insolvency. I cannot say whether I or my brother has defrauded Mr. Dacosta of his money. My brother advised me to apply to take the benefit of the insolvent act in order to defeat Mr. Dacosta. I was on the 23d July 1836, arrested by Mr. Shaw, who was my Attorney in my suit against Col. Pollock, for his costs. My brother on that occasion paid 2,500 rupees for me, and he on another occasion gave 300 rupees. On another occasion I got 500 rupees from Mr. Henderson, Col. Pollock's attorney, which I put into the Union Bank. I first applied for my discharge during last February.

Thomas Moran, deposed. I did receive a power of Attorney from my brother. I received it a long time ago, and cannot tell where it is, and when I last saw it. About three years ago I received a large sum from the Government on that order. My brother gave me the money because he gave a promissory note to his Attorney Mr. Shaw, but he did not owe him the money: was due to me. Mr. Shaw subsequently arrested my brother on it after he got a decree, and I paid the money. To the suit I and my brother were plaintiffs, and Col. Pollock, Mr. Robertson and my mother were defendants, as executors to my father's estate. This deponent refused to answer whether the money he got on his brother's receipt, was paid by him to his brother, stating that he was not bound to answer any question which might criminate himself. The judge being referred to, decided that the defendant must answer this question. The witness, after some hesitation said, my mother made a blank endorsement, and I returned the paper to him. I pay the expenses of my brothers, application for this insolvency, because he has got the means to pay them. The blank endorsement made by my brother to me of the papers, was when he was in jail. I might have allowed him to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act. I got my decree against Col. Pollock in 1835. From the time I got the papers and took them into the jail, they have been in my possession. I never disposed of them. I knew a person named Chippendale, he is either dead, or gone to Europe or some where else. He in 1840, went as a sailor in a ship to England. I have heard the name of Litchfield. I never knew a person of that name. I saw the name in a newspaper. Mr. P. Cross was my step grand-father. He died before I was born. I did state both in writing and verbally, that I sold this paper to that person. I gave no consideration for the paper to my brother.

The judge said that it is unnecessary to examine this witness any further, it is perfectly clear that there was a great deal of fraud and the younger brother acted under the influence of the elder brother, without any benefit to himself, and it was clear that the applicant must be remanded.

Mr. Pearson, on behalf of the Assignee, applied to compel the deponent to produce these papers in Court, as they were evidently the property of the Insolvent and not the deponent.

The Court after this, heard some precedents in a case in which Rajkumore Dutt, and one in which Mr. Paillogue had a lien on some deeds, and the Court in both cases compelled the holders to produce them in Court.

Thomas Moran's examination continued. One of the papers has been paid away. I received 8,000 Rs from the government treasury on it, the other for 9,000 Rs. is in my possession, and I will keep it. I considered both the papers to be mine after my brother endorsed them to me they being promissory notes payable to order. Above the signature of T. Moran, I wrote pay to H. Litchfield, afterwards, above the writing of the principal and interest I wrote the assumed name of H. Litchfield. I am in the habit of keeping Company's papers in assumed names, as I do not wish people to know my private affairs. On the day I received the 8,100 Rs. I had 20,000 Rs. I bought fresh papers with the money, some in my own name, and some in assumed names, cannot tell how many Company's paper I have. This list of Company's paper is written in my mother's hand writing. It is not a correct list of the Company's papers I now have. I have no paper of 5,000 Rs. of 1,500 Rs. of 2,000 Rs. but I have 3 of 1,000 Rs. but not of the loan mentioned in this list. I might have had the papers mentioned in this list, but if I have I must have disposed of them. I do not know the number of the papers I bought with the 20,000 Rs., but I have them now in my possession. I reside in Entally, in Zillah 24 Pergunnahs. My father was a British Subject, artillery sergeant, and head tutor in the school at Dum Dum. I am born in wedlock.

In this part of the case the question of the production of the paper for 9,000 Rs. in the deponent's possession and which, after its production, the Court would allow the Assignee to receive for the payment of this Insolvent's debt, it would pay them all off, and the Insolvent could be discharged.

The Court remarked that it could compel the production of these papers as a matter of evidence only, and not order their delivery to the Assignee. If the creditors think this deponent unlawfully detains the 9,000 Rs. they may sue him for the sum.

The deponent's examination continued. I hold nearly 39,000 Rs. in various company's promissory notes, many in assumed names, and some in my own name. I will not give up these papers they are endorsed to order and I consider them to be my own.

The Court ordered the production of the Company's paper of 9,000 Rs. as a document in evidence, and it added, that hereafter the counsel for the creditors, if they had any thing to urge for its being consigned to the assignee of the Insolvent, the Court would hear them on that point, before it would order the redelivery of the paper to the producer of it. At present he could not order the delivery, summarily, without hearing the authority on that head.

An order for the production of this paper was then issued and the insolvent remanded.

IN THE MATTER OF MESSRS PALMER AND CO.

Mr Pearson said, in this case the matter of reference to this Court is this. There was a disputed item on Messrs Palmer and Co's estate, between them and Messrs. Cockerell and Co. The matter was referred to arbitration in England, and the arbitrators awarded that Messrs. Palmer and Co's assignee should debt Messrs Cockerell and Co. 200,000 Rs and put Messrs Cockerell and Co. in possession of half of the estate of Messrs. Deane and Co in Java subsequently to the passing of this order in England, the assignees of Messrs Palmer and Co. have been precluded from putting Cockerell and Co. in possession of this estate in Java, because the authorities there have seized the estate and ordered it to be sold for the payment of a debt due by the said estate to the Orphan Chamber in Java. Mr Pearson, therefore, on behalf of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., prays the Court to put his client in the same position regarding this matter, as they were before the matter was referred to arbitration.

After a few words in explanation from Mr. Phipps, on behalf of the assignee of the estate of Messrs. Palmer and Co., the application was granted.

IN THE MATTER OF G. D. BROWN.

This witness was examined by Mr. R. E. Smith, a creditor.

The Insolvent stated that it is about 6 years since he contracted these debts. At that time he had no situation but he has since then obtained a situation.

Mr. Popham proved, that he had known Mr. Brown for 3 or 4 years, and until he got this situation he never earned any thing.

IN THE MATTER OF L. CULLEN.

Mr. Lenth obtained an order to remove Mr. Thomas Holroyd from his assigneeship to the private estate of Mr. James Cullen.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARMER.

Mr Strettell informed the Court, that the case had been postponed for the advertising in the public papers of certain notices which have been subsequently completed.

Mr. Sands for the Assignee said, the Insolvent gets 150 rupees a month, and begged that the usual deduction of 50 rupees be made, from his pay.

Mr. Strettell begged for a rule of nisi on behalf of the Insolvent, and Mr. Sands consented to let the case stand until next Court day, to show cause against the deductions.

IN THE MATTER OF J. W. SAGE.

The rule of nisi was enlarged until next Court day.

IN THE MATTER OF G. REBELLO.

A dividend of 12 per cent. was declared in the estate of G. Rebello.

IN THE MATTER OF POTE.

A dividend of 2 rupees 13 annas was declared on the estate of G. H. M. Pote.

IN THE MATTER OF M. M. MANUK.

In this case Mr. Peard, Attorney at Law, made a motion on behalf of Messrs. Debouza and Co. He said that Mr. Manuk was indebted to Messrs. DeSouza and Co. 1,58,000 Rs., and he has subsequently removed from the jurisdiction of this Court, and refused payment of his debts. Mr. Peard, therefore, prayed the Court to grant an adjudication of Insolvency against Mr. Manuk, under one of the clauses of the Insolvent Act, which provides that if a merchant debtor absconds from Calcutta, his creditor may take out an adjudication of Insolvency. Application granted.

IN THE MATTER OF RAMCHAND LULIAN.

In this case the assignee prayed to have the adjudication cancelled. He informed the Court, that this Insolvent had sometime past taken out an adjudication, alleging that he could pay assets into the Court, sufficient to cover one half of his debts, since which period he has not taken any further step in the adjudication. The application was granted.

IN THE MATTER OF W. M. D. RICHARD.

No opposition Insolvent was declared entitled to the benefit of the Act.

IN THE MATTER OF C. F. ILAL.

This Insolvent was also discharged—no opposition.

Mr. Sands for the Assignee applied for an order for payment of one third of his salary as interpreter at the Police, this being a situation under Government.

Mr. Paul stated that the Insolvent did not now hold the situation and it was uncertain whether he would be reinstated.

The Court remarked that if he did not get back his situation, the order could not affect him. Mr. Paul then asked for a short respite, allowed in other cases for the adjournment, in order that the Insolvent might furnish a few requisites of which every body under similar circumstances are deprived. The Court refused the indulgence, which, if applied in every instance, there could be no end or limit. The Insolvent was ordered to pay one third of his salary.

IN THE MATTER OF SUBBAYY BABA.

Mr. Clarke mentioned, that as this Insolvent was not in custody, the case might stand over to the next Court day, owing to the multiplicity of business this day. And it stands over for the next Court day. This Insolvent is opposed and there seems to be great controversy with Mr. Leth on the other side as to certain points of practice.

IN THE MATTER OF J. JACOBS.

It appearing that this case could not be gone through this day, it stands over likewise, for next Tuesday specially, considering that the Insolvent is in custody and has been so for a considerable period. —Harkara, April 22.

TUESDAY, APRIL 23.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

The Insolvent Court, sat specially on Tuesday, to hear this matter. The Insolvent had filed two schedules, the second explanatory of the first, but, upon his examination as to their accuracy on the 5th January last the Court directed a reference to P. O'Hanlon Esq. the Examiner, to inquire into the truth of the two schedules, pursuant to the terms of the 57th and 58th, being the penal sections of the Insolvent Act, and as no individual creditor, was willing to incur the expense of the reference, the Court ordered, that it should be conducted by Mr. Alexander, the Assignee.

On the 22d February last, the Examiner made his report to the effect, that the schedule and additional schedule were untrue, first, in not stating as a part of insolvent's estate, a plot of ground and a shop and godowns thereon. 2dly. In not stating as a further part of his estate, another plot of ground, and dwelling house thereon, subject only to a mortgage to the trustee of Mrs. Jacobs's marriage settlement, for Rs. 3,260-9dly. That no entry appeared in insolvent's books, or schedules, of a certain monthly salary of 85 rupees, which insolvent stated, that he had given to his wife, for the education of his children.

The report further added, that no evidence had been adduced, as to erasures, and false entries, in insolvent's books.

To this report the Assignee excepted on the ground, that the Examiner had not reported that the insolvent's conduct had been fraudulent in any one particular. On the 23d February last, the Court, on reading the exceptions, made an Order in the terms of the exceptions, referring it back to the Examiner, to enquire whether the insolvent had not, amongst other acts, fraudulently withheld a certain Title Deed, given an untrue description of his property, concealed a monthly salary, made alterations, and erasures in his cash and sale book, and fraudulently diminished his estate, by concealing five self performing organs.

Upon this second order of reference, the Examiner made his report, on the 28th March last, to which the Assignee again filed exceptions, on the ground, that the Examiner had not made his report, as he had been directed by the order, that the only part of Insolvent's conduct which he reported fraudulent, was the non-statement of a monthly sum of 30 rupees. These exceptions, which are too long for our columns, set out at length, the several charges of fraud under the two sections of the Insolvent Act. They were on the board for argument on Saturday last, but in consequence of the pressure of business on that day, the Court at the instance of Mr. Strettell, the insolvent's Attorney, appointed Tuesday the 23d to hear them.

Mr. Clarke, who appeared in support of the exceptions, stated to the Court, the chief points on which he relied, that the insolvent, being possessed of a certain shop and godown in Dhurrumtollah Street, fraudulently omitted all mention of them in his two schedules, and did not produce the title deeds relating to them, until the 14th February last. Mr. Clarke stated that the Examiner had reported that the insolvent, in his examination of the 9th February, admitted that the deed in question was in the possession of his wife, and that it was lawfully produced by her to him (the Examiner." Mr. Clarke contended, that this part of the report was incorrect, and not sustained by the Examiner's own notes; that there was nothing in those notes to shew that the insolvent ever said anything of this deed, that Mr. Burkinyoung, the Attorney for the Assignees, most positively asserts, that the insolvent did not admit its existence, that on being closely questioned he said, "if there is one Mrs. Jacobs must have it." That Mr. Burkinyoung, a day or two afterwards, went to Mr. Strettell's Office for the purpose of ascertaining if there was a deed at all; that he there saw it for the first time, and seeing that it was an absolute conveyance to the insolvent (and not to the trustees) told Mr. Strettell that he "now knew why this deed had not been produced before." Mr. Clarke added, that there was a further inaccuracy in this part of the report, that, according to the Examiner's own notes, Mr. Strettell, and not Mrs. Jacobs produced the Deed. He further said, that both Mr. Burkinyoung and Mr. Barwell, the Barrister, who were present, could give evidence that Mrs. Jacobs was not in the office on the 14th of February, the day on which the Deed was brought into. Mr. Clarke here dwelt at some length on the except it to this part of the report and asserted that there had been the most careful concealment of this Deed, and of the property to which it related. He referred to the Insolvent's two schedules in support of his argument, and pointed out discrepancies between the Examiner's Report and the Insolvent's examination. On the 14th of February, the Examiner stated in his minutes, that Mr. Strettell brought in the Deed, and on the 29th March, he made a note that it was produced by Mrs. Jacobs, as stated in the report. Mr. O'Hanlon here explained, that the last note was a mere memorandum, and not intended to form part of the evidence.

The next point related to certain alterations and erasures in the Insolvent books, and concealments of property. These referred to certain Machine Organs, 3 of which were stated by Insolvent to have been sold in his shop and 2 on the river between Chaudronsgore and Sook Saugor, but all of them at a considerable undervalue, and to persons whose names and address the Insolvent did not know, and of whom he could give no account whatever. Mr. Clarke here read the evidence of the Insolvent and of his son as to these entries and erasures, respecting which they varied in their statements. He dwelt on the improbability of the Insolvent finding a purchaser for articles of this description between Hooghly and Sook Saugor, and pressed upon the notice of the Court the strong circumstantial evidence of fraud in this part of the case, viz the sales at an undervalue, to strangers of whom the Insolvent could give no account whatever—the sale on the river, the entries of these sales on erasures, and the contradictory evidence of the Insolvent and son as to the erasures. He asserted that this was the clearest case of fraud he ever witnessed, and added that if there was not sufficient evidence to convict the Insolvent, then it was altogether impossible to bring home fraud to an Insolvent. He mentioned a case where the Court of Bankruptcy in England severely punished a Bankrupt, who stated, that he had sold his property on Waterloo Bridge to persons whom he accidentally met, but whose names, and addresses he did not know.

Mr. Clarke then proceeded to the charge of Breach of Trust in Fawcett's estate, of which the Insolvent being Trustee, had appropriated large sums to his own use, but the Court intimated an opinion, that under the 58th Section of the Insolvent Act, the detaining creditor only could bring this charge against the insolvent. That is the case Messrs. Carr, Leggett and Co., the detaining creditors, not being the opposing creditors, the Insolvent could not be detained under this Clause.

Mr. Clarke stated, that the order of Court directed the Examiner to report to the Court whether the Insolvent had committed a Breach of Trust, and that the Exception was taken to this part of the report, because it did not follow the order of reference. He said, that he read the section of the Act differently, but in a case like this, where there was otherwise such ample proof of fraud, he did not wish to press the point. This question being of considerable importance stands over for consideration.

Mr. Clarke here prayed for an order, directing the trustees to reconvey on payment of Rs. 3,250 the amount of their mortgage on the property. Mr. Henry Seaton remarked, that this was an application similar to that made in Moran's case on Saturday last, and he doubted whether the Court could do more than order the production of the Deed for the purposes of discovery. Mr. Clarke then touched on many other parts of the Insolvent's evidence, which he contended went to convict him of the grossest fraud.

Mr. Strettell, for the Insolvent argued, that it was absurd to urge the charge of concealing the property in Dhurumtollah, that Mr. Jacobs was a tradesman who was well known to the greater portion of his creditors, they being mostly tradesmen too, that the House was also too well known to them, for him to attempt a concealment, if it had been his property. That it was not his own, but was in fact properly purchased with trust monies belonging to Mrs. Jacobs, and the Examiner in his report has acquitted the Insolvent of all fraud regarding this property. It is true that the Insolvent had the management of and the superintending care over this property, that it was not until very recently the Insolvent was in embarrassed circumstances, for instance in the Insolvent's transaction with Messrs. Alexander and Co., the Insolvent appears to be the prominent character, yet the very cheque granted by that firm for the payment of the money towards the purchase of this house, expresses that the money was trust money, belonging to the trust of Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, which moreover, although it had passed through the Insolvent's hands, had, nevertheless, been appropriated for the defrayment of the expenses of the building of this house, which is the trust property. Mr. Strettell next adverted to the charge as to the organs, their sale to strangers, and the entries and erasures as to them, and he confessed that he felt some difficulty in this part of the case, but argued that the Insolvent was in embarrassed circumstances, and sold the Organs at a sacrifice to pay off pressing claims. That he might have met accidentally on the river, with some up-country dealers, who purchased the organs as a speculation. He would, however, leave the insolvent in the hands of the Court, and he then asked for leave to file certain documents which would afford the Insolvent an opportunity to clear himself, and go to a certain extent in mitigation of the penalty to which the Court might think him liable under the Insolvent act. Mr. Strettell then handed a paper to Mr. O'Hanlon, Mr. Clarke strongly objected to Mr. O'Hanlon's either receiving or perusing it, and after a warm controversy on the propriety of Mr. O'Hanlon's so doing, Mr. Strettell, at the suggestion of the Court, withdrew the document. Mr. Strettell said, that the salary of 85 Rs. a month as the Organist to the Scotch Kirk, had been received by the Insolvent's substitute, and the balance which had been allowed to the Insolvent's family during his incarceration, was so very insignificant, that coupling it with the Insolvent's ignorance of it, he could not be visited with any severe punishment, considering that he has already been a long time in jail, and that his wife and children are totally dependant on his exertions for their support. With regard to the alleged breaches or interpositions. Mr. Strettell observed, that if Mr.

Jacobs had contemplated any fraud in that transaction, it appeared strange that the entries in question remained untouched as to the sum for which the articles had been sold, and the names of the articles only had been erased. In conclusion, Mr. Strettell begged permission to file an affidavit in explanation and mitigation of the Insolvent's conduct; should he have subjected himself to any punishment from the Court. He concluded by assigning malicious motives to the opposition.

Mr. Clarke in reply said, that he disclaimed all malicious feelings on the part of the opposition. That he had always, in and out of that Court, expressed his opinion that it was the strict duty of the Assignee to bring every fraudulent Debtor before the Court. That he had been, from its first formation, Counsel for that respectable and influential body, the Calcutta Trade Association; that he knew that the opinion of every individual member of that body was, that the Insolvent Court had, in this country, been too easy a refuge for dishonest Debtors, that as Creditors, the members considered it a great and useless expense, to follow into this Court, a Debtor who sought the relief afforded by the Insolvent Act. With this impression abroad, Mr. Clarke thought, as he had before stated, that the Assignee was in duty bound to expose every instance of fraud, and that in his opinion he could not have selected a more fit subject for exposure than this Insolvent, whose every act was more or less tainted with fraud. Turn to whatever he might—to the concealment of property—to the condition of his books—the sale of his property—to his conduct as a trustee of Fowle's estate, or to his examination—in one and all of these, it was impossible not to see the strongest evidence of fraud and misconduct. He added, that it was not from the view of any one special act or part, but from the general conduct of Insolvent, that conclusions regarding his motives must be drawn; and in the present case every discovery has been forced from the prisoner, and his incarceration during the last 6 months so far from inducing him to amend his fraudulent practices, had tended to involve him and his witnesses in open contradiction, especially his son, whose testimony is in many respects at direct variance with the Insolvent's own statement, that out of two schedules sworn to by the Insolvent, neither have been found to be correct. In fact, the whole case had elucidated nothing but gross fraud and perjury. Mr. Clarke then went on to support his former statement and arguments, with some remarks on the impropriety of Mr. Strettell offering to file a paper in Court, the existence of which Mr. Strettell had not mentioned either to him or the Court until just at this moment, and which, if it were so important, ought to have been produced long ago, or to have been filed with an affidavit, setting forth the cause of the detention.

Mr. Strettell said, if permitted, his client would now put in an affidavit, and offered repeated remarks and replies to Mr. Clarke's speech.

Mr. Clarke replied, that he doubted not that Mr. Strettell's Client would swear to any thing; and begged Mr. Strettell not to interrupt him in his address to the Court.

Mr. Clarke then observed, that in other points Mr. Jacobs had not been so backward for instance in setting his son-up in business, and removing articles into his shop, amongst which Mr. Clarke doubted not were the five organs, which Mr. Strettell said had been sold under price to some up-country dealer whom he had met casually on the river, to enable him to overcome present difficulties, and which the trader might have purchased on a speculation. These Organs, Mr. Clarke remarked, he believed had been transferred fraudulently to the son's shop.

The Court said, that the prisoner must be remanded at present. The Judge stated, that he considered this was a case of fraud, that he would not pronounce judgment hastily, until he had gone thoroughly into it. Mr. Clarke then applied for a rule nisi, for the trustees to show cause, why the title deeds of the house No. 2, Durrumtollah, should not be handed over to the assignee, on payment of mortgage money, but the court took time to consider the point. The case was then postponed until next court day, and the court, after hearing one or two unimportant motions, adjourned for a fortnight.—Herk., April 25.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—It is said, that an improvement is about to be introduced in the studies of the Medical College, and midwifery is thenceforward to occupy more of the students' attention than hitherto. The five students who received their diplomas not long ago, were not tested with regard to their knowledge of this branch of the Medical Science.

Three of the five students of the Medical College, who have received diplomas to enter the honourable profession, and signified their intention to enter the Company's service, have received appointments on a salary of a thousand rupees each, and are about to leave Calcutta to join their respective stations of Allahabad, Agra and Delhi. The delay of their departure, is owing to the Government not having decided, whether to allow or not the passage money to which these young doctors contend they have a right.

SECRETARYSHIP OF THE SANSENI COLLEGE.—Capt. Marshall has been appointed Secretary of the Sanseni College.

CURATOR OF THE BOTANIC GARDEN.—It is said, Government intend to reduce the salary of the next Curator of the Botanic Garden to one-third of that which is paid to Dr. Wallich.

ELECTION OF VESTRY MEMBERS.—A meeting of parishioners and seat occupiers was held in the Vestry Room of St. John's Cathedral on the 1st instant, for the election of four gentlemen to serve on the Select Vestry for this year, when the four following were duly elected:—Messrs. A. H. Sim, R. Molloy, T. Leech, and R. O'Dowda.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Captain Henry, of the new Bombay vessel Marian, fell over board on the evening of the 31st instant, and was drowned. Captain Henry was at the time on the stage suspended over the side, examining the work of the caulkers, when some how losing his equilibrium, he went off the stage into the stream, and was not seen to rise again. It is supposed that the body was picked up at about half past 8 p.m. of the 3d instant, with that of the second officer of the "Helena," who was drowned last Saturday evening, and both were reinterred to the burying ground in Park Street.

DISHMAL OF SHEKH UDDOOLAH KHAN, BUNADPORE.—Shekh Uddoolah Khan, Bunadpur, Deputy Collector of Midnapore, according to Regulation IX, has been dismissed, at length, on the ground of disqualification. He it known that, that this individual was appointed on the 16th May 1837, so that he has been two years in the service of Government, without capacity for the discharge of his duties!

RAJA SENAOKH ESCAPE.—On the 11th, that a bailiff of the Supreme Court, has had a hair breadth escape from being murdered by orders of a Zemindar, residing in one of the neighbouring zillahs. The bailiff had proceeded to the country residence of the Zemindar, for the purpose of executing a writ of the Supreme Court. On knocking to the door, the durwan said they had no hookum to admit him; he however insisted upon seeing their master, and at last went in with a portion of the people that attended him. The Zemindar, thereupon sung out to his people to cut down the bailiff, and in obedience to his orders, one of the durwans came running with a drawn sword, and made a blow at the officer, which wounded him severely on the back. The ruffian then, seeing the bailiff fall, and thinking that he had dispatched him, effected his escape, and before the darogah arrived, every one of the inmates of the house, men, women and children, had evacuated it.

CHOLERA AND FEVER.—It is stated, that cholera and fever are making great havoc at Umbria, numbers of people there, falling victims to them every day.

Ghat FOR FEMALES.—A ghat is to be built near the New Maid, for the exclusive use of females who resort to the river to bathe.

DURJELING.—The following is an extract of a letter received from Durjeling, dated Pankbarree, 29th March 1839:—

I walked up to Rursiong yesterday, to which place the road was made, at 5 p. m. The line, throughout, appears to me to be remarkably well taken, and reflects great credit on Gilmore, as a Civil Engineer. Considering the number of men, too, hitherto employed, I think much heavy work has been performed, and on this score the Sergeants Corporals, and all concerned, are fully entitled to their meed of praise. The working party received an addition of 82 yesterday morning, and the actual, strength to-day, is 211. Lloyd has been actively engaged in procuring men, for some time past, and expects to send up two or three hundred men next week; there can be little doubt, therefore, that the junction beyond Mahulderan will be effected about the 20th of April, and by that time Messrs. Hepper's and Willson's arrangements will be far advanced. Mr. Wilson returns to Titalya on the 1st or 2d, and you will soon see his new advertisement. This time, it may be depended on. Russell has been of the greatest service. It was entirely through his assistance, that this supply for Hepper and Martin, was procured, and at a favourable rate too, viz 42½ annas for the rupee, delivered at Titalya, Hackeries had then to be hired, and additional hands to carry it up here, all which he has successfully managed. From Rursiong, the road will be of the same breadth as above, so that by and by bullocks stationed there will prove a great saving. Indeed, when this part of the road is widened, there will be nothing to prevent hackeries going the whole way; but this cannot be expected before another year.

"Though you may look to Mr. Wilson's advertisement, for the hotel, a few persons disposed to rusticate, would find a most agreeable change of climate by coming here now, and without any trouble or inconvenience to themselves, as the bungalows will be supplied with all creature comforts next week. The palkee daks to this, cannot be finally arranged until Dr. Wilkie has been here, and is officially appointed by the traveller, on laying his daks to Dinagore, has only to send a treasury draft for Rs. 40 to the Acting Postmaster, with a request that he may continue it to Titalya. Please notify this.

"Peatson took up his wife and family from him, the day before yesterday. He will write an account of the road, I believe; but the fact of such a journey being performed in Mrs. P.'s state, speaks for itself. I should mention likewise, that Lloyd has got the mistrees (under our banian, Beer Sing,) to build a large shed here, one-half of which is pro bono publico, the other for Government purposes. He is also taking measures to establish a weekly boat, which will be of infinite service, to the Sacatarium. We shall commence with the furniture when the Dinagore coolies arrive next week, and expect to get Mr. Hepper's first supply of 100 unquads up on the 9th. This same quantity will follow weekly."

ARMY OF THE RAJAS.—Shah Soojah's force was at Kassim Kajobe, on the 17th of March. The most distressing accounts are received from the camp. The Beloches had made themselves extremely troublesome harassing, and picking off stragglers from the army, and of two hundred and fifty camels belonging to the Shah, some have died, and many been driven off by their riders. The greatest privations have been felt by the troops, and water was hardly to be had before reaching Kassim Kajobe.

Lieutenant Burnett, Quarter Master 16th Regiment, on proceeding to mark out his ground, accompanied by his Quarter Master Sergeant, had been attacked by some 10 or 12 horsemen, who started out of a ruined village, saluted to them, and drew the tulwars. The Sergeant was cut down and plundered. He put up his left hand to save his head, and received a severe cut on his arm, and fell from his poney. He asked them what was the use of killing him; they said they only wanted money, when they stripped, and turned him adrift quite naked. He returned to the Camp of Her Majesty's 13th, which fortunately happened not to be very far off. The Mess camel of 48th Regiment had also been plundered, and the Sepoy on duty with it, cut down. Some prisoners have been taken, by a party of Horse, sent out on the above occurrences being reported, and had been forwarded on, under a guard, to Head quarters, where, it is to be hoped, they would meet with the reward they merit. Forage is said to be so scarce, that many of the officers have been obliged to carry kirbans finely cut up for their horses.

The Ameer of Scinde, and the Kelat Chief, are proving by their acts, in spite of the friendliness of their professions, their hollow insincerity, or their utter inability to compel their subjects to render us assistance in any shape, or to even to respect our property.

The latest accounts say, that Doost Mahomed scoffs at the idea of his offering any opposition to our advance. He knows his own weakness and our strength too well.

The following is an extract from a letter, received from the advance column of the Army of the Indus—from which it will appear that Major Cureton's party, accompanied by Sir Alexander Burnes, had got clear of the Bolan Pass.

"Accounts have been received from the advanced party under Major Cureton—they were at 8½ A. M. on the 17th ultimo, accompanied by Sir Alexander Burnes, twenty miles beyond the termination of the Bolan Pass, having met no opposition, though the Pass would have admitted of most formidable defence. No work of art could, as a fortification, equal this creation of nature. Beyond the Pass, the country is an immense plain, covered with wild thyme, rue, and interspersed thickly with wild tulips. This is the Doozite He Doolut, or Luckless plain, mentioned by Elphinstone. At Sirs Ab, as the name implies, being interpreted, the head of the water, or water head, is a small stream, and besides, a good supply of grass. The wild thyme is an acceptable food for the camels. It is said that the Kandahar Chieftains are calling their clansmen together, to receive us, but there is a divided house, which cannot hope to stand against us. The gathering place is in the valley of Peshing, and so far, their policy is wise, as from thence we had looked for supplies, of which this arrangement makes them the masters. This is the great difficulty we have to encounter. The country before us, till we reach the inhabited part of Kandahar, cannot feed our army, and unless the Chiefs assist us, all our provisions must be sent on from the rear, which will render our advance slow and troublesome. The elder Chief wishes to set up as King of Afghanistan, but his brothers strongly oppose this claim, and the controversy will probably end in the defection of one party to us, when the other must from weakness, follow the example. The climate is delightful beyond the Pass, the country being about 500 feet above the level of the sea. Supplies are the only difficulty, but certainly not an unsurmountable, though a serious one. Once in a cultivated country, the punctual payments and strict discipline of our Army, if Sir John Keane have not forgotten the lessons he learned in the school of the Duke, will draw the resources of the country to us, and again shew the strange spectacle of the British Army subsisting in plenty in the country, from which the native force opposed to them can draw only on the uncertain supply of plunder and outrage.

The following is an extract from another letter from the Army of the Indus, dated 20th ultimo :

The small pox has broken out among the Goorkhas, who came with Connolly from the Hills and has carried off a great many of them. Orders have been given to shoot all Beloches found hovering about the camp—no prisoners to be taken ! which would, it was hoped, soon put a stop to the cold blooded attacks of these miscreants. The troops had got through the Bolan Pass, and were enjoying the blessing of plenty of grass and water, which they had been unused to for many a long day. Sir John Keane was expected at Dadur on the 26th. We are much disappointed to hear, that Majors Garden and Craigie, were to be superseded in their appointments by Bombay Officers ; but we hear that this is a mistake. General Nott had been ordered back, to command the 2d Brigade at Shikarpoor. Lieut Gausson, of the 42d N. I. had been appointed to Anderson's Horse ; Ensign Ross, of the same Regt. to Bean's Infantry Corps, and Ensign Haughton, of the 31st, to Codrington's Provincials.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE MEETING.—At the tenth half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Sun Insurance Office, 1837-38, the accounts and statement of affairs for the past half-year, were submitted and passed as correct.

The following Resolutions were then proposed and carried :

Proposed by Mr. Manackjee Rustomjee, seconded by Mr. A. Desouza, and resolved,—That all the outstanding risks, with the amount of premiums thereon, of the old office ending 31st December 1838, be transferred to the new office, commencing 1st January 1839, the risks amounting to Co.'s Rs 35,85,032-11-4, and the premiums thereon, to Co.'s Rs 82,146-12-1.

Proposed by Mr. A. Desouza, seconded by Mr. G. Apar, and resolved —That a dividend be made, out of the sum appearing above per Co.'s Rs 24,650-12-10 of Co.'s Rs 246-9 per share, to the old members, and that any thing recovered, from the loss of the Ruby, or any other vessel, be divided among the members of the old office, after deducting all the averages thereon.

Proposed by Mr. Manackjee Rustomjee, seconded by Mr. M. S. Owen, and resolved,—That Messrs. K. H. Mackenzie, W. C. Hurry, W. Bruce, G. Apar, and Rustomjee Cowasjee, act as a committee for the ensuing six months.

THE CHURCH ROCKS.—The finale of this disgraceful festival took place on Friday. The Hindus, improving with the march of intellect, had their mummets dressed in quite novel costumes, and, perhaps, in retaliation for the attacks made by the Missionaries on their religious prejudices, the mummery of a Christian burial rite, coffin, clergymen, bible pull-bearers and mourners, was paraded through the streets in a most indecent manner, to the scandal of all Christians who passed by. Mr. Boaz, was present at the swiveling, and endeavoured to persuade the deluded and inebriated fanatics, from allowing themselves to be lifted and whirled round on the churruck-tree. He was successful in dissuading a few syannies from swiveling, but his exertions nearly cost him a broken head, as we at one time thought, that he would have been assaulted by a wealthy native, who made up to him, and requested him either to desist from his attempts, or to produce his authority for interfering.

FIRE.—A fire occurred on the night of the 13th instant, which burned down the whole range of purka godowns, adjoining Jackson's bazar, and facing the Chowringhee road, which were occupied by manufacturers of punkas, brackets, &c.

Several destructive fires have occurred during the week ; but they would have been ten times more ruinous in their consequences, if the progress of the flames had not in a great measure been checked by the tiled roofs of the houses as the engines always arrived long after the work of destruction was at its height.

OPIMUM TRADERS' MEETING.—A meeting of merchants, interested in the opium trade, was held during the week for the purpose of considering the propriety of addressing Government to postpone the next sale, in consideration of the peculiar position of the Canton market, consequent to the measures of the Chinese authorities. The measure was decided on, and the address sent in ; but Government have refused to comply with the request of the petitioners.

We were in error in stating that the petition for a postponement of the opium sales had been answered in the negative. The Courier was good enough to mislead us ; but we now find, that no answer has yet been returned to the petition, and in accordance with the pledge of Government, they have refused to comply with the prayer of the petition.

MR. MARSHMAN.—Mr. J. C. Marshman, of Serampore, has, at the recommendation of his medical attendant, been compelled to proceed to the Straits, for the benefit of his health, which has of late been in a very delicate state. The editorial duties of the Friend of India, and all business connected with the Serampore mission, will be conducted, during the absence of Mr. Marshman, by his able and reverend coadjutor, Mr. Mack.

THE OLD MINT.—It is in contemplation to give the old Mint premises a complete repair, and to add some apartments for the more convenient accommodation of the different public establishments now located in them. During the progress and completion of the repairs, which, it is stated, will require three or four months, the office of the Military Board, is to be removed to its former habitation in Chowringhee.

A NEW MOSQUE.—A magnificent mosque is about to be built close to the Dhurrumtollah Bazar, by one of the Mysore Princes.

SURVEY OF THE TENASERIM COAST.—The Lady William Bentinck, under the command of Lieutenant Young, is about to proceed to the Tenasserim Coast, for the purpose of completing the survey of that part, and it is of course understood that Captain Lloyd will proceed in her. The schooner Eagle, tender to the Bentinck, is also going on similar duty, in charge of Lieutenant Fell.

CAOUTCHOUC.—Messrs. Brownlow and Kemp, manufacturers of caoutchouc, in Assam, are now able to supply that very useful article, fit for the highest purposes to which it is applied—the finest elastic webs ; but they have not succeeded in discovering any treatment by which they may be sure of always turning it out of uniform quality. To secure themselves a monopoly of the Charloar forests, they have tendered 3,000 rupees per annum for them in farm ; but, although the caoutchouc tree abounds in these forests more than elsewhere, there are plenty to be found in all the forests near the hills on both banks of the river.

MR. J. W. ALEXANDER.—Mr. J. W. Alexander, has resigned the office of Commissioner of the Court of Requests, on the ground that he has conscientious scruples touching the administering of idolatrous oaths.

A DAK.—A branch dak has been established on the great Suikra road, so that the letters to and from Bankura, and other places to the west of it, will be despatched and received direct from thence within a much shorter time than was taken by the Hooghly route.

BURMESE PRV.—The Enterprise has brought, from Madras, a Burmese prisoner (a priest.) He was seized by the authorities of Madras, because he could not give a satisfactory account of himself, and as he is suspected of being a spy, it was thought advisable to hand him over to the Supreme Government. The account the given of himself is, that he was in a vessel bound, we forget where, when the captain, ignorantly or accidentally, put into Madras roads. The prisoner says that he was the only man permitted to go on shore to see a sumasha and that the ship sailed away without him. He is supposed to speak or understand no other language but his own. He is said, however, to be an intelligent and observing person.

MR. E. A. SAMUELLE.—Mr. E. A. Samuelle, the magistrate of Hooghly, has been ordered off dak, to Tirhoot in this very pleasant weather, to act as Governor, prosecutor against the Judge of that station, on charges preferred against him by Dr. McKinnon.

BURNING OF OPIUM GODOWNS.—It is said, that the opium godowns at Gazeepore have been burnt.

JAMES SUTHERLAND, ESQ.—James Sutherland, Esq., whitom Editor of the Hurkaru newspaper, has been appointed Principal of the Hooghly College.

BABOO ROSSOMOY DUTT.—Baboo Rossomoy Dutt has been appointed a Commissioner of the Court of Requests, vice J. W. Alexander resigned.

COOLIE TRADE.—M. Mingard, the Colonial Envoy from Bourbon, who was sent here to prevail upon our Government to allow the exportation of Coolies, returns on La Lancerie to that island, his application having been refused.

BENGAL MARINERS' AND GENERAL WIDOWS' FUND.—A special general meeting of the Bengal Mariners' and General Widows' Fund, was held on the 10th instant.

A proposal having been made for investing the funds of the Society in Union Bank shares, it was agreed that the same be circulated among the members in Calcutta, and be considered at the next general meeting.

It was then proposed and carried, that full power be given to the Directors to carry into effect the resolution passed at the general meeting of the 25th January 1838, viz., that all the Government funds or securities in excess of 2,00,000 sicca rupees, be sold and invested in Bank of Bengal Shares, as favourable opportunities occur.

BENGAL ANONERS.—Mr. C. W. Smith won the Dalhousie medal on the 10th instant.

MR. J. H. PATTON.—Mr. James Hardwick Patton, the Magistrate of the Twenty-four Pargunnahs, has been made to figure before the public in rather an unenviable manner during the month. Mr. Charles Thackeray, a barrister of the Supreme Court; called on Mr. Patton on business, and the Magistrate received him in his private dwelling, where the Court was held, sat there with his hat on during the conference, and treated Mr. Thackeray, on the whole, in such a cavalier manner, that he has retaliated on the functionary, by ridiculing his conduct in doggerels published in the Hurkaru newspaper, the chorus to which is,

Oh! an epine justice is not worth a bun,
Form'd of judge and of justice roll'd up into one.
When Mr. P.———
Put his hat on,
Sure he shamed the seat he sat on.

THE CLERGY AT FAULT.—A singular occurrence took place at the Cathedral during the appointed service for Easter Monday. When the two Chaplains had read the Alter Service, as it had been read during the preceding week, and the Senior Chaplain had finished repeating the Creed, he stopped for the Bishop to give the blessing; for the Bishop happened to be present, and the only time he had been so at the Morning Service throughout the whole of Lent. But instead of the blessing being given, as the congregation expected, a long pause ensued; the Bishop stood up but remained silent; when, as supposed, a look was given, and the Senior Chaplain inferring that he was to give the blessing, began to repeat the words; but stopped short after the first sentence, probably from another look or sign by the Bishop. The younger Chaplain collecting the omissions hitherto practised throughout in the Daily Service, immediately began "The Prayer for the Church militant," adding the concluding collect; after which the Bishop gave the blessing, and on leaving his pew went up to the two Chaplains as they left the alter, and spoke to them.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—Complaints have been received, during the month, from several parts of the country, of want of rain and the burning up of the indigo plants.

COL BENSON AND DR. BAYFIELD.—Colonel Benson and Dr. Bayfield have returned in the Ganges Steamer from Rangoon. Our Envoy was not honored with an audience by THARRAWADDIE, previous of his departure from Amerapoora, a fact which speaks favorably to His Majesty's firmness of purpose. On bowing out Colonel BENNEY, he gave his royal word he would not receive a British Resident, and he has kept it.

BABOO ASHTOODOSS DEY.—Baboo Ashtoodoss Dey, has subscribed 500 rupees to the District Charitable Society.

DEPARTURE OF THE MEDICAL STUDENTS.—The report that the medical students who have received diplomas are not able to join their stations on account of passage money, is incorrect. On the contrary, Government, in their letter of appointment, have granted a full allowance of passage money.

REVENGE.—A hotel-keeper of Serampore, lately detected an illicit correspondence between his frail rib and his billiard-marker. Enraged at the injury he had suffered, he inveigled the marker into his house, tied him fast to a pillar, and cut off his nose. The Danish authorities have held the hotel-keeper to bail, to appear and stand his trial for maliciously cutting and maiming.

POISON SOLD FOR SALTS.—A large quantity of white vitriol has been sold in the bazaar lately for Epsom salts. Dr. O'Shaughnessy detected and exposed this circumstance, and the police has seized a large quantity of the vitriol marked salts, which, of course, will be confiscated. A large quantity, however, has been sent up the country for sale, and our fellow subjects ought, therefore, to be extremely cautious in purchasing salts, or they might get poison instead.

NOTES.

MUSSEERABAD.—Orders for the arrest of Cornet Chapman, accompanied by descriptive rolls of him as a deserter, have been sent to the neighbouring stations. No trace of this unfortunate youth has been discovered. The extent of his fraudulent operations are not known, though fresh disclosures are daily coming to light, in the shape of bills returned dishonoured, and angry letters from tradesmen and agents, shewing already, defalcations to the amount of 50,000. The whole affair is one of much regret, the unfortunate officer having been very popular, for his gentlemanly manners and general social qualities. No suspicion that he was em-barrassed, existed until lately, for though he lived expensively, maintaining a handsome domestic establishment, a racing stud, and giving racing cups, &c., &c.

the fortune he represented himself to possess at Home, was considered sufficient to cover all.

MUTTRA.—A new Avatar has just appeared in this town, which has caused an indescribable sensation among the inhabitants. It is in shape of a large lungoor (baboon) and has commenced a vigorous and uncompromising crusade, against the small monkeys which infest the place. Opinion is at variance as to the nature of the animal; some contending that he is god, and others a devil, but the former preponderates, his expulsion of so many of his mischievous co-order, having found him favour in the eyes of the many. Such is the terror he has excited among the monkeys that in fact the shops of the buncas, that the cry of "lungoor ata" is sufficient to scare them from the most tempting sweetmeats, to the great delight of the owners.

NEEMUCH.—The whole of Mewar is swarming with plunderers, and the large town of Joosah and Kurra Sodree, have been openly threatened with pillage. Fifteen camels, laden with plunder, passed Neemuch a short time since. A party of the Joudpoor Mairwara Battalion, is proceeding against the Dheels, whose lawless habits, nothing but a well-timed severity, can restrain.

JHANSI.—Letters from Jhansi mention, that the commission, which had been appointed to settle the question of succession, had finished its labors; Colonel Spiers had returned to Owellor, and Mr. Fraser to Banda. Nothing, of course, is known as to the recommendation which the Commissioners may found upon their proceedings; but on dit, that it is intended to propose, that Baba Sahib, as he is called, be nominally restored, and a Resident placed at Jhansi.

Subsequent reports mention, that the State will be left to the management of the lawful and rightful possessor, in whose occupation a most needless interference was made.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.—Further letters from Dadur, dated the 16th of March, have been received. The horse artillery, 2d light cavalry, 13th light infantry, and 48th regiment native infantry, were to move forward, followed on the 17th, by the camel battery, H. M.'s 16th lancers, the 3d light cavalry, and 16th N. I. The remainder of the force was to go on at similar intervals, with the exception of the second brigade, ordered to stand fast at Shikarpore. This latter measure, —the halt of the brigade—has arisen from the circumstance of the whole of the camels having been taken from them by Sir John Keane for the Bombay troops. These troops were so badly provided, that, besides the camel carriages, they had been obliged to indent on the Bengal troops, for both rum and biscuits.

Six Beloochees, the other day, met 100 of Shah Shooja's men, one of the Beloochees had a blunderbuss, which he fired. It luckily missed the heroes, but on the explosion both parties ran away!!! However, the Shah's men looking back, saw the Beloochees running away too.—and courageously turned again and pursued them! This is a lovely spot, an immense quantity of water, and abundance of grass and barley, of which many fields have been bought, and the horses devour it with avidity. The climate is superb, Major Curston has reported, that as far as he has gone, there has been abundance of grass and water, and a good wide road.

AYLHER.—Letters from Sylhet mention, that all was quiet in that quarter. The refractory Maham Cossy she have made terms, and our troops are accordingly withdrawn from their territory. Captain Vetch had started from Gowahatties with a party of Seebundies against some Doffa chief, who was running restive.

MADRAS.

MUTINY ON BOARD THE LORD LOWTHER.—An alarming mutiny broke out on board the Lord Lowther, during her passage to Madras, rendered more aggravating by the mutineers being headed by some of the officers and midshipmen, whose duty it was to have shown a better example. It appears, nothing could have exceeded the presence of mind evinced by Captain Yates, who, through all the difficulties and annoyances he met with, perseveringly and determinedly maintained his ground, and with the help of the gallant Boatswain, who acted as 1st Officer, a few hands, and partial assistance from the passengers, safely brought the Lord Lowther to an anchor in Madras roads. The origin of this mutiny seems to have been a disappointment, in the Chief Mate not being made Commander in London. Captain Yates performed many voyages to this port in the Sesotria, to the satisfaction of those who have sailed with him, in that and other vessels, and considering the high character that gentleman bears, the out-break above alluded to, does seem to us unaccountable. The mutineers were removed out of the ship, under custody of a guard. It is reported that one or more of the military commissioned officers, who were on board the Lord Lowther, forgot their duty under the above trying circumstances, so far as to encourage, if not to join, the mutineers.

An investigation respecting the disturbance, occupied the Bench of Magistrates a week. The depositions of several of the passengers and ship's company, were taken, and the officers in custody, amounting altogether to ten persons, were brought up each day to hear the depositions read. As the Sessions commenced the 15th instant, and the trial of this case is expected to be the first, it is not supposed that the detention of the Lord Lowther, will be much greater than is necessary to discharge her cargo.

The Lord Lowther case, after occupying the Supreme Court for three entire days, has been adjudged in favour of the prosecutor; seven prisoners have been found guilty of mutiny, and sentenced to imprisonment as follows:—

Mr. Hendley (Chief Officer) 18 months.
Mr. Niklet (Second Officer) and Mr. Hawtrey (Midshipman) six months each.

Messrs. Bliss, Lister, and Jones, (Midshipmen) a month each.

Richardson (recommended to mercy by Captain Yates) two weeks.

Messrs. Smith and Allies, third and fourth officers, with two or three others, were acquitted.

Such was the issue of this trial, which seems to have excited very considerable interest in Madras.

STATISTICS.—A circular order has been issued by the Revenue Board, directing the Collectors of districts, to supply the Medical Board, with such information as they may require, for the purpose of submitting to Government, a work in course of preparation, respecting the population, marriages, births and deaths in each collectorate.

BOMBAY.

THE ATALANTA.—The Atalanta left Bombay on the evening of the 25th ultimo, for Suez, with a mail of 12,375 letters and many passengers.

STEAM AFFAIRS.—Steam affairs progress favourably. It is now certain that the Semiramis has been got off, without having sustained such injury as precludes the hope of her being speedily fit for service again; the boilers of the small iron steamer have been safely got up; the Victoria is in a state of forwardness and the Kilkenny on her way out, so that we have a sufficiently strong phalanx.

THE EDITOR OF THE CHABOOK.—A true bill has been found at the Supreme Court, against Nekrojee Dorabjee, the Editor of the Chabook, for conspiracy, in having taken part with others in procuring the conviction, last year, of certain parties accused of stealing paper from the Times Office, who were found guilty and transported

It was alleged, that the whole of the evidence on that trial, was false, the result of a conspiracy to ruin the parties, in revenge for a private quarrel.

The Editor has since been acquitted of the charge the jury for a long time being undecided respecting the verdict to be returned, and only yielding after long confinement.

KURACHEE.—Below are some useful directions for entering the harbour of Kurachee, which may be useful to navigators. A story has been current, that Kurachee, and other places, had been retaken by the Scindeans, who had taken "heart of grace" upon the occasion.

DIRECTIONS FOR ENTERING THE HARBOUR OF KURACHEE.—Steer for the island to the Eastward of Kurachee Harbour, bearing about N. 200 E. and keeping the Pyramid a little open of South Island, till the buoy placed on the verge of the spot in 12 feet low water (a red nun buoy) is seen; when you may haul up for it, and bring the black beacon, situated N. W. by W. a quarter of a mile from the Round Tower, in one with it, which is the leading mark for the fair channel up the Harbour.

The black, or nun buoy is placed on the Northern sand, in 12 feet at low water.

A cask buoy is placed in a line from the red buoy, to Pyramid Island, which shows the width of the channel. Flood tide at the outer buoy sets across the channel, or to the N. E., but beyond the black buoy it sets fairly up the harbour.

Ebb tide takes the direction of the channel.

NEW WALLS.—Government has given orders, that six additional wells shall be sunk in the Esplanade, in anticipation of a scarcity of water this season, which indeed, the present state of the ditches and the fact of many wells having already gone dry, would appear to make a necessary precaution, as it is a wise and humane measure.

ROBBERY.—On the night of 22d instant, an attack was made on the Government Treasury at Malwan, by a body of at least, 200 men, but, the attempt was frustrated by the gallantry of a small party of the 18th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and the local police. Of the attacking party, 14 were killed, 11 wounded and 85 taken prisoners. On the side of Government, a Havildar of the 18th Regiment, was severely wounded, and has since died; one Police sepoy killed; one private of the Concan Rangers severely, and two or three town's people slightly wounded. The attack commenced soon after two, and did not cease until nearly six. The guard would, in all probability, have been surprised and overpowered, but that a peon fortunately saw the band approaching upon the preceding night, and managed to give the alarm. About 12 o'clock P. M. they advanced amidst the rocks about the Treasury hill, but waited till the moon set, before they made their attack. The troops fired with such spirit, that it was necessary to interpose, in order to prevent them exhausting their ammunition. The assailants never flinched from the front of the Treasury, sheltering themselves behind some low walls and coconut trees. It was supposed, that their plan was, to exhaust the ammunition of the troops, and then, to make a rush. At day light, however, the Rangers and town's people took them in the rear, and then they broke and fled. In the pursuit, they turned round and wounded several. The prisoners say, that they came from the Colapoor country. The town has not been attacked or plundered, but apprehensions were entertained that another attempt would be made upon the Treasury. A reinforcement had been sent for, from the detachment at Vingoria.

Advices have also been received, stating that a party of armed Cossids, carrying treasure from Bombay on account of Marwarrie merchants to Rutlam, were attacked by a band of Pindarries, about 6 miles from that city. After some fighting the Pindarries succeeded in carrying off 104 bags of 4,500 Rs. each. The Cossids had, in all, 40 bags.

BUSHIRE.—On the 7th of March, a small native vessel was dispatched from Bushire by Captain Hennell, with a packet; she arrived at Muscat and forwarded it by a vessel which left the latter port on the 20th. Intelligence had reached Bushire to the effect that Kourschid Pasha is determined to take possession of Bagrein, and that he had informed the British Resident at Bushire of his intention. The Prince of Shiraz is shortly expected at Bushire to instal the new governor, Juraul Khan, who accompanies him. Bushire is being put into a state of defence by the repairing of the walls and towers. His Majesty, the Shah, was preparing for a move after the festival of the Nowroze, but what his destination was to be, no one could precisely say. By an order of the Court, the use of three articles have been prohibited in Persia, viz. Cashmere shawls, the skins of Bokhara lambs made into caps, being valuable and much worn by the wealthier classes, and furs, which they principally procure from Russia. Military men are strictly forbidden to wear any dress except their uniform, which is similar to that of Russia.

THE NAVAL COMMANDER IN CHIEF.—His Excellency, the Naval Commander-in-Chief, sailed from Muscat on the 6th of March. He was furnished with instructions to remonstrate with Kourschid Pasha, Mehemet Ali's General, and additional communications respecting this matter, are about to be forwarded to him by the "Cruiser."

AFFAIRS IN SATTARA.—Affairs in Sattara wear a very unsettled appearance, and there must, evidently, be some change of crisis at hand. The troops are under orders to be in readiness, at a moment's warning. Appa Sahib, the Raja's brother, has placed himself under the protection of the Resident, and is encamped near the latter, with five or six tents and a Suwarree of near 100 horse. A guard of honour is supplied from our troops there.

The Raja is accused and believed to be guilty of conspiracy against his benefactors or masters, a crime which, though it led to the establishment of a powerful kingdom under his famous ancestor, would, under the circumstances in which he is placed, entitle him to forfeit the little power which he has been allowed to enjoy, and require him to be sent back to the place where he remained so long in the days of Brahman ascendancy.

MEETING OF THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—A general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bombay, presided by Mr. Richmond, was held in the office of Messrs. Ritchie, Stewart and Co., and the following resolutions were passed on the 4th instant.

1st.—That the Report now read be adopted, and that the same be printed.

2d.—That the resolution of the Provisional Committee, suspending Mr. G. Ashburner from his office of Secretary to the Committee, be approved, and that his removal from the situation from the date of the same, be confirmed.

3d.—That on the grounds of the Report of the Committee read this day, together with the letters and papers placed before this meeting, Mr. G. Ashburner and Mr. F. C. Morgan's nomination, as members of the Provisional Committee, of the Bank of Bombay, is cancelled.

4th.—That the Provisional Committee be empowered to appoint and remove their own Secretary, and to fill up vacancies in the Committee, subject to confirmation by a general meeting, and that the appointments reported to this meeting be approved and confirmed.

5th.—That the nomination of the Committee of Messrs. Brownrigg, Finlay and Nicol, to superintend your interests in England, be confirmed.

While deprecating, as this meeting does, the very unusual and highly improper line of conduct pursued by

Mr. Ashburner, as exhibited by the papers now read, it considers it incumbent upon itself, to record the high sense of obligation entertained for the services rendered by the committee to the cause of its constituency, to assure them of their unqualified support and approbation.

A COURT OF ENQUIRY.—The following is from Colombo, dated 15th March 1839

"We have got the two new Regiments out the 94th and 95th. The latter came in the "Jupiter" 74, commanded by a Master in the Navy, between whom and the Colonel, there has been a most awful kick up, and I don't know what will be the result. There is a Court of Enquiry being held now. The statement is, that the Master ordered up 40 sailors to put the Colonel in irons! for some real or supposed insult, when the Colonel ordered up 100 men with drawn bayonets, and drove them over the side; they were, in fact all but coming to bloodshed. I should think it would be a serious matter for both.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.—The news from Rangoon comes down to the 17th of March. The individual who had given himself out as the young prince, (or an individual accused of so doing) had been apprehended, and met, at the hands of the Woodouk of Rangoon, with the most brutal and diabolical treatment; after which he had his hands and feet bored, strings passed through and fastened together, and despatched in that state to the capital. He, fortunately for himself, died on the way. Troops daily poured into Rangoon from the upper country, and about 3,000 infantry and 1,000 cavalry were in the town or its neighbourhood.

The usual indifference is said to be expressed at the Burmese capital about a war with us, and the usual preparations are going on to resist us, should we be rash enough to invade the country. There is a report at Rangoon that the Woodouk of that place is in disgrace, for having evinced pusillanimity on the occasion of the late attempt at revolt, and for having expressed in his communications to Court, an unnecessary degree of fear and suspicion of the designs of the English. It is said the King laughs most heartily at all our warlike preparation, as he knows very well we cannot go to war with him, because we have not a pice left in our treasury, and we cannot get men anywhere to attack the Burmese. When reminded of all the ships and steamers so constantly arriving at Maulmain, he wears it is all make believe, and that we carry men backwards and forwards to Madras, so as to induce ignorant people to suppose we are collecting a large army. He is not to be taken in that way. It seems to be the study of the King and his courtiers, to devise means for augmenting the torments of the miserable wretches who are at their mercy. At Rangoon the Woodouk's treatment of his prisoners has been that of a brute. At the capital, the tortures are more refined, being in a great measure inflicted on the minds of the prisoners. The late Queen's brother, Wang-thayee, has been occasionally taken, for the King's amusement, to the edge of an alligator's ditch, and threatened every now and then with being thrown in, till the poor wretch fainted, and lately, the chains were taken off the legs of all the state prisoners, and they were paraded through the city, from whence they were taken to a pagoda, where one of the Queens fed them, and provided each man with a new dress and a piece of silver, after which they were all marched back again to their old quarters. Another poor man, who had been long in confinement, got some high officer to intercede for his release, when the King expressed surprise at his being still alive, and ordered his head to be taken off immediately. There was a talk of some human lives being about to be sacrificed to propitiate the Nats on the commencement of the new palace.

CHINA.

China papers to the 27th of February, have been received during the week, and intimate the total loss of another opium clipper on the west-coast—the Altaran, Captain Jackson, with a valuable cargo. The crew were saved and brought to Macao in a China boat.

The opium trade continued at a stand-still; and an opinion was daily gaining ground, that the Government would succeed in preventing the importation, or at least limiting it to a comparatively trifling quantity. In January the deliveries did not exceed 274½ chests, of which 107½ consisted of Mulwa. Prices were not quoted. It seems that all the high officers of Government had recommended the adoption of the most vigorous measures in suppression of the traffic; and one worthy, a certain Chow Teen Tseo, Superintendent-General of the transport of grain, urges the following pleasant prescription, the persual of which must have made the ears of some of our countrymen tingle not a little:—

"The first plan that we must put in force there, is, sternly to prohibit the exportation of tea and rhubarb. We must contentedly give up several myriads of revenue, in order to stop many more myriads of leakage. We must quietly stop till the foreigners come before us, and beg their lives, not daring to bring one atom of their poison to infect our country; and when we shall have put to death several tens of their ringleaders in this mischief, and cut off several hundreds of native traitors, then we may, out of compassion, open to them an end of the net, and relax our prohibitions against the export of tea and rhubarb! Still these commodities when exported afterwards, must have a limit set them, and the power to grant, or withdraw permission, must rest exclusively with us. Thus then will the foreigners be deterred from carrying into effect their dark and poisonous plans! And as for the scheme of mine, for stopping up the fountain of the evil, there will be no need to limit a year or any space of time before commencing it—we may set about it immediately."

Another Chinaman has been executed in front of the factories, for smuggling opium. A petition had been sent to the Chinese authorities, by the foreigners, remonstrating against the execution taking place in front of the factories, the only answer to which was, that the Emperor had positively commanded that the culprit should suffer in that locality. In consequence of the execution, the British merchants had requested the striking of the British flag, until reference was made to Her Majesty's Superintendent. The arrival of the Commissioner from Peking was looked forward to with anxiety, mingled with some degree of apprehension, in case the report that eight Chinese on board of a Government cruiser had been killed in attacking one of our opium vessels on the Coast should prove true—one certain, but not perhaps the only, result of which will be the entire stoppage of the whole foreign trade. The Chinese were busy in collecting munitions of war, and in addition to combustibles which had been sent down from Canton in the Government gun-boat, they had purchased, at Macao, four forty-four pound cannon, for each of which Sp. drs. one thousand were given, and it is said the Commissioner had demanded a meeting with the Governor and Senate at Macao. Under these circumstances, as might be expected, the opium trade was at a complete stand; but a few chests had been disposed of at Macao for consumption there, at 335 Sp. drs. for Patna, and Sp. drs. 280 for Malwa, under a duty of Sp. drs. 15 per chest. The Tea trade also experienced some interruption from the Tea-men holding out for higher prices than the accounts of the home market justified in purchasing at. Great distress was felt in consequence of the scarcity of money. Exchange on London 4s 11d. Freight, 4£ 10s. H. M. Sloop of war Larne, was at Macao, and expected to leave immediately.

BENGAL SALT COMPANY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the subscribers to the Bengal Salt Company, held at the Town Hall, on Saturday, May 4, 1839.

Mr. Dickens having been called to the chair,

Mr. W. Prinsep stated the circumstances under which he had become Provisional Secretary to the Acting Committee, and read the following Report:—

REPORT OF THE PROVISIONAL SECRETARY.

Upon taking charge of my late lamented brother's papers, I found the position of the Bengal Salt Company's affairs in his hands to be as follows:—

A great many signatures had been received to the subscription for shares, since the publication of the prospectus of the general scheme. Some have since been added, and the total to this date amounts to—

of Europeans,.....	1,348
of Natives,.....	703

Total.....2,051

from which must be deducted the number subscribed for by the late G. A. Prinsep..... 500

Total Shares taken.... 1,551

The application to Government for permission to conduct the Salt work, on the excise system, had been forwarded to the Court of Directors, supported by minutes of approval and recommendation.

Copies of the printed prospectus had been also sent to England by my late brother, with letters to many influential friends in London, seeking their support to the measure, and placing 1000 shares at the disposal of subscribers in England, naming Messrs. Rickards, Little and Co. as Treasurers for the time being, but reserving all right of control in the management for Directors and Officers to be appointed here.

I found that a meeting of friends and supporters to the Scheme had been held on the 6th February, for the purpose of receiving a report from the Projector of a small work in preparation at Gordah, to form a part of the general scheme hereafter, since, being in the midst of extensive Salt fields, the work itself is early capable of being increased.—A Provisional Committee had been formed, consisting of—

W. Bruce, Esq.	N. Alexander, Esq.
J. Cullen, Esq.	Jas. Colquhoun, Esq.
D. Tagore, Esq.	G. A. Prinsep, Esq.

The latter, in his capacity of Provisional Secretary, laid before the Committee the circumstances regarding the conducting of the Gordah works upon the Molungee system, pending the reference to the Home authorities regarding the excise system, but I find that the final answer has not yet come down from Government regarding the price to be allowed for the salt, a difference of opinion having existed in the Board.

The Committee adopted and passed the estimates prepared by the Projector for the present year's expenses, in trenching and clearing, making bricks, &c., amounting to Co.'s Rs. 15,000, and sanctioned the collection from the subscribers, through the Union Bank, of a first contribution of one per cent., or 10 rupees per share, which has been in the course of receipt, and the Union Bank Book shews a credit accordingly of Co.'s Rs. 12,600.

The estimate for completing this Gordah work, next year, commencing with the brick work immediately after the rains, amounts to about Co.'s Rs. 1,40,000, requiring a further contribution of about 90 per Share. It will then be capable of making about two lacks of maunds of Salt annually.

I found a young Assistant, Mr. Barrington, employed in laying out the ground, according to the plan prepared by my late brother; he has given his report upon the progress of the work with references to the map of ground plan of the same, and he is actively employed now in completing the bund, and opening a reservoir, so as to retain a large quantity of brine at a considerable strength, which is already shut in upon the surrounding fields, and thus be prepared for early action, during the following season, upon concentrated brine.

There will not exist the same difficulty in completing these works, that was felt by my late brother in the long experimental course he had to go through before he brought the other concerns at Bhaota and Narainpore into their present effective operation; for with those works in full play before him, it will not be difficult to find a man of ingenuity and activity sufficient to lay out the terraces, reservoirs and boiling-houses upon the same principle. If the season after the present rains will be quite sufficient time for the completion of such buildings as are required, so that during the following rains the boilers may be at work upon the brine which will have been run into the reservoirs, immediate measures will be taken for securing and stacking a large quantity of green wood to guard against any disappointment on this score, a circumstance that has frequently interfered with the progress of the other works, besides increasing the cost of production from the necessity of paying higher for dry wood purchased nearer to the great market of Calcutta.

Although my late brother has already laid before the public and friends of this important scheme, his estimates of the cost of production in a far more able manner than can be expected from a notice like myself, still the present meeting may look for my own opinion upon them, and I am happy to say, that the actual returns now passing under my eye from the works in operation, fully bear out the expectations of those who have been most sanguine as to results.

At Bahaghat I am paying a monthly establishment of servants, molungees, coolies and wood collectors, for 6 fires, which, with rent, amount to Co.'s Rs. 800, while the produce is about 2,800 maunds. At Narainpore the establishment is necessarily more expensive, being under European superintendence; the total, including repair, and fire-wood, amounts to Co.'s Rs. 2,500—and the produce, since the Bengallee holidays is at the rate of about 7,000 maunds, in addition to which I am gathering into the reservoirs a large quantity of concentrated brine, to continue boiling during the rains, when of course the establishment are reduced.

This meeting will naturally ask the same question that a subscriber has lately asked in the newspapers, "Is a laudable desire to keep the management out of agency hands." How are these great works to be conducted without the undivided attention of an active and successful manager, whose own interest in the results will be the best guarantee to subscribers, that the closest economy will be practised in every branch of expenditure?

My reply is, that at the works belonging to my late brother, I have found sufficient assistance to those already employed, to satisfy me that no interruption will occur to my realizing for his estate all I hoped for.

At Gordah there has been no call as yet for further assistance than the Committee have possessed in Mr. Harrington, whose activity gives me every satisfaction, but it may be worth considering whether more experience may not be required next season for completing the work, and Mr. Bamber's reply is now before the meeting, to the question put to him whether he could afford time, and upon what terms he would place his services at the command of the Committee for this purpose. This gentleman has been aiding my late brother in his Salt labor for the last two years, and I believe thoroughly understands the principles and process upon which he acted.

The whole of the papers and correspondence regarding the above detailed preparations for the great scheme being in some measure mixed with those appertaining to my brother's own affairs, I have cheerfully undertaken to act as Provisional Secretary, with a view to following up the intentions of all connected with the scheme, until the view of Government shall be made known to us, and as the present preliminary work is not of sufficient extent to afford the expence of a Secretary, I am ready to continue to give my personal aid, if desirable, to the general affairs of the Salt Company, without mixing them up in any way with the affairs of my house of business—and the circumstance of my having taken 300 shares in my own name may be some guarantee to my watchfulness over the general interests. I take this opportunity of stating, that I have followed up my late brother's correspondence with those in England likely to forward the scheme there, informing them that the lamented circumstance which has deprived the Company of services not easily replaced, will cause no relaxation in the endeavours of the subscribers in India, to carry the whole scheme into its fullest operation. I have much pleasure in laying before the meeting the first letter received by last Suez Mail, in acknowledgment of the receipt of the prospectus in London. Mr. Deans Campbell there informs us on the 15th February, that he was taking the most effectual measures for spreading far and wide the objects of the Company, and had brought it to the attention of the Chairman of the Court of Directors. No opinion, however, could of course be expected from that body until it was in possession of the sentiments of this Government; but as we know that they have been communicated favorably early in March, we may soon look for some determination to the question of whether monopoly in Salt shall at first yield to fair taxation upon private labor and enterprise. Mr. Browne Roberts, in a letter of the 19th February mentions, that this very subject had been taken up warmly at a meeting held at Glasgow on the 15th January, for the consideration of Indian affairs, the circulation of the late Projector's prospectus therefore will have taken place just at a time likely to promote its success.

WM. PRINSEP, Provisional Secy.

The following resolutions, were put to the meeting and passed unanimously.

Proposed by Mr. T. J. Taylor and seconded by Mr. T. H. Gardiner.

That the Report now read be approved and that it be printed in the newspapers, together with the names of shareholders and the number of their respective shares; and further, that the extract from a letter to the Board of Salt, from Government, dated January 30th 1839, be published for general information.

Proposed by Dwarkanauth Tagore, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Wm. Bruce, that a Report of the proceedings of this meeting, together with a list of shareholders, and the amount of respective shares held by each, be forwarded to the Government of Bengal, for submission to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors.

Proposed by Dwarkanauth Tagore, Esq., and seconded by Mr. W. Prinsep, that the Provisional Committee, appointed at a private meeting of friends, to the scheme of a Bengal Salt Company, viz.: Mr. W. Bruce, Mr. J. Cullen, Mr. N. Alexander, Mr. James Colquhoun and Bahoo Dwarkanauth Tagore, be requested to continue their services as the Standing Committee, and that Mr. Dickens be requested to become a member of such committee in the room of the lamented late Mr. George Prinsep; and further that, in consideration of the number of shares held by Mr. Dickens and the deep interest he takes in the well-being of the Company, be requested to accept the office of chairman of that body.

Proposed by Mr. J. Cullen and seconded by Mr. Philologus—

That Mr. W. Prinsep be requested to continue as Provisional Secretary, until the orders of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors be received in India, when a paid Secretary will of course be appointed, whose time and attention shall be exclusively devoted to the objects of the Company.

Proposed by Mr. T. J. Taylor and seconded by Bisanath Mooteelall.

That Messrs. Rickards, Little and Co., be confirmed as Provisional London Agents to the Company, and that the nomination to minor appointments in this country be left for the present entirely to the Committee.

Proposed by Mr. W. Prinsep and seconded by Mr. W. Bruce

That for one year from the 30th June next, (1000) one thousand shares be received for subscribers in England, and that the contribution of 10 per cent. be required to be paid to Messrs. Rickards, Little and Co. at the time of subscription.

Thanks were then unanimously voted to the Chair and the meeting broke up.

T. DICKENS, Chairman.

Copy of a letter from the late G. A. Prinsep to the Secretary to Government, General Department, dated 1st March, 1839.

Sir,—In a letter from your department to the Board of Salt, dated 30th January last, communicating the orders of Government upon my application for a license to establish a Salt work at Gordah, subject to an excise duty, instead of delivering the produce to Government for sale, of which letter a copy has been sent to me by the Board, I observed it stated that—

"His Honor in Council is unwilling to sanction the Government entering into an engagement with Mr. G. A. Prinsep on the terms offered, until the point shall have been submitted to the authorities in England. His Honor in Council, however, in forwarding the reference will state opinions by no means unfavorable to the experiment, as he is inclined to consider the plan, if capable of general adoption, as calculated to be very beneficial to the Government in a revenue point of view, and as relieving Government from troublesome details in the manufacture and provisions of the article, the interference with which is a necessary evil of the present system."

The proposed reference to the Hon'ble Court would leave the question of the possibility of a "general adoption" of the excise principle in uncertainty, were it not brought to the notice of the Hon'ble Court that an association is now forming here with that express object, and that the sanction of this Government will be solicited to construct salt works, on the general plan of my works at Narainpore, under the guarantee and for the joint account of the association alluded to, of which I beg to submit a prospectus for the information of the Hon'ble Council.

(Signed) G. A. PRINSEP.

Native Shareholders.

Shares.
Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore,.....	200	Ramdas Day,.....	2	Modosoodan Doss,...	2	Seebahander Dutt, ..	1
Prasannocomar Tagore,.....	50	Rampersaud Bhadoory	1	Sumbhat Boso,	2	Goverdhan Ghose, ..	1
Ramannauth Tagore, ..	20	Prawn Chowdory and		Motesoll Seil,.....	50	Bisambur Doss,.....	95
Chundarnath Chat- terjee,.....	10	Cossinath Chowdory,	1	Prankissen Saw,	10	Gourkissen Bannerjee,	2
Callydanth Roy,	30	Bisannauth Motesoll,	20	Sibohun Mullick,....	5	Rajnarain Pal,	2
Ragabannath Bosa,....	5	Mirza Mohamed Meah- key,.....	10	Ramchurn Mullick,...	5	Buddinat Sha,	1
Ruggaram Gossain,...	10	Prankissen Baugobee,	1	Mohischander Chat- terjee,.....	1	Beerschund Addee,....	1
Obhoychurn Banerjee,	10	Nobinchunder Bosa,	1	Ramdhun Doss,	1	Samachurn Bannerjee,	1
Radhamadub Banerjee,	35	Doorgadoss Ghose, ..	1	Isur Chatterjee,	1	Bhurubchunder Seil,	25
Rustomjee Cowasjee,	50	Sreenauth Roy,	2	Lal Mohun Sha,	2	Boloychund Day,....	5
Luckynarain Mooker- jee,.....	5	Doorgachurn Dutt, ..	10	Golukchunder Dhur,	1	Brejonat Pal,.....	1
		Gobinchunder Cur, ..	2	Anundmay Nundee, ..	2	Beharee Loll Pal,	1
		Modosoodun Chack- erbutty,	2	Sibukram Pal, ...	1	Kheturnat Seil,	20
		Ramlochun Ghose, ..	10	Modun Mohun Mittra,	1	Teencourse Sell,.....	1
				Sreekanth Bannerjee,	1	Rajkissen Pal,	15
						Debendranat Tagore,	170

European Shareholders.

Shares.
F. Augustin,.....	4	Capt. Monteith,	2	T. W. Russel,.....	10	H. G. Oxborough,....	2
N. Paliologus,.....	10	James Young,	20	E. Sandford,.....	2	W. Phillips,.....	2
T. C. Morton,.....	10	Bruce Shand and Co.,	3	T. Clark,.....	5	W. A. Barrington, ...	5
T. H. Gardiner,	2	Mrs. F. J. Ross,	3	James Maxwell,	2	R. H. Thomas,	20
James Colquhoun,	10	Miss S. A. Currie,	2	Lieut. H. Weller,	3	T. J. Taylor,	50
John Bagehaw,	10	Robert Ball,.....	5	Peter Maxwell,.....	3	H. Holroyd,.....	200
W. E. Ferguson,.....	10	T. Ostell and Co.,....	6	A. T. Smith,	1	J. D. Crauch,.....	5
James Cullen,	2	T. W. Langtry,	8	N. Alexander,.....	5	D. Templeton,	1
Lt. Col. H. L. White,	20	Mr. Lepage,.....	10	William Prinsep,	300	C. A. Verannes,	1
Wm. Barrington,	15	G. S. Hutteman,.....	8	Theodore Dickens,....	300
H. I. Lee,.....	1	T. W. Burt,	30	David Parsick,	2
Dr. Cullimore,	10	R. T. Homfray,	5	James Crouch,	1
		T. A. Heyne,	6	D. Clarke,	2

Hark., May 7.]

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office, on Wednesday, the 15th instant.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members of the Society:—

Proposed by G. Vint, Esq., and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore.—Mr. S. Smith of Calcutta.

Proposed by the Secretary, and seconded by Baboo Prasannocomar Tagore.—Mr. W. S. Smith of Calcutta.

Read 4 letters addressed to Government by the Society, and the answers received for them.

Ordered that the above correspondence with Government be published for the general information of the members.

The Secretary's letter to Government on the subject of the Sale Law, (A.)

The Government's answer to the above letter, (B.)

The Secretary's letter to Government on the subject of the use of the vernacular language in the proceedings of the Mofussil Court (C.)

The answer from Government to the above, (D.)

The letter addressed by the Society to Government complaining of the discriminating duty charged in England on Bengal tobacco (E.)

The answer from Government (F.)

The Society's letter to Government on the subject of stamp duties now levied on the Kachoolans and security bond of the village Gornatsho, &c., (G.)

The answer from Government, (H.)

Resolved that a further representation be made to Government about the use of the vernacular language, commenting on some part of its answer to the Society's former letter.

Resolved, that the letter addressed by A. Rogers, Esq. to the Society, and the answer, be published.

The letter from A. Rogers, Esq., (I.)

The Society's reply to the above, (J.)

The draft appeal against the resumption operations to the Governor-General of India in Council was laid on the table. Resolved, that it be adopted with certain alterations and additions as suggested, and be forwarded to Government with as little delay as practicable.

The following gentlemen have been elected to fill up the vacancies in the Committee, occasioned by those who go out by rotation, agreeably to the 14th rule of the Society:

T. J. Taylor, Esq., Baboo Radhaprasad Ray, and G. F. Remfry, Esq.

WM. COBB HENRY,

F. TAGORE,

Honry. Secretaries.

(A.)

F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Sir,—We are desired by the Landholders' Society to request that you will be pleased to submit the following application for the consideration of His Honor the Deputy Governor of Bengal.

The Society for some time past had it in contemplation to point out to the Government certain radical defects in the existing regulations for the sale of zemindari on account of arrears of public revenue, and for securing the rights of purchasers at public sales, as well as for the collection of rent by the zemindars and other persons of Landholders from their under tenants. But having been given to understand that the members of Government themselves had perceived these defects in the regulations from the practical operation of the system, and have ordered a modification of the law, the Society refrained from submitting to Government their sentiments on these important subjects, intending to do so when the modified act shall be published for general information.

But as the said expected regulation is yet delayed, while the injurious tendency of the present system from the defects alluded to is daily more urgently felt by the community interested in the question, we now most respectfully request that his honor will be pleased to accelerate the compilation of the said modified law, and cause it to be published, or otherwise afford an opportunity to the Society to submit their sentiments on the proposed enactment.

We have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

(Signed)

W. C. HURRY,

PROBONNOCOMAR TAGORE,

Hon'y. Secretaries.

Calcutta, 17th April, 1839.

(B.)

W. C. HURRY, Esq.,

BANOO PROBONNOCOMAR TAGORE,

Honorary Secretaries, Landholders' Society.

Revenue.—Gentlemen.—In reply to your letter of the 17th instant, I am directed by the Honorable the Deputy-Governor of Bengal to communicate, for the Society's information, that the new sale law, to which you refer, is at present under the consideration of the Supreme Government.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedt. servt.

(Signed) F. J. HALLIDAY,

Secy. to the Government of Bengal.

Fort William, the 30th April, 1839.

(C.)

F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Sir.—We are directed by the Landholders' Society to request the favor of your laying before his Honor the Deputy-Governor of Bengal, the present address, the object of which is to bring to his notice an unfavorable circumstance attending the adoption of the Bengalee language in the proceedings of these Courts, where it is the vernacular tongue.

It would be an act of supererogation on the part of the Society to support with facts and arguments, the advantages universally derivable from the use of the peculiar language of the country in the proceedings of the Courts; as it appears from the resolution published in a late number of the Calcutta Gazette, that it was after a full consideration of the benefits arising from this innovation that it was authorized to be introduced, though so cautiously, as gradually to supplant the use of a language that has prevailed nearly seven centuries, which have intervened between the commencement of the Mahomedan dominion and the present period of the British sway.

The Society, in now expressing to Government their sincere gratitude for the boon it has thus conferred, feel it incumbent upon them, as a duty which they owe to the community as well as to the Government, to state that, present used in the court proceedings, an appearance of purity, an attempt is making to substitute antiquated, obsolete, high-sounding or new composed Sanscrit terms for those Persian ones, which have been so advantageously adopted from time immemorial in all documents. Indeed these Persian words are so appropriate and so easy of application, that no attempt could ever have successfully made to introduce others to supersede them in the Bengalee language, as it at present stands constituted. The Sanscrit words, the use of which is sought to be revived, having lain dormant for so many centuries, have now necessarily become, as it were, foreign terms, whilst many a Persian expression, though actually foreign, has, by being constantly in use for so many ages together, become naturalised in the Bengalee, and now forms, as it were, a component part of that language.

The Society perceive, not without regret, that the adoption of these words is principally promoted by the Hindoo officers of the courts. With whatever apparently philological motives others might seek for the introduction of the words in question, the Mahomedan officers may very justly complain, that their fellow Hindoo officers desire their adoption, not from motives very honorable to themselves. Their object is, no doubt, to throw a great deal of difficulty in the way of the Mahomedan officers in conducting business. For these, from political and sectarian causes, the Hindoos never entertained a fellow feeling. The only effect then the objectionable system will have, will be to mislead a majority of the Hindoo and the whole body of the Mahomedan community, by keeping them in the same state of darkness in understanding the court proceedings, in which they were involved during the epoch the Persian language was used in the courts.

The Society find likewise, that a small pamphlet, in the shape of a dictionary, or rather a nomenclator, containing such Sanscrit words and phrases as are intended to be substituted for Persian ones, has just issued from the Serampore Press. This work has been edited by one Joygopal Tulokar, a Pundit of the Sanscrit College, and has, they understand, within a very short period, obtained an extensive circulation both in Calcutta and in the Mofussil, so that the words that are now used in the court proceedings, are generally taken from it, and thus a great facility is afforded to the wide dissemination of the injurious plan. Under the impression that the book has not fallen under the observation of His Honor the Deputy-Governor, we take the liberty to hand up a copy for his kind inspection.

That the very proceedings might speak for themselves, we are directed to make a respectful suggestion that His Honor will be pleased to call for a return, with a copy of a vocabulary, of a case decided some two or three months since in every Court in the Mofussil, where Bengalee has been adopted, namely, from the Munsiff, Sudder and Principal Sudder Ameen's Courts, and in these documents it will be found that the laudable intention of Government to afford facility to suitors by the abolition of the Persian language, has been considerably defeated.

The Society, anticipating that His Honor will be satisfied with the justice of the complaint, beg to submit that the only means which strikes them of eradicating the evil, is for Government to cause the preparation of a Dictionary of those terms, without reference to their origin or etymology which, as being ordinarily used by the people and intimately associated in their minds with the ideas which they express, are the best adapted to answer all purposes in the Court proceedings, and that Government may subscribe for a few hundred copies of it and circulate them in all the offices in the Mofussil, the Society, on their part, being ready, should Government so desire it, to form a committee from among themselves to afford the publisher or compiler every assistance in their power towards framing the work; as also to subscribe for a certain number of copies for distribution in the Mofussil among the landholders and members of the Society. Such a work will not only be better calculated to meet all the exigencies of the case, but, as bearing an official stamp, will possess greater authority and importance.

We have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient servants,

(Signed) W. C. HURRY,

PROBONOCOOMAR TAGORE,

Honorary Secretaries.

Calcutta, 17th April, 1839.

(D.)

To W. C. HURRY, Esq., and P. TAGORE, Esq.

Hony. Secretaries, Landholders' Society.

Indl. Dept.—Gentlemen.—I am directed by the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal, to acknowledge your letter of the 17th instant, transmitting for the inspection of His Honor, a glossary of Sanscrit terms, which you present, have since the abolition of the Persian language, been generally adopted in Court proceedings, but which, being phrases unknown to the generality of the community, only serve to mystify what the Government have been endeavouring to render plain.

Under this impression you recommend the preparation of a dictionary of those terms without reference to their origin or etymology, which, as being ordinarily used by the people, and intimately associated in their minds with the ideas which they express, are the best adopted to answer all purposes in the Court proceedings, and you go on to state that, if the Government desire it, your Society will form themselves into a Committee for the purpose of assisting in the compilation of the above mentioned work.

In reply, the Deputy-Governor directs me to state, that it gives him much pleasure to find that the Society take such a lively interest in the institutions of Government, and he is obliged by their offer of assistance; but it does not occur to His Honor that there is any present necessity for the compilation of such a work as that which you propose; should, however, the Society see fit to draw out a vocabulary of the description which they recommend, the Deputy-Governor will be happy to take its merits into consideration.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servt

(Signed) J. H. YOUNG,

Offg. Deputy Secy to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, the 30th April, 1839.

(E.)

H. F. FROST, Esq.

Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

Sir.—The Landholders' Society being convinced, that the Government of Bengal takes a lively interest in every thing connected with the prosperity of Indian agriculture, beg leave to bring to your notice an inequality of the duties in Great Britain, very unfavorable to this country. The society believes, the intention of the British Legislature is to equalize all duties on the produce of the various colonies and possessions of the Empire, and that the exception they are about to notice, has been unintentional, as the more important staple articles, such as sugar, rum and coffee, the produce of this country, have lately been put upon a perfect equality with those of the West Indies.

The only remaining article of much importance to the Agriculture of Bengal, is tobacco, on which the difference of duty amounts to a prohibition, being the same as that on foreign tobacco of vastly superior quality, or three shillings sterling per pound, whilst Canadian tobacco is admitted into England at a duty of two shillings and nine pence per pound. The value of a maund of Bengal tobacco does not usually exceed five rupees or about three half-pence per pound. The difference of duty therefore, operating against Bengal tobacco, is about two hundred per cent. upon the value, and the effect is, as might be expected, to cause its total exclusion from the English market.

The Landholder's Society beg it may be understood, that they ask for no protecting duties or exclusive privilege in favor of their produce, but merely an equality with other British possessions, though consistently with the policy which has uniformly actuated the British Government of giving encouragement to new productions, they might ask for some aid in this instance, because, although the growth of tobacco is extensive in Bengal, its preparation is but little understood by the cultivators and the quality is consequently very inferior to that in demand in the European market. It is possible that this article may be thought one of luxury and of little statistical importance; but the Landholder's Society beg leave to remark, that even at present, it affords important aid to the ryot in the preparation of his land for other crops, as it requires a careful and expensive cultivation, and that they have every reason to believe, if a foreign market were open for its consumption, that capitalists would be induced to embark their funds in this, as in other articles of produce, to the great benefit of the country.

The Society cannot avoid remarking, though it is almost superfluous to bring such a fact to the notice of Government, that the recurrence of such deplorable famines as have lately desolated this country, can only be averted by a great accession of agricultural capital, the abundance of which has in all countries the effect of equalizing the difference of seasons, and preventing those sudden fluctuations of price which while they press severely on all, are utterly destructive to the poorer classes.

The Society therefore presume to hope, that this subject will not be thought unworthy the attention of Government, and that some means may be taken for bringing it to the notice of Her Majesty's Ministers, and they beg to assure you that they are now conveying to you the sentiments of a very large body of landholders, who would readily sign a petition for this object, should it be thought requisite.

We are, Sir, your obedt. servts.

(Signed) W. C. HURRY,

PROBONOCOOMAR TAGORE,

Hony. Secretaries.

Calcutta, 30th April, 1839.

(F.)

To W. C. HURRY, Esq., and Baboo PROBONOCOOMAR TAGORE,

Sept. Dept. Customs. Gentlemen.—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, bringing to notice the difference of customs duty levied in Great Britain upon Bengal tobacco, compared with that levied upon Canadian tobacco, and soliciting that means be adopted to bring the subject to the notice of Her Majesty's Ministers.

In reply I am directed to inform you, that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce have already submitted a similar representation consequent on which the Honorable the Court of Directors have been addressed on the subject, and the President in Council has availed himself of the approaching overland mail to forward their representation on the subject for favorable consideration by the earliest opportunity.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedt. Servt.

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP.

Secy. to Govt. of India.

Council Chamber, 1st May, 1839.

(G.)

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

Sir,—With reference to your letters of the 17th July and 1st August last, on the subject of the stamp duty now leviable on the Kulolet and security bond of the village Gomastah and other zemindary servants, we are again requested to bring respectfully to the notice of His Honor the Deputy Governor of Bengal, that the severity of this tax is daily more urgently felt, particularly by that section of the community which forms a large majority of the people of Bengal, and whom the Society have the honor to represent, but in the hope of shortly being relieved from the demand, as they were led to anticipate by your letters above quoted, the Society refrained from troubling the Government any further on the question.

The proposed modified enactment having been so long delayed, the Society beg to submit that His Honor may be pleased to adopt some measures for the speedy completion of the Law in question.

We are, Sir,

Your obedient servants,

(Signed) W. C. HURRY,

PROBODHCHANDR TAGORE,

Honry. Sects.

Calcutta, 30th April 1839.

(H.)

To W. C. HURRY, Esq., and BADOO PROBODHCHANDR TAGORE.

Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, and in reply to state, that the particular item of Stamp duty objected to by the body of Landholders represented by you, has already been brought under the notice of the Legislative Council, and has been considered in the revision now in progress of the Laws relating to Stamps.

His Honor the Deputy-Governor of Bengal cannot say in this Department, when the revision in question will be completed, but your present representation will be transferred to the Legislative Department for further consideration, in connexion with the draft of Act before the Council of India on this subject.

I am, gentlemen, your obedt. servant,

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, 1st May, 1839.

(I.)

To DWARKANATH TAGORE, Esq.

President of the Zemindars Society, Calcutta.

My dear Sir,—The establishment of your Society has been hailed in this country, by every real well-wisher of India with true pleasure. A constitution like this of rank and means strengthened in various talents, cannot fail, if prudently managed, to secure weight with the Government to accelerate the amelioration of the many evils which exist in the zemindaree system, and without which prosperity and contentment cannot long move in unison in your country.

Independent, however, of the immediate objects for which you have united yourselves, other great advantages must naturally spring from your association, and I may here point out one source from which great benefits may naturally be looked for; it is the means possessed by every individual of your body to demonstrate in his own neighbourhood, the advantage likely to arise from the introduction of practical improvement in agriculture. This power alone (concluding as I do that every one of you will join cordially in exercising it) cannot fail to have the happiest effects on the condition of the ryots.

With this view I beg to hand you a copy of a letter addressed to me by Mr. G. F. Hodgkinson of Calcutta, on the methods used in Europe in the cultivation and preparation of flax. This important article of Commerce, although growing in abundance and almost spontaneously in India, is yet, from unskillful management, rendered almost unfit for foreign consumption.

The directions contained in Mr. Hodgkinson's letter are clear and brief, and if the ryots are stimulated to adopt them, it may reasonably be expected that Bengal flax will soon stand as high in this market as its indigo and sugar does at this moment.

Flax appears to me an article admirably suited to Bengal; 1st, because it requires great strength of soil; thus your churs, the soil of which is renewed annually by the deposits of the Ganges, are peculiarly adapted to its growth; 2ndly, because its preparation involves more human labour than almost any other article of trade; and 3rdly, because its value—£55 to £60 at £20 per ton, renders the expense of freight a trifling centage on the price realizable here for good flax.

Should you think the information contained in the accompanying paper likely to prove generally useful, you will, on application to Messrs. S. Smith and On, obtain any number of copies, gratis, for distribution in Bengal. I recommend this plan of circulation to be adopted, following the good example of our Christian Missionaries, who, without doubt, adopt the best human means of spreading the knowledge of their faith; by distributing tracts on it in every bazar and corner of India.

You have already in Calcutta, various societies for the concentration of useful knowledge, but these appear to me heretofore to have only accumulated, not diffused, information; I therefore recommend you to avoid their example in this respect.

I conclude by offering you my disinterested services here in the promotion of your laudable views and interests, in any way you may please to point out.

I have the honor to be, dear sirs,

Yours very faithfully,

(Signed) A. ROOPE,

Great Winchester Street, London, 22nd Jan. 1839.

(J.)

To ALEXANDER ROOKES, Esq., London.

Dear Sir,—I am directed by the Landholders' Society to thank you for your letter addressed to their President dated 22nd January last, and also for the papers relative to the cultivation of Flax which Mr. Hodgkinson has drawn up. He is, perhaps, not aware that attempts have been made, some years ago, to prepare Flax from the Bengal plant, which failed, not for want of the requisite knowledge, but on account of the extreme shortness of the fibre. The plant is now exclusively cultivated for the seed, a circumstance which has made the ryots indifferent to the length of the stalk; and having been propagated for many generations from the same seed, it is not likely that any amelioration can be effected in the variety now known in Bengal. If the Agricultural Society would import seed either from Egypt, where the plant is known to be luxuriant, or from America, which supplies the greater part of the seed sown in Ireland, there would be no difficulty in making comparative trials, and if good results were obtained, Mr. Hodgkinson's directions would no doubt be highly valuable.

The Society, nevertheless, are extremely obliged to you for the interest you take in their labours, and beg you to accept their thanks. They hope you will continue to bear them in mind, and in case any subject should occur to you, upon which they may usefully occupy themselves, you may rely upon their giving it their immediate and earnest attention. They are at present unable to avail themselves of your suggestion as to the distribution of information, to the extent that they would wish, owing to the limited state of their finances, but they hope soon to receive a much more extensive co-operation from the landholders than they have yet had, in which case their activity will assuredly be proportionate.

I remain, dear Sir, very truly yours,

(Signed) W. C. HENRY,

Hon. Secy., Landholder's Society.

Hurk. May 21.

BONDED WARE-HOUSE MEETING.

The following Resolutions were adopted yesterday, (Monday May 20th) by the Half Yearly Meeting of the Bonded Ware-House Association.

On the motion of Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Harding.—1st, That the accounts for the past half year be received as correct; and that the Director's Report be approved and recorded, and be published for general information.

On the motion of Mr. Harding, seconded by Mr. Cockerell.—2d, That the Directors be authorised to call for a further contribution of 10 per cent., or Company's rupees 50 per share, from the Proprietors, for the purposes stated in the Report.

On the motion of Mr. Stopford, seconded by Dwarkanath Tagore.—3d, That a Dividend be declared of 3 per cent. on the amount already contributed.

On the motion of Mr. Martin, seconded by Mr. Church.—4th, That this Meeting highly approve of the contemplated abolition of the drawback system, the frauds practised under which, are alike injurious to the Revenue and to the fair Trade; and that the Meeting are of opinion, that the abandonment of the reserved import duty on exportation, cannot fail to have the most beneficial influence on the commerce of this Port.

Messrs. Colquhoun and Stopford were elected Directors, instead of Messrs. Church and Macnaghten, who went out by rotation; and the thanks of the Meeting were offered to Mr. Holroyd, the Chairman.—Hurk. May 21.

Report by the Directors of the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association, submitted to a General Meeting of the Proprietors held on 20th May 1839.

We submit the Accounts of the lapsed half year, wherein you will perceive, that during that period, there have been Received.

Subscriptions.....	Co.'s Rs.	51,425	0	0
Warehouse rent.....		13,710	9	8
Interest.....		733	1	5
Company's Paper		2,066	10	8
Amount received from the United Bank, beyond the sums paid into it.....		35,947	14	9
		1,03,883	4	6

Add

Balance carried to credit of May,	1,073	4	4
Also balance of former half year placed to debit of November,.....	301	15	5
	1,375	3	9
Co.'s Rs.	1,05,258	8	3

Disbursed.

Building the Warehouses..	Co.'s Rs.	96,402	7	8
Building the Offices.....		1,131	0	0
Dead Stock.....		55	5	3
Warehouse rent.....		1,080	0	0
Interest.....		76	8	5
Charges General.....		1,000	0	1
Establishment.....		4,562	12	10
Co.'s Rs.	1,05,258	8	3

Having to pay to Government 53,500 Rs., to complete the purchase of these premises, we request your authority to call now upon the Proprietors for a contribution of 10 per cent., or 50 Rs. per share, for that purpose, and to provide funds for the progress of the building.

The Iron castings, being a complete supply of Pillars, Beams, &c., for a second range of Warehouses, have been all received, costing at home, with freight, insurance and incidental charges, £11,234, for the balance of which £1,060 Messrs. Anderson, Architects and Spier who gratuitously executed the task confided to them, have drawn on the Association a bill due on the 4th proximo.

For your further information, we place on the table longitudinal and transverse section-plans, sent out from home, of the Building to which those castings are adapted, with a recent letter from Mr Spier, shewing how well the iron work has been executed.

In connection with this topic, it is proper for us to inform you that whenever you may find it necessary or judge it expedient, to erect the range (as large as the present one) for which the iron work is designed, the masonry it is estimated, would cost, including 27 000 Rs for an arched roof resting on the columns of the iron roof beams, Co's Rs 87,000 0 0
The tank flooring probably, 75,000 0 0
And the windows and doors, 28,000 0 0

Co's Rs. 1,90 000 0 0

besides whatever expense might be necessary for putting all the iron columns and beams into their proper places.

The walls of the Warehouse now erecting, will be ready for receiving the roof beams, early next month, and by August, we expect that it will be roofed in, and that the ground story will be prepared for the reception of merchandise, and of course the second one be in a forward state. We are sensible that it is of primary importance to the welfare of the undertaking, that this building be finished soon. Whatever shall expedite its completion, may confer no small pecuniary advantage on the Society.

The bonding operations since last half yearly Meeting, have been more languid than we even then anticipated: they had reached apparently their lowest ebb by the beginning of this month. During most of that period, there prevailed in the market, a brisk demand, and quick sales.

You will find on the table, a statement of the total rent received and receivable, with the charges we place against the Account.

The total rent realized to 30th

April,	Co's Rs. 24,693 0 0
Rent subsequeently,	1,126 0 0
Add rent which will be received for periods anterior to 1st January 1889, say,	2,181 0 0
Rent leviable for January, February, March and April,	8,000 0 0

36,000 0 0

Deduct the sum of charges against the Account,

Surplus, being a fraction more than 2 per cent, on the aggregate contributions,

17,000 0 0

It rests with you to order this amount to be divided. It is small, to be sure; but let it be recollected, that it is the proceeds of storing in such temporary and limited accommodation as was obtained, at one time for all, and latterly for part of which, rents had to be borne, which rent will cease in future, on liquidation of the balance of the price of the premises, and about 2,000 Rs expended in removing goods from the hired godowns at the Export Warehouse, and re-stowing some of the godowns here which were found to have been too closely packed, besides a payment of 900 Rs. for injury to a parcel of goods, which the Society took upon itself to bear. That the position of operations may be better appreciated by those at a distance, it may not be relevant here, to specify the extent of the Establishment which is contemplated.

This is as follows:

Secretary per month,	Co's Rs. 300
Writer,	80
Porter,	6

366

The above is to be regarded as applicable to the general business.

Banyan per month,
Godown Sweeper,
2 Ushurins,	30
2 Weighing Sircars,	24
3 Assistant Sircars,	30
Temadar,	7
18 Parkundassas,	108
2 Coopers,	12
2 Coolies,	8
Office Durwan,	4-8
Sweeper,	2-8

366

thus, allowing say 48 Rs. for petty godown charges, the outlay, distinct from that for building operations, may now be taken at 800 Rs. a month.

* With a view to prepare for an early occupation of the Warehouse, as its several stories get successively finished, we lately revised the rates of rent, subjecting all to a considerable reduction. We held, that it would be better in the end, by moderate charges to have the stores filled, than to obtain an equal return from their partial occupation at higher rates of rent, for we are persuaded that an extensive experience of the advantages and conveniences of the Warehouse, is of importance to confirm the success of the undertaking.

The new table came into operation this month. Far too short a time has yet been afforded for the manifestation of any decided result, but we are not without evidence, in the recent report of certain custom, that it is already working favorably. When the public shall have had full proof of the practical advantages, direct and indirect, of employing these premises, and of the concomitant cheapness, it is reasonable to expect that the business will be of magnitude, and less liable to fluctuation.

The extent of accommodation in the old godowns which are in good condition, is cubic yards .. 11,111

1st of one story of the new Warehouse, free of the spaces between the pillars, and of the end verandahs, is 12,400

Thus each floor of the new Warehouse is capable of accommodating at least as much merchandise as the aforesaid old godowns, the rent of the goods in which, when full, amounted to about 3000 Rs. a month. Therefore, taking the new scale of rent as about 1/4 lower than that which hitherto has obtained, the new Warehouse, properly occupied, would yield 8000 Rs. a month, for a year, Co's Rs 96,000 0 0

While the existing old godowns in serviceable order, would give } 24,000 0 0
2,000 Rs. a month, or a year, .. }

Capacity of these Buildings, Rs. 1,20 000 0 0

This, we feel satisfied, is altogether a moderate calculation.

A communication will be read to you, which was lately received from the Board of Customs.

You will perceive that it is in the contemplation of Government, on the recommendation of the Board of Customs, and of the Collector, to follow the example of England, and abolish drawbacks—whereby, "in lieu" of an adjustment of duty, and levy of the 1/2 reserved as now established by law for imported goods

"when warehoused and bonded, the export should in such cases be free." The frontier duty on cotton, &c., it is right to explain here, will continue to be refunded as heretofore.

Government appears to be desirous to get rid of a process of fraud which is practised on the revenue, under the opportunities afforded by the practical operation of the drawback system: and we ought to feel well inclined to aid the views of a Government which we have found to be attentive to the representations of Trade, and not backward to grant every reasonable relief.

In assisting Government to compass its object, the fair Trader is at the same time protecting his own interest; for he must suffer, equally with Government, by the successes of the fraudulent dealer. He has, therefore, a common interest with the state, in forwarding measures calculated to suppress such dishonest practices.

The projected measure would confer a direct and undoubted boon on Commerce, in relinquishing the 1-8th of the whole import duty, at present reserved in settling the drawback on the exportation; whereas, were the measure to be foregone, the owners of such imported goods would have to continue to bear that burden. To you it must produce no inconsiderable, and an early accession of business. Should any Merchants apprehend inconvenience, (and we can anticipate no other objection,) in storing more goods here than they otherwise would desire—away from their immediate superintendence, it can be truly represented to them, that this costly structure was, under the encouragement of the Government, and with the general desire and support of the Mercantile body, got up for public warehousing purposes;—that all had, and may still have, opportunities of becoming shareholders, whether they desire to reap the profits that may be yielded, or to influence the administration of its affairs;—that the association will be satisfied with moderate profits;—and that these premises will afford superior and securer accommodation than any other godowns can furnish, and on lower terms than hitherto have prevailed among private establishments. And, it may not be too sanguine, as it is not foreign to your purpose, to add, that, whenever the returns of your business permit, you will not be slow in reducing still further, the scale of your charges, so as to consult the interest of the Merchant, and benefit trade. It will ever be our study to promote the convenience of all who may resort to the Warehouse, by every facility of arrangement and detail, within our power to introduce.

It has been mentioned to us, that some have thought the Warehouse is not kept open long enough for the convenient despatch of business. If we find this to be the case, we shall immediately represent it to the Collector, who, we doubt not, will very readily direct a later attendance of any Custom house Officer whose presence may be required.

In conclusion, we have only to observe, that we are glad of the opportunity of answering this important document, under the direct instructions of an assembly of the Proprietors.

R. H. COCKERELL.
J. WILLIS.
J. CHURCH.
J. CULLEN.
G. DOUGAL.

} Directors,

Calcutta, Bonded Ware Office, May 17, 1839.—
Hark., May 22.

PROCEEDINGS OF A MEETING OF INDIGO PLANTERS

IN TIRHOOT AND SARUN,

Held at Moozufferpore, on the 22d April, 1839.

Mr. C. Mackinnon was unanimously called to the chair.

The Secretary's Report was read, communicating the gratifying intelligence, that during the past year, only one case of dispute between two planters had come before the Committee. The Report was approved of.

The Chairman addressed the meeting and recommended adherence to the bye-laws so much calculated to preserve peace and good feeling, and so much for the interest of all parties. It was satisfactory to find that they prevented disputes which was better than any settlement of them could be after they arose.

It was then proposed that the meeting be made special, to consider the matters alluded to in the circular which called it together, requesting the presence of every member.

A letter was read from Messrs. Nowell and Co., explaining Mr. G. Tayler's reasons for withdrawing his name from the requisition. A letter was also read from Mr. Gale, expressing regret at being unable to attend. The Chairman then stated his reason for having, with others, signed a requisition, calling upon the members to attend upon the present occasion. We had for months back heard of affrays, occurring at different factories, and he thought they ought to meet, first to ascertain, if by any line of conduct on their own part, they could prevent recurrence of these disturbances. They were bound, he thought, to meet the views of Government, now no doubt directed to the improvement of the Courts, the Police, and the welfare of the natives. He recommended abstaining from breaches of the peace wherever it was possible. The Chairman then alluded to the late proclamation of the Magistrate by order of the Session Judge, which he supposed was intended to expound the law as it stood on the rescission of Clauses 2 and 3 Reg. 5 of 1830. It had, however, been greatly misunderstood, and, as there was incontrovertible proof of induced assamees to evade fulfilment of their contracts and mauiks to interfere to prevent the performance of engagements with which they had nothing to do. He, the Chairman, recommended keeping the peace in all cases, if possible, but the truth was too evident that the law now gave what was very far short of redress. If the impression concerning the proclamation which now prevailed was not done away with, much mischief would certainly ensue. Mr. Fitzgerald then rose and spoke as follows.

Mr. Chairman.—The particulars of a recent case at Singhia are already so well known to most, if not all, of you, that I think I shall best consult the wishes of this meeting, by confining myself to a brief summary of its leading features,

I beg to state, then, gentlemen, that I had been cultivating indigo in a village named Salempore, for the space of 15 years. This last Oct. the maulik or proprietor of the said village, without assigning the slightest cause of complaint or dissatisfaction against me or the factory, prohibited his ryots from fulfilling their written engagements with the latter, and of which engagements 4 years were yet unexpired. In consequence of this prohibition and the refusal of the ryots to come in and settle their accounts, there, unfortunately, ensued a very serious conflict between the maulik's people and mine; the result of which was that, besides being dispossessed of the whole of the lands in question, and having seven of my servants imprisoned for 6 months, I have been fined, in my own person and through several of my people (who, if culpable at all, must have been so, as acting under my orders) in the heavy sum of nearly 800 rupees! It was in vain, Sir, that we furnished evidence, both European and native, to prove that many of us, who were actually charged with being present at the affray, could not possibly have been there. It was equally vain that we offered to put in the ryots' novist-kuuns, or written contracts, to establish our lawful right to, and lien on, the land in dispute. The one was disbelieved, and the other totally rejected. Sir; it is worthy of remark that, at a very early stage of this unfortunate transaction, I addressed our magistrate a letter, wherein I begged to point out to him the serious consequences that were likely to ensue from the maulik's strange and unlawful conduct. Several days were allowed to elapse before any notice was taken, either of my communication or of the durkaust that accompanied it. In the meantime, the maulik and his ryots, taking advantage of the pause, sowed the whole of the lands in ruddy, and I was dispossessed of every cottah of them! I should have observed, before, Sir, that whilst we were seeking redress in the magistrate's court, one of the ryots, himself a defaulter, went in, also, at the instigation of his maulik, and declared, I believe on oath, that some of my people had destroyed a field of wheat belonging to him. My zilladar, being present at the time, strongly protested against the truth of the accusation, and entreated the magistrate to depute an Aumren or some other person to investigate the affair, when it would be clearly proved, that so far from the man's land being sown at all, it was, at that moment, a foot deep in water. Nothing of the sort was done! On the contrary, my zilladar was bound down in a moochulka or penalty bond of 200 rupees not to go near the lands in question; and this, on the single and unsupported assertion of a man, who was one of the first to violate his engagements. In short, Sir, it seemed just and proper to our magistrate, from the first to the last of this unfortunate transaction, to tie up the hands of one party and leave the other at perfect liberty to revel in the wrong they had done me! Would you believe it, gentlemen, that whilst I on the one side, have been so heavily fined and punished, the maulik, he who avowed that he forbid his ryots to cultivate indigo—he who, it is notorious to thousands around me, was really the instigator and ringleader of the affray that subsequently ensued, should be allowed to escape with perfect impunity? and yet such is positively the fact. But you will naturally ask, was there no appeal? Yes, Sir, there was. I appealed to the Sessions Judge of this district, who not only confirmed the magistrate's decision, but, what is more, ordered a proclamation to be issued expressly for the occasion, and to the nature and tendency of which I should beg to call your attention, by and by. In the meantime, I trust you will permit me to express my sincere regret, that I should have been in any manner, however remote, the unhappy, though, I trust you will believe me, the unwilling, cause of our present troubles. Those among you who happen to know me, will, I think, readily credit me, when I declare that if there be one feeling dearer to my heart than another, it is to live in peace, charity and good-will towards all men, be their station in life high or low, be their condition rich or poor. To such as do not know me, I would simply say, I beseech you wait for some better proof, than has yet been furnished, ere you consent to join the authorities here and brand and proclaim me, as they have done, a reckless oppressor.

In a line of life, Sir, so peculiarly exposed, as ours is, to daily, I might almost say to hourly, impositions, to more than ordinary struggles of conflicting interests, and requiring the exercise of a temper and forbearance almost superhuman, can it be wondered at that we should sometimes err? Gentlemen; I address myself particularly to those among you who have studied the native character well and long, who have had opportunities, beyond most people in the country, of observing how much life, property, and that which, to some men, is dearer than either, their good name, are at the mercy of what may be justly termed an organized system of fraud and perjury, the most reckless and unprincipled of which the world, bad as it is said to be, has not hitherto furnished any parallel; and I confidently ask you whether one of our body, who has contrived to pass nearly 30 years of so severe an ordeal, with but a single stain upon his character, and that most unjustly inflicted, can be the desperate violator of law and justice it has pleased our local masters to proclaim him to the world by beat of drum, and through him, every planter in this once happy but now wretchedly distracted district.

But, Sir, were I the only sufferer from this miserably altered state of things, I think I may safely say that I should have been content to suffer on in silence. When I behold, however, this numerously attended meeting, I require little further proof to assure me, that the evils of which we are met to complain, so far from being confined to any particular spot or person, are wide-spread, deep, and extensively general. Sir; I purposely forbear from any allusion to passing events, with which you must be all, more or less, familiar, but which, happily, are foreign to the objects of this meeting; but I will venture to appeal to every one of you whether, in your hearts, you really think it at all likely, that we should have been assembled here to-day, were it not for the existence of a masked feeling against us in certain quarters; and which I do not hesitate to declare, has gone far to poison the very sources of justice, and converted all that was once peaceful and happy, into a perfect sink of anarchy and distrust. If you should entertain the slightest doubts as to the existence of some such feeling, let me entreat you to take a recent proclamation in hand, peruse it attentively, and if all such doubts do not leave you in an instant, you are, certainly, the least open to conviction of any set of men I know. But be that as it may, I once more earnestly appeal to you, to say whether you honestly and conscientiously believe it possible, that any such proclamation as the one in question could have emanated from a sincere desire to preserve the peace, harmony and good order of this unfortunate district. I ask you to call to mind (however bitter the contrast which such a retrospect must present to some, at least, if not all, of you) whether anything of the sort was ever thought of in the days of a Braddon, a Fleming, a Dushwood, or a Moore; of a Prinsep, a Brown, a Campbell, or a Wilkinson? and if not, what, in the name of all that is just and consistent, could have rendered it necessary now? Alas! Sir, it is too true, that death has robbed us of the testimony of some of the distinguished public officers whose names I have just enumerated; but, fortunately for us, others yet remain, and to whom, I think, we may confidently appeal, in this our hour of heavy trial, to attest, that the Tirhoot planter never was, that he can scarcely ever be, the desperate outlaw which their successors here have so industriously endeavoured to proclaim him to the world.

But to return, Sir, to the proclamation; this famous emanation of Mofussil legislation, announces to the district. First, that a certain Regulation, viz., V. of 1830, is no longer in existence. A regulation, be it remembered, that had the support and advocacy of almost every Civilian in the service and ways distinguished for his worth, talents, or exertions for the good of the country. Secondly, that it is perfectly optional with the ryots to fulfil their Indigo engagements, or not, just as it may suit their convenience. Lastly, that no such engagements can be considered valid, unless they have had the previous sanction and concurrence of their Mauliks or Zameendars. Such, Sir, if rightly interpreted to me, is the purport of this extraordinary "state paper." I say, Sir, if rightly interpreted, for I find it most difficult to believe that its framers could have contemplated any thing so contrary to law, justice, or common sense! But, Sir, of this I am certain, and I think several of you will vouch for the fact, that the impressions now prevailing in the minds of the natives, with respect to the intent and meaning of the proclamation, are, word for word, precisely such as I have stated. Now, Sir, as to the extinction of Reg. V. of 1830, peace to its manes! the melancholy fact being already too notorious to every body in the district, its announcement at such a crisis, must have been purely a labor of love. But, to tell a race of men, never very remarkable, I suspect, for too close an adherence to moral obligations of any sort, that they are at liberty to set their engagements at naught, whenever it may suit their fancy or convenience, I think you will agree with me, is one of the oddest recipes for preserving the peace of a district that was ever heard of! But that is not all; mark. I pray you, gentlemen, with what admirable consistency, it consigns those very people, so late the objects of its especial pity and protection, in one fell swoop to the tender mercies of their landlords, to a condition of absolute vassalage, in fact, infinitely more galling than any that the history of the most despotic country can present us with in its worst and blackest pages.

Sir; you must have remarked how much it has become the fashion of late in certain quarters, to identify the Indigo planter, and the oppressor, as one and the same being. We are charged, gentlemen, with oppressing the very people upon whose industry, exertions, and good will, we are mainly dependant for our daily bread! Was there ever an accusation more gross and monstrous than this? and yet it is very possible that our local masters may obtain converts to the opinion, as well as to the belief, that in the memorable instance of the proclamation to which I have already so repeatedly called your attention, they sought for nothing but the good and prosperity of the district confided to their charge! But, Sir, to suppose that our respected rulers are among the number of such converts,—that such men as Lord Auckland and Colonel Morison should consent to abandon some millions of souls to the appalling hazards of so senseless a sample of the law of equity and good conscience, would be to belie their well-known love of justice and benevolence, and offer them the heaviest insult they could possibly receive at our or any other hands!

Sir, I have to apologize for the great length of these remarks, and thank you and this meeting for the kind and considerate attention with which you have heard me out. But, ere I conclude, I would earnestly entreat you, one and all, to join heart and hand, in an unanimous, firm, but, at the same time, humble and respectful appeal to Government, for such relief from present and impending evils, as, in its wisdom, it may be graciously pleased to accord to us.

Moved by Mr. Fitzgerald, and seconded by Mr. Crump:—That this meeting unanimously address a firm but humble and respectful appeal to Government, for such relief, from present and impending evils, as, in its wisdom it may be graciously pleased to accord to us.

Mr. Crump then moved, and it was seconded by Mr. Thomson, that the draft of a petition which had been prepared by certain parties interested in Indigo cultivation, and in the hands of the Secretary, should be read to the meeting. It was read and approved of.

Mr. Muirhead proposed, that more stress should be laid in the petition, on the bias existing against the planter in the Court.

On this being put from the chair, an animated discussion arose. The feeling seemed pretty general as to the existence of a bias, but some, along with the chairman, assigned the evils more to the state of the Courts. The majority of the meeting felt, that even if the bias did exist, it had better not be prominently mentioned in the petition, and Mr. Muirhead's motion was negatived.

Mr. Shearman then proposed, and it was seconded by Mr. Anderson: That Government be petitioned to direct the Sudder Dewanny, to order the Local Courts to give a fair hearing to our Mookteers, and to receive verbal and documentary evidence in our cases; and that instances be forwarded, to shew that the contrary has been the practice in the Fouzdarry Court at Moorzufferepore.

On this question, much interesting discussion took place. Instances in which gentlemen present supposed their cases were prejudiced, were mentioned by them. The difference of opinion was as to the propriety of forwarding cases in point. The motion was carried.

Other matters of grievance were then discussed, with the opinion of the parties who brought them forward, that they should be brought to the notice of Government, for the feeling seemed very general, that Government was fully disposed to redress grievances when convinced of their reality. The objection to the Local Courts was only objected to, because the Courts themselves were so defective, and Mr. Crump, made some excellent remarks upon the necessity of giving good and specific rules of practice to the Courts, which would leave less to the whim or discretion of individuals. He instanced that at the present time, factory servants were refused as evidence in the Court, though to such cases they were of all others most likely to be fully cognizant, nor had they ever before been objected to, and was their evidence worse than that of those who usually appear on the other side? The fearful amount of perjury known to have been committed in recent cases, was also alluded to, and it was noticed, that when such was palpable, examples ought to be made to deter others. In fact, the universal disregard of truth and the carelessness of swearing to falsehoods, was admitted by all, and considered a prominent evil in the Courts. Mr. Drummond moved, that this subject should be alluded to in the petition, and it was carried as follows.

Moved by Mr. Drummond, and seconded by Mr. Baker:—That some notice be taken of the gross perjury daily taking place in the Fouzdary Court, and on which perjured evidence, planters and their servants have lately been summoned to Court, from their factories, on false charges, much to the detriment of their business, and no punishment inflicted on those who so perjured themselves.

Mr. Anderson complained of the uncertainty of the Law concerning stamps, and of the decisions concerning them. He stated, that if we had construed the stamp act erroneously, we had done so, in common with the Judges and Magistrates who had formerly presided in the Moorzufferepore Courts. That it was hard that new views, on this matter, should nullify numbers of our engagements. That any stamps Government required, might of course be paid in future, but he thought Government ought to be petitioned against the present Court law having retrospective effect. All he wished for was, that the new light, which had broken in on the Moorzufferepore authorities, should not sh ne back, and nullify hundreds of engagements, which were on the proper stamp, according to the law actually prevailing in the Tirhoot Courts, when they were executed.

It was then moved by Mr. Muirhead and seconded by Mr. Cooke —That as some points seem to have been inadvertently omitted in the petition, a committee shall be appointed to add to it, what in their judgment may seem fit and proper.

The following gentlemen were nominated as the committee, and it was proposed and carried, that three should form a quorum Messrs G. Tayler, A. Anderson, H. Fitzgerald, S. Johnson, H. Hill, D. Brown, B. Muirhead, C. Mackinnon and D. R. Crawford.

The Chairman thanked the meeting for the orderly manner in which they had conducted the proceedings, passing the resolutions first and debating them tooth and nail afterwards. He then left the chair.

Mr Crump moved that the thanks of the meeting be offered to the chairman, for his impartial and patient conduct, which was carried unanimously. —Murkaru, May 9.

MEETING OF SUBSCRIBERS TO THE BENGAL BRANCH ASSAM COMPANY.

At a meeting of the Subscribers to the Bengal Branch Assam Company, held at the Office of Messrs Carr, Tagore and Co. on the 30th of May, 63 of the Subscribers being present.

Mr. Pattle proposed that Mr. Dickens do take the chair, which was carried.

The Chairman read the resolutions of the meeting of the preliminary committee held on 23d May 1839, as follows —

At a Meeting of the preliminary Committee on Thursday 23rd May 1839, the past proceedings and correspondence having been read, it was resolved pursuant to the arrangement, made between the Agents appointed from London by the Assam Company, and the Association already formed in Bengal for a future junction of interests.

That the Bengal Tea Association, be henceforth called the Bengal Branch Assam Company.

That a Draft be prepared from the proceedings of the London Committee of the plan for constituting this Company as much as possible in accordance with the resolutions passed by them.

That lists of Subscribers be correctly enrolled and notice circulated to them

That a Special General Meeting of all the Proprietors be called at the Office of Carr, Tagore and Co. on Thursday the 30th May, at eleven o'clock, for the purpose of adopting the resolutions of the London Company, and for the purpose of finally establishing an operative constitution for this association.

The Chairman then suggested that the past proceedings and correspondence, should, in substance, be read to the meeting, as many members were, like himself, ignorant of what had been done.

Proposed by Mr. Cockerell and adopted.

That Mr. W. Prinsep be requested to take down the proceedings of this meeting, and that the past proceedings be read by him, beginning in chronological order and ending up to the period of the junction of the two companies, when he would proceed with the proceedings of the London Committee.

Mr W. Prinsep, explaining that his report would embrace every thing in fewer words than the actual correspondence that had passed, read the following report, drawn up as Provisional Secretary of the former Bengal Tea Association.

REPORT OF THE PROVISIONAL SECRETARY.

In the month of February last, a body of capitalists agreed to form a private association upon a capital of ten lakhs of rupees under the name of the Bengal Tea Association, for the purpose of carrying out extensively, the experiments which Government had commenced in Assam for the production of Tea. In furtherance of their object, I accordingly sought, through his Private Secretary, Mr. Colvin, for the opinion of Lord Auckland upon the making over to private enterprise of a scheme which, having been proved even upon their small trial unsuccessful was no longer an object worthy of the pursuit of a Government avowedly not bent upon trading pursuits. The reply received from Mr. Secretary Colvin, expressed his Lordship's favorable views of the project provided no exclusive rights in land nor privileges tending towards a monopoly were sought or asked for. His Lordship at once addressed a minute upon this subject, expressly to prevent any delays that might occur in the necessity for references of the Bengal Government to himself, but unfavorable circumstances needful to be referred to me prevented this subject from being immediately followed up by the association.

In April, however, I addressed a letter to Government through Mr Acting Secretary Grant, applying, on the part of this association for the transfer to private enterprise, of the means and appurtenances employed in their experiment, which with the capital offering, might be converted immediately into an important export trade for Bengal. A few days only after this application had gone in to Government, Messrs Cockerell and Co. and Messrs Boyd and Co received, by the overland mail, orders from a company formed in London, under the title of the Assam Company, upon a capital of £500,000 in shares of £50 each, to proceed as their Agents to open a subscription in Bengal for 2 000 shares as a portion of that capital. These gentlemen, finding an association already formed, and in active operation upon the very same amount of capital, made overtures to that association for a junction of interests, which after due consideration, were accepted by that body, with a stipulation merely that the direction in this country was imperatively to be entirely independent, and that for the purpose of drawing together as much as possible the two Committees of Direction, seats in the general direction at home were to be given preferentially to retiring members from this country, who might be duly qualified in the proportion that the Bengal shares bore to the London subscription. The agents for the London Company possessing extensive powers from the committee at home, accepted of these terms, and as far as within their power bound the London Company to them. The Bengal Association, upon receiving their communication to this effect, agreed to change their designation to that of the London Company, and to adopt, as far as possible, the resolutions of that body, making over to those agents at the same time 600 of the shares they had already appropriated in their own body, so as to include them and their friends in the joint arrangement, according to the wishes expressed by the London Company. Upon the completion of this measure, I immediately addressed Government again through Mr. Acting Secretary Grant, informing him of this important circumstance, and trusting that the junction of such interests as were now combined, would induce His Honor in Council to consider that no better guarantee could be given to the Government of Bengal, for the early establishment of this important trade upon a bold and energetic scale, should they think fit at once to make over the means they possessed to the Company, now in action.

No answer has yet been received from Government, but having prayed for an early notice, it is hoped that the question is under their immediate consideration.

In the mean time, letters have been addressed by me to Captain Jenkins in Assam, and also to Mr. Bruce, the Uncovenanted Superintendent. To the latter no answer has yet been received; to the former Captain Jenkins has replied, that there is an unlimited field for such operations as were contemplated—abundance of Tea plants, in a country, to use his own expression, flowing with milk and honey; provisions were abundant and easily procured, and that all that was required to bring forth the resources of that rich country, was labor and capital. He further states that there exist at this time plants in cultivation capable of yielding 100,000 lb. of Tea, if means were supplied of manipulation. Coolies were scantily procurable from the neighbourhood, but were expected to come in more freely as our measures advanced.

Applications have been made by me in several quarters for supplying the deficiency of labor, by procuring gangs of families on easy terms to settle in that country; but as yet nothing decisive has of course been done, awaiting the orders of the general meeting of proprietors. I have likewise written to Singapore to procure Chinese Artizans, who may be acquainted with the details of the Tea manufacture, and hope for success in this important point.

W. PAINTEP. Provisional Secretary.

Mr. Cockerell, as Agent for the Assam Company, here followed by reading the proceedings of the London Committee.

Document No. 1.—A letter signed by 16 houses of business and others to the Court of Directors, requesting them to furnish their Agent, Mr. Walter Prideaux, with all information regarding their experimental Tea cultivation.

No. 2.—Meeting of Merchants on 12th February 1839, who resolve to form a provisional Committee consisting of 18 gentlemen to procure further information and report to a general meeting and appointing Mr. W. Prideaux Secretary.

No. 3.—Proceedings of the Provisional Committee on 13th February 1839, resolving upon a deputation to wait upon the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors, to learn their intentions with regard to parting with their Tea Establishments, and also to giving grants of Land in Assam.

No. 4.—Minute of the conversation between the deputation and the Chairman of the Court of Directors, shewing that all documentary information had been submitted to Parliament and would be duly found in print. That the Court would recommend the Bengal Government to encourage any capitalists who might apply for grants of Land in Assam. That it was not the intention of the East India Company to retain the Tea Establishments, but that it would be recommended to the Bengal Government to give it up to the most influential and respectable body who might apply for it.

No. 5.—Mr. Secretary Melville's official reply to Mr. Prideaux, much to the same purpose.

No. 6.—Proceedings of the Provisional Committee on 14th February 1839, forming the Assam Company and fixing the capital at £500,000 in 10,000 shares of £50 each, 2,000 to be allotted for India.

No. 7.—Meeting on the 15th February of parties interested in this object, to confirm the measures of the Provisional Committee, and reappointing them permanently, as well as the Secretary.

No. 8.—Meeting of the Committee of the Assam Company to determine upon instructions to the Agents in Calcutta, and appointing Cockerell and Co., and Boyd and Co.

No. 9.—Instructions to the Agents, dated 16th February, to take all necessary measures to follow up the wishes of the Company for procuring lands, &c. &c., and to fill up the subscription of the 2000 shares allotted to Bengal.

No. 10.—Proceedings of the Committee on 20th and 28th February, 5th and 15th March, fixing the amount of first deposit per share at £2—and preparing a prospectus of the Company recommending a memorial to the Court of Directors, praying for an act of incorporation and fixing the outline of the constitution of the Company.

No. 11.—Letter from Mr. Secretary Prideaux, detailing more fully the wishes of the Company to their Agents, and enclosing bills on the Bengal Government for £5,000, to be appropriated to the objects of the enterprise.

Mr. Cockerell having read these papers, proceeded to address the meeting and explained the motives and steps which led to the junction of the Bengal Tea Association with the Assam Company, and his views of the manner in which that association had accepted of the shares offered by the Assam Company through their Agents in Calcutta.

Mr. W. Prinsep explained the views entertained by the Members of the Association for which he had acted, in their wish to retain to the Indian body a separate existence and independent management from that in London. After a good deal of discussion, it was moved by Mr. Cockerell, and seconded by Mr. Harding,

That the resolutions of the London Company, as read by him, be adopted for our guidance.

Mr. Wm. Prinsep, after stating his reasons for considering that it was very important to define the nature of the existence of the Indian Company before going into resolutions that were to form the ground work of its constitution, moved as an amendment,

That previous to adopting the resolutions referred to, the meeting shall decide whether the junction of the two bodies formed in London and in Calcutta, is a perfect one or depending upon after measures from the London proprietors.

After much discussion this amendment was withdrawn, and Mr. W. Prinsep substituted the following amendment.

That this meeting declare, that in joining with the London Company, under the same designation as a Branch Company, they retain their separate existence and independent management.

This amendment being put and negatived, Mr. P. O'Hanlon moved the following amendment.

That we the Bengal shareholders form a junction with the London association, called the Assam Company.

This was after some discussion withdrawn, when Mr. Parker moved the following amendment.

That we, the subscribers to the Bengal Tea Association, do form a junction with the London Company, on condition that the Local management be conducted by a Committee of Directors to be elected exclusively in this country.

This being carried by a large majority, Mr. Cockerell then again moved the original resolution, which was carried by a large majority, and we proceed with the resolutions seriatim.

Resolutions of the London Committee of 5th March, 1839.

1st.—That 25 shares be the qualification for a Director.

Carried unanimously.

2d.—That no person having less than 5, and having held shares by purchase or transfer for less than 12 months, shall have a vote in this company.

Carried unanimously.

3d.—That the holders of 5 shares, and under 20 shares, shall have one vote; the holders of 20 shares and under 50, two votes; the holders of 50 shares and under 100, three votes; and the holder of 100 shares and upwards, 4 votes.

Carried unanimously.

4th.—That no shareholder shall vote by proxy whether in Great Britain or in India.

Carried unanimously.

It was then moved by Mr. Jas. Pattle and seconded by Capt. T. J. Taylor, and carried unanimously,

That a Committee of nine gentlemen, duly qualified, be requested to act as Directors in India, of which number three at all times to form a quorum.

Moved by Mr. E. Harding, seconded by Mr. Jas. Church and carried unanimously,

That the following gentlemen be elected as Directors for the following year:

T. Dickens,	Jas. Colquhoun,
W. Prinsep,	G. F. Remfry,
Mooteeloll Seal,	Major Becher,
J. Becher,	W. R. Young.
R. H. Cockerell,

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Woolaston,

That Mr. W. Prinsep be requested to act as Honorary and Provisional Secretary.

Mr. Pattle stated his opinion, that it would be better to proceed at once and elect such officers as might be required for a business of this magnitude and importance; but the impression of the meeting being understood to favor the customary method of the recommendations for such appointments being brought up to them by the Committee of Direction, Mr. Pattle waived his objections, and the resolution was carried, Mr. W. Prinsep signifying his assent to act with such assistance as he might require.

Moved by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, seconded by Mr. T. H. Gardiner, and carried unanimously.

That the parity of exchange for establishing the equal value of the London and the Calcutta shares, be assumed to be two shillings per rupee.

Moved by Mr. W. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. George Rogers, and carried unanimously.

That the Union Bank be the Treasury for the Company, and that all checks upon it for the necessary expenditure be signed by two of the Directors upon the countersignature of the Secretary.

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. H. Holroyd.

That in accordance with the London Resolution the shareholders in India be immediately called upon to pay into the Union Bank the first contribution of £2 or twenty rupees per share.

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Church, and carried unanimously.

That the Directors lose no time in applying to this Government for an act of incorporation for the Assam Company, with a limit to the liability of shareholders, and duly setting forth the importance of the object they have in view, and the magnitude of the capital subscribed.

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. W. Prinsep, and carried unanimously.

That the Directors do furnish Government with a copy of the present proceedings, and proceed to follow up the application already before them, for the transfer of the Tea tracts, means, appurtenances and other facilities at present in the hands of their experimental committee, and praying them likewise to give an early decision upon the terms upon which they will grant to this Company, such further tracts of land as may be required.

Moved by Mr. W. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. C. K. Robison, and carried unanimously.

That all past proceedings whether by the Provisional Secretary of the Bengal Tea Association, or the agents for the London Proprietors of the Assam Company, be confirmed and recorded as the preliminary proceedings of the Bengal Branch Assam Company.

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Harding, and carried by acclamation.

That the thanks of this meeting be given to Mr. Dickens for his able and impartial conduct in the chair

T. DICKENS, Chairman.

CORRECTED LIST OF SHAREHOLDERS.

James Pattle, 100	James Young, 30
Dwarkanauth Tagore, 100	Richard Walker, . . . 30
Mooteeloll Seal, . . . 100	C. Cameron, 30
T. Dickens, 100	P. C. Tagore, 30
Capt. T. J. Taylor, . . 100	Major Becher, 25
William Carr, 100	John Carr, 25
William Prinsep, . . . 100	D. M. Gordon, 25
James Colquhoun, . . 100	A. S. de H. Laspent, . . 25
James Gullen, 80	C. E. Newcomen, 25
Geo. Lay, 50	G. F. Remfry, 25
J. Becher, 50	C. Fagan, 25
W. R. Young, 50	A. D. McLeod, 25
H. Holroyd, 50	E. C. Ravenshaw, 20
H. M. Parker, 50	Ramanauth Tagore, . . . 20
H. T. Prinsep, 50	J. W. McLeod, 20
Capt. R. H. Cockerell, 50	Samuel Smith, 10
William Martin, . . . 50	T. H. Gardiner, 10
James Church, 50	William Turner, 10
E. Harding, 50	J. Licwellyn, 10

D. Elliot,.....	10	J. M. Dove,.....	5	R. Scott Thomson,...	5	F. K. Crowbie,.....	5
Gen. Collier,.....	10	Koonjoo B. Mitter,...	5	George Rogers,	5	R. Thomas,	5
George Shearwood, ..	9	Gourmohun Gossain, ..	5	J. C. C. Sutherland, ..	5	Thos. Bracken, ...	5
Cpt. Dashwood,	5	J. S. Stepford,.....	5	E. Garstin,.....	5	W. H. Raleigh,...	5
Raja Radakant Deb,...	5	Capt. W. Barrington, ..	5	J. Calder,	5	Rustomjee Cowasjee,	5
Hajjee Isphahanee, ..	5	J. Pittar, junior,	5	F. Bailey,	5	Dr. Grant,	5
P. O'Hanlon,	5	R. J. Lattey,	5	W. C. Hurry,	5	Dr. Spry,.....	5
R. Chambers,	5	H. Burkinyoung	5	Jno. Jenkins,	5	Bisnonat Mootceloll,	5
C. K. Robinson,	5	C. J. Burkinyoung, ..	5	Chas. Deverinnee, ..	5	Joseph Hayes,	1
R. S. Homfray,	5	M. Woollaston,	5

Hurk., May 31.]

MEETING OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a monthly meeting of the Proprietors of, and Subscribers to, the Calcutta Public Library, held at the Library Room on the 11th May.

H. M. PARKER, Esq., in the Chair.

Read a letter from W. Earle, Esq., of the 11th instant, submitting the following suggestion to the consideration of the meeting. 'Whether it would not be advantageous, both to the Society and the public to permit proprietors and subscribers to nominate strangers and non-residents visiting Calcutta (by a ticket duly signed) to the right of freely visiting the Library and of reading in it, for a period not exceeding three months, such books, periodicals, and newspapers as remain there, not being actually required by the outside proprietors and subscribers.

The Librarian was directed to inform Mr. Earle, that he (the Librarian) has the discretionary power with respect to the admission of such persons as may wish to avail themselves of the benefits of the institution within its walls, for such period as may be thought proper, in accordance with a rule already existing to that effect.

Note.—The Library is open to any one desirous of visiting it. Should any poor student or stranger wish to read within its walls, he is requested to apply to the Librarian, who is authorized to grant tickets of admission.

The following report was then submitted and passed :

Books Bought.

Divinity.

Chalmer's Works, vol. 13, post, 8vo.
Taylor's Illustrations of the Bible, from the Monuments of Egypt, post, 8vo.

Intellectual and Moral Philosophy.

Abercrombie's Culture and Discipline of the Mind, 12mo.

Medicine, Surgery, &c.

Duchatelet's Hygiene Publique ou Memoires, 2 vols. 8vo.

Prastitution dans La Ville de Paris, 2 vols. 8vo.

Roget on Physiology and Phrenology, 2 vols. post, 8vo.

Smith's Philosophy of Health, 3 vols. 12mo.

Arts and Sciences.

Jackson's Course of Military Surveying, 8vo.
Jameson's Mechanics of Fluids, 8vo.
Papers connected with the duties of Royal Engineers, 2 vols. 8vo.

Sim's Sætic Planography, 4to.

Stevensou's Civil Engineering in North America, 8vo.

Trigonometrical Survey of the Maldiv Islands.

Tredgold's Steam Engine by Woulhouse, part 2nd, 4to.

History, Biography, Voyages, &c. E. I. Affairs.

Bennett's New South Wales, 2 vols. 8vo.

Blagdon's Brief History of India, 8vo.

Butler's Life by Barlett, 8vo.

Chatham's Correspondence, vol. 2nd, 8vo.

Conolly's Overland Journey, 2 vols. 8vo (a new edition.)

Forbes' Oriental Memoirs, 2 vols. 8vo. (a new edition.)

Fraser's Journey to Persia, 2 vols. 8vo.

Gouger's North Australia, 12mo.

Mahon's History of England, vols. 2nd and 3rd, 8vo.

Marshman's History of Bengal, 12mo.

Matthew's Life, 2 vols. 8vo.

Maitland's Edition of Gibbon's Roman Empire, 2nd, 8th, 9th and 10th vols. 8vo.

Papers relating to E. J. A. Regulations passed by the Government of Bengal, Fort St. George and Bombay from 1832-1836, folio.

Carnatic and Tanjore Commissions, folio.

Postan's Cutch, 8vo.

Rosa's memoirs of admiral Lord de Saumarez, 2 vols. 8vo.

Scott's Excursions in Ronda and Granada, 2 vols. 8vo.

Washington's life by J. Sparks, 2 vols. 8vo.

Poetry.

Parker's Daughters of Immortality, 8vo.

Natural History.

Brown's Illustrations of the American Ornithology, folio.

Johnson's History of British Zoophytes, 8vo.

Law, Finance, &c.

Gilbert's History of Banking in North America, 8vo.

Report on Transportation, folio.

Prose Works of Imagination.

Rob of the Bowl, 3 vols. post, 8vo.

Cogitations of a Vagabond, post, 8vo.

Cooper's Effingham, 3 vols. post, 8vo.

Grant's Travels in town, 2 vols. post, 8vo.

Edgeworth's Novels and Tales, 18 vols. 12mo.

James Hugonote, 3 vols. post, 8vo.

Jameson's Winter Studies in Canada, 3 vols. post, 8vo.

Peter Pilgrim, 2 vols. post, 8vo.

Scrope's Art of Deer Stalking, 8vo.
 Standard Novels, Last Days of Pompeii, 12mo.
 ----- Helen, 12mo.
 Trollope's Widow Barnaby, 3 vols. post, 8vo.
 ----- Edingham Hazard, 1st part.

Miscellaneous.

Asiatic Researches, 7 vols. 4to.
 Burke's Commoners, 4th vol.
 Encyclopædia Britannica, pp. 104 and 105.
 Gladstone on the State, its Relations with the Church, 8vo.
 Lardner's Cab. Cy.—Morgan on Probabilities, 8vo.
 ----- Denham's History of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, 8vo.
 Report on the Establishment of a Court of Judicature in China, folio.
 ----- on the present state of New Zealand, folio.
 Sinclair's Modern Accomplishments, 8vo.

Books Presented.

From J. P. Grant, Esq.—Appendix to the Report of the Prison Discipline Committee, 4to.
 From W. P. Grant, Esq.—Mahabharat, vols. 2d and 3d, 4to. Rajah Taungnee, 4to.; Susrutta or Hindu System of Medicine 2 vols. 8vo., and Naishada Choritra, 1st part, 8vo.
 From J. H. Stocqueler, Esq.—Sporting Magazine for May and U. S. Journal for May.
 From H. Piddington, Esq.—Piddington on the scientific principles of Agriculture, considered as a branch of Public Education, pamphlet.

Circulation of Books.

	sold.	sets
General Literature.....	304	336
Prose Works of Imagination,.....	466	1136
Periodicals.....	178	178
	948	1947

New Subscribers.

W. J. Mackintosh, Esq. Major W. Burlton.
 A. de H. Larpent, Esq. J. D. Dow, Esq.
 Rev. W. O. Ruspini. W. Martin, Esq.
 Ed. Eastwood, Esq. D. B. Syers, Esq.
 Messrs. J. Ward, F. Ogilvy, C. W. Blanchard, and H. S. Ravenshaw have withdrawn.

State of Funds as on 1st May, 1839

Balance of last month in the Union Bank,	42	6	3
Collections made,.....	524	0	0
	566	6	3
Deduct establishment and petty charges for March last, paid.....	155	8	0
	710	14	3
Balance in the Savings' Bank,.....	55	14	11
Surplus of the Vested Fund,	22	0	0
	77	14	11
	488	13	2

Outstandings.

From Proprietors,.....	442	5	4
Arrears of subscriptions, .	564	0	0
Catalogues sold,.....	100	0	0
	1106	5	4
	1595	2	6

Vested Fund.

Amount collected,.....	4078	0	0
In the course of collection,.	95	0	0
	4173	0	0
Total amount at credit Cq.'s Rs..	5768	2	6

E E

PEARYCHAND MITTRA, Librarian.

W. P. GRANT, } Curator.
 H. M. PARKER, }

Englishman, May 15.]

MIRZAPORE STEAM MEETING

Proceedings of a Public Meeting held at Mirzapore, on Saturday 27th April, 1839, to manifest the interest taken in the scheme, for the formation of a Steam Company, to carry on a regular monthly communication with England, via Suez, on the comprehensive plan.

Proposed by Mr. W. E. Mouvy, seconded by Mr. Thomas Barlow

1. That Mr. Taylor be requested to take the chair, and Mr. Hamilton to act as Secretary.

Proposed by Mr. G. S. Dick, seconded by Mr. J. S. Pelletreau.

2. That this Meeting has learnt with much interest, the exertions that have been made by the London Steam Committee, for the purpose of forming a Company to establish a regular monthly communication, with England, via Suez, on the comprehensive scheme.

Proposed by Lieutenant-Colonel Home, seconded by Mr. C. Hamilton.

3. That this meeting concurs in the resolutions passed by the meeting held in Calcutta on the 15th instant.

Proposed by Mr. Thomas Barlow, seconded by Mr. G. S. Dick.

4. That in compliance with the resolution passed at that meeting, viz. that it has now become necessary to give some earnest of the interest taken in the scheme, by coming forward as subscribers to it, a subscription list be circulated among the gentlemen now present, and other parties likely to take an interest in the scheme, and they be solicited to take shares.

Proposed by Mr. W. E. Money, seconded by Lieutenant A. C. Plowden.

5. That the gentlemen resident at Benares and Chunar, be made acquainted with the proceedings of this meeting, and solicited to join, should they not have held a meeting for the same purpose.

Proposed by Dr. W. Gordon, seconded by Mr. G. S. Dick.

6. That as it appears from the Englishman of the 26th instant, that it is highly desirable, that no time should be lost in transmitting to the Secretary of Calcutta Meeting, the instalment of the subscriptions required, (viz. 10 per cent. or Rs. 50 per share of Rs. 500) that the amount may be remitted to the London Committee, by the first overland mail, to enable them to commence proceedings, for carrying the scheme into effect without delay; the Agent of the Bank of Bengal be requested to receive the first instalment from any gentlemen who cannot conveniently pay the sum in Calcutta, and grant a bill for the amount on the Bank at a short date.

Proposed by Mr. J. S. Pelletreau, seconded by Mr. Thomas Barlow.

7. That the Secretary of the meeting be requested to transmit the bill to the Secretary of the Calcutta Committee, with copy of these proceedings, requesting him at the same time, to send formal receipts to the subscribers for their respective payments.

Thanks having been voted to the Chairman, the meeting separated.

R. J. TAYLOR, Chairman,
Mirsapore, 27th April, 1839.

List of of Subscribers to the Steam Company now forming in London, to establish a monthly communication with India, via Suez, on the comprehensive scheme

Pelletreau and Evens.....	Two* shares.
Barlow, Brothers and Co.....	Eight ditto.
George S. Dick.....	Four ditto.
William Gordon.....	One ditto.
Claud Hamilton.....	Five ditto.
Ramcomul Saïen.....	Five ditto.
W E. Money.....	Three ditto.
R. J. Taylor.....	Two ditto.—

Hurkaru, May 6.]

* In addition to six taken before.

UNION BANK.

A Meeting of the Proprietors took place this day (Saturday 4th instant,) pursuant to Advertisement.

Mr. H. M. Parker was called to the chair and opened the business by reading the following Extract from the Advertisement :

UNION BANK.—A Special General Meeting of Proprietors will be held at the Union Bank, This-day, Saturday, the 4th of May, at noon, agreeably to article 64th of the Bank Deed, when the Directors will submit to the Proprietary body, certain modifications of that Deed, which appear to have become expedient under the improved position of the Bank, and after the experience of nearly ten years.

Mr Dickens went through the New Deed and explained the alterations and additions—introducing a new Rule as No. 28, which occasioned some discussion but was eventually adopted; as were all the other Rules with various modifications.

It was moved by Mr. Dickens, seconded by Mr. W. R. Young and

Resolved.—That the new Bank deed, as proposed and recommended by the Directors and now amended, be approved by this General Meeting, and that a second special Meeting finally to pass and adopt the same be forthwith called, according to 64th and 68th Clauses of the original Deed, by public advertisement, on a day to be named by the Directors, being not less than one month from this date.

It was then moved by Mr. Cullen, seconded by Mr. Cragg and Resolved.—That the temporary nomination by the Directors, of Alexander St. Leger McMahon, Esquire, to a seat in the Direction vacated by the departure for Europe, of Thomas Holroyd, Esq., is approved, and the same is hereby confirmed.

Mr. Dickens then announced his intention of proposing, at a future Meeting, a further extension of the Capital of the Bank, of twenty lacs of rupees—making the entire capital one Crore of rupees.

After which the Meeting broke up—Hurkaru, May 6.

CHOKYDAREE TAX.

IMPORTANT TO HOUSEHOLDERS IN ZILLA 24-PERGUNNAH.

The following letter was received by the Superintendent of the Mofussil Police of the Lower Provinces, in answer to a reference made by him to the Government, on the subject of the Chokydaree Tax in Zilla 24-Pergunnahs, and by that officer forwarded to the magistrate of that zilla.

(No. 3105.)

To F. C. SMITH, Esq.,
Superintendent of Police in the Lower Provinces, Judicial Department.

SIR,—I am directed by the Honorable the Deputy Governor of Bengal, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1189, of the 25th September last, giving cover to a draft of an act for the future levy of a Chowkedaree Tax in certain places within the jurisdiction of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs.

2d.—It is quite clear to the Deputy-Governor, that the levy of a Chowkedaree Tax in towns and villages, not the residence of the Magistrate or joint Magistrate of the Twenty-four-Pergunnahs, is illegal, and that it cannot be allowed to continue against the wishes of those on whom the levy is made.

3d.—To make a law under these circumstances for one zillah or rather for a very small portion of one zillah, seems to his honor inexpedient, and he will therefore, refrain from submitting your draft to the Legislative Council.

4th.—You are requested to instruct the Magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, to discontinue the levy of Chowkedaree Tax in all places in which it is now levied, excepting, however, the town or village of Alipore, which being the Magistrate's place of residence, may legally be taxed for the support of a Chowkedaree establishment under Regulations XXII. 1816.

5th.—In the other Suburbs of Calcutta, it is probable that the inhabitants will, upon proper conditions, consent to tax themselves for the maintenance of Chowkedars, and if Mr. Patton's influence judiciously exerted can induce them to do so, he is at liberty to concert with them for that purpose, reporting the result for his honor's information.

I have, &c.

(Signed) FRED JAS. HALLIDAY, Sec. to the Government of Bengal.

(True Copy)

N. HOTTIMAN, Head Clerk.

Fort William, the 6th Nov., 1838.

In conformity with the receipt of this communication, the Magistrate appointed Mr. Floyd to superintend the collection of the chokeydaree rents of the village of Alipore, and the latter, by the magistrate's directions, then drew up his report on this matter, and submitted it to them against all who confirmed the suggestions of Mr. Floyd on that report—

To J. H. PATTON, Esq.,

Magistrate of the 24 Pergunnahs, &c. &c. &c., Alipore.

SIR,—I beg leave most respectfully to report, that in execution of your orders I first proceeded, attended by the Sudder Buzashee, to settle the boundary of the Alipore division (a plan of which I beg herewith to submit) which is butted and bounded as follows To the north east by Tolly's Nullah, the west by the public main drain dividing the pukka road termed Kidderpore or Diamond Harbour road down to "Doorgapore," and to the south by the said road and a pathway leading to the "Chilla Haat," terminating at the Nullah above alluded to; the whole extent of Division as exhibited in the plan being $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile in length and one mile in breadth.

2.—With the exception of 6 European habitations, all the houses situated at Alipore are upper-roomed, realizing from 100 Rs. to 120 Rs. per mensem, the rate of assessment, therefore, on these houses, I have fixed at 2 Rs. each, as laid down in Act 15 of 1837, and the lower roomed houses from one rupee to four annas each, according to their respective rents; and I believe that the Natives will be able to meet the payment of the tax which has been fixed with reference to their respective means. Such as are in indigent circumstances I have taken the liberty of exempting from tax, and humbly hope the measure will meet with your approbation.

3.—There are 1551 native dwellings in the 14 hamlets composing the Alipore division, exclusive of those exempted, which, with proper management, will yield a monthly assessment of rupees 159 2. 6. For the protection of these habitations, I would most respectfully recommend the appointment of 33 Chokedars (being one Chokedar to 47 houses) on a salary of 4 rupees and 2 expressly for the pukka houses, from the proprietors of which 25 rs. 12 as. per mensem being realizable, will be collected.

4.—The total monthly jumma accruing from this tax will amount to rupees 184.14 6, of which $\frac{1}{2}$ will be sufficient for the payment of the Establishment herein proposed, leaving a surplus of 14 14 6 as a remuneration to the party vested with the superintendence of the Chokedars and the collection of the tax.

5.—I beg leave further to state, that I have had the present incumbents before me, and it is my painful duty to recommend the removal of seven of them as unfit for active duty, though their continuance in the service is earnestly solicited by the inhabitants.

6.—In conclusion I beg to add, that should the taxation meet with your approbation, and it be your pleasure to order the same to be carried into effect, I shall take an early opportunity of intimating your orders to the proprietors of the houses situated at Alipore, who are chiefly residents of Calcutta, the same being notified to the native inhabitants in the mode prescribed by Section 11 Regulation 22 of 1816.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

J. FLOYD.

Alipore, the 20th March, 1839.

Since this report has been confirmed, the residents of the suburbs of Calcutta have voluntarily consented to pay the chokeydary tax.—Hurkaru, May 13.

EXHIBITION OF NATIVE AND FOREIGN FRUITS.

TOWN HALL, 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ A. M., 6TH MAY, 1839.

The above exhibition took place in the southern veranda of the Town Hall, and was not very numerously attended either by the males or those who, by their presence, encourage the efforts of these Horticulturists. At least the number fell far short of that on the occasion of the vegetable exhibition in the cold season.

Among the fruits, liches and peaches being just in season, were of course the best. We observed three or four varieties of the former, and some of the latter were very fine and large—one of the best measured above 10 inches in circumference. There were also a few baskets of very good-looking mangoes, guavas, limes, some stated to be without seed, water-melons, shadocs, large papiahs, wood-apple, (one of them remarkably large) and pine apples, which last were not very good looking, the season for their being in perfection not having yet arrived. Among the fruits there was a large jake, measuring round the longitudinal circumference full four feet, and a soonsy coomrah (red gourd) of very extraordinary dimensions. We also noticed a very pretty bunch of yellow cocoanuts, some very fine sapotas, four figs in great perfection, and a large khurbonjah, a species of the musk-melon, which, though common in the upper provinces is a perfect rarity in Bengal. It measured about 2 feet in circumference, and was perfect in its possession of that odour which is peculiar to its species.

But the exhibition was not confined to fruits; vegetables of various kinds, and even grasses were to be seen in every direction. Among those some bundles of asparagus looked very tempting; but artichokes, carrots, cucumbers, celery, mint, yam, and many others, claimed as good a place on the table of our Indian epicures.

After the respective merits of the various baskets of fruit and vegetables had been sufficiently discussed, those selected for prizes were removed to an adjoining table, and their owners received the reward of their labours in sums of money, so far as we could observe, of 5 and 10 rupees each, and of silver medals. The freshness of the morning, after the night's heavy shower, was well adapted for a ramble among the fruits of the season, and the company were, no doubt, well pleased with the exhibition, and the pleasant drive to and from the Town Hall.

FRUITS.

Roselya Mallee,...	Rose Apples, Howrah,....	4
Luckynath Gbore,...	Mangoes,.....	Moocheekollah ... 5
Kosai Mallee,	Limes	Ramchunderpore.. 5
Bissonaut Ghose,...	Pine Apples, Singarhat,.....	5
Jhoroo,.....	Lichees,	Singarhat, .. 5
Groochund Dass, .	Peaches,	Bails,..... 6

Genes Mallee,....	Guavas,	Bails,.....	4
Luckeynargalamale, Water Melons, Ramchunderpore..	3
Capt. Penning's	For 2 varieties, § Grown from ad §
Mallee,.....	§ of Musk Melon, § rd. from Saugor §	10
Baleoram Mallee, Sapotas,.....	Bails,	5

VEGETABLES.

Premharain,	Artichokes,	Moocheekollah, .	6
Hullowdhur Malle, Asparagus,.....	Ditto,.....		8
Cheror Ghose, ..	2d best Sample do., Ditto, ..		8

Total Rs..... 76

—Hurkaru, May 7.

PRESENTED TO THE MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY OF THE MEDICAL BOARD.

Report on Vaccination, by Dr. D. Stewart, Superintendent-General of Vaccination.,

To JAMES HUTCHINSON, Esq.

Secretary to the Medical Board.

SIR,—I have the honor to forward to the Medical Board the usual annual return of persons vaccinated at the Presidency to 31st December, 1838.

I do myself the honor also to submit, for the information of the Board, a detailed statement of the exact number of children vaccinated at their homes by each of the vaccinators* and of the number vaccinated by myself, or the apothecaries at each of the two Town Dispensaries, and at my own residence during the years

The general daily average number vaccinated amount to twenty-three. The monthly average number vaccinated by each native vaccinator at the children's homes, has been thirty-seven, and the average number vaccinated monthly, at each dispensary, has been fifty four. The total number of Christians, Hindoos, and Mahomedans vaccinated, amounts this year to 7267.

The large difference between this sum and that of 1835, which was only 920, appearing to me quite unaccountable, I was led to inquire into the statistics of small pox in Calcutta, during these years, and I have now the pleasure to present to the Board an interesting table, compiled from the records of native mortality, kept at the different ghauts and ghorustans of Calcutta, from which it will be seen, that small-pox is not a constant disease, but visits Calcutta, like other towns, epidemically. And it would appear that the demand, for the vaccine protection bears a marked relation to the degree of alarm prevailing among the people during the period of such invasion. The extensive prevalence of small-pox throughout Calcutta, in the spring of 1833, together with the increased facility afforded to the people of procuring the boon under the present system, may sufficiently account therefore for the increased number of claimants for the prophylactic, during the past year.

During the prevalence of the epidemic, I endeavoured, with the obliging assistance of the Superintendent of Police, to ascertain the localities in Calcutta, where the disease was most general, and the circumstances of age, sex, and caste, connected with it. As was to be expected, the disease was found to spread most in that part of the town where the native population is most condensed, and where ventilation and cleanliness are least attended to.

The following table exhibits the amount of population, and of mortality from small-pox, in a few of the most unhealthy thannahs during twelve months,—from 22d April, 1837, to the same date, 1838 :—

Number and Name of Thannahs.	Native Population.	Native Mortality by small-pox.
No. 2, Bragg Bazar,	5080	32
" 3, Shampooker,	12396	170
" 4, Churrukdangah,	4661	42
" 5, Jorahanko,	4868	33
" 6, Simlah,	9380	103
" 7, Sukias Lane,	6857	86
" 10, Wutchoo Bazar,	4105	37
" 27, Coomartolley, ..	4627	22
" 28, Haurkholah,	10121	53
" 29, Jorabagan,	10485	33
" 30, Cubberdangah, ..	6628	20

The following thannahs were entirely exempt from small-pox, viz. No. 84, Amratollah; 35, Clive-street; 36, Lalt Diggee; 38, Larkin's Thannah; 39, Obound-paul.

As regards the influences of age and sex, the accompanying table exhibits the results in 820 total cases, visited and reported on the spot.

Age 0 to 5 years.	5 to 10	10 to 15	15 to 20	20 to 25	25 to 30	30 and upwards
253	196	87	103	80	46	56
Total, males				Total, females
849.				331.

* Not unpublished as unnecessary.

Taking the census of Calcutta in 1837, to be correct and the average of six years as affording a fair estimate of the mortality I find the annual mortality of Hindoos, caused by small-pox, to be, 295 per cent., or one in 339; that of Mahomedans, is only 128 per cent., or one in 782. Out of 100 deaths of Hindoo, five and a half are caused by small-pox; in a similar number of deaths among Musselmanns, the number by small-pox is six.

In the recently published parliamentary report of a select committee on vaccination, there is given a table from which, 'it appears, that the proportionate mortality from small-pox in London which, in 1800, before the introduction of vaccination, was about one in every ten deaths, is now reduced to about three in every 100 death;' but in Glasgow, according to Dr. Gowan's report to the Statistical Society for 1835-36, the mortality from small-pox is said to be 67 in every 100 deaths. He attributes this large rate of mortality in Glasgow to the immigration of labours and manufacturers into that city, who had never been vaccinated, nor had the natural disease, and not to any decline in the efficacy of the prophylactic. The same, may probably be assumed to be the chief cause in Calcutta, into which the resort of adult male laborers, during the past two or three years, has been very great. From the increased intelligence of the people, and the increasing estimation of the prophylactic, as shown in the foregoing table, we may hope, should the above cause cease to operate, ere long to exhibit a result as favorable as that of the British metropolis.

It is satisfactory meanwhile to know, that the small-pox, at the present moment, does not exist in Calcutta, and that only one fatal case has occurred during the past four months.

I annex a list of the places and out stations which have been supplied with lymph during the past year, and I am happy to assure the Board, that we possess at present as perfect and beautiful a vaccine disease as I ever witnessed in any part of Europe.

List of places and stations to which vaccine lymph has been furnished during the year 1838, and number of charge supplied.

Stations.	Charge supplied.	Stations	Charge supplied.	Stations.	Charge supplied.
Cawnpore,	3	Singapore..	4	Ghazeeport	2
Ment. Circle,	3	Bancoorah,	2	Berhamport	5
Allahabad, ..	6	Loodrauah,	3	Delhi,	6
Barielly,	10	Midnapore,	6	Subathoo, ..	5
Saugor,	6	Burdwan, ...	4	Agra Circle	8
Nusseerabad,	9	Jellapore, ..	2	Gowhatty, ..	5
Dum-Dum, ...	5	Cashmere, ...	3	Pooree, ..	3
Cuttack,	8	Backergung	2	Balasore, ..	2
Besherath, ...	3	Benare, ..	9	Gowalparah	2
Asm,	5	Rungpore, ..	3	Sylhet, ..	3
Hidgillie, ..	4	Akyab,	10	Kamoon B	2
Commiliah, ..	5	Furteedpore	6	Futtelgur, ..	2
Peruliah,	5	Dacca, ...	3	New S Wal	4
Chittagong, ..	17	Mauritius, ..	5	Penang, ..	3
Assore,	5	Futtelipore, ..	2
Calcutta, ...	2	Burrisaul, ..	1
Arrckpore, ...

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

D. STEWART, M. D.

Superintendent General of Vaccination.

Calcutta 10th January, 1839,

Table showing the mortality of Hindoos and Mahomedans in Calcutta from small pox for each month, during seven years, and the number vaccinated by the Government Vaccine Establishment at the Presidency, during the same period.

	1832.	1833	1834	1835.	1836	1837.	1838.
Hindoos	489	190	2255	293	29	7	37
Mahomedans	679	258	36	53	16	206	1507

Number of natives vaccinated in Calcutta, annually—(not including Christians.)	1832.	1833.	1834.	1835.	1836.	1837.	1838.
Hindoos	1060	1517	1627	1007	824	489	190
Mahomedans	2577	2634	1313	530	136	4577	6167

By the Government Vaccine Establishment.

Abstract of the number of persons vaccinated at the Presidency from 1st of January 1830, to the 1st of January, 1839.

	Christians.	Mahomedans	Hindoos.	Total.
Presidency ..	141	1449	2080	3670
Native Assistances..	77	1444	2107	3628

D. STEWART, M. D.

Superintendent General of Mark, May, 8.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 4th May, 1839.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members Dr. Bermont, of Calcutta, by Dr. Wise, seconded by Dr. D. Stewart.

Dr. Fairbridge, of the Cape of Good Hope, by Dr. Goodeve, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

A letter was read from Dr. Voight, of Serampore, requesting to withdraw from the Society.

The following communication was presented.

A paper upon the efficacy of Earth Bathing, by H. S. Mercer, Esq.

Dr. Stewart called the attention of the Society to the subject of Strychnine, with reference to a case of Paralysis, which he had been lately treating. He stated that he had given this remedy in very large doses, as far as 3 to 4 grains daily, without producing any effect. He then consulted Dr. O'Shaughnessy, who recommended that the medicine should be given in solution. Dr. Stewart accordingly gave it dissolved in water with Acetic Acid, and the patient was materially benefited. He wished to know how far it might be considered safe to continue the administration of Strychnine in the quantities above-mentioned. Considerable discussion ensued upon the point and upon the Physiological action of Strychnine, during which Dr. O'Shaughnessy stated, that this drug is in many cases so much adulterated with Phosphate of lime, that its operation is very uncertain.

The following papers were then read and discussed. Dr. Leese's case of excision of the upper jaw, presented at the last meeting.

And Dr. Mercer's paper upon Earth Bathing.

H. H. GOODEVE, M. D.

Secretary Medical and Physical Society.

—HURK., May 11.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held in the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 8th May, 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

THIRTY MEMBERS PRESENT.

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members; viz.

Messrs. W. S. Hudson, W. C. Braddon, Geo. Hill and J. C. Kieruan.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election at the next Meeting.

Chas. Fraser, Esq., (Commissioner in the Saugor and Nerhudda Territories)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Major Halfhide—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Gen. Ramsfay, Esq.—proposed by Mr. W. Gibbon seconded by Dr. Spry.

J. H. Fergusson, Esq.—proposed by Mr. W. F. Fergusson, seconded by Mr. D. Hare, Henry G. French, Esq., (Jeasore)—proposed by the Rev. C. E. Driberg, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Owen Potter, Esq.—proposed by Mr. W. K. Ewart seconded by Mr. Chas. Deerie.

LIBRARY.

No. 22 Madras Journal of Literature and Science, Presented by the Madras Literary Society.

Notes on the Culture of the Grape Vine.—Purchased by the Society.

Vol. VI. of the Society's own Transactions was laid on the table for distribution.

MUSEUM NURSERY.

Samples of Assam Tea; viz Paho. 2d quality, and Soucheong, referred to in the Government Dispatch. Presented on the part of the Calcutta Tea Committee by Dr. Wallich.

Two cases of Cact covered with Cochineal Insects from His Excellency M. Bedier and M. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Bourbon, have been received, since the last Meeting, in capital preservation, at the Calcutta Botanical Gardens.

Samples of Cotton with and without seed, from Guzerat. Presented by Wm. Kerr Ewart, Esq.

Samples of twenty-one kinds of Paddy (Dhan) grown in the independent Territory of Tipperah. Presented by H. Watt, Esq.

A specimen of Brown Sugar grown in the Soonderbuns was presented by Mr. A. Harris, who has promised to forward a larger sample, for presentation at the next Meeting.

Three bunches of grapes, presented by Mr. McClis, Esq., grown in his Garden at Ballygunge.

ASSAM TEA.

The subject which first engaged the attention of the Society was a most important, and highly interesting communication made by the Calcutta Tea Committee. It consisted of a despatch from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors received by the last Overland Mail, dated, 12th January, and for the better understanding of the same, an extract from the Committee's letter to the Government of India, dated the 20th March 1838.

In a note to the President, accompanying these papers the Tea Committee request that he will do them the honor to present the above documents to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, together with some samples of Assam Tea, to which they relate."

Extract from a letter from the Calcutta Tea Committee to the Revenue Department, dated 20th March 1838.

1. We have the honor to report for the information of the Honourable the President in Council, that there are at present in readiness at our Office, for transmission to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, a large supply of samples of Assam Tea, consisting of 12 large boxes of Paho and Souehong, assorted as follows:

Paho, 1st quality.....	1 Box.
Ditto, 2d,	4
Ditto, 3d,	1
Souehong, 1st quality,	4
Ditto, 2d,	1
Ditto, 3d,	1

12 Boxes.

2. Each box contains on an average 19 seers, or 38 pounds of Tea, carefully packed in a leaden canister made by the manufacturers lately arrived from Canton, and marked as above both in Chinese and English. The boxes are severally covered with the proper sort of matting, secured by slips of rattan, and addressed to the Hon'ble Court in the usual manner.

3. The consignment from which these samples were taken, arrived in Calcutta on the last day of January. Owing to a deficiency in the original packing, and the great degree of dampness to which the box had been exposed during the passage from Assam, a considerable proportion of the Tea, amounting to what would have filled about five boxes more, was either wholly spoiled or so much deteriorated, that no process, we believe, could have restored it to any thing like a fair quality. We have therefore registered all that portion as unfit to be sent home, at least, with the present supply, deeming it a matter of primary importance that the value of the first samples transmitted to Europe should not be diminished by any thing that might add to the many disadvantages under which they must necessarily arrive at a destination, where they will in all probability have to be subjected to the severe test of examination by the first Tea Inspectors in London.

4. We beg most particularly to urge on the consideration of His Honor in Council, that not only are the plants from which the leaves were gathered, still in their original wild and uncultivated state, but the details of the various processes employed in preparing and transmitting the Tea, must obviously have labored under the many and serious difficulties and obstacles of a first attempt, but which it may reasonably be expected, will be diminished and progressively overcome as further trials are made. Besides which it ought to be borne in mind that, strange as it may appear, it is by no means settled whether it is not actually the Green Tea, that has been prepared in the fashion of Black Tea, a point which can only be satisfactorily determined when the Green Tea manufacturers are set at work in Assam.

5. The Tea in question arrived here under the designations of Paho and Souehong. In assorting each of these into three qualities, as noted in para. 1st, our Secretary has been guided, partly by the opinion of the Chinese assistants now here, and partly by his own discrimination of the difference in the flavor and appearance of the Teas after they had undergone preparation for being repacked. Likewise and in the first instance by the various degrees of preservation, in which he received the cargo from Assam. The process of preparation alluded to above consisted in gradually drying the Tea over a nicely regulated coal fire, covered with ashes, in baskets made on purpose by the Chinamen, having the form of two inverted cones with their ends truncated and having an open sieve in the centre (as described and figured in Mr. Bruce's Memoir in the manufacture of Tea in Assam p. 5. fig. 9 and 10). This precautionary measure our Secretary deemed absolutely necessary, to prevent mouldiness and consequent damage to the Tea during the sea voyage.

6. Our Secretary has been at pains to learn that it has always been customary in China, to bestow great attention in preventing consignments of Teas from being shipped on board vessels that have cargoes consisting of articles of strong savour, and which are known to be injurious to the delicate and fugacious aroma of Tea, whether by their odour of heating properties, or the like, and that it is usual even to plank off the space allotted for the chests; we accordingly solicit that such orders may be issued in regard to the shipment of the 12 boxes, as may be deemed best calculated to prevent any accident from happening to their contents from any of those sources. In case it should be deemed expedient to entrust the despatch to our Secretary's care, we are persuaded he will use the best diligence and care to procure freight on an early ship at the lowest rate possible, and under such engagements as will prevent any chance of injury during the voyage.

7. We beg leave to forward the accompanying small muster of the 1st quality of Paho and a large canister of the 2d quality of the same sort, regretting that we have none left of the Souehongs, every loaf of it having been consumed in filling up the boxes."

(Copies)

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

No. 2 of 1839.

OUR GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

(Received by the last Overland Mail.)

Para. 1. Your advice noted below* refers us to your correspondence with the Tea Committee and to the reports of your proceedings generally on the subject of the culture of the Tea Plant in Upper Assam subsequent to the date of your letter in this Department of the 26th February 1838, which was replied to in our despatch dated the 26th September 1838, No. 12.

2. We receive with much satisfaction the samples of Assam Tea (twelve chests) alluded to in your letter dated the 23d May 1838, and which arrived by the Calcutta in November last, under the designation of "Paho and Souehong."

3. Specimens of each sort have been very extensively distributed and it affords us much pleasure to communicate to you, that we have received very favorable reports regarding it as well from the most respectable Brokers and Tea Dealers as from several individuals and various corporation towns and scientific bodies to whom it has been submitted.

4. Copies of the reports received from the Brokers and Tea Dealers named below†, together with copy of one from Mr. Reeves, are forwarded for your information and for transmission to the Tea Committee.

5. We do not, however, consider that these specimens will have afforded the British public an opportunity of judging of the real merits of the Tea, which the Assam Districts are, we have no doubt, capable of producing, inasmuch as we find the best judges concur in opinion that the process of referring, to which owing

* 21st May 1838, paras. 44-45

23d " " whole.

9th July, " paras. 31-32.

10th Oct. " " 33 to 36.

† Mr. Twining.

" Thompson, 2d reports.

" Bland.

" Boughey.

Messrs. Moffatt.

" Messrs. and Rowley.

Mr. Gibbs, and Messrs. Sanderson, Fry and Co.

to damaged state in which the Tea arrived in Calcutta it was of necessity subjected, has very materially injured the present sample.

6. Nevertheless we resolved to direct eight chests of the Tea to be offered for public sale, the result of which is given below* the classification of the qualities and description of the Tea we have quoted from the report of the Tea Committee dated 20th March 1838, in order to afford you an opportunity of knowing precisely which of the chests of each sort were submitted to the public.

7. The result here exhibited will not of course lead you to the formation of any correct opinion as to the real marketable value of the Tea, should it arrive in quantities sufficient to be considered a staple article of commerce; on the contrary it can only be considered as a fancy price occasioned by the great excitement and competition created by the novelty and curiosity of the sale.

8. For the formation of a more accurate judgment, we refer you to the report of Mr. Thomson, alluded to in para. 4, and to the letter addressed by Messrs. Stearns and Rowley to the Mayor of Liverpool wherein an offer is made to contract for 500 or 1000 chests at 1s. 10³/₄d. to 2s. per lb.

9. You will continue to encourage in such manner as you may deem most advisable, the cultivation of Tea in Assam, and with reference to our Despatch under date the 26th September 1838, we shall expect to receive a further supply as soon as a sufficient quantity has been prepared in accordance with the instructions therein conveyed to you. At the same time we shall be glad to receive from you any suggestions with respect to future plans, particularly as to the best means of encouraging the cultivation of the Tea with as little present loss to Government and as great prospective benefit to commerce as possible.

10. It would further be very desirable to receive accurate information as possible with regard to the price at which the Tea is now manufactured, including merely the cost of labour, manipulation, packing per chest, and the landing at Calcutta.

London, 23d January, 1839

(Signed by two Chairs and thirteen of the Court of Directors).

MR. WILLIAM JAMES THOMPSON, Dunster Court, Mining Lane, 22d December, 1838.

I have to report that I have examined the Assam Teas which are to be sold in my sale of January next, and that No. 11 Souehong is of a large well twisted Pekoe kind of leaf.

No. 5, Souehong is of a large black leaf with some brown, the leaf generally rather coarse and not so well twisted as No. 11.

" 6 " A mixture of large coarse leaves with some pale brown untwisted—this Tea is good flavored but the leaf, if for the purpose of trade, should be better manufactured.

* Souehong.

Lot 1, 1st quality, 34 lbs. net at 21s. per lb.
" 2, 2d " 28 " " at 20s. " "
" 3, 3d " 37 " " at 16s. " "

Pekoe.

" 4, 2d quality, 38 lb. net at 24s. 6d. per lb.
" 5, " " 40 " " at 23s. " "
" 6, " " 33 " " at 22s. 6d. " "
" 7, " " 35 " " at 23s. 6d. " "
" 8, 3d, 35 " " at 24s. " "

No. 2, Pekoe—a well made largish ivory-blackish leaf, appears to have been "refined" and the leaf in consequence of a deeper black.

" 79 { Pekoe—a similarly well made leaf to No. 2, but not so black, and having also more (" points or downy ends") flower than it.

" 8 " And well made ivory-greyish leaf with a fair quantity of flower. This Tea for make and size of leaf much resembles Pekoe of the growth of China.

(Signed) Wm. Jas. Thompson.

To the Mayor of Liverpool, Hugh Hornby, Esq.,
Liverpool 128, Dale Street, 17th December, 1838.

SIR,—In compliance with a request from Messrs. Brodribb and Cooke, "that we would forward to you our opinion and valuation of the Tea produced in Assam," we beg to state that we consider it (with a few exceptions) as good Tea as may be usually imported into this country from Canton, the only difference appearing to us, being in the method of curing or drying; and the sample submitted to our inspection has been over dried and evidently has not been treated in the way the Chinese prepare their Teas.

We character the Tea in question as "preferable to but middling Tea" or brisk, slightly burnt flavor (not objectionable) and possesses strength—"the leaf is on the large well black Pekoe kind, value 1s. 10³/₄d. to 2s., and at this valuation we should have no objection to enter into a contract for 500 or 1000 chests.

We remain, &c.,

(Sgd.) STEARNS AND ROWLEY.

In addition to the foregoing, the Reports from six Liverpool Brokers, on the same subject, and equally favorable, were presented by Mr. Willis.

As an opportunity for extending the cultivation of the Tea plant in India, the Secretary read a letter from Edward Sterling, Esq., Collector at Burdwan, calling the attention of the Society to the apparent fitness, both in soil and climate, of that district, for the introduction and culture of the Tea plant. Dr. Wallich stated, that a supply of plants had just reached the gardens, and at the recommendation of the Society, he was pleased to say, he thought the Tea Committee would willingly place a few of them at the disposal of Mr. Sterling.

PRODUCTION OF SILK FROM THE WORMS THRIVING ON THE COMMON CASTOR OIL PLANT.

The subject of encouraging the Eri Silk manufacture by money prizes, was brought forward in the form of a communication to the Society from Captain Jenkins, in Assam, who speaks of the worm being in great abundance in that Province and one which deserves the first attention. The Eri Silk worm (Phalœna Cylæa) is independent of all seasons. It thrives luxuriantly on the common Castor Oil plant, but all attempts hitherto made to wind off the Silk from the cocoons, have failed, owing to the want of knowledge of the proper solvent for the gum which adheres to the cocoons. Under these circumstances, Captain Jenkins comes forward with the handsome offer of 500 rupees, which he places at the disposal of the Society.

1st. For the discovery of an effectual solvent for the gum so that the silk can be reeled off.

2d. For the best mode of preparing a fine thread from the floss;

And 3d. For the readiest and best method of bleaching the cloth so as to take dyes well.

The Society impressed with the value of the contribution and the importance of lending its utmost aid to the promotion of so useful a culture, were pleased to determine that every assistance should be rendered to Captain Jenkins, and accordingly the following resolution was given by Mr. Watson, seconded by the Secretary.

"That the Agricultural and Horticultural Society do aid Captain Jenkins in the development of this new culture, by the addition of 500 Rupees to that placed by him at the disposal of the Society."

THE REMOVAL OF THE DISCRIMINATING DUTIES ON TOBACCO AND RUM, THE PRODUCTS OF BRITISH INDIA

The question which next came before the Society, was the consideration of the propriety of adopting some steps to bring to the notice of the Home Authorities the difficulties which the industry of this country have hitherto laboured under, by the impost of a heavy duty on Tobacco and Rum from India, whenever any attempt is made to land them in Great Britain, over that which is charged on importing similar articles, the produce of the American and West India Colonies.

The subject was brought before the Society in the form of a representation from the Tobacco Committee, which was read to the Meeting by the President who stated how important to the Agricultural Interests of India, the removal of such a burthen was—a discussion in which several Members took part ensued, and all bore testimony to the discouraging exaction as it now stood. At the termination of the remarks, the following Resolutions were put from the Chair and carried unanimously:—

Proposed by the Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, seconded by W. F. Ferguson, Esq. and resolved,— 1st.—That this Society is fully persuaded of the positive loss which the country sustains by the exaction of three pence the pound weight on Tobacco and six shillings the gallon on Rum, the produce of the British possessions in the East Indies, in excess of that imposed on the importation into the mother country of similar articles when received from the British possessions in America and the West Indies.

2ndly.—That the Secretary from the necessity which exists for immediate despatch to save the Overland Mail, be instructed, therefore, respectfully to address, through their respective Secretaries, the Right Hon'ble the President and Board of Control, and the Hon'ble Court of Directors on the subject, intimating at the same time that a similar communication will be made to the Government of Bengal.

GROWING DEMANDS OF ENGLAND ON THE AGRICULTURAL WEALTH OF INDIA.

The Secretary submitted a communication from the Chamber of Commerce of Bengal, transmitting a copy of a Memorial lately presented by the President, Vice President, and Members of the Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures at Manchester, in deputation, to the Honourable the Court of Directors. The communication is made to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India by the Bengal Chamber, as the subject contained in the Memorial, is considered by its members, "to Agricultural and Commercial importance, in co-operation of this Chamber towards the attainment of the object contemplated."

Bearing cordial testimony to the extensive usefulness of your Society, the Chamber doubts not it will cheerfully afford whatever aid may be within the sphere of its operations, to promote the views of the Manchester Association. Meanwhile the Agricultural Society of India cannot but be well pleased to find influential bodies at home, such as the Manchester Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures, directing their attention earnestly and actively to the improvement of the great Staples of India,—a field where your Society is labouring with so much advantage to the community and high credit to itself.

Copy.

TO THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE HONOURABLE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

The Memorial of the President, Vice President, and Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and Manufactures at Manchester.

Sheweth,—That your Memorialists are deeply impressed with the advantages which are derived by this Country and British India from their commercial relations with each other; and that the interest of each of these portions of the Empire will be advanced by such measures as may tend to develop the resources, and industry of either.

That your Memorialists believe, that the agricultural resources of the vast empire of British India, are capable of almost unlimited extension, and of supplying Great Britain with articles of primary necessity (many of which are now in great measure derived from foreign sources) to the great benefit of our Indian fellow subjects, as well as to that of the shipping, the commerce, and the manufactures of the mother country.

Your Memorialists respectfully draw the attention of your Honourable Court to the very great importance which attaches to the cultivation of Cotton.

The quantity of Cotton imported into Great Britain in the first eleven months of the present year, amounts to 1,374,316 bales, of the value of 14 millions £ strg, in its unmanufactured state. Of this quantity 122,397 bales have been received from British Possessions in the East and West Indies, 26,281 bales being from the West Indies, and 96,116 from the East Indies. The Cotton from India amounts to about £600,000 or only 5 per cent. of the whole value of Cotton imported, about 90 per cent. of our supply being drawn from foreign sources.

The importance of this great trade is evident on referring to the fact, that the value of Cotton after being manufactured amounts to 40 millions £ strg. per annum, giving freight to 300,000 tons of shipping, and employing upwards of 2 millions of persons, engaged in the various stages of its manufacture.

In addressing your Honourable Court on this subject, your Memorialists will not offer any apology for placing before you the importance of this branch of trade to the country, being fully sensible that, although your immediate duties are directed to the government of India, you entertain those liberal and enlightened views which will embrace the interest of the empire at large.

A regular and independent supply of Cotton in this country, it is of the greatest possible importance to secure. How much more desirable, then, for us to look for this supply to our fellow subjects in India, than to be dependent upon any foreign country for it! It must be obvious to your Hon'ble Court, that depending almost entirely on one source of supply, if any interruption of that supply should occur, either from national hostilities—a change from slave labour to free labour,—or from other contingencies, the most distressing consequences would inevitably fall upon the large manufacturing population of this country.

The whole of the Cotton imported from India is conveyed hither by British shipping; whereas a very large portion of the foreign Cotton is brought to us by foreign ships.

By extending the cultivation of Cotton in India, the natives of that country would acquire greater means for procuring the comforts and conveniences of life, of advancement in civilization—of improvement in the revenue, and would be more firmly bound in their connexion with this country, as their Governor, by these advantages; and the amount of taxation would be less burdensome to them, because they would be better able to bear it.

Your Memorialists have not any doubt, that the great continent of British India, with its immense and industrious population, is capable of producing, from its varied climate and soil, every quality of Cotton that may be desired, and to any extent which our increasing manufactures may require, and at a less cost than from any other country in the world.

The inferiority of the quality of the East India Cotton has been the greatest impediment to a more extensive consumption of it in this country; and though it will be difficult, and must prove a work of time, to effect a change in this most important particular, yet your Memorialists most respectfully submit it as their opinion, drawn from the best sources of information they have access to, that this difficulty is not insurmountable, and the very great importance of both countries, will, they hope, excuse them to your Hon'ble Court for venturing a few remarks upon the subject.

1st. The amount of Land Tax, extending generally, as your Memorialists are informed, to the maximum which the grower has the means of paying, destroys the stimulus to improvement and exertion, and a modification of this seems to be essentially necessary.

2dly. The tax being levied in kind, appears in its working, to be particularly objectionable, inducing the grower to produce quantity or weight of Cotton, without regard to quality or cleanness.

3dly. The want of roads in India, your Memorialists consider to be very much against Cotton cultivation, not only by greatly increasing its cost; but by the deterioration of quality, consequent on exposure to the effects of the weather, in its transit to a shipping port.

4thly. The want of Warehouses or sheds in which to deposit the Cotton at the commencement of the rainy season, and the want of Piers or Quays generally at the shipping ports, lead greatly to the injury of the quality.

5thly. Every inducement which can, with propriety, be held out to capitalists to embark in the cultivation of Cotton should be offered to them.

Your Memorialists must respectfully request of your Honourable Court to take these premises into your serious consideration, and to devise and adopt such measures as may appear to you to be most conducive to the extension of the Agricultural resources of India, and particularly for the improvement of the quality, and the extension of the cultivation of Cotton.

And they will ever pray.

Manchester, 7th Dec. 1838,

(True Copy)

W. LIMOND, Secy. B. C. of Commerce.

In connection with this important communication, the President adverted to what the efforts of the Society, both at its abandoned farm at Akra, and in the dissemination of seeds had hitherto been, and in return for this valuable document a reply was directed to be made in which should be embodied an outline of the chief particulars of what the Society has done in this important culture. Moreover, as no tidings have reached the Society from the Board of Trade in England, regarding the despatch of fresh seeds, the polite offer of Mr. Huggins to obtain the annual consignment of seeds, to the amount of 1000 rupees, was cheerfully accepted.

APPROVAL BY GOVERNMENT OF THE SOCIETY'S MEASURES FOR OBTAINING INFORMATION ON AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS.

The Secretary sent to the Society a letter addressed to him by the Secretary of the Government of India intimating that the Hon'ble the President in Council approves the circular and forms adopted by the Society for the collection of information on Agricultural Statistics required for the accomplishment of the objects pointed out in the papers transferred to the Society by Government, and hopes the information collected will be trust-worthy and lead to useful practical results."

ADDITIONAL ILLUSTRATION OF THE SUPERIORITY OF THE SOIL OF GUZERAT FOR THE PRODUCTION OF COTTON.

In addition to the information conveyed to the Society by Mr. Ewart at a former meeting, this gentleman presented on the present occasion, parcels of the Cotton of Guzerat with and without seed. The cleaned Cotton had been freed of seed at Bombay by the American Sawgin, but it was found to cut the staple and thereby injure the quality of the Cotton in the market. Mr. Ewart's brother thus expresses himself—"The plant is, I think, something between the common Proach and Bourbon, the natives here call it "Nurma," and it is valued at nearly double the common country kind. In 1816 Dr. Glider cultivated Bourbon. I propagated from some plants I found in the hedge rows, near where his experiment had been conducted, and if it be Bourbon it has become changed in some way, and is evidently well suited to be of value now. This is my opinion after some seasons' observation and I intend to go on increasing it. It requires a dry sandy soil and no irrigation; water or manure sends it all to leaves and branches. Slightly elevated sand hills are the proper situations—sown at the beginning of the rains, yields almost no Cotton the first year, but is in full bearing the 2d and 3d. The bushes do best at 4 or 5 feet apart. I find fully 2 3/4 lbs of the produce is seed; from each bush, 60 rs. in weight of kuppas, 20 of which will be clean Cotton."

FRESH ARRIVAL OF COCHINEAL INSECT AND NOPALS FROM THE ISLE OF BOURBON.

The next communication made to the Meeting by the Secretary was the receipt of letters addressed to the President, Dr. Wallich, and himself touching the despatch in the "Emma," of a consignment of Cochineal Plant and the Insects through M. M. Bedier and Richard from the Isle of Bourbon.

M. Bedier in forwarding this valuable despatch first presented, in most polite terms, his thanks for the former vote of the Society, and M. Richard acknowledges in terms equally expressive his sense of obligation for the present by the Society of their gold medal. These gentlemen then go into the particulars as to the method adopted by them in securing the safe arrival of the Insects and Plants, and testify by the care and solicitude with which they have proceeded in the preparation and eventual package, their warm co-operation in the highly useful object which the Society have in view in introducing the fine grained Cochineal Insect in Bengal. These gentlemen farther add that although at the time of the year they wrote the Insects were least plentiful yet they had other Plants in preparations "je crois pouvoir vous assurer qu'avec peu de temps vous recevrez une multitude caisses avec des nopals et des cochinelles."

The President in bearing testimony to the generous conduct of these two gentlemen in promoting, in so disinterested a manner, the introduction and advancement of this important culture in Bengal, begged to remind the Members, that these exertions could not be too highly estimated, and as a mark of the deep obligations which they all must entertain for so worthy a benefactor, he begged to give notice of the following motion to be brought forward at the next Meeting:

"That the Society's Gold Medal be presented to His Excellency M. Bedier, Minister of Marine, at the Isle of Bourbon, for the readiness with which he has met the Society's wishes in promoting the introduction of the Cochineal Insect into Bengal.

The Society's Annual Supply of Cape Seeds.

The Secretary called the attention of the Members, to a letter which he had received from Mr. Villet, at Cape Town, informing him, that the annual despatch of garden and flower seeds would leave Cape Town in July, so as to be in Calcutta by the end of September at furthest, and expressing his regret, that the reported failure, and dissatisfaction in consequence of the last year's consignment, should have been so general.

In connection with this subject, the President took occasion to intimate to Members that the state of the Nursery at the Botanic Garden with the large consignment now on its way down the river from the Botanic Garden, at Seharunpore, of fruit trees, would enable Members to be supplied on the setting in of the rains, and in consequence of this announcement it was determined, that the Nursery Committee should meet and devise the best means to be pursued in the mode of distribution.

SUGAR CANE IN THE BOOMERANG COUNTRY.

Captain Hill, when in Calcutta, a few months since, took away with him a small stock of Orabite and China Canes, and in a note addressed to F. P. Strong, Esq., he writes, "The Sugar Canes you gave me were planted at Akra immediately on my return home from Calcutta. The China Cane came up to a cutting, and there are about 200 plants of the Orabite Cane—all thriving—I think it likely we shall plant all the cuttings we can get and make some sugar from them in the season of 1840-41."

An extract of a letter from Mr. Hunter at Azimghur was also read, stating that he had "made over to Mr. Collie upwards of a thousand Canes to be cultivated in the Goruckpore District for his Sugar Mill, and have also sent China Cane to be used as fodder."

For all the foregoing presents and papers the thanks of the Society were accorded.

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D. Secretary—

Hurk. May 13.

BURNING OF THE CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

The Chowringhee Theatre is no more, or exists but as a crumbling and ghastly skeleton of its former self. Between one and two o'clock of the 31st May, it was discovered to be on fire, and in about an hour more it was a blackened and empty shell. On the alarm going abroad, assistance came pouring in from all quarters; but all help was unavailing. From the very combustible nature of the various portions of the interior, scenery, furniture, &c., the flames made such rapid progress, that although the engines arrived in the shortest possible time, they could do nothing for the preservation of the house. The whole inside of the Theatre, boxes, pit and stage, with all their decorations and appurtenances, in short every thing that would burn, has been consumed. The wooden dome made a most awful blaze, which was seen from the most remote parts of the town, until about half past two, when it fell with a tremendous crash.

The only portions of the premises which have escaped, are the portico to the westward, and a part of the house to the south, occupied by the Secretary. Not an atom of the furniture and of other appurtenances of the Theatre, has, as far as can be learnt, been saved from destruction, and but a small part of the Secretary's furniture has been preserved.

Mrs. Chester and her little boy escaped in, and we have not as yet heard of any accident affecting life or limb.

Mr. McMahon, the Magistrate, and Captain Birch, the Superintendent of Police, were promptly in attendance, and rendered great service in rescuing Mrs. Chester's furniture, &c. from the conflagration. As might be expected, an immense crowd was attracted to the spot, and many gentlemen came forward, and exerted themselves manfully in saving such articles as could be snatched from the flames.

No one seems to know how the fire originated. Mr. Chester's account is, that, shortly after he had retired to rest, and when he had just fallen asleep, he was aroused by one of his servants, and on going towards the door of communication betwixt his house and the stage, encountered a volume of dense and suffocating smoke, which first made him acquainted with the state of affairs.

There had been a rehearsal of the Pilot and the Sleeping Draught, which concluded, we understand, about half past twelve, shortly after which the party of Amateurs engaged in the representation, broke up and retired from the Theatre. On their departure the lights were all, as we hear carefully extinguished, with the exception of two, which were kept burning in front of the stage every night. We have not yet heard of anything tending to attach blame or suspicion to any one, and have every reason to believe that the catastrophe was entirely owing to accident. The following jeu d'esprits were elicited from our Poets Bengalensis on the occasion.

MONODY ON OUR DRURY.

[DESTROYED BY FIRE ON THE 30TH OF MAY, 1839.]

'Twas night's deep noon! in slumbering stillness lay,
The palac'd city 'neath the moon's calm ray.
Darken'd and hush'd was many a spacious hall,
Where youth and love had graced the festival;
And now deserted was that Theatrical dome,
Which many a year was gay Thalia's home;
And where her dark-brow'd sister oft subdued,
And thrill'd our hearts, beneath her sterner mood.
All was repose:—when, lo! the moonlit sky,
Gleam'd forth in sudden crimson, and the cry,
Peal'd out from voices rous'd by startling fear,
Proclaim'd the Fire-God's wild and dire career;
And told that 'neath his visitation dread,
Our classic Drury bow'd her honor'd head.
Ye who desire, mid India's weaying life,
Bland recreation from your toils, or strife;
The sudden, sad catastrophe deplore,
Which takes one "harmless pleasure" from your store,
One that still kindly lur'd the thoughts to stray
From sordid care, and chas'd your griefs away.
Mourn ye, who reverence genius, and who love
To feel the force of well-drawn passions move—
Your breasts, in sympathy with noble deeds,
Or deep felt horror when the guiltless bleeds—
To see man's darker passions stage-reveal'd,
The plotting head, the heart to vengeance steel'd,

To see his nobler aspirations shown,—
 The freeman's daring 'gainst the tyrant's throne;
 The mind heroic in a country's cause,
 The high ambition which compels applause.
 Who love to see, in lighter moods display'd,
 The human feelings freed from tragic shade;
 The lover's truth, the testy spirit vex'd,
 The wily scheme, or guardian sore perplex'd;
 The saucy abigail, the wit's smart jest,
 And hapless maid by cruel sire oppress'd!
 Mourn all! who love to view the scenes display'd,
 For low in dust your cherish'd Drury's laid;
 And smould'ring ruins mark the cheerless site,
 Where Allsopp charm'd us many a gladful night,
 Where Wilson ran the changes through each style,
 From age to youth, our tedium to beguile;
 Where mirth and tears, alike, fair Williams drew,
 And jovial Playfair Falstaff gave to view!
 Gone is that stage which tragic Palmer trode,
 And show'd the very Moor whom Shakespeare show'd.
 Or in the Roman-Tribune well display'd
 The sterling stuff of which the patriot's made.
 The stage where Leach, enchanting to the last,
 Through all the drama's range, applauded, pass'd;
 Where gifted Parker—seen but half enough—
 Master'd each mode, from Cassio down to Puff.
 And stately Francis grac'd the nation's part,
 And Modus won us by his varied art.
 Of these, though many hearts, in death long cold,
 Can heave no sigh when Drury's fate is told;
 Yet of the living number, is there one,
 Which will not grieve to learn that she is gone?—
 To which fond memory will not quick recall,
 The happy hours that mark'd her magic thrall,
 When round those hearts she threw her Thespian spell
 E'er, one by one, they bade her boards farewell!

McN.

PARNASSUS ANGLO INDICUS

OR

DITTIES FROM THE DITCH.

WRITTEN ON THE OCCASION OF THE LATE MELAN-CHOLY FISH.

A lamentable case of Trojanist is the Indian Drama at this moment. Like the gentleman who went to the home of his fathers and cried out "The friends of my youth, where are they?" and an echo answered "you ha'n't got no friends," or the old Turk, in the poem, who called out for his child and got a somewhat similar response, we exclaim pathetically, "The Indian Drama, where is it?" and an echo answers, "Gone to the dogs."

But it shall live; yes, it, shall live, like Jezebel's carcass, which went to the dogs too, in the memory and in the writings of men.

* Old Giasfir in the Bride of Abydos, "Where is my child?" an echo answers "where?" which is to the full an extraordinary an echo, as that which we have celebrated in the text.

Poetry is a fine thing, a very fine thing indeed, for it immortalizes the most perishing things in a sort of amber-immortalization, as Mr. Galt, or Thomas Moore, or somebody else, calls it. Thus Holkar, with his one eye, and the whole race of Sunyasses (not that Holkar was a Sunyasse, we don't mean that) will be utterly extinct and forgotten a thousand years hence, or rather would be if they were not amber-immortalized in the great Calcutta epic that was published in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight. Thus a thousand years hence, though all trace of the existence of such things as Sibylline Leaves and Literary Leaves will be utterly lost to the world, it will still, through the immortalizing medium of S. T. C's and D. L. R's poetry, be known ubiquitously to all the nations of the earth, that there once were such things in existence, although it cannot clearly be discovered, at such a distance of time, whether they resembled Sick-leaves, Plaintain-leaves or French-leaves; or were different from all three.

Thus doubtless the ruins of the old Chowringhee Theatre will soon be shot into the rubbish-cart, and some new edifice, perhaps the new Cathedral, be erected on the old Thespian site. It is now in deed nothing more than a thing

O'er which the reean flaps his funeral wing;

but it will soon be not even that,—it will have descended to the "tomb of all the Capulets,"—it will have become literally dust,—the fragments of our dear old Drury—last stage of earthly degradation—broken up to repair the Abercrombian roads, and then ground into that worst of all possible dust, so often celebrated in the pages of this journal, thus turning that which was intended as a means of enjoyment to us, into a source of endless irritation and misery.

The Gods are just and of our pleasant vices
 Make instruments to scourge us.

Thus would have commented old Prynne, or Reynoldes, or Jeremy Collier, but thus do not comment We. The "vices" we do not allow,—we would rather say "harmless pleasures," and of such often are the scourges made. But having traced the Chowringhee

Theatre into Abercrombian dust, we say then, that it will be lost to us for ever, palpably, materially, corporeally lost to us, and would have been lost to us spiritually, if our Calcutta poets had not stepped manfully forward to amber-immortalize our poor little Drury, and disperse its fame through all the nations of the earth.

But with whom now shall we commence? We have ode, elegy, sonnet, monody, every possible description of poetical work at command, and have only just to stretch out a hand either to our right side or our left and to lay it upon such an effusion as the world does not see every day. We have certainly great men in little Paddington! Your London Drury and your London Addresses, may have been all very well in their way; but, come now, we challenge you to match from amongst them such a — what shall we say? ah! that will do, such a noble sonnet as this.

—
INIT.

—
DESTRUCTION OF THE CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE BY FIRE.
—

How calm and beautiful! The silver moon
In tranquil beauty floats along the sky,
The stars are out in thousands clust'ringly,
And all is quiet, save the sauro-sauro's tune,
The voice of Gunga and the Jackalls' cry.
Hushed is the palaced city and obscured
Our Drury's stately pile; no sound is there
Of mirthful plaudits, all are wrapt in sleep,
And on their lips perchance a peaceful smile;
But there are many, who will wake to weep,
For, hark! a shout of terror cleaves the air,
And the grim Fire-king clasps the classic pile
In his red arms. Oh! hard to be endured!
The Theatre's burnt down, and not insured.

Need we inform our readers what "fine Roman hand" penned this very exquisite sonnet—"the magnificentest and prettiest thing ever seen," as the gentleman said of the falls of Niagara? Need we affix thereto those well known triple initials, the extensive fame of which is only equalled by that of one other trilogy—(videlicet Q. E. D.)—need we affix those three letters so dear to Apollo and the Muses—D. L. R.?—letters which a prophane, unlettered friend of ours, not very many months ago, supposed or professed to suppose, stood for—what will be thought?—for Damned Literary." If there were nothing else to indicate the authorship of this poem, its brevity would be ample testimony in favor of the triple-initialite, for, like single-speech Hamilton and Allessandro Unolino, who had the credit of being the greatest poet of his age, though he only wrote one line in his life and that one was beyond the reach of comprehension, our friend D. L. R., we say it reverently, is

The laziest of poets and of men; and like, many other lions, requires a great deal of stirring up, with a long pole, before he will show off his abilities to the ladies. Like the humane gentleman, who was in hypothetical possession of a refractory quadruped, "what wouldn't go," and who declared his intention of not "walloping" the animal in such a case, but of giving him "some hay," and enticing him on with a few complimentary expressions, we have done our best to get the master poet into a trot, but he won't go—no, not at any price. This is what comes of being at the tip top of the poetical tree; others try, are always trying, to get a branch or so higher up, but when there's no getting any higher, the climber sits still and wipes his forehead with a pocket handkerchief. Thanks to "our Drury" for going off like Mr. O'Smith enveloped in flames, we have lost the theatre, but we have got the sonnet, and that's some compensation. There is nothing like a fire to stimulate itness. We have very often seen a hackery-driver despairing over one of his indolent bullocks, which has taken into its head incontinently to lie down in the middle of the Chowringhee Road, when suddenly a bright thought, as though from heaven, flashes across the mind of the hackery-driver, who has been kicking and cudgelling to no purpose; he leaves the animal in the middle of the road and speedily returns with a whip of straw and a light. "There's nothing like a fire," says the hackery-driver, and he lights one without more ado, right under the tail of the animal. The upshot is that the beast and the gharre are put into motion again and the hackery-driver is quite contented. Now, our philosophy is identical with the hackery-driver's, and we exclaim with him "there's nothing like a fire;" but, unfortunately, it is more expensive to burn down theatres than it is to light whips of straw; the former is rather a costly stimulus, and our poets will not be stirred up by any fire less than that of a theatre, a Cathedral, or a Government House. If whips of straw would answer the purpose, we would keep one continually alight and have a set of vestals for the purpose.

But now for another effusion, a monody, or an elegy, or something longer, though certainly not better, than the sonnet we have just quoted. Let us see—ah! here we have it. About ten months ago, it was facetiously remarked, by a facetious writer, in the Englishman, that although Lord Glenelg and some others have names that they may be spelt either backwards or forwards, there is a gentleman here with a still more extraordinary name, inasmuch as that it is formed by the initial letter, without the assistance of any adjuncts at all. The writer might have added that it was a name, which consists of but four letters, and yet admits of an elision of either one, or two, or three of the said letters, without affecting the sound of the word. Well, that gentleman has favored us with a sort of an address to the good people of Calcutta, in which he expresses an amiable regret that he cannot build up the Theatre again. It is a remarkable circumstance that this gentleman is always wishing for a "giant's strength" to do something or other. The last time, if we remember right, it was to make love with, or to dedicate a book, or do something of the kind; but we apprehend that this same "giant's strength" would be far more usefully employed in building a theatre than in building up love-verses; and our author seems to think so too—but we will let him speak for himself.

VERSES DEDICATORY TO THE INHABITANTS OF CALCUTTA ON THE LOSS OF THE OLD THEATRE AND THE CHANCE OF GETTING A NEW ONE.

By K.

I.

Oh! for a giant's strength to build a tower,
A cloud-surmounting tower of piled brick,
That I might raise up in a single hour
Four brazen new walls, high, durable, and thick,
With roof and pillars, every thing complete,
And a grand portico looking on the street,
That I might write on some conspicuous place,
With a complacent smile upon my face,
"The new Calcuttians Theatre," and see
What a great feat has been performed by me.
But, oh! my friends, alas! it is too true,
That this is more—much more than I can do.
I'm a poor, feeble, tottering thing of nought,
And all the piles I raise are piles of thought.
If these could build up Theatres, I'm sure
Nor players nor spectators need despair;
For thoughts like mine are certain to endure,

And why not build our Theatres in the air,
E'en as we build our castles? they'd be higher,
And run no risk of being destroyed by fire!

II.

Oh! would that I could work, as Samson worked,
Though his masonic work was pulling 'down'—
Or Hercules, the Giant-God, who burked
The monsters of the earth, that my renown
As a great builder might be spread afar
From the Mahratta ditch to Candahar.
But I—what can I do—my feeble arm,
Which never was designed to do much harm,
Hangs weak and nerveless by my side, and when
It ought to wield a trowel holds a pen,—
Paper for bricks and ink in mortars place,
Whilst utter failure stares me in the face.

III.

But what if I do fail?—ay, what's the odds,
As long as we are happy as the Gods,
That we are not so strong—th' are other things
More worthy of my great endeavours
Than this same brick and-mortar work, my dears,
Fit not for poets but for Engineers.
I know 'tis wise to walk with downcast eyes,
For if we walk and gaze upon the skies,
Into a horse-pond we may chance to get,
And one may catch a cold from being wet,
Which is not quite so pleasant. No, I'll try
What I can do by my sweet poetry.
Kind public—gentle public—I aspire
Only to win my way unto your hearts,
That, since our Drury has been burnt by fire,
You, one and all, may act your proper parts;
Not on the stage—I ask nor plays nor pageants—
I only want to send you to—your agents.
For when I've got the coin I've got the power—
Money is strength—to do whatever is meet,
So if you wish me, gents, to "build a tower"—
Lay money at my feet.

IV.

'Twere a small tribute. Now, my dears, I'll tell
What once upon the King's high-road befell
A Yorkshire youth, who ever since his birth
Had been content to plough the Yorkshire earth;
Until one-day he thought, the more's the pity,
That he would like to visit Lunnun city;
So off he started, without fear or care,
On that most useful animal Shank's mare,
And walked ten miles, which done he ate him down
And sighed to think he'd ne'er reach Lunnun Town.
But it so chanced, when thinking how to shift,
A coach came by and offered Clod a lift—
Up jumped the youth behind—and he, who ne'er
Would have got safe to Town alone, was there
In less than twenty hours. What wonder then
That he should love those two indulgent men.
The guard and coachman, who had helped the clown
So very kindly up to Lunnun Town,
'Tis a sweet tale, and yet a tale of truth—
Ye are the Yorkshire coach, and I the youth.

Now, if this is not the means of enlisting the sympathies of the ditch in behalf of a new Theatre, we do not know what can be; for could there possibly be a more dexterous stroke of art than that last line of the poem,

Ye are the Yorkshire coach, and I the youth?

whereby the poet insinuates that without the help of the public to give him a lift, it is impossible that he should ever be able to accomplish the journey before him, i. e. to build a new Theatre. Poets are great hands at building, we know, but they principally build castles in the air, or such works, as the Roman gentleman alluded to, when he very modestly exclaimed.

Exegi monumentum ære perennius,

"I have built a monument more lasting than my own brass," which is saying a great deal for the monument, since it is very clear that the brass of the person, who wrote the line in question, must have been pretty considerable, as the Americans say. There was another Roman versifier too, who expressed himself in an equally modest manner, as to the durability of his poetical workmanship.

Jamque opus exegi, quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignis,

Nec poterit ferrum, nec edax abolere vetustas; which clearly shows the propriety of building our Theatres out of thoughts instead of making brick walls, paste-board linings, and wooden roofs. This has been hinted at by our correspondent K, who seems to have purloined an idea or so from Ovid; but we have no particular objection to that editorially, as we have been long enough before the public to know pretty well that a writer may filch a good deal from the classics, without any body finding him out.

But it is high time that we came forth with another effusion, and whom can we fix upon better than H. M. P., the Proteus of little Peddlington—he who, according to the Poet-Laureate of the Englishman, Mastered all modes from Cassio down to Puff.

a line which is meant ingeniously to entice the reader into a belief that Cassio is a dignified tragic character, and the uttermost antipodes of Puff. Now had it been "from Coriolanus down to Puff," it would have been a little more descriptive of "our Proteus;" but Coriolanus was just three syllables too many, and we do not know that "our Proteus" ever played the old Roman, though we have no doubt he would do it very well. To talk of "all modes from Cassio down to Puff," is like talking of all coins from a penny to a half penny, which, as all accountants know, is not a very particularly comprehensive category. We do not write this because we are desirous to criticize the Editor of "Mr. Yawkins's annual," but because we are anxious that "our Proteus" should have due justice done him, as a versatile actor, which most assuredly he is; and not only a versatile actor, but a versatile genius to boot, a player, a painter, a musician and a poet, yea, a poet fresh and vigorous,

Like some great river rushing down alone, as Mr. Alfred Tennyson says in one of his sonnets, a poet who has drunk deeply of the "Draught of Immortality," and has for his motto "Non omnis moriar," or, as we have it in English, "never say die." Ready, as we are at all times, to prove the truth of our assertions, whatever they may happen to be, we bring forward the following fine descriptive poem in justification of the praises we have lavished upon our Protean H. M. P. Our readers will observe that there is no sentiment in it, nothing maudlin and lackadaisical. "Our Proteus" has no love for sentiment,—his gorge rises at the very mention of it; but he is all for the outward and the melodramatic, and he treats of the actions of men not of their feelings. The commencement of his Poem on the burning of "our Drury," is very grand and Ossianic. It is a capital thing too to begin by asking a question, as it enables you to show your learning in answering it.

THE FIRE-KING.

BY H. M. P.

Where are the beams and the rafters all?
They have met in a blackened ruin,—
A thousand eyes have beheld their fall,
A thousand voices are hallooing—
From the strong man's shout to the baby's squall,
And none are so very unsical,
Every man is standing there,
Watching the flames in the blood red air;
And some debate how best they may
Bring the huge engines into play,
Against the walls of the blazing pile,
And aim the rampant Fire-King's smile;
Whilst others shake their heads the while,
And say that tanks and tanks of water
Will never save the bricks and mortar.
"Hear me," said Birch, "ye potent ditchers,
Run all of ye, and fill your pitchers—
Ditchers who dwell in Esplanade Row,
Ditchers, who dwell in Beazar galled Bow,
Every one of ye high and low,
Attend my counsel, and I will show,
With Judge McMahon's aid, how best
The Fire-King's progress to arrest—
Fill first."

And as he spoke, there fell
Deep stillness on the gazing crowd,
Until a voice cried "Go to hell!"—
A voice of anger shrill and loud;
And the Ditchers looked in each others' face,
Wondering whence the voice came forth
And though they glanced from place to place,
From East to West, from South to North,
None knew whence came it—'till at last
An old old man of the Brahmin caste Cried, with a faltering voice of fear,
"Woe! woe! 'tis the Fire-King's voice you hear!"

Away went the bricks and the mortar all
Rushing to earth like a water-fall;
And the blood red flames, they flamed high
In the midnight air right gallantly—

But mighty Birch, undaunted gazed
Upon the wild fire as it blazed,
And bid the Fire-King do his worst
Upon the bricks and mortar,
And cried aloud, "Thou fiend accurst,

"I'll vanquish thee with water."
 Searce had he spoke, when letting fly
 A stream of water straight and long,
 Birch bade the Fire-King "mind his eye;"
 And squirted into it dexterously
 From the engine pipe so strong.
 The Fire-King reeled beneath the blow
 But quickly started up again
 And "turned up snooks,"* and cried "No Go!"—
 But go it was far with might and main Brave Birch unto the charge returned,
 And where the Fire-King fiercest burned
 There was he with a stream of water,
 Playing on the bricks and mortar,
 Until the Fire-King reeled and staggered
 Beneath the weight of blows that fell;
 And he who had so lately swaggered
 And bade the Hero "go to b—ll,"
 With drooping head and body dwindled,
 A ghost of the fire that erst was kindled,
 Stood there, a sight most sad to see,
 Shivering, shrinking visibly,
 And flustering out a cry for "quarter,"
 As on him poured huge streams of water;
 Till Birch, collecting all his power,
 Hurled on him one terrific shower,
 Which brought the Fire-King to the ground,
 While a hissing and a crackling sound,—
 The death-cry of the man of might—
 Broke through the stillness of the night,
 And his blood-red arms no more were seen
 Tossing about, where they had been.
 Then rose from the great crowd a cry,
 That split the air, of "Victory!"—
 And in less than half a minute after
 Was heard a death like peal of laughter,
 And a hallow voice that said "My eye!
 You've got a famous victory—
 You think you have, you men accurat,
 But I've burnt your Drury to cinders first."

Now every body must see, who has any eyesight, that this is a very spirited production. It has nothing about tears, or sighs, or broken hearts in it—broken heads are more to the purpose. It is graphic, stirring, and intense—and almost equal to the "Draught of Immortality;" but we must not say more about it, for we have an effusion waiting us, which it would be cruel to keep longer from our readers.

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

MY DEAR SIR,—Although Dr. Corbyn has been pleased to inform the world that I never address any one except through my chaplain, and though the statement is true, at least as far as regards the putter forth of it, who, being an Editor himself, ought to claim as much consideration from me as his brother Editors, I am induced upon this occasion to depart from the rule, which, if not laid down by me, is laid down for me, and to address these few lines to you under my own hand, as they relate to a most important matter, the treatment of which I should be unwilling to trust to any other person than myself.

* Note by the Author.—To "turn up snooks," is to place your thumb to the tip of your nose, with an extension motion of the four other fingers.—Vide unpublished proceedings of a late Military Trial.

You are doubtless aware that I have headed the subscription list, in behalf of certain burnt out theatrical performers, with a donation of a hundred rupees. I am no friend to Theatres any more than I am to Sunday Newspapers. I am opposed to both and would exterminate both; but, nevertheless, Sir, if your establishment in Ha-e Street were to be burnt down and your property not insured, I would subscribe to help you in your distress as a suffering brother mortal. If I err in this it is one of those errors for which I trust most readily to be forgiven. But with regard to the players, there was another reason and a most important one too for my subscribing; it was this—cogitating in my study as to the propriety or the impropriety of affixing my name to the subscription list, I was joined by my learned friend the Archdeacon, who is well known to all the inhabitants of British India as the most erudite scholar in the East; and he informed me, confidentially as it were, that he thought there could be no harm in my subscribing, as he was thoroughly convinced in his own mind, that the word Theatre had the same root as the words theology, theocracy and the like; which root, I need not say, is the Greek substantive Θεος numen. Now I have no reason to doubt the correctness of the Archdeacon's derivation; I know him to be an etymologist of the utmost sagacity, and in the present instance, there was something so plausible in his assertions, that I gave in to the truth of them at once. There was, in the olden religious ceremonies of a barbarous and heathenish age, so much dancing and singing and playing, and so much of gesticulation and grimace, that they resembled, externally, profane play-actings and indeed were little better in spirit. I have reason to believe that the edifices, wherein these ceremonies were performed, bore originally the name of Theatra (quasi Θεου ατρία) or halls dedicated to the divinity. You will observe that one word is Latin and the other Greek, but that is all in favor of my argument.

Having thus determined that a theatre was originally a church, I of course felt no hesitation in subscribing to the burnt out theatrical performers, and I am sure that you, in common with all my flock, will perceive that I was perfectly justified under these circumstances, in doing the act of charity I did; but it is not on this account that I address you; but because I read in your paper a few days ago a complaint that the poets of Calcutta had been somewhat lax in celebrating the demise of the Chowringhee Theatre. Now I do not hold it to be consonant with my dignity as a prelate to write verses on this, or any other occasion, unless they be in a foreign tongue, by showing my proficiency in which I astonish the natives and enhance my dignity to no inconsiderable extent. I therefore send you, with my best compliments, a copy of Latin verses, written by me in imitation, I may say translation, of a beautiful monody, that appeared lately in the Englishman, as I am given to understand, from the pen of my esteemed friend Mr. W. H. McNaghten, Envoy to the court of Shah Soojahool-Moolk, and late Secretary to the Government of India. It is some time since I have written any Latin verses, but these I believe will scan and prove, and perhaps I may be permitted to say that they keep pretty close to the spirit of the original. Hoping that they will be deemed worthy of a place amongst your Poemata Bengalensia,

I am, my dear Sir, yours faithfully,
 Fishers' Palace, June 6, 1859. D. CALCUTT

IN THEATRO DEFUNCTUM.

Nox erat; inque urbem requies nocturna sedebat,
 Candebant que urbis lunc splendens columnas,
 Atria silebant tenebris spatiosa profundis,
 Quæ festa exornavit amor ridensque Juventus;
 Jamque vacabantur penetralia vasta Theatri,
 Quod, multos annos, fuit ædæ alma Thalæ,
 Ac ubi Melpomine lachrymarum elicit imbres—
 Omnia silebant—subitò cum cæla rubescunt,
 Luna rubet, campi que rubent, et clamor ubique
 Vocibus è timidis resonat—nam ævix habebat
 Muleiber immissis, et collum Druria nostra
 Flacit honoratum—Vos oh! qui, Thespica amantes
 Gan lia, sic fugitis mala vitæ multa prementis,
 Et petitis, scenam spectantes, mergere curas,
 Hunc casum plorate—Oh! vos quæis verba poetæ
 Delicias præbent, qui scenica gesta videre
 Gaudet, affectusque animi, more-que, mod-que,
 Cor vindex, coelestem animam, mentemque dolosam—
 Sublatos heroum enses, ietumque tyrannum—
 Qui gaudet spectare proci tentamina mille,
 Ancillam æstui m, per-vexatumque parentem,
 Et pressam nimium crudeli patre puellam—
 Deplorate omnes, quos hæc spectacula ducunt—
 Druria nostra nihil nisi pulvis et atra ruina est.
 Druria, quæ nobis placuit gratissimus Allaop,
 Quæ Wilannus erat vetulus juvenisque vicissim,
 Quæ risum et lachrymas æquavit Wiliamsius albus,
 Et pinquis Playfaira equitem simulavit obesum—
 Druria, quæ Maurum finxit Palmerus Otellum
 Aut benè monstravit Romani gesta Tribuni—
 Quæ varias facies assumpsit Ilirudo venusta,
 Et Parkerus erat Miles et Criticus ambo—
 Quæ Francis, Regina velut, caloavit arenam,
 Et Modus arte suâ mortalia pectora cepit—
 Horum multa algent obscuro corda sepulchro,
 At vivi fatum flebunt lugubre theatri;
 Ac memor illa cævi felicia Thespica Turba
 Semper erit; vivetque Theatrum mente repostum.*

Shall we go on after this? no—yes—yes—no—certainly not—by no manner of means —for after this whatever we adduce must be flat, stale, and unprofitable. If the author of the Sunyasæ had sent us an address we would have inserted it at all hazard; but after these versus Episcopales the poetry of no other man is worthy to appear. So, gentle reader, farewell.

Valete et plaudite.—Hurk. May 10.

THE BURNING OF THE THEATRE.

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

SIR,—Your correspondent BENJAMIN BLUSTER little knew, when he approached your poetical department, how many mighty geniuses were at work, upon the theme he suggests. He rightly remarks, that the fate of the London Drury, called forth the noblest effusions of the Muse, from Byron to Busby; and now let him learn, that as in life and in death, our Drury resembled that of the Great Metropolis, so has her fate already been sung, by many a mighty master. Peace to her ashes! in honor of which,
 and in commemoration of her fate, I have been favored with the accompanying beautiful poetical effusions, each from a well known pen, so that your reproach and theirs is taken away. I now beg to claim the prizes you have awarded, which being for-forwarded to me, I shall take due care that each be duly transmitted to the author of each of piece herewith sent.

Your very obediently,

June 5, 1839.

JOSIAH STUBBS.

THE FATAL WOOD

OR

THE ENCHANTED ROOF.

1.

The bell in Old Drury for rehearsal had rung,
 And the actors hasten'd there;
 But the tragic service was scarcely done,
 When the Manager's warning thus begun,
 As he got up from his chair.

2.

"I rede ye, my brethren all around,
 Now well my counsel mera;
 From you wooden roof turn your steps away,
 Its joists are unsafe, make no delay
 Beneath it, after dark,

3.

"And if through the Pirate's scenes you must pass
 Ere the shadows of night prevail;
 Let a humbugging statement first be said,
 And let an insurance be duly made,
 Lest the fire-brand your scenes assail.

4.

"Though the sea flows clear, and bright the flowers
 Beneath yon wood* are found;
 Naught unholy there harmed may dwell,
 Amongst the accursed tribes of Hell,
 On that enchanted ground."

5.

Frier Ambrose, arose with the evening's light,
 To the wood-roof he took his way;
 He was very desirous to see a good sight,
 And he was not so drunk as he very well might
 And he'd plenty of money to pay.

6.

He thought as he wondered, that naught so fair
 His eyes in Calcutta had seen;
 Paul Jones and his crew, with his air debonnaire,
 His piratical gang each a de'l may care,
 Strutting in room of green.

7.

And the scented breath of the coconut oil,
 On the breeze that sighed, in the slips
 Was borne; 'till relieving their pain and toll,
 Each laid down his gun and his pistol and foil,
 And the bottle was put to his lips.

* The wooden roof!—Printer's devil.

8.
The Friar stood still, for a sudden view
Frightened him out of his wits;
A flame so fierce, and grilling too,
Burst all around, and then such a to do!
Calcutta had fallen into fire.

9.
Cash cannot be found in the halls of Care,
He quarrels often with Pride;
In these moving scenes he often strays,
But the devil a bit the Theatre pays,
No dividend we divide.

10.
Then the manager commanded the legend to write
On a parchment roll so fair,
That subscribers might mark,
And of squibs in the dark,
And of wooden roofs beware.

11.
So the house was burnt, and a hundred years
'Tis destined to sleep in its ashes;
And 'tis doubted much, when its form again rears,
If its draughts any other house eases.

W. C. H.

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN C. T. AND HIS GUEST.

GUEST.—Why C. T. the Theatre is burnt down.

C. T.—I am glad of it.

G.—Sure your inhuman breast is framed of steel.
For public griefs, nor private, can you feel.

C. T.—My friend, you err. I willingly confess,
For public griefs I feel extremely less Than private. I, the public never saw
But have my brother, so I own my law
Is first to benefit my brother, then
To benefit the public—own that when
A patriot tells me he would rather die
Than that the public suffer—I deny,— Without directly saying "that's a lie."

Man, must depend on man, and this great rule
Observ'd, adversity's severer school
Would soon be soften'd. Man was made for man
A mutual friend, but few that truth can scan.
Let but earth's sons, earth's kindred own, we all
Are men and brothers—and poor worms withal.
Now comes an hurricane, an earthquake now,
And now a fall disease, to lay us low.
Sport of the elements, what e'er we be,
Brothers at least in stern calamity.

Let then our hearts expand, and let us feel
Each for another. Hang the public weal.

I hate a patriot, and all those I hate
Who mourn the public, fight their neighbours' fate.
I love the man that loves his brother, whom
He's seen; the public he has not, their doom
If he affect to feel and scorn his friend.
Brutus may come to life—but there's an end
To all my virtue ever will defend.

Burn'd is the Theatre, and well it may,
'Twas scarce worth burning, and its wall away.

Another site well chosen, another man,
Where all may congregate—all see and hear.
But are the house be raised, the arena mark'd,
Let those, in our Old Drury, cause embark'd,
Who stood, who fell, with Drury, yet survive,
Oh let us give to them, the means to live,
We lose enjoyment, they the bread of life;
The fiction we, but they the real strife.

Of human woes encounter, and shall we
On life's great stage enact feigned sympathy?
Perish the thought! Their cause is ours, by all That hope shall glorify when life's curtain falls,
When the last scene shall close, and each shall try,
His part performed, with decency to die.
This was all Caesar could, when Caesar fell;
And all Augustus, "Have I acted well?"
The good man meets his end with nobler thought,
Not acting, but performing, what he ought.

C. T.

STANZAS.

Too late for hope, too soon to shun
The pang of hope denied,
I saw thee blaze, like summer's sun,
Though in that blaze thou'st died.

Few deemed thee such—there liv'd but few,
Who scan'd thy hollow roof;
But I have mark'd it well and knew,
Combustible its stuff.

My lips were sealed—I could not say,
That they would not insure;
But well I knew, alas! that they,
Deem'd not the risk secure.

Such trusting love I could not hope,
Your policy would "come;"
Not you how near, whilst you triumphed so,
The altar to the tomb.

But when you build again, above
Be sure to have a roof,
No emblem of a paltry love
Burn'd out—but one that's proof.

T. D.

THE BURNING.

The lamps were all put out; full many a nose
Proclaimed, by measured tones, the Town's repose.
Sleep, the great lover, had stretched at length
The puny whipster, and the man of strength.
The eye of beauty, curtained by its lid,
Like the great eye of day, from man was hid.
Hands that late moved, and tongues that lately talk'd,
Ears that late heard, and legs that lately walk'd—
All, all are still, all quiet, silence keep.
And tired Bengalia's mighty heart's asleep.
High in the dark blue vault ascends the moon,
And now, declining, marks 'tis past night's noon;
When, lo!—a shout—a gathering sound
Sleep murdering, bursts and breaks the calm profound.
"What mean these shouts?" all eagerly enquire—
There needs no word to tell—bursts forth the "fire."
"Where, where?" a thousand ask; oh! tell us where?
A thousand answer, it is here, 'tis there.
Some say the Racket Court, and some the Jail,
And some suggest—whilst all the world grows pale—
'Tis our own Drury. Ah! prophetic name,
As was thy life, thy exit just the same!
Here, beneath thy wooden roof, laugh'd Falstaff; here
The Beefeater Club oft quaff'd down Alop's beer.
Here David Wilson exquisitely shone
In dainties to a nicety just done.
All, all in vain!—remembrance sickens now,
And thought another wrinkle lends the brow.
The wooden roof, and wooden stage expire,
And men of sentiment to bed retire.

McN.

SONNET.

How beautiful! The sun's more fervid rays
Give life to worlds and systems, and sustain;
But on his burning disk man dare not gaze;
But night's bright sovereign rules with milder reign.
On that I love, I love to gaze, as e'en
Upon thy beauty, radiant and benign
As woman in her tenderness, Night's queen!
The day is man's, for toil—the night is thine,
The lover's, and the poet's. Soft!—what sound
Earthy, and bringing down to earth, invades
Mine ear reluctant? Heavens! ascending round
A murky light the moonbeam scene pervades—
Shouts burst,—commingling cries and flames ascend,
At once the poet's dream, and Theopie glories end.

D. L. R.

Though Gods and columns frown, as though [crime,
Inspired by grief, e'en S—— must rhyme. 'twere
Full'n is our Drury, and from scenes aloof
I never more can act my dear Tartuffe—
(So I pronounced it, though the critics knew
The French do not pronounce the u as oo—)
The great arena where I play'd the part
All own I master; for 'tis next mine heart.
Where shall I now Tartuffe perform? ah where?—
"The world's my oyster" I'll perform it there.
Drury, where oft my great attempts were shewn,
Where e'en by acting, real friends I won;
Where in my aptest character, Tartuffe,
Of Mollers's talents I afforded proof,
Drury is now no more, and all confess,
S-t-k-y has now, one character the less.
Cats have nine lives—nine characters I own,
A humdrum honest man has only one;
But of the various characters I claim,
Tartuffe's, most valued, is consumed in flame.
Well, I'm resolv'd—my other eight I'll play.
Boldly and bravely, in the face of day—
Tartuffe, my private friends shall only see
In mine, and B-k-d's place of Agency.

J. H. S.

THE SUPPERLESS REHEARSAL.

The piece is performed, the Rehearsal is o'er,
And Paul Jones and his crew, turned out of the door;
They go, but behind them there lingered a spark,
And the vainglorious it wrought let all managers mark.

Every light was put out, all was thought safe and sound,
And soon every eye's closed in slumbers profound;
But the spark that there lingered soon burst into flame,
And the blood-redden'd skies Drury's downfall proclaim.

The child that's unborn, when his age shall relate,
To the son of the supperless, Drury's sad fate, Shall exclaim, "oh the niggers! though the noobs were
The House they had saved, had they furnished your [bustibles,

Though the roof was of wood, and quite full of com.
'Twere safe had they furnished sufficient digestibles;
Paul Jones had again washed in blood his lee scuppers,

[suppers,
Had they not sent him home, with his crew, without

For had they remained o'er their claret and ice,
They'd have smelt out the smouldering smoke in a trice
And each starting up, at the danger he names,
They'd have stifled the fire e'er it burst into flames!

Then managers hear, 'tis the gist of my tale,
Let no niggard maxims in future prevail;
When Paul Jones has performed his piratical work,
Let him play in the green room a good knife and fork.

To the house who brings bumpers, by making us laugh
Or cry, when no o'er, should be challenged to quaff
His bumper of claret, right mellow and good,
And had ye bestow'd it, your House still had stood.

When tired of mock-fighting and being blown up,
You can't but in reason invite him to sup;
And sure 'tis far better to practise such bonhomie [economy.

Than to have your house burned, through a wretched
I have heard, and believe, that it's better by far,
Not to lose a good sheep for a pice worth of tar;
Your house if you'd save, should you ever repair it,
Why prepare a good supper, and plenty of claret.

G. T.

THE LATE CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

"ALAS! POOR YONICK."

I.

In days of yore there stood
On No. — Chowringhee road,
An elongated mansion;
Inside its roof the canopy was green,
And all without it was turnation black,
E'en passing comprehension.
Within its walls the people met,
To see their neighbours strut and fret,
In simple imitation,
Of Kings and Queens and Knights of old;
For in those days there was no sin,
Or crime, in "personation."

II.

As time rolled on, the mansion changed,
The Skimmer of the seas became,
Commanded by a Turk;
Her decks were mann'd by Algerines,
All all was cleared between her beams,
A prize had hove in sight;
And as she neared within a shot,
A hot "demonition" flame appeared,
From out the pirate's hold,
And rapidly her hull consumed,
In spite of the "demon'd" water spouts
Which o'er her rigging pour'd.

III.

Time roll'd on, and as of yore, there stood
The mansion, but the tarnation roof,
Was seen to rise no more,
And the green painted canopy,
Which hid the Cherubims above,
Was also floored.
Then the Gentiles of the land bewailed,
Their mighty loss in many languages,
To the sorrowing public.
And the High Priest of the city wrote,
A classical consolation,
In the Latin tongue!

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

DEAR SIR, Observing your liberal offer of a prize for the best poetical composition in commemoration of the lamentable destruction of the Chowringhee Theatre, I am induced to offer myself as a candidate, though with very slight hopes of winning the prize from the crowd of "time-honoured" and distinguished bards, whom your proclamation will doubtless bring into the arena.

I have frequently had the honour of appearing in your columns under the head of "LOCAL AFFAIRS," but have hitherto enjoyed no wider field for the display of my poetical abilities, than such as is afforded by the Pic-Nic, the Embryo, and other minor publications of this metropolis. Being, however, ambitious of awaking

"A louder and a loftier strain,"

I snatch the opportunity afforded by your promise to insert all that is sent to you on the subject in point, happy in the reflection that though I may fail of obtaining the prize, I shall, for once at least, enjoy the inexpressible satisfaction of seeing my poetical luccubrations honoured with a place in a respectable paper.

I am, dear Sir, yours,

Puddoosookur, June 7, 1839.

ANNALINER

ODE.

ON THE NEVER-BY-ANY-POSSIBILITY-TO-BE-FOROTTEN AND NEVER BY-ANY-SUFFICIENTLY-TO-BE-DEPLORED CATASTROPHE, THE DESTRUCTION, BY FIRE, OF "OUR DRURY," ON THE MORNING OF THE 31ST MAY 1839.

I.

It was a night to suit a lady's dreams
Of love in groves, "and all that sort of thing,"
Which moon-shine poets like to take for themes,
When they their most pathetic strain would sing:
It was a night of beauty—o'er heaven's field,
The stars, like sheep, flock'd round their shepherdess,
No prim, pinched Phoebe, but a buxom Bess,
With face as round as youthful Nereus's shield.
It was a night of splendour—bright as day
The moonbeams on each unroofed "palace" lay,
And on the but close-by it shed such light,
That many a maud of oil was saved that night.

II.

And never shone the moon more brightly,
On fair Chowringhee's classic dome,
Where dwelt Thalia gay and sprightly,
With grave Melpomene, "at home."
Beneath that dome, since set of sun,
Had many a gallant deed been done,
Heroic feats performed;
Three damsels from their guardians won,
A Yankee frigate stormed.
But the fight was done, the storm was o'er,
And victors and vanquished, friends once more,
Their brandy-pawnee quaff'd:
"The Pilot" and crew shook hands all round,
And chaunted the chorus of "Homeward bound,"
As they tost off their "Sleeping Draught."

III.

Now they are gone, and all is still again,
Save that shrill music which the sleepless hear
Where Gangarus or Buxoo, love-lorn swain,
With voice and tom-tom, serenades his dear.
Even he hath ceased—his strain is heard no more
Its last, long, quivering cadence, ending in a snore.

IV.

But, hark! a fearful and unearthly cry
Of mingled grief and fear,—
A cry which but to hear,
Makes us feel all over queer,
Though we hardly can tell why.
Listen! again! again! it rings,
The chozadar from his slumber springs,
The adjutants raise their heads from their wings,
As that dread sound rushes by.
Did you not hear it? Listen! once again
It peals across Fort William's plain
Where the jackalls, aroused, are howling amain:—
Chowringhee Natch Ghur, julla jata hy.

V.

Alas! 'tis even so, for see where soars
Yon smoke-cloud, staining heavens glorious blue;
See! see! it bursts from windows and from doors—
Alas! alas! that mournful cry was true.
Thousands on thousands gather thick and fast;
Fire-engines, like mad steam-engines, whirl past,
Each lead and followed by a shouting crew.
Alas! alas! these are but small affairs,
Against a fire, what are such spouts as theirs.
(Oh! had we here the "Phoenix" and the "Sun,"
The "British," ne'er in peril known to fail;
The "Union," that did never danger shun,
The huge "Excubator," that spouteth like a whale:
Had we but these, such with its gallant train,
Our Drury's walls might yet unscathed remain.

VI.

But list to the multitude's phrenzied shout
As the flames rush forth with a horrible rout
And high'r, high'r, high'r,
Towards the moon aspire,
Till the dome is wrent in fire.
Which no "Phoenix" could put out.
As flames the Englishman when lighted taper
Is set, by vex'd subscriber, to his page;
So like to that, or other dry waste-paper,
Flare up at once, scenes, boxes, pit and stage—
Even the brand-new Sea first gluts the Fire-god's rage.
Now bursts it forth in one tremendous blaze,
Whizzing and whirling at a fearful rate—
The multitudes regard it with amaze.
Or backward rush to shun impending fate.
Stand, aloof! stand aloof!
For the lofty roof,

Is tottering o'er our heads: Ah! that flash
In flame envelopes all,
And beams and rafters fall
With a crash.

VII.

Ah! all in vain are engines now,
Though still they hopelessly play on;
In vain their ceaseless torrents flow
At thy command, brave McMahon!
In vain their bags the higesties ply,
Those ceaseless torrents to supply!
In vain, O! Bireh, at thy dread name,
The awe-struck firemen toil in flames:
A thousand sable heroes dare,— but all
Is vain, and when the dawning morn shall wake,
'Twill see a clean swept house "and no mistake," Chowringhee's once fair pile, a black and broken wall.

VIII.

Day dawned upon Calcutta's spires,
Which in the sunlight shone,
As they had not flashed back the fires
Which had such ruin done.
And proud Calcutta's palace-homes
Rose smiling to the sky,
As though the farest of her domes
Did not in ashes lie.
But thousands swelled the general wail,
And many a gallant man grew pale,
When roused to hear the Aapit's tale—
A tale of woe—and told with tearful eye,
A tale whose burden shall be long
The theme of many a mournful song—
Chowringhee Natch Ghur-jalla giya hy.
Hurkuru, May 11.]

SUPREME COURT.

APRIL 30, 1839

Before Sir J. P. Grant in Chambers.

IN EQUITY.

MONA RANEE RUSSUNT COMARREN D. SOODLER COOPOREAH AND ANOTHER, REPRESENTATIVES OF MUDDENMOHUN COOPOREAH.

The Advocate-General said, that he had been instructed to move for the appointment of a Receiver upon affidavits before answer; but the answer of the defendants having just been filed, and the complainant having had no opportunity of ascertaining what the answer was, the motion must stand over; and it was merely mentioned in order to save the notice.

Mr. Clarke for the defendants did not object.

ULLUNGMOHUN DOBSEE V. RAMSEEBUCK MULLICK AND ANOTHER.

This was a motion which stood over from last Term. It was a motion upon notice, on the equity side, for the payment in Court of certain sums of money, amounting on the whole to Rs. 538,678, admitted by the answer to be in the hands of the defendant, and for the appointment of a Receiver of one moiety of the real and personal estate. [The motion was also for the restoration to the complainant of certain jewels, the Sreedhun or separate property of the complainant, but to this there was no opposition.]

This bill was filed in 1835, for a partition of the real and personal estate of Juggomohun Mullick, and for an account, by the widow of his eldest son Gourychurn Mullick, deceased, against the younger son and the widow of Juggomohun. The affidavits of the complainant set forth an alleged misappropriation of the estate and breach of trust, and stated the whole sum received by her maintenance from the defendant was one rupee eight annas monthly, although very large real and personal property belonging to the joint estate was admitted to be in his possession. The affidavits of the defendants positively denied the misappropriation and improper dealing with the estate, admitting only the sum of 85,000 rupees to be invested in personal loans and in dealings in opium. These affidavits and the answer itself, also set up a case of fraud and embezzlement of the estate against the deceased Gourychurn, for which it was charged that the complainant, as his widow and representative, was accountable; and it also appeared that a cross bill for an account in this matter, had been filed by the defendants. The affidavits of the defendant said nothing about the trifling monthly sum allowed to the widow, (the complainant,) but it appeared that she had left the house and was residing with her own father Bustumoss Mullick.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton supported the rule, and proceeded to read the admissions in the answer, of the sums which had come to the hands of the defendant, Ramseebuck Mullick.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that the admissions only seemed to be of receipts, and as there was no statement whatever of the amount of disbursements, and no admission of a balance and debtor and creditor account, non constat that the sums admitted to be received now remained in the hands of the defendant.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton contended, that the defendant having charged himself with the receipts in his answer, was bound to discharge himself by the same instrument, otherwise he was concluded. If a man admits a certain fund to have come to his hands as trustee, and does not show how he has applied it, he shall not be allowed to discharge himself upon a mere hypothetical suggestion, that he has applied it according to the trust. But even admitting, that the admission of the receipt is only prima facie evidence of the present possession, the proof becomes absolute, when it is considered that the defendant had full notice, and yet has not denied it, when he had an opportunity of doing so, by his affidavit. The question next arises, whether the Court will upon motion, make an interlocutory order for the payment into Court of the specific sums to which the admissions extend. By analogy to the case of an executor, the Court ought to grant the application even without especial circumstances being disclosed; for where an executor admits a fund to be in his hands, the money will be ordered into Court without proof of breach of trust or other misconduct. This is the present rule in Courts of Equity, (Strange v. Harris, 3 Brown Ch. Ca.) though formerly it was otherwise. So in the case of a trustee, Rothwell v. Rothwell, 2 Sim. and Stuart. The general rule is in fact is, that whatever be the character in which the party is made defendant, the complainant is entitled to have a disputed fund, or a fund in which his interest is admitted by the answer, brought into Court lit pendente and retained there for security. The same rule must be applied to the case of a Hindoo manager of a joint estate. Again, the question is not effected in the least degree by the alleged fraud and waste committed by the deceased Gourychurn in the lifetime of his father. This would give no claim for an account to the brother. (the defendant.) since at that time he had no legal interest in the estate, and at all events even an unadjusted account, it clearly established between complainant and defendant would not prejudice the right to have the money brought into Court. The application in the present case for the appointment of a Receiver is founded upon breach of trust and mal-administration of the estate, and it is contended that the affidavits of the defendant himself clearly support the charge. He has no right to employ the trust funds in opium speculations and precarious loans upon personal security; and the doing so is a breach of trust. He allows the complainant no more than the sum of one rupee eight annas a month, although upon a partition she will be entitled to one-third of the whole property; and this certainly cannot be considered a due administration of the estate of which he is manager.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke opposed the application for the payment into Court, and for the appointment of a Receiver. There is no analogy between the Hindoo manager of a joint estate and either an executor or a trustee, because an executor or trustee, as such have no interest in the property. Such a doctrine never was broached in the Supreme Court before, and if the principle were to be established consequences would be ruinous. If in every family suit for a partition of the joint estate, the complainant could reply as a matter of course for the payment of all the personal fund into Court, Hindoo Society as at present constituted must cease to exist. The whole of the property might be, and often is, embarked in trade, or otherwise employed and invested for the general benefit of the joint family: and before the Court will interfere either to call in the funds, or to appoint a Receiver, misconduct in the management must be clearly established. Of this there is no proof whatever in the case before the Court. Trading and shroffing may constitute breach of trust in the case of executors and trustees, but it is not so in the case of a Hindoo manager, for it is his duty to carry on the trading and dealing in which the capital was previously employed, and generally to employ the funds as may appear most profitable and beneficial. The only case in which a Receiver was granted by this Court in the instance of a joint Hindoo estate, was in the case of the Chowdhies, but that was only with reluctance and under very special circumstances. If there is any analogy between the joint heirs of property according to the laws and usages of Hindoos and any estate known to the English law, it is perhaps between them and tenants in common. Now it has been actually decided, that in a suit among tenants in common, the Court will not grant a Receiver (Street v. Anderlan, 4 Bro. C. C.) at all events not unless there be proof of total exclusion; Tyson v. Fairclough, 2 Nun and Stu. There is no total exclusion here. The complainant was not forced to leave the family house, and having voluntarily left it, she forfeits her title to maintenance. But besides all this it is very doubtful whether upon the taking of the account, there will be any ultimate balance due to the complainant, for the answer charges that her husband made away with the estate, not only in the lifetime of his father, but since his death.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton said, that this did not appear in the affidavit, and they objected to any part of the answer being read as evidence for the defendant, although the complainant had read other passages in her own favour. They cited Dumville v. Soily, 2 Russ Rep.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke urged, that a different rule prevailed in the case of a motion and in the hearing of the cause. The answer was good as an affidavit, being equally upon oath, and as this answer was upon the oath of two, it carried even more weight than the solitary affidavit of the complainant. The case of Orchard v. Mortimer, 2 Ves. Jun. supported the authority of the maxim that "responsio unius non omnino audiatur."

Mr. Leith was heard at considerable length in reply. Sir J. P. Grant said, that he should express no positive opinion at present upon the main questions raised. How far the court would, under any circumstances, be disposed to appoint a Receiver or to order money to be paid into the hands of the Accountant-General, in the case of a family suit against the manager of a Hindoo estate. With respect to the alleged breach of trust, he was certainly inclined to the opinion, that trading with the funds of the estate could not be charged against him as a breach of trust or dereliction in the administration of the property, as it might be in the case of executors or trustees.

Mr. Leith then urged, that at all events the complainant ought to be allowed to have her own share of the fund, the one third part to which she was at least prima facie entitled, paid into Court, and to have a Receiver appointed of the same proportion of the real estate. The circumstance that the maintenance to which she was entitled, had been withheld, was alone a sufficient ground for this very reasonable application.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that he would go over the affidavits and the other papers in the cause, and pronounce his decision on a future day.—Harkn, May 2.

INSOLVENT COURT.

MAY 3, 1839.

(Before Sir W. H. Seton, Commissioner.)

IN THE MATTER OF GOVINDCHUNDER SEIT AN INSOLVENT.
Discharged without opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF BRIJENATH.
The insolvent not being in custody, the case was postponed by consent till next court day.

IN THE MATTER OF RUBEN VERA.

Discharged without opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF F. MORAN.

In this case an attachment was applied for and obtained against T. Moran, he having failed to act up to the order of the court, to produce certain Company's papers belonging to the Insolvent's estates, and the insolvent was consequently remanded until next Court day.

IN THE MATTER OF W. B. BENTON.

Mr. Leith was Council for the Insolvent.

This insolvent was examined by Mr. Pearson, on behalf of Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co., the opposing creditors.

Insolvent deposed. I know Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co. I am indebted to them I believe 14,000 rupees, for money borrowed, house rent included. They seized and sold my property at the Sheriff's sale. I do not know what the property sold for, I, at the time I contracted these debts, valued my property at 30 or 35,000 rupees. I never either sold, removed, or gave away any silver plate. I had a billiard table. Mr. Mountain, my lodger, had one, but it was never put up. Mr. Mountain kept then a private hotel, he now keeps billiard room. My debts amount to about 30 or 35,000 rupees. I have looked at my schedule and I am prepared to swear to its correctness. The billiard table was taken away the day previous to the seizure of my property, by Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co. I never told the Examiner that it was only one hour before the seizure. It might be 8 or 10 hours before it. I was aware that a seizure would take place for some time before it took place. The billiard table was not removed to avoid being seized then. The Advocate-General put in a letter which the Insolvent acknowledged was written by the Insolvent's directions, and it is signed by the Insolvent. By this letter it appears, that the billiard table had been purchased by Mr. Mountain in the Insolvent's name, and requesting Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co. to deliver the table to Mr. Mountain; and it further appears, that the Insolvent had credited Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co., the price of this table. The Insolvent explained thus, as he owed Mr. Mountain 700 rupees, this table was bought in the Insolvent's name, as an accommodation to Mr. Mountain. The deponent added, Mr. Mountain and I never carried on any business in partnership—I have paid Mr. Mountain in full, Mr. White, of the Exchange, first informed me that an execution was issued against my property, but I had been threatened with it for some time before. I never told Mr. Thompson that I first heard of the seizure being issued by a person attached to the Supreme Court. I paid Mr. Mountain in full on the morning of the day the seizure took place. I do not recollect whether at that time I know of the execution being out against my property. I debited Mr. Mountain for the price of the billiard table separately. Board, the Sheriff's officer, took away my book of accounts. I bought some wines from Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall and Co., and after I heard of the seizure, returned these 47 dozens of claret and I likewise sent back to Messrs. Fenton, Low and Co., a hogs-head of sherry, because the number did not correspond with the lot I purchased. Messrs. McKenzie, Lyall and Co. did not apply to me to return the claret; I did it because I did not approve of its quality. I did not and would not have considered myself in debt but for the seizure of my property by Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co. I owed no one any money then except 3,000 Rs. to Mr. W. Wood. Had not a forced sale of my property taken place, it would have been sufficient to pay all my debts, and out of the 30 or 35,000 rupees to be deducted, the amount realized by the sale of my property. I did not apply for the benefit of the Insolvent Act until I was in jail. I gave my stock book to Mr. Downing, my attorney, before I was confined, but it was surrendered to Mr. Board after my incarceration.

Examined by Mr. Leith. The seizure put a stop to my business, and prevented my accommodating of many lodgers, who had given me agreements to occupy my rooms for some months. My property was almost all sacrificed by this seizure—I had friends to have backed me, had Mr. John Becher given me a short time. Mr. Becher has detained a large purchase and refused to sell it for the benefit of my estate calling it a fixture. I would wish some professional architect to examine it and say whether it was a fixture. At the time I paid Mr. Mountain, I never contemplated taking the benefit of the Insolvent act. This seizure drove me to it.

Re-examined by Mr. Pearson. The debt I owed to Colonel Becher's estate, was 8,000 rupees. It was swelled with rent and other petty bills to about 12,000 rupees, and there were 6 months' house rent due.

Edward White deposed. I supplied Mr. Benton with wine. I remember the seizure of his property by Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co. One day previous to the seizure, I asked him to return some wine, as his affairs were then in a bad state; he thereon returned me about 20 or 30 dozens of claret. He is still largely indebted to our firm. I sent the wines before the seizure took place.

Examined by Mr. Leith. My firm has long dealt with Mr. Benton, and have always found him to be very correct in his dealings. He had extensive credit at our house.

G. Board deposed. I never received a stock book from the Insolvent's estate. He told me when I asked him for it, that he never kept one. I never opened any of the books to ascertain their nature.

John Elley. I was Clerk to Mr. Benton until seizure, and kept his cash book, I only kept the cash book; the ledger and servant's wages book were kept by Mr. Benton himself, Mr. Benton has just now suggested to me, that the book in my hand is the stock book. That part of the book in which the stock was entered, has been mutilated; the remainder is an abstract of the servant's wages, house expenses. Although nearly one-third of this book is unwritten, yet the account in it does not go beyond August 1837, and from the 31st December 1837, it was used as a stock book, I saw the book entire about one month previous to the seizure of Mr. Benton's property. This book was over my desk publicly kept at the time the property was seized. Mr. Benton had charge of the books from the time of the seizure till his going to jail. Mr. Benton was arrested by Mr. Boukoy, the tailor. Mr. Mountain set up his hotel after Mr. Benton's failure; previous to that he had no ostensible occupation and lived with Mr. Benton. He had a little money which he lent to Mr. Benton.

Cross examined by Mr. Leith. Mr. Mountain formerly kept a hotel in company with one Myers. He bought largely at the sale of Mr. Benton's property, furniture for the hotel he has subsequently set up.

Mr. Downing deposed. Mr. Benton delivered his books to Mr. Judge and Mr. Judge delivered them to Board.

W. Judge deposed. Mr. Benton delivered his books to me a few days before he went to jail, I do not think, that all the books I see on the table were delivered to me. I took no notes of them. I do not think the book stated to be stock book, was delivered to me. I received the books from Mr. Benton's own hand. Mr. Board informed me that these books were seized and requested them to be delivered up to him. I at first refused to surrender them, but on advice from Mr. Benton, I gave them up.

Examined by Mr. Leith.—The book stated to be the stock book might have been amongst those that were delivered up to me, but I am not sure of it, I cannot say whether the books are in the same state as when they were delivered to me.

The Advocate General stated, that in this case, it appears, that the insolvent had disposed of most of his property to his private creditors; and there is little or nothing left to divide amongst the other creditors, although Mr. Leith, for the defence, concluded that the equa division of the insolvent's property should be amongst the insolvent's creditors in general. The next circumstance the Advocate-General contended, that the billiard table was, by the evidence given regarding its sale, the property of the creditors in general. The learned Advocate-General then contended the absence of the stock account, which he said could not but be very large in such an establishment as Mr. Benton's was; how then came those leaves on which the account is alleged to have been written to be abstracted from the book, at the time this Insolvent was carried to Jail at the suit of Mr. Bourke as a warrant of 40 rupees? He the day before his arrest, paid 400 rupees to his attorney and carried 300 rupees with him to the jail. This very circumstance the Counsel contended, showed strongly that this arrest was only a connivance between the Insolvent and his friend Mr. Bourke.

Mr. Leith said, that Mr. Pearson had examined the Insolvent fully and had not made out any case to have the prisoner remanded for fraudulent intentions. The learned Counsel then stated, that his client had no intention to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act, which Mr. Leith contended. Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co. had, by their seizure driven him to, and at the time he returned the wines to Messrs. McKenzie, Lyall and Co., and to Messrs. Jenkins, Low and Co., he found that he could not fulfil his engagements to them, and prevailed on them to cancel his bargain, but he did not then contemplate taking the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and therefore it cannot be brought in that the Insolvent intended to benefit any particular creditor to the detriment of his other creditors. Mr. Leith then contended that the seizure made by Messrs. Becher, McIntosh and Co., caused the abrupt stoppage of an establishment, which was then paying something every day to its creditors and this individual, Mr. John Becher, not content with seizing and selling at a very depreciated price his property by a Sheriff's sale and thus coming in for the greatest portion of his property in payment of the debt due to them to the detriment of the general creditors, he is the only person who now opposes the discharge of the Insolvent, after an incarceration of two months, during which period the Insolvent was so ill, that he was nearly brought to the grave; whilst the other creditors were so satisfied with the Insolvent's good conduct, that none of them have attempted to oppose his discharge. Mr. Leith then contended, that in a hotel the stock, with the exception of wines, are only food of daily consumption. With regard to the books, Mr. Leith contended that the Sheriff has no right to seize books but only property. The Assignee only can seize books.

The learned Judge said, that the absence of the stock book is the only circumstance against the Insolvent, and it would be more satisfactory if this book were better kept; but as in this case the opposing creditor has already reaped the chief benefit of the estate, and the Sheriff having no authority to seize books, the Insolvent may, on his swearing to the correctness of his Schedule, be discharged.

The Insolvent was then sworn and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOB.

This insolvent's case was again brought up this day, when the court proceeded to pass judgment on it.

The Judge, in delivering judgment, allowed seven of the exceptions out of the nine which were taken by the assignee to the Examiner's report, but he overruled the other two. The Judge added that there were sufficient grounds adduced in this case to justify the punishment of the insolvent, under the penal sections of the insolvent act, but under all the circumstances of the case, he considered that it would be more beneficial to the insolvent's creditors, if he was remanded for indefinite period, to enable him to give a more correct and satisfactory account of his property.

The Insolvent was consequently taken back to prison to enable him to do so.

Dividends were declared in the following estates:

In the estate of C. Panioty, a first dividend of one Company's Rupee 4 annas per 100 sicca rupees.

In the estate of S. M. Gasper, a first dividend of Company's Rupees 3 and 4 annas per sicca rupees.

After this a few other motions of minor importance were made and the Court adjourned.—Hark., May 4.

ZILLAH 24-PERCUNNAHS,—MAGISTRATE'S COURT.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS IN THE MAGISTRATE'S COURT, IN THE MATTER OF MOONSHY COLLYNATH ROY AND OTHERS, ACCUSED BY RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE, ESQ., OF HAVING, AT VARIOUS TIMES, ASSEMBLED ARMED MEN AND ASSAULTED AND IMPRISONED THE RYOTS OF THE BALIAGHATA BAZAR, AND THE BOATMEN ON THE ADJACENT CANAL.

A letter signed A Friend to the Poor having been published in the Englishman newspaper some days ago, stating that a wealthy zemindar, named Collynath Roy, Moonshy, residing near the Balliaghata Canal, within the jurisdiction of the Zillah 24-Percunnahs, has been in the habit of carrying on an extensive system of oppression towards the poor inhabitants residing in his neighbourhood, and beating and imprisoning them in his house. The writer of this letter added, that he has observed about 150 armed men employed by the said Collynath Moonshy, in the act of oppressing and arresting several individuals trafficking on the Balliaghata canal and to the bazar, and forcibly carrying them to the residence of Collynath Moonshy: all which facts the writer of this letter stated, he was ready to disclose and prove in a Court of justice, and point out to the Magistrate, if required so to do, the men engaged in these unlawful practices; but that the Magistrate had up to that time paid no attention to the malpractices enacted in the vicinity of his cutcherry. The Magistrate, being conscious that he had repeatedly issued orders to prevent these most objectionable proceedings being carried on by Moonshy Collynath Roy and his retainers, and that some of the Police functionaries had also been punished for being in collusion with Collynath Moonshy, deemed it necessary to ascertain personally the truth of the facts mentioned in the letter signed A FRIEND TO THE POOR, and to visit the scene of these alleged abuses. He, therefore, directed Serjeants Floyd and Harris, and the Balagasty jemadar together with the bairkandazs acting under his superintendence, to proceed secretly to the site of these disturbances, and there to await the arrival of the Magistrate. Shortly after issuing this order Mr. J. H. Patton proceeded to the office of the Englishman newspaper, and requested its proprietor to give up to him the name of the individual who had written the letter published in the Englishman signed A FRIEND TO THE POOR. Mr. Stockepler informed Mr. Patton that Baboo Rustomjee Cowasjee was the author of it. Mr. Patton then waited on Baboo Rustomjee Cowasjee, and informed him, that if he would accompany him to the place of these alleged disturbances, and point out the depredators to him, he (Mr. Patton) was ready to go with him that very instant. Baboo Rustomjee expressed his readiness to accompany Mr. Patton, and they consequently proceeded together to the spot. On their arrival there, they did not observe any armed men, but they were informed by the Police authorities and the neighbouring villagers, that Collynath Moonshee then frequented the public roads armed with clubs, and they frequently molested passengers on the way. The representatives of a person named Baboo Bonessur Bonnerjee also informed Mr. Patton, that two days previously to Mr. Patton's arrival at this place, about 150 armed retainers of Collynath Moonshee had apprehended Baboo Bonessur and two individuals, on a pretence that they were arrested on a warrant from the Collector's office, for arrears of some rent due to Collynath Moonshee, and these informants added, that these three individuals were still detained in custody in Collynath Moonshee's house. During this juncture, the Police darogah was asked, whether he was aware of the occurrence of any affray on the day on which these men were stated to have been arrested, and, whether he had heard of their arrest; and, also, had he taken any step in the matter, or reported the affair to the Magistrate. The darogah replied, that he had not seen any disturbance on that day, but he had heard that an affray had occurred within his beat, and a collectorate peon had arrested some persons, at the suit of Collynath Moonshee, and these men were then imprisoned in Moonshee Collynath Roy's house. The Magistrate then observed that a Collector's peon has authority by Regulation VII, to detain a prisoner sued for arrears of rent for twenty-four hours, under the plaintiff's charge, to enable him, if the prisoner wishes it, to compromise the suit with his creditors; but the peon is not authorized, under any circumstances, to detain the prisoner in private custody for three days. Further it is apparent, in the present instance, that the detention of these three men is the assigned cause of its illegal and fictitious, and solely intended to distress them. The Police authorities were consequently directed to release these three men instantly and to produce them before the Magistrate within ten minutes. This order was complied with, and the three men, when brought, before the Magistrate, stated, that Baboo Bycanthnath Roy, and Baboo Mothornath Roy, the brothers of Moonshee Collynath Roy, who had caused them to be illegally imprisoned, and oppressed them, were then present in the veranda of the house from whence the police authorities had liberated them. In consequence of this information, the Magistrate ordered the authorities on the spot to proceed immediately to take the deposition of the complainants in this case, and of the witnesses and forward the individuals to the Magistrate's Cutcherry, implicated in this charge of false imprisonment, (part of which had already been witnessed by the police authorities who had released these men;) together with the three men who had been liberated, and the Collector's peon, in order to have this matter investigated; and the Collector's peon if not implicated in the illegal arrest of these three men, would then be sent back to the Collector's office, after the termination of this case.

After issuing this order, the Magistrate quitted the spot, leaving constables Harris and Floyd, together with the thanadar of the division and the Balagasty Jemadar and an adequate number of Borkundazs to carry it into effect. Soon after the Magistrate had left the scene of these occurrences, the two brothers of Moonshee Collynath Roy were, it appears, pointed out to the jemadar, who was speaking with them when Mr. Patton and Baboo Rustomjee Cowasjee went away. These two brothers were, we learn, subsequently arrested in Collynath Moonshee's house; and whilst constables Floyd and Harris waited on the magistrate to receive further instructions on this case, both these prisoners, either by the collusion or the negligence of the peons who were placed as guards over them, contrived to escape; consequently warrants were issued against these two persons, and a summons against Moonshee Collynath Roy, to attend the magistrate's court, to answer the charges preferred against them; and Mr. Roger Dias, who was also charged with having been seen by the police authorities and the ryots in the neighbourhood, repeatedly going to and fro from Moonshee Collynath Roy's house before and after the arrest of Baboo Bycanthnath Roy and Baboo Mothornath Roy, is charged with having aided and abetted them before and after the fact, as their legal adviser, and is therefore bound over by the magistrate in his personal recognizance of 1,000 rupees, to appear at the magistrate's court when called; to do so, and answer any charge that may be brought against him relative to this affair.

Subsequent to the summons being issued against Moonshee Collynath Roy, he presented a petition to the Sessions Judge of the Zillah, on this subject. This petitioner states, that he was not present at the time that Baboo Bonessur Bonnerjee and his two companions were imprisoned, and taken to the petitioner's house, nor at the time they were liberated by the magistrate's order; nor had he any connection with any of the riots which are falsely alleged to have been committed by his retainers near the Balleaghatta bazar by his orders. Consequently, he prayed the Sessions Judge to be enfranchised from appearing as a defendant in this matter on the magistrate's summons in this case.

The Sessions Judge, on the hearing of this petition, directed a rubookaree to be sent to the magistrate, desiring him to forward to the Sessions Judge's court the summary of his proceedings in this matter, and temporarily to suspend the further proceedings in this case as regarding Moonshee Collynath Roy, until the Sessions Judge has reviewed the magistrate's proceedings, after which he will communicate the result of his investigation and issue further instructions to the magistrate for his future guidance in this case.

In the meantime, the case against Baboo Mothornath Roy and Baboo Bycanthnath Roy will proceed as soon as the parties arrested on the writs which are issued for their apprehension; and should they not be so, concealment then the case will be set down ex-parte against them; and if there be sufficient evidence forthcoming, to substantiate the charge of aiding and abetting the accused in this matter against Mr. Roger Dias, he likewise will be made a party to the suit, and, together with the other defendants be committed to take his trial before the Sessions Judge, if the particulars of the case render that step necessary.—Hurk. May, 8.

May 7, 1832.

(Before J. H. Patton, Esq., Magistrate.)

V. O. SMITH AND J. HODGES, GRANTEES IN THE SOONDERBUNDS, VERSUS RAJAH BULLUB RAGOORY AND RAM NARRAIN BOSE, ZEMINDARS.

CASE OF TRESPASS.

The Mooktar of the complainants, presented a petition to the Magistrate and stated, that his clients had purchased from the executors to the estate of the late William Sturmer, the deceased's grant of land in the Soonderbunds, the boundaries of which he defined. He added; that on the eastern side it was bounded by a bund, which had been fixed by Mr. R. Barlow, the former Magistrate of this zillah, in April 1829, to constitute the boundary between Mr. W. Sturmer's grant and the lands of Baboo Rajh Bullub Ragoory in that direction, and Baboo Rajh Bullub Ragoory had been bound in reconnaissance of 500 rs. for one year, not to trespass on Mr. Sturmer's lands. Subsequent to the demise of Mr. Sturmer, the Mooktar added, Baboo Rajh Bullub Ragoory has commenced erecting another bund to the westward of the former, bund, and thus enclosing a tract of land about four biggahs in breadth running along the whole eastern front of his clients estate from North to South; this bund is the trespass complained of by the complainants against Baboo Rajh Bullub Ragoory. The Baboo, when addressed to by Messrs. Smith and Hodges on the subject, pretended that the bund was being erected by the orders of Government; but on the complainants writing to the officer in charge of the erection of bunds in that quarter, he disclaimed all connexion of Government in the erection of the bund complained of. The complainants then applied to the Collector of the district to stop and remove this encroachment, who referred the complainants to the Magistrate's Court in this matter. The complainants therefore complained of this trespass by the 15th Regulation to the Magistrate's Court.

The Magistrate replied, that he recollected perfectly the dispute between Mr. W. Sturmer and Baboo Rajh Bullub Ragoory, concerning the boundaries of their lands in the Soonderbunds, and the latter being bound by the Magistrate on that occasion in this reconnaissance of 500 rs., as stated by the complainant's Mooktar, and after reference to the proceedings of that case, the Magistrate ordered a purwannah to be directed to the darogah, in whose division these lands are situated, to stop the erection of this bund, and to renew Baboo Rajh Bullub's reconnaissance not to trespass on the complainant's lands for another year.

The mooktar then proceeded to state his client's case as regards Baboo Ram Narrain Bose. He said that his client's lands to the westward are bounded by a village called Poldes and a creek, and Baboo Ram Narrain Bose's lands are contiguous to his client's estate in the direction, and Baboo Ram Narrain Bose has, since the demise of Mr. Sturmer, proceeded to encroach up and seize a portion of his grant including several biggahs of land. The Mooktar added, that on the 4th March 1831, in consequence of a dispute between Mr. W. Sturmer and Baboo Ram Narrain Bose, Mr. Barlow, the Magistrate, had likewise defined the creek to be the boundary of the adjoining parties estates in that quarter, and had taken from Baboo Ram Narrain Bose likewise his reconnaissance for 500 rs., for one year, not to encroach on Mr. Sturmer's lands.

The Magistrate replied, that he was not aware of the settlement of any dispute between the late Mr. W. Sturmer and Baboo Ram Narrain Bose, regarding their lands in the Soonderbunds having occurred in his Court, and asked the complainant's Mooktar if he had an official copy of the order in that case, by him to file in the present proceedings; for if he had, the Magistrate added, on their being filed, he would renew Ram Narrain Bose's reconnaissance in 500 rs. likewise for one year, not to trespass on the complainants lands; but until this document is filed he cannot pass any order in this case.

The Mooktar replied, that he had not the official copy of the order in that case by him, but he added that by the 3d Regulation of 1828, the Magistrate could award his client justice in a case of trespass summarily in regard to the Soonderbund lands. The Magistrate replied that the 3d Regulation of 1828 invested the Collector to try cases of trespasses in the Soonderbund Lands and not the Magistrate.

The Complainants' Mooktar acknowledged his error in the construction he had put on that regulation and the case against Baboo Ram Narrain Bose was postponed; to enable the complainant to file Mr. Barlow's order of the 4th March, 1831, in the case of W. Sturmer versus Ram Narrain Bose, regarding the boundaries of their respective grants in the Soonderbunds.—Hark. May 11.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

FUND FOR BUYING OUT LIEUTENANT-COLONELS OF CAVALRY.—A letter from Baringly states, that the Fund proposed to be established for buying out Lieut.-Cols. of Cavalry, had been agreed to, at least it was believed that the proposition had been approved of by every one of the ten regiments.

DHURMA SHUBA MEETING.—The members of the Dhurma Shuba held a meeting upon Sunday last, when the propriety of requesting the Government to entrust to that body the levy of the Pilgrim Tax, and the management, protection, and repair of the temples, came under consideration.

SUGAR PROSPECTS.—From the healthy state of the cane this year, the sugar growers anticipate a plentiful supply of sugar next year.

TREASURE FOR THE ARMY.—Letters from Delhi state, that treasure for the army is pouring in from all quarters. Forty or fifty lacs were in the treasury, anterior to the arrival of the last steamer at Allahabad.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—The King and Chiefs of the Sandwich Islands, in Council assembled, have prohibited the importation of spirituous liquors, and we intend that trade in them shall cease.

STORMS.—During the month, a dreadful storm caused the destruction of property to a considerable amount, in places about 24 miles south of Calcutta. Several lives have been lost.

The guard house at the Mint was blown down by the north wester on the 29th ultimo; five of the guard were severely hurt by the fall of the house, some of them so much so as to require to be sent to the hospital.

ABOLITION OF PILGRIM TAXES.—Orders have been passed by Government, directing the entire abolition of the taxes on pilgrims now levied at Juggernaut and Gya. Those levied at Allahabad were abandoned about a month ago.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—Mr. William Kerr Ewart, of the firm of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co., was on the morning of the 15th instant, hung from his horse, whilst riding on the course, against the distance post, and died on the spot.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—The accounts received during the month, of state of the indigo crop in different parts of the country, are very favorable, and an abundant out-turn is expected, unless the planters' hopes are blasted by heavy rains and early inundations.

LAUNCH.—A fine vessel, of 293 tons burthen, was launched from Mr. Sims's building yard on the 29th instant, and named the Lady Wallace.

THE ADJUTANTS.—The adjutants have returned to Calcutta, to the regret, no doubt, of the Commercial Advertiser, who will now be deprived of a subject to write about. The state of the ditches, however, is a prolific subject, and our pensive brother need not despair.

EARTHQUAKE.—There were two shocks of Earthquake yesterday morning; one at half-past 8 o'clock and the other at 25 to 10—the vibrations were not quick, continued for about half a minute, and were from East to West—preceded by a slight rumbling noise.

Two smart shocks of earthquake were felt at Dacca on the 10th instant, at 5½ p. m. and one at Comorcolly; a smart shock was felt at Jamalpore on the 12th of May.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Fifty Hindoostanee students are to be admitted, for the purpose of being duly instructed in their own dialect at the medical college; the task of teaching them being deputed to some of the native students now at the College, under the Superintendence of a Professor.

The Raja of Midnapore has appointed Nobinchunder Mitter, a passed student of the Medical College, to be his family medical attendant. Nobinchunder Mitter will receive a salary of 100 rs. per mensem with lodging and palankeen allowance. This appointment is altogether the voluntary unprompted act of the Raja. It will prove a powerful stimulus to medical education, the example no doubt, will be followed by other native families of rank and fortune. Besides the students selected for civil medical duties in Delhi, Agra and Allahabad, two, it is stated, are in requisition for the tea plantations in Upper Assam, and for the station of Beharulpore. We may add too, that Messrs. Cockerell and Co. have munificently enabled another of the students to order from England, ample supplies of druggist's stores, wherewith to commence business as an apothecary in Calcutta.

A TIGER.—A large and most powerful tiger, was killed within two miles of Sokrispoor Factory near Barrispoor, on Saturday last, at noon, whilst in full career towards two natives in a small canoe, who were paddling quietly away towards the Sunderbunds. He received the fatal shot on the shoulder, which passed through his heart, within ten yards or less of the canoe.

MR. ROGER DIAS.—Mr. Roger Dias, of Twenty-four Pergunnas notoriety, has been bound in a sum of one thousand rupees, to appear and stand his trial, on a charge of aiding and abetting the brothers of Moonshiee Jolly Nath, to effect their escape from the durance of the police, in whose custody they were, on a charge of having been guilty of illegal practices.

HOOGLY COLLEGE.—It is said, that those who have the management of the Hooghly College, have come to a determination not to admit, henceforward, into the institution, boys, whose parents possess the means of paying for their education; and that the charges for affording instruction, will in future range between four annas and five rupees a month.

DEBATING CLUB.—A debating club, under the title of "the Barrackpore Juvenile Discussion Society," has been established by some of the alumni of the Right Honorable Lord Auckland's school in the Park at Barrackpore, for their mutual improvement. The meeting is convened in the premises of the said school every Friday evening from six to nine, when discussions upon different subjects, political, literary, moral, and religious, take place.

SUBURBS' CHOWKEEDARRE TAX.—Government have prohibited the collection of the chowkeedarry tax in the Twenty-four Pergunnas for the future, and pronounced the levy of it in any town or village, except that in which the residence of the Magistrate is situated, to be illegal. Most of the inhabitants of the suburbs, at the Magistrate's suggestion, have, however, consented voluntarily to tax themselves to defray the expenses of an efficient watch being kept.

EDITORIAL RETIREMENT.—Alack-a-day! Mr. Johnson's going away. Mr. Stoequeler thus announces the circumstance.—To prevent confusion and as a guide to correspondents, &c. we beg to announce that the Editorship of this journal has reverted to Mr. Stoequeler solely. It is right and proper, however to add, that no dispute or misunderstanding with Mr. Johnson has led to the dissolution of our connections with that gentleman. The arrangement is of a perfectly amicable nature.

ILLEGAL IMPRISONMENT.—Mr. Patton, on the 28th ultimo, proceeded in person to the house of the Colinauth Moonshiee, at Ballighaut, and succeeded in releasing three poor people, who were confined by this mad. Mr. Patton likewise gave orders for the apprehension of the principal offender, who, it is hoped, will be made to answer for his illegal conduct, and that the efforts of the worthy Magistrate will be supported by the superior powers.

APPOINTMENT OF A STUDENT OF THE HINDOO COLLEGE.—Kashishur Mitter, an eleve of the Hindoo College, has been appointed Moonsiff of Sulkea, in Zillah Jessore. He was nominated by Mr. Deedes, the Judge, with four other individuals; and the Commissioner, Mr. Dampier, gave him the preference on the ground of his having received a better education than the other candidates, and being more likely, therefore, to conduct himself uprightly in his office.

EXPLOSION.—An explosion took place on the 30th ultimo, in one of the corning houses of the Ishapore Gunpowder Agency; it destroyed a small house adjoining and smashed all the windows of the mills. The wind, which was blowing very hard at the time, communicated the flames to the platforms of the two press houses in use, and thus occasioned the loss of all the powder there drying. Five men were killed and six wounded by this accident; but the extent of loss in property has not been very great.

RUNJEE SING.—The Lion of the Punjab seems to have more lives than his feline relative the cat. Seven times has he been killed outright by the Indian Press and as often has he come to life again. The daily papers killed the old Sheik during the week, and pronounced confidently that he had received his final quietus, but the evening paper brought him to life again, and he still lives and has, by his resurrection, put to flight a thousand gloomy doubts and fears, that had nearly annihilated the Friend of India.

RAIL ROAD.—It is said that a New Company has been formed in London on the report of Mr. Horneman of the practicability of a Rail Road from Diamond Harbour to Calcutta, and that the said Company have obtained the sanction of the Court of Directors to carry the same into effect, and have consequently given their orders for rails, &c. to the Carron Company, and to a Liverpool House for the engines. The principal manager of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway is to have the management of the Calcutta Railway.

PLAGIARISM AND NUMBUC.—During the week, one of the Editors of Englishman, presuming perhaps on the carelessness with which the original portion of that journal is generally perused, manipulated a part of an article from the London Spectator, and endeavoured to foist it on his readers as his own composition. By some accident, on the very day the Englishman issued his plagiarized Hurkaru published entire the article from which it was filched. This circumstance at once led to the detection of the Englishman's delinquency, and the Courier (whose little flaws the Englishman had taken great delight in exposing) immediately pointed out the theft. Upon this the Englishman stoutly denied his guilt. He thieve an article! no, not he; the careless PRINTERS' DEVILS had done all the mischief by omitting to insert inverted commas before and after the article. The other papers then pointed out, that this statement of the Englishman's was not quite correct; as, besides the omission of inverted commas, the plagiarized article had had several words struck out, and two words, "WE ARRIVE," which had reference to the original part of the article, had been added to the extract from the Spectator. Facts are stubborn things; the Englishman could not deny "WE ARRIVE," being inserted in the body of the extract; he therefore changed his mode of defence and said to the Courier; Sir, a plain tale shall put you down; I, by mistake, altered the extract; as the PRINTERS' DEVILS (beset them!) led me to believe, that the extract was part of the original article. Nobody, but the Commercial Advertiser, published in this statement, and it is obvious to every person, that the Englishman has been guilty of PLAGIARISM and NUMBUC.

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF BENGAL.—The Free Masons in this part of the world, will be glad to hear, that the eyes of the Grand Lodge of England have at least opened to the absurdity of having so long permitted Mr. J. P. Larkins, the Provincial Grand Master of Bengal, to be fourteen thousand miles away from his Lodge, and his Deputy, Mr. W. C. Blaquiere, to allow so many years to pass, as he has done, without convening the Provincial Grand Lodge in the absence of his principal. The subject having been very freely commented upon in the Free Mason's Quarterly Review by writers in this country, and some Lodges having addressed petitions to the Grand Master, the result has been, that it may now be considered a settled matter that Mr. Larkins is to retire on the honors of a past Provincial Grand Master; Mr. Blaquiere on those of a Deputy ditto, and a new Provincial Grand Master for Bengal is to be appointed. The name of our esteemed fellow-citizen, Dr. John Grant, is mentioned as the craftsman on whom this high dignity is to be conferred.

We also learn, that instead of appointing a second Provincial Grand Master for Upper India, as petitioned by several Lodges, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Bengal is intended from being a resident of Calcutta or its vicinity, and must be a person residing in the Mofussil. It will remain to be seen who will be selected for this responsible office.

It may further interest Secretaries and Masters of Lodges to learn, that the office of Grand Secretary hitherto held by Messrs. Harper and White, is now vested in the latter gentleman solely. His address is, "Mr. William Henry White, Grand Secretary, Free Mason's Hall, London."

UNION BANK.—A meeting of the proprietors of the Union Bank, took place on the 4th instant, to take into consideration certain alterations in the Bank deed. The following resolutions were passed on the occasion:—

1st.—That the new Bank Deed, as proposed and recommended by the Directors, and now amended, be approved by this general meeting, and that a second special meeting, finally to pass and adopt the same, be forthwith called, according to the 64th and 68d Clauses of the original Deed, by public advertisement on a day to be named by the Directors, being not less than one month from this date.

2nd.—That the temporary nomination by the Directors, of Alexander St. Leger MacMahon, Esquire, to a seat in the Direction, vacated by the departure for Europe of Thomas Holroyd, Esq., is approved, and the same is hereby confirmed.

Mr. Dickens then announced his intention of proposing, at a future meeting, a further extension of the capital of the Bank, of twenty lacs of rupees, making the entire capital one crore of rupees.

METCALFE TESTIMONIAL.—The following resolutions were adopted, at a meeting of the subscribers to the Metcalfe Library, held on the 30th of April.

1st.—That as the fund now vested in the Union Bank, was subscribed for the purpose of erecting, in the first instance, in the Capital of British India, a Testimonial to Sir Charles Metcalfe, it would be inexpedient to depart from the original intention.

2nd.—That the Committee be requested to communicate with the two Committees of the Public Library and the Metcalfe Library Building, for the purposes, if practicable, of uniting their respective funds to procure the erection of a building which may combine the objects of the Testimonial and a Public Library, and in which a marble bust of Sir Charles Metcalfe, shall be placed.

3rd.—That if the object of the last resolution cannot be effected, the Committee procure a full length portrait and a marble bust of Sir Charles Metcalfe, to be placed in some public building.

BONDED WARE HOUSE MEETING.—The following resolutions were adopted on the 20th instant, by the half yearly meeting of the Bonded Ware-House Association.

1st. That the accounts for the past half year be received as correct; and that the Directors' Report be approved and recorded, and be published for general information.

2d. That the Directors be authorized to call for a further contribution of 10 per cent., or Company's rupees 50 per share, from the Proprietors, for the purposes stated in the Report.

3d. That a Dividend be declared of 3 per cent. on the amount already contributed.

4th. That this Meeting highly approves of the contemplated abolition of the drawback system, the frauds practised under which are alike injurious to the Revenue and to the fair Trader; and that the Meeting is of opinion, that the abandonment of the reserved import duty, on exportation, cannot fail to have the most beneficial influence on the commerce of this Port.

Messrs. Colquhoun and Stopford were elected Directors, instead of Messrs. Church and Macdonald, who went out by rotation; and the thanks of the Meeting were offered to Mr. Holroyd, the Chairman.

THE UPTON CASTLE.—The following extracts from London letters to a Commercial House in this city, speak dependingly of the "Upton Castle," which left this port in August last. The fire seen off the "Cape," however, would not, by itself, be any great source of alarm, as whalers are constantly in the habit of burning blubber:—

London, 16th March, 1839.

"We are sorry to inform you, that serious apprehensions are entertained for the safety of the Upton Castle. She was last spoken on the 8th or 9th of December off Cape St. Agullas, and has not since been heard of. A large fire was seen, at sea on the 15th of the same month, in about the position she might have been off the Cape, and from the combustible nature of her cargo, we are fearful it will turn out to be her. £60 per cent. is paying upon her at Lloyds. There will be a double insurance on the freight, so that your risk will be somewhat reduced.

London, 26th March, 1839.

"No Upton Castle yet, though dates from St. Helena to 12th Feb. We are much afraid that the fire seen by the Vigilant, arrived here from the Cape, must have been her. The Captain of the Vigilant saw the fire distinctly for 6 hours, but the wind being very strong, he could not near it. His opinion is, from her non-arrival coupled with the last time she was spoken and the position she might be in at the time of the fire, he has no doubt it is her."

The St. Helena Shipping Lists to 23d February do not make any mention of the Upton Castle.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.—The following are extracts from the latest communications received from the Army of the Indus.

19th March.—"On the 18th, we commenced our march through the Rolan Pass, as follows. 19th Light Infantry leading, Artillery, Cavalry, and the 48th Native Infantry in the rear. Head Quarters, and General Thackwell accompany us. We are now four marches in the Pass, and have three more to make, one of them twenty-eight miles; hardly anything to be had to feed the camels, and they are dying in numbers; the consequence is that the loss of baggage is very great, many of the officers obliged to leave their tents, &c. on the ground, and to double up three and four in a tent."

Camp Bagh, the 23d March, 1839.—From Gurhee, whence I last wrote to you, we proceeded to Poona which we reached on the 10th, and having at this place attained the ultima thule of made roads and drinkable water, we halted and divided the Shah's Force into two portions; separated His Majesty's horos. The Head-Quarters with the King and his attendants of the British Mission, marched the following day to Khaira Ghuree and so across the desert; but my present purpose is not with that individual horn, although hangeth thereon our respected General 'a good portly man, in faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look and a pleasing eye and a most noble carriage, and, as I think, his age some fifty, or by ~~his~~ Lady, inclining to three score.' I rather confine myself to the Angels of the Fathers to their needle's point; to the tip of that horn whence depend the fortunes of me, Long Horns. The left Horn or Rear Column as it was styled, halted on the 12th, and marched on the evening of the 13th to Khaira Ghuree. Here was found three empty wells, and a marvellous lack of the Ariston of Pindar—the pure element. Our sufferings, severe though they were, must have been surpassed by those of the Head-Quarter's Column, which mustered double our number of men.

On the 14th the Baloches made one of their usual attacks on our camels, but were beaten off by the guard with the loss of one killed and one taken prisoner; none of our men were hurt. They also attacked a supply of grain, which we had left at Poonoo, but without success. We halted this day for instructions from His Majesty and our other pioneers.

On the evening of the 15th we crossed the desert to Tumboo, which we reached at day light. This march was 28 miles, without a drop of water on the road. This soil is a hard sand, which neither sinks under the feet, nor rises in dust. The first part of the way there is some thick tamarisk jungle, the second detached clumps and bushy, and the last is entirely barren. A halt of a couple of hours in the middle enabled our men to march well and cheerfully across it. Just at dark we came upon the bodies of two travellers who had been murdered a little before. The Beluchees got the credit, I think unjustly, of this deed. Water here, too, was very scarce.

On the 17th we moved to Saibnee 8 miles. This place also is in the desert, but water is very near the surface, and wells are numerous—small catchu ones.

On the 18th we moved to Siyud Kauim-ke-Jhech, 16 miles off, finding that there was a canal about three miles off, we pitched on its banks, and indulged men and animals with a big drink of liquid, which, however, much you ice-devouring, claret-bibbing ditchers might turn up your noses at, was perfect nectar to us poor mortals.

We halted on the 19th to rest our cattle, harassed by the travel and nearly starved, and daily and hourly attacked by Beloochees, whose alarms were so frequent that to recount them would be tedious, and on the 19th proceeded to Qanatad-ke-jock, 8 miles. Here, as tired of keeping us without water, the Gods and the Beloochees determined we should have quantum suff.

The country was overflowed. We pitched in a field a little higher than the rest ; but at noon the rising floods gave us warning to seek for some safer abiding place, and at 3 p. m. we were once more under weigh. Dark in the evening brought us to a village on the banks of a river. This village was on a height, looking from whence, the eye wandered over an out-spread waste of waters, broken here and there by the ridge of a tall bank, marking the division between two fields, while, in the distance, high above the flood appeared the white mosque and mud buildings of the town of Bagh. But all access to this place was cut off by the water.

A narrow inspection showed that the flood was turned from its legitimate course, by a strong embankment thrown directly across the river about half a mile above the village. This was speedily cut; the river rushed into its wonted channel and by the following morning portions of the landscape began to appear above the subsiding waters. We bivouacked that night in the village, and fatigue parties from the various Regiments worked diligently the following day in making safe roads through the swamps and mud for our camels.

By the evening of the 21st, the passage was reported practicable, and a wing of a corps crossed, and on the 22d the whole of the Rear Column followed, and, with the exception of a few camels split up and sacrificed to the god of Quinquires, reached Bagh in safety, and assumed its position alongside of its fellow hero, and once more formed a portion of the ornaments of the court and camp of his good and gracious Majesty, Shooja ool-Moolk.

Shawl, 28th March.—"We marched in here with the Head Quarters, Cavalry and Artillery Brigade on the 26th, and encamped near the town in a beautiful valley intersected by a number of mountain streams. The weather is bitter cold, the mountains in the neighbourhood being covered with snow. The thermometer last night was as low as 27. We suffered much in getting through the pass, our horses, camels, and bullocks, weak from starvation, and lamed from the stony road they had to pass over, dropped down in numbers, and tents, baggage, wines and stores of every kind, were left on the ground. The artillery horses are so much done up, that on coming to the least ascent they require the aid of our men to get the guns up. We halted 3 days at Sarriah, where there was good forage, the 4th brigade remains there for the present. Here we shall stay until the arrival of Sir John Keane and Shah Soojah. No letters have been lately received from Sir John, nor does any one here know where he is. The Assistant Adjutant-General is gone to meet him, and it is thought he is not many marches from us. The Afghans are asking where the Shah is, and appear rather in dread of us. Sir Alexander Burnes and Captain Simpson are, at Khelat, where they have been fortunate in collecting some hundred mounds of attah, grain, &c., so we hope to get on very well in a few days."

Quetta, 8th April.—Sir John Keane, with a small escort, a wing of cavalry, and a wing of infantry, arrived at Sarriah, within 9 miles of Quetta, on the 4th ultimo. Sir Willoughby Cotton, attended by Major Parsons and others of the staff, immediately proceeded to meet and accompany him to the advanced camp, where they await his Majesty Shah Shoojah and his force, who, from Quetta, takes the lead on the march to Candahar. The letters give better accounts than we have yet received of the prospects of the army in regard to supplies. Lieutenant Marsh, of the 3d cavalry, had been dispatched with fifteen hundred camels, and money to the extent of thirty thousand rupees to a place called Moostun, to purchase grain and more camels. Another officer was following the army with two thousand four hundred camels; and Lieut. Desant was expected with 4,000 more laden with grain. Of course, many will be lost on the journey through the Bolan Pass, but enough will, in all probability arrive, to avert the dreadful privation which, by the previous accounts, was staring the troops and their horses in the face. A postscript to one of the letters mentions that the Candahar Chief had dispatched a messenger to Mr. Macnaghten, agreeing to any thing and every thing, and promising that supplies in abundance shall be forthcoming for the army. Sir John Keane had given orders for the whole commissariat of the force being placed under the orders and superintendence of Major Parsons.

Ferozepore, April 12th.—Ferozepore is one mass of dust, even now at 9 p. m., the air is quite thick, and I am close by the lattice; the natives say the hot weather is not commenced; that for three months it blows like a place was read of; and that in July if it rains, the heat lessens; a pleasant prospect truly!

18th.—A Peshawar report says, that Col. Wade is endeavouring to bring over the Khybur people, but hitherto without success,—not so much that the people are averse, but afraid to come over, for Dost Mahomed has their families in his hands, and is said to have ripped open the bellies of the wives and children of some that had gone over to us. All just now is mystery and stillness; a month will disclose wonders as Col. S. used knowingly to say; but now that he is gone, we are badly off for news.

The crops are cutting about here and very fine they are; I suppose grain must grow in Scinde and Khyrpoor, but still large quantities are still going down the river. Capt. Manning, of the 16th and Lieut. Chalmers of the 43d, started on the 13th for Bukkur; whether they will succeed in joining their corps is in question. Four guns from the Fort of Loodiana are here in progress to the fort of Bukkur. There has been great talk of steamers on this river, but as yet we have heard of none, tho' a circular went round the other day, that a packet boat was to pass twice a month between Ferozepore and Bukkur. Colonel Hunter has arrived some days, and until the 13th had the honor of commanding two Brigadiers; truly the farce has been kept up. Col. H. it is now said, will command these parties as a first class Brigadier. Much grain has been expended at Juwala, Mookhee and other shrines, and incense offered for Runjeet's health, but some say for escape from the British thrall, their not being now around him. Not half the officers are yet housed, and scarce a show of the public buildings; the thermometer stands at about 100° during the heat of the day in good tents, so we may suppose what the European soldiers feel. This is giving the salubrity of the place a trial with a vengeance. The hot winds are well set in, but the mornings are still cool.

20th.—At last we have got a dawk from the army, letters are from Nowhera and Shawl, dated 6th April, all pretty well, but much in want of supplies; the Beloochees have been very successful in cutting off stragglers, but in two or three instances have themselves suffered, several dawks had been plundered. Dr. Steele, 27th Regt., I hear, is going to Runjeet.

Accounts have been received from the Army at Quetta on the 6th April. Shah Sooja-Ool-Moult with Sir John Keane and Mr. Macnaghten, and the greater part of the Shah's disciplined Force, arrived there on that morning, and the troops were to move immediately in advance upon Candahar, the Shah being in the front to receive the allegiance and aid of his subjects. There was, unfortunately, considerable suffering, for the time, from a scarcity of supplies, the Khan of Kelat, within whose territory Quetta is situated, having apparently taken measures to prevent the country people from bringing articles for sale to the camp, as they had done freely on the first arrival of the troops. This conduct has probably been adopted by the Khan, in order to prove the importance of his friendship to us, and to procure higher terms for himself. His proceedings could, however, cause no impediment to the movement of the Army. A convoy with supplies was at hand, and there would, on its coming, be enough actually in store to take the troops, though perhaps on a restricted scale of expenditure, to Candahar. Resources were also looked for in the Pishoon valley. The prospects of the coming harvest were excellent, and 5,000 camels, laden with supplies, will have started from Shikarpore to join the Force about the 20th instant. Seyyud Muheeb Shah, the friend and companion of Captain Conolly, had come to Mr. Macnaghten with overtures from the Sardars of Candahar, and there seemed little prospect of serious resistance. Some disappointment had been at first expressed that larger numbers of Afghans had not been taken into employ by the Shah while below the pass. It was desirable, however, with reference to the consumption of supplies, that the undisciplined retainers of the Shah should not crowd round him in numbers, until he should reach his own country, when of course they will be encouraged to assemble freely near his person. The Bombay troops forming a part of the advancing Army, under the command of General Willshire, were at Dadur on the 8th April, and were to move through the Pass without delay. Captain Bean, of the 1st Infantry Regiment of the Shah's Levy, was named Political Agent at Quetta, and directed to remain there with a portion of the troops, in order to keep open the communication, and generally to assist the Army in front. Local levies are being organized both at Quetta and at Shikarpore. A mission was to proceed to Mr. Macnaghten from Herat, where all was well to the 15th March.

Private letters have been received from the advance of the Army of the Indus, which state that all the Candahar Chiefs had "come in" and proffered assistance in men and, what is better—in provisions for our troops, and forage for our cattle.

Letters from Ferozepore, to the 28th ultimo, mention, that a tremendous hurricane had visited the cantonment the previous night, lasting a couple of hours, and doing an infinite deal of mischief.

It was credibly reported in camp, that news had arrived from Peshawar of the fall of Old Candahar, and that batteries had been opened against the new town. On its fall half of the Army is to remain there and half to go to Ghuzni.

Quetta, 16th April.—Until to-day, when we received the Calcutta dāk of the 12th, we have had only one during the last five weeks. Officers, sepoy and all have been preciously hard up, but an order has just issued to give full rations as soon as possible. The animals are almost starving for want of forage—camels dying, and no horse gets grain at all. I was obliged to buy a couple of bullocks—one cost me 15, and the other 16 rupees. Lots of crops have been burnt, lots thrown away, or left behind. Tent, bota, &c. we were obliged to carry on just as we could, each for himself. I was sent out with two companies, and 2,000 camels, accompanied by a commissariat officer, to collect grain. We got to a place called Moostong, and were promised by the inhabitants a good supply, but it was all humbug,—we waited day after day and none came, so we about ship, and returned without any. We had a prisoner with us, a thief, who had been caught stealing camels. We got him safe on one march from Moostong, but about half way on the next day's march, he gave his guard the slip, and bolted like bricks towards the hills. The sepoy gave chase, and I with them, being mounted. Lean and Rosinante-like as my steed was, I had the run at first all to myself, and soon came up with the rascal. I made a dash at him, and caught him by the hair, but he was a fine powerful man, and pulled me clean off my horse, and we rolled on the ground together. Up he got, and off again like the wind, I mounted, and followed, caught him again, down he pulled me again, but luckily he fell underneath this time, and I kept him there with much exertion till the sepoy came up. I was less by two front teeth from the melee, but I got my man back again into Camp.

"We are sadly off for drinkables—save the far-famed ale of Adam—pure water to wit, which is abundant and good here. Not a drop of wine or of spirits to be had, but sheep are plentiful, and fowls not few, and both good. One Regiment remains here till the other two regiments of the 21st brigade come up. The fourth is styled by its officers the happy brigade par excellence, I confess, I prefer our own, though rejoicing in a less honorable title, viz., the "Nigger" Brigade, it being without a European regiment.

"There is a report, we shall have to go to Khelat, to bring its Chief to terms. He says he is "our friend," but does nothing to help us, or rather acts quite "vice versa" like."

It is said that a letter has been received from the Upper Provinces, stating, on the authority of private advices from Unmunt, that the advance of the Bengal Army had arrived safely at Candahar.

sunyar niko.—Letters from Ferozepore mention that the Political Agent at Lahore had applied for a Medical Officer being sent to visit Runjeet who was very ill—speechless indeed—but no immediate danger was anticipated! The old man seems to be immortal, for he has cheated death a great many times. No mention is made in this letter of the news said to have reached Peshawar from Kandahar.

A letter from Fort Bukur, dated the 8th instant, states, that there is no possibility of communicating with the Army, or with any body else in the country beyond the walls, for want of camels. Not a single camel or camel-driver was to be had. The heat is represented as intense. At Shikarpore also the thermometer was 120° in a tent. No authentic intelligence of any kind had been received from the advance, but reports, of course, abounded. At one time the Barakzie chiefs, with 3,000 men, were said to have approached within 12 miles of the army. Then, Candahar had been strengthened, the women and children sent out, and the chiefs were in possession of eight guns. But it is useless enumerating all the stories with which people in camp amuse themselves. Our own letters from Ferozepore state, that there can be no doubt of the truth of the intelligence of the fall of Candahar on the 25th of April. The only opposition offered was that of a few shots from the Furrak Gate. The letters add that Sir Alexander Burnes is to proceed to Herat; but whether alone or backed by a force is not mentioned.

The following extract of a letter from the Army of the Indus, dated 29th April, we have been kindly favored with. This is the latest date, we believe, in town, and its contents will be found of the greatest interest and importance:—

"Quetta, in Shawl, 29th April, 1839.—Our Regiment, the 43d N. I. has been halted here with some of the Shalke troops and a Company of Bombay Artillery. The Army has been before Candahar for some days, and reports arrived to day that the Shah has been crowned and that the Chiefs have withdrawn themselves to Furrak, a place about 100 miles south of Herat. Numbers of the most influential persons of Candahar have come over to our side. The Khan of Khelat is, we understand, to be deposed immediately. The wise folks say that we are to have two years more of this work. The climate of this place is similar to that of Simla, abundance of fruit and grass, but the devil a drop of wine or anything else to drink, save paanee,—very good in its way."

The following is from Loodianah and is dated the 15th instant:—

"A letter from Colonel Wade's camp received last evening, contains the news of the fall of Candahar; but I regret, it gives no particulars. The following is an extract:—We this morning (the 7th) received intelligence while at breakfast, of the fall of Candahar, but this will be no news to you. Wade instantly directed a royal salute to be fired, and on our guns opening, and the cause being known, the example was followed by Runjeet's troops, and also taken up by the fort; and we had a royal salute from every gun in the camp, so, as you can fancy, we made noise enough at any rate. In the evening the Shazadah holds a darbar to congratulate us on the event. We break ground the day after tomorrow, en route for the Khyber pass; at the entrance of which we halt until Makezon joins with some levies.—Dost Mahomed's son with 10,000 men is ready to dispute our passage, which, if true (and we have no reason to doubt it,) will cause some broken heads, ere we come back again. Ferris of the 20th is appointed Quarter Master General to our united force. There has not been a line from the army for I know not how long. An express went through this yesterday to the Governor-General with, I suppose, all particulars. There is a little anecdote connected with the night march across the desert, which I have not seen mentioned in any of the letters. During the hour's halt in the middle of the night to refresh, the lads of the Foot Artillery, not having had enough, got the fiddler of the company, a deceased good one, by the bye, and he must have been careful with all to have kept fiddle together so long; however, they got the chap, went to Capt. Day, borrowed the Park Canteen, and danced country-dances and reels, until the bugles sounded the assembly, when they declared that one hour's dancing was worth all the sleep in the world. Runjeet was so much better that Mr. Clark had an interview. I must now conclude; but, should I get any further particulars, you shall have them.

We have accounts from Peshawar that the occupation of Candahar by Shah Soojah and the British troops, was beginning to produce an effect in Cabul, inasmuch as the people were up in arms against the Ameer, and had seized some of his guns between Cabul and Jelalabad. It was expected that he would follow the example of his brothers and fly to Persia. The terms of surrender offered him by our government were, we have reason to know, one lac of rupees per annum and an asylum in our territories. He is a great donkey for not accepting them.

The difficulty which our army experienced in obtaining supplies on the march to Candahar, does not appear to have arisen so much from want of information on our part as to the resources of the country, but from the hostility of the Khan of Kelat, who threw every obstacle in our way, and departed from all his previous promises. Fifteen hundred men at Quetta are watching him, and a local corps of eight hundred is about to be raised there to keep the footing we have obtained.

By all accounts, the feelings of the people towards Shah Soojah have been found somewhat different to what was generally anticipated. We know that the Shah himself gathered no adherents between Shikarpore and Candahar, and we now hear that his son, who accompanied Runjeet Sing's quota of troops through the Punjab (and was by the last accounts leaving Peshawar for Cabul) was equally unfortunate. The reason given for the absence of adherents is that Dost Mahomed held many important hostages in his hands for the good behaviour of the chiefs, and had, moreover, used his best endeavours to rouse the religious feelings of the people.

We have mentioned the 'quota of troops,' which, by the treaty with Shah Soojah and the British Government, Runjeet Sing was bound to furnish.

It has reached us that, in this respect, the Maharajah has put a somewhat different construction on the treaty from that which the other parties meant it to bear. When Shah Soojah's son, Colonel Waile, and his suite, reached Peshawar, there were no Sikh troops ready to go on!—According to the last advices, however, five thousand men (all Mussilmans,) had joined the Shazadah, a portion of whom, viz., four companies and a troop of artillery, two regiments of infantry, of 500 or 600, constituted the guard of the Prince; Dr. Lord being also with them as 'in charge of the Suwars.' This shuffling on the part of the monocular chief of the Punjab, was just what those who have known him for a considerable time anticipated.

On the 18th of this month, the Shazadah and Colonel Waile, started from Peshawar, for Cabul, by the Khybur Pass, but it was by no means quite certain that they would reach Cabul without a gentle flare up.

SUPREME COURT.

26TH APRIL.—Nicholas Clausen was tried for the manslaughter of Ockur coolie, at the Indigo Factory of Soomundagur, in Zillah Burdwan, on the 17th February 1831, by wounding him with the shaft of a spear.

The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the gaol of Calcutta.

30TH APRIL.—IN EQUITY.—MOHA SARKI, DEBENT COMARRE V. BOOKDEE COOROMMAH, AND ANOTHER, REPRESENTATIVES OF MUDDENMOHUN COOROMMAH.—The Advocate-General said, that he had been instructed to move for the appointment of a Receiver upon affidavits before answer, but the answer of the defendants having just been filed, and the complainant having had no opportunity of ascertaining what the answer was, the motion must stand over; and it was merely mentioned in order to save the notice. Mr. Clarke for the defendants did not object.

ULLUNGOMONEY DOWSE V. RAMSESBLOCK MULLICK AND ANOTHER.—This was a motion which stood over from last term. It was a motion upon notice, on the equity side, for the payment into Court of certain sums of money, amounting in the whole to Rs. 5,38,678, admitted by the answer to be in the hands of the defendant, and for the appointment of a Receiver of one moiety of the real and personal estate. [The motion was also for the restoration to the complainant of certain jewels; the Sresilkun or separate property of the complainant, but to this there was no opposition.]

The bill was filed in 1835, for a partition of the real and personal estate of Juggomohun Mullick, and for an account, by the widow of his eldest son Gourychurn Mullick, deceased, against the younger son and the widow of Juggomohun.

Sir J. P. Grant said, that he would go over the affidavits and the other papers in the cause, and pronounce his decision on a future day.

INSOLVENT COURT.—MAY 3, 1839.

IN THE MATTER OF GOVIND CHUNDER SEIT AN INSOLVENT.—Discharged without opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF RUVEN UZRA.—Discharged without opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF P. MORAN.—In this case an attachment was applied for and obtained against T. Moran, he having failed to act up to the order of the Court, to produce certain Company's papers belonging to the Insolvent's estates, and the insolvent was consequently remanded until next court day.

IN THE MATTER OF BRIJNATH.—The insolvent not being in custody, the case was postponed by consent till next court day.

IN THE MATTER OF W. H. BENTON.—Mr. Leith was Counsel for the insolvent.

This insolvent was examined, at considerable length, by Mr. Pearson, on behalf of Messrs. Becher, Mcintosh and Co., the opposing creditors; but ultimately obtained his discharge.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.—This insolvent's case was again brought up this day, when the court proceeded to pass judgment on it.

The Judge, in delivering judgment, allowed seven of the exceptions of the nine which were taken by the assignees to the Examiner's report, but he overruled the other two. The Judge added, that there were sufficient grounds adduced in the case to justify the punishment of the insolvent, under the penal sections of the insolvent act, but under all the circumstances of the case, he considered that it would be more beneficial to the insolvent's creditors, if he were remanded for an indefinite period, to enable him to give a more correct and satisfactory account of his property.

The Insolvent was consequently taken back to prison to enable him to do so.

Dividends were declared in the following estates:

In the estate of C. Panioty, a first dividend of one Company's rupee 4 annas per 100 sicca rupees.

In the estate of S. M. Gasper, a first dividend of Company's rupees 3 and 4 annas per 100 Meca rupees.

MAY 18.

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF FRITH AND CO.—Application was made for an order for Mr. Bathie to act as assignee to this estate. Taken into consideration.

IN THE MATTER OF H. M. MANUK.—Application was made for an order for Mr. Alexander to act as special Assignee to the estate of this insolvent. Order granted.

IN THE MATTER OF SCHLATTER.—This insolvent applied to be finally discharged before the case came on for hearing, but the application was rejected, the Court considering it premature.

IN THE MATTER OF MORUN CHUNDER GHOSH.—Application was made for an order for Mr. Alexander, the Assignee to this estate, to deliver up certain property in his possession. Mr. Alexander had refused to do so, on the ground of the creditors having objected to allow him the usual commission thereupon. The plea set up on behalf of the creditors, was, that commission was allowed only upon money collected. This objection was, however, overruled, and the order granted, conditionally on the payment of the commission.

There being no other cases for its consideration, the Court then adjourned.

JUNE 1.

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF J. G. AVIET.—There being no opposition, the Insolvent was sworn to the truth of the Schedule, and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF N. G. CHINSEY.—The Insolvent was questioned as to a gun and a musical clock, said to have been in his possession, but having answered satisfactorily, was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF W. NISSET.—The Insolvent was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.—Mr. M. Johnson was examined at great length touching the title deeds of the trust property of Mrs. Jacobs. The result was, that the Court appeared to be satisfied that no fraud was intended on this point, but being still sceptical with respect to the machine organs, which the insolvent still asserts, were sold on the river, remanded him for a fortnight, to afford him an opportunity of substantiating his statements.

IN THE MATTER OF A. PALMFA.—An order was applied for tending to get aside the award of the arbitrators with regard to a certain estate in Java. Order refused.

IN THE MATTER OF F. MORAN.—The Insolvent was examined touching certain Company's papers which had gone into the hands of his brother. No cause for further detention appearing, the opposition was withdrawn, and the Insolvent discharged. Thomas Moran, the Insolvent's brother, underwent a long examination, the result of which was not much to his credit, it appearing from his own acknowledgment, that he had defrauded his brother of Company's paper to the amount of about £8000 rupees. On the motion of the Advocate General, the papers which the witness had produced in Court, but refused to make over to his brother, were retained.

NOTES.

KOTAH.—A serious affray, between the Rajah of this place and his Ex-Minister and brother, Mudun Sing, has taken place, in which several lives were lost. Captain Ludlow is endeavouring to adjust matters, but it is said, that the presence of Colonel Sutherland is necessary to restore order.

SAHARUNPORE.—It is said, that Lord Auckland has determined on enlarging the Botanical establishment at Saharanpore, and that the garden has, through the exertions of Dr. Falconer in his late trip to Cashmeer and Lesser Thibet, received most valuable additions in the shape of the noble fruits of the happy valley.

MIRZAPORE.—The following resolutions were passed at a meeting held at Mirzapore, on the 27th of April, to manifest the interest taken in the scheme for the formation of a Steam Company, to carry on a regular monthly communication with England, via Suez, on the comprehensive plan:

1. That Mr. Taylor be requested to take the chair and Mr. Hamilton to act as Secretary.
2. That this meeting has learnt with much interest the exertions that have been made by the London Steam Committee, for the purpose of forming a Company to establish a regular monthly communication, with England via Suez, on the comprehensive scheme.
3. That this meeting concurs in the resolutions passed by the meeting held at Calcutta on the 15th instant.
4. That in compliance with the resolution passed at that meeting, viz. that as it has now become necessary to give some earnest of the interest taken in the scheme; by coming forward as subscribers to it, a subscription list be circulated among the gentlemen now present, and other parties likely to take an interest in the scheme, and that they be solicited to take shares.
5. That the gentlemen resident at Benares and Cunnar, be made acquainted with the proceedings of this meeting, and solicited to join, should they not have held a meeting for the same purpose.
6. That as it appears from the Englishmen of the 20th instant, that it is highly desirable, that no time should be lost in transmitting to the Secretary of the Calcutta meeting, the instalment of the subscriptions required, (viz. 10 per cent. or Rs. 50 per share of Rs. 500) that the amount may be remitted to the London Committee, by the first overland mail, to enable them to commence proceedings, for carrying the scheme into effect without delay; the Agent of the Bank of Bengal be requested to receive the first instalment from any gentlemen who cannot conveniently pay the sum in Calcutta, and grant a bill for the amount on the Bank at a short date.
7. That the Secretary of the meeting be requested to transmit the bill to the Secretary of the Calcutta Meeting, with a copy of these proceedings, requesting him at the same time, to send formal receipts to the subscribers for their respective payments.

MOOZUFFERPORE.—The following resolutions were passed at a Meeting of Planters held on the 23d of April:—

- 1st. That this meeting unanimously address a firm, but humble and respectful appeal to Government, for such relief, from present and impending evils; as in its wisdom it may be graciously pleased to accord to us.
2. That the draft of a petition which had been prepared by certain parties interested in Indigo cultivation, and in the hands of the Secretary, should be read to the meeting. It was read and approved of.
3. That Government be petitioned to direct the Sudder Dewany, to order the Local Courts to give a fair hearing to our Mookteas, and to receive verbal and documentary evidence in our cases; and that instances be forwarded, to show that the contrary has been the practice in the Fowahry Court at Muzafferpoore.

4th. That as some points seem to have been inadvertently omitted in the petition, a committee shall be appointed to add to it, what in their judgment may seem fit and proper.

The following gentlemen were nominated as the committee, and it was proposed and carried; that three should form a quorum: Messrs. G. Tayler, A. Anderson, H. Fitzgerald, S. Johnson, H. Hill, D. Brown, B. Muirhead, C. Mackinnon and D. R. Crawford.

ASSAM. The following dated Ghownaut 13th April, has been received from Assam:

"This morning at half past seven, was felt the severest earthquake ever experienced in Assam by any English resident. They were two distinct shocks, immediately following each other, accompanied by a very loud rumbling, as of numerous quick coaches going over paved streets.

The weather for the last four days had been very extraordinarily gloomy, and very stormy, with a constant succession of heavy falls of rain, attended with an earlier and more sudden rise of the Burhampootur than ever recollected; the rise being fully 12 feet in three days.

1st, May. — The same cloudy and stormy weather continues and the river continues to rise rapidly."

From the same source we are sorry to record another outrage committed by one of the hill savages who surround Assam on all sides. The murder of the head Fiscal Officer of a small frontier Pergunah in the Darrung district, by a Booteah Rajah. The Rajah had been staying with the murdered Officer two days, on his way to meet Mr. Scott, in charge of the district, as he gave out; but on the second he got up, went into the apartment of the deceased, and killed him with two desperate blows of his Dhoos, and severely wounded the man's wife; he then took himself off to the hills to join a party of his clan, whom he pretended to be waiting for. The murder is supposed to have been premeditated, and to have arisen out of some arrangements of the Black Mail paid to these Booteahs, to which they were opposed, and which were, we understand, mistakenly imagined by the Booteahs to have originated with the Officer (Paighery) now murdered. Troops have been sent after the party, but there is little chance of their being overtaken. The Booteahs, in question, are not connected with the Bootan Government, but are believed to be subjects of the Chinese province of Tibet.

The following is another extract from a letter from Assam, communicates intelligence which may be relied on:

"Your friends at Sylhet are sometimes out of their reckoning in respect to news from this quarter. Captain Veteli set out for Suddyah on the 1st ultimo, where he has been appointed political agent, and where his services were eminently required, the whole of the chiefs having about that time, become more to be suspected than they were; and in fact just when you reported to us, on the authority of Sylhet correspondents, that Captain Hankey had written down to say that confidence was restored, and he wanted no more troops, the Tau Gohain was quietly stockading himself within eighteen hours' march from us quite unmolested! At the same time, also, parties of Mishmes were plundering the country up to within sight of cantonments in one day, carrying off herds of cattle, &c. Part of the Assam Light Infantry are now with Lieut. J. N. Marshall, at Sub-Sagar, near the old city of Rangpoore, where the Head Quarters are eventually to be established. To give an account of this old city, its superb tanks, — measuring, as the largest one does, 1,200 paces or about 1,000 yards square—its temples, &c., would require greater time and space than I have at present to spare; but of all places in Assam, which I have seen, or is to me the most desirable. The natives are particularly partial to it, and declare that the water and air are so pure that no one was ever known to die from living there. The civil station is, I believe, to be fixed at this place. Provisions are extremely cheap and plentiful, and the place is on the high road to Ava, by which the advanced guard of the Burmese Army is said now to be approaching Assam, having reached Hookow, a distance of not more than 26 or 28 marches from hence, and by which the Burmese retreated from Assam in 1825 and 1826. A rumour is afloat that the iron Steamers are to be sent up with regular troops immediately:—if so, it is a pity the 70th N. I. were not allowed to come on as they would have been ready long ere this and at their destination.

The Booteahs have, I heard, lately attacked a person of some importance in the district of Chardoor and killed him. They had an idea that owing to his representation the old system of levying black mail was put a stop to, and a payment in money substituted for one in kind. This will, it is hoped, put an end to any further delay in at once stopping this demand on our subjects, and that the Booteahs may now be kept in their own hills by a guard. Talking of guards, how come the Sebundies, who were raised for Lower Assam to be knocked up and down on the inferior pay they receive, out of their own districts? Surely this is unfair! And now that Government have increased the corps, and added sergeants, &c. they had better finish what they had so well begun, by making them Locals at once, raising their pay to the same as that of the Light Infantry, (which is not more than a rupee or so per month more) while it would allow of their being employed throughout the province, which, now, according to the original intention of Government, they cannot well be. We heard some time ago, from some of the tribes who come down for the purpose of bartering their cotton for salt, that Mr. Grange had penetrated into the fastness of the Naga hills to the S. E., and by this time must have returned home. Some Burmese were said to have been with him, — I suppose the levy of Shans who were raised to accompany Lieut. G. for the purpose of putting an end to the incursions of those barbarous tribes.

NATIVE STATE.

PUNJAB.—Maharajah Runjeet Sing had ordered Rajah Golaub Sing, who was encamped on the banks of the Attock, to proceed forthwith to Peshawar for the purpose of forming a junction with the British Army. A French officer, called in the Ukkbar, "Latour Sahib," had been despatched from Lahore to the same destination by Runjeet.

It had been reported that a force of 12,000 horse and 10,000 Infantry of Dost Mahomed's Army, had crossed to this side of the Khybur Mountains and was peaceably encamped within six miles of Colonel Wade's and Prince Imoor Shah's Camp, and the inhabitants of that part of the country, are represented to have paid their respects to Colonel Wade, from which circumstances it is inferred that there is some truth in the report that Dost Mahomed was about to enter into amicable arrangements with the British Government.

On the other hand it is stated, that Dost Mahomed is only waiting for reinforcements from the Persian Monarch and Prince Kamran, to commence offensive operations against us on the side of Peshawar. A report had reached Loodhianna of the near approach of our Force to Kandahar, and at the same time that Mahomed Ameer had arrived at that city, with 15,000 cavalry and 30 pieces of Artillery from Persia ; with the intention of opposing our advance, and that some thousands of Russian Cavalry were, en route, through Mazanderau, destined for the same point ; to which also, all the Persian troops stationed in Rookhistan and Goorian, have been directed to proceed with all haste, to aid in driving us back.

JHANSI.—A letter from Jhansi mentions, that orders have been received for hutting the sepoys of the 33d N. I. who are on duty there. Government has resolved on governing the country in the name of the Baba Sahib, who is to have a pension hereafter to be determined, but is not to be allowed to interfere in the concerns of the Raj. This of course is not very palatable to his pride. The old Raje, the cause of the Jhansi campaign, is also to be pensioned.

JODHPUR.—It is rumoured that a force will probably take the field after the rains, to batter the walls of that den of thieves, Jodhpur. The Commissioner, Colonel Sutherland, is encamped with his escort in the neighbourhood of the town, and intelligence had been received of the death of Maun Sing's son under very suspicious circumstances. Maun Sing had been persuaded to abdicate in favour of the boy and the ceremony was on the point of being performed, when things were brought to the demise of the latter. This catastrophe will retard, if it does not put an end to, all hopes of a peaceful settlement of the state, and there can be no doubt that a case will be made out to justify hostile proceedings against the Malwari and Nathi in September or October next.

JEYPUR.—Jeypore is again in utter confusion, and the country around is in a state of ferment. It is well known the Queen Mother is averse to the Nathawat party, and she makes no secret of her dislike to the Rawul Sheo Sing and his clique ; the fact is, Sheo Sing is a weak, imbecile, apathetic, ignorant young man, and consequently unfit for the post he occupies. His brother, Luchmun Sing, has assumed the whole mastery and entire management of affairs, and actually leads Sheo Sing by the nose. The Nathawat party is defeated even exterminated, by all at Jeypore, even the Zemindars and ryots throughout the country, and this feeling of popular ebullition may be carried to a height from whence many and serious will be the evils likely to result. Alig Sing, of Digger, one of the many aspirants to the Premiership of Jeypore, being, moreover, a Thakoor of great popularity, recently contrived, in a very short time, to collect around him some thousands of the disaffected from Jeypore, among whom are a considerable portion of the Raj troops, and thus raised the standard of independence, and with this horde of insurgents the worthy Thakoor is now encamped at Sauganer, bidding defiance to, and threatens to plunder Jeypore.

With a view to the curtailment of the absolute power the Rawul and his party had secured to themselves for robbing and plundering Jeypore, Colonel Sutherland directed that in future the affairs of that ill-fated principality be submitted for consideration to a Council of five, the members composing which are the Rawul, his brother, Luchmun Sing, and three other influential Thakoor, with Major Ross, the Political Agent, to superintend ; but this new form of Government has been found to be a complete farce, and does not work well.

BOMBAY.

THE QUICOWAR.—The rich district of Petland, belonging to the Quicowar, has at last been finally confiscated, according to the threat held out some months since, and made over to the management of the Collector of Kaira.

POLICE IN THE DECCAN.—It is stated, that with a view to make a further addition to the Police in the Deccan, which is at present not very efficient, the Government has resolved to levy a new rissala or body of irregular horse, amounting to three hundred. Ram Row Trimbur Pourntharay, has been appointed Commander of this small corps, on a salary of 300 Rs. a month, with an allowance of 20 rs. per mensem for each horse.

CIVILIANS' RANK.—It is said that the Court of Directors has at length sent out an order settling the rank and order of precedence of the Civil Servants of the Company, who are no longer to bear the title of Factors, Merchants, &c. but to take rank, equivalent to Military rank, according to certain fixed terms of service, rising from that of Subaltern to Captain, Major, Lieut. Colonel, and so on to the highest.

MR. CAMPBELL.—It is reported, that the European named Campbell in the service of Dost Mahomed, has come into the British Camp, and that a pension is to be granted him.

EXPERIMENTS IN BREWING BEER.—The results of two experiments in brewing beer, from hops imported from England, at Poonah and the Mahabeshwar hills, are reported, by the Committees appointed, as most favourable, and that the trial was quite successful.

SAWUNT WAREE.—Accounts from Sawunt Waree represent the state of things there as nearly settled. Several of the ring-leaders engaged in the late disturbance, have been sent to Bombay, to be lodged, we suppose, in some place out of the way. One or two persons, however, headed by one Nanno Kamley, who escaped, have been plundering and burning houses here and there. The affairs of this little state are conducted in a very prudent and economical manner ; good roads are being built ; and all but the old Karbharies satisfied.

LEVY OF 600 IRREGULAR HORSE.—It is stated that on the recommendation of the Political Commissioner in Goojrat, the Government has sanctioned the levy of a body of about 600 Irregular Horse for the better protection of its territories in the north.

LIEUTENANT PUTTINGER.—To mark its sense of the gallant conduct of Lieutenant Puttinger of the Bombay Artillery, at the siege of Herat, it is the intention of the Court of Directors to submit his name to her Majesty for promotion to the rank of Major by special Brevet on his attaining the rank of Captain, which rank, it appears, he must arrive at to be eligible for the Brevet promotion.

THE SCIND TROOPS.—Government have decided that the recruits and families of the native troops serving in lower Sind, shall join their respective regiments as soon as tonnage can be provided for their conveyance.

WORKING OF CAMELS IN DRAFT.—Recently some experiments were made upon a subject which has, for some time, occupied the attention of military scavans ; the working of camels in draft. Two of those animals were yoked, upon the esplanade, to a fourteen pound howitzer, with its carriage, &c. and seemed to draw them with perfect ease, though, for the conveyance of such a load, sixteen bullocks are usually assigned. The object of the present experiments is, by means of proper harness, to distribute the draft in the way most suitable to the peculiar conformation and power of the animal.

CONVERSION OF PARSEES.—Considerable excitement prevails among the Parsees at Bombay, in consequence of the conversion of two youths of their body to Christianity and some apprehension existed that general education would be liable to opposition, and the scholars be withdrawn from the several establishments, opened under the auspices of the Church Missionary and other societies.

NON-ADMISSION OF MERCHANT SHIPS INTO THE DOCKS.—It is said that Capt. Oliver has refused to admit merchant ships into the docks. If Government confirms this, it will be a severe blow to the trade of Bombay; but we think it can only be a temporary measure, caused by the unusual press of work at present in the dock yard.

BURMAH.

MAULMAIN, 30 APRIL.—It is said, that the Aeng Pass, which leads from Arrakan into the Burmese territories, is to be immediately repaired by the orders of the Supreme Government.

RANGOON, 12TH APRIL.—Dread of war with the English, dread of our proclamation in favour of the old King, the failure of the Suddya affair, a practical knowledge that the seeds of counter-revolution are widely disseminated amongst his discontented subjects, remonstrances from the local Government of Rangoon to the court, to avoid a rupture with the English, together with our imposing military and naval attitude, have induced his Majesty to receive the presents which our Government sent to him, apparently in return for his successful scheme of insult offered to our Government through Colonel Burney, and subsequently through Dr. Bayfield, an, according to report, Captain McLend is to have ingress and egress to and from the Palace at any time of night, and have what he requires.

A Burmah dāk boat left Rangoon a few days ago, immediately after the return from Maulmain of a Government officer, who was sent thither to have ocular proofs of the doings and sayings at Maulmain.

The scheme by which his Majesty intends to fill his treasury is apparently by a monopoly of the trade. In accordance with the scheme, the whisper was believed about the removal of the port to Syriac, inasmuch as this step would at once facilitate this grand scheme, punish the Rangooners for their leaning towards the pretender, and subdue their spirits and diminish their funds at the same time. The Lyne Myoo Thoochoe and the whole of his numerous family, with the pretender, have been executed and the Tharrawaddy Woon has been sent up in arrest. It is feared, he will follow the same fate. The Shans are said to be in a state of revolt. As to the expulsion of the British merchants, why that would diminish the utility of our having an obnoxious Resident at his Court. He is a perfect adept at killing two birds with one stone. As an instance of this, the owner of the house in which Dr. Bayfield resided, is prohibited from again hiring his house to any Englishman, especially to those who have sufficient public spirit to attempt to sustain the reputation and interest of their country or of civilization. On this account Mr. Roy has had to surrender up the house in which Dr. Bayfield resided. The object of this is to prevent the possibility of Dr. Bayfield's return to this country, to make Rangoon too disagreeable for a British merchant, and to subdue the obstinacy of Roy and others, who had, on a former occasion, declined to unshoe in the presence of the Governor. It is with the view to mature his favourite scheme, that the smaller class of vessels, which heretofore paid ten rupees port charges, are now made to pay 400.

20TH APRIL.—A part of the militia, or Corps of Observation about Rangoon, is discharged. A spacious tank is being dug a musket shot south of the Pagoda, and timber is preparing to build a substantial Government House near the tank.

Buffaloe hides are again being collected. Now, as they are used for shields against bows and arrows, the reported revolt, amongst the Shands, may probably be true. Admitting Dr. Richardson to have had a favorable reception at Bangkok, this must be known amongst the Shands. Again the contemptuous manner with which Col. Benson declined to shake hands with woonghees at the Loolaw at Ameerapoora, must be also known to the Shands. These considerations, might excite, as well as strengthen, the reported revolt amongst the Shands.

The Government officers in Rangoon, have their houses in the New Town, and were to have removed thither; their omitting to do so, therefore, implies some change in the political board. The same may keep the rumoured intention respecting the removal of the Custom-House to Syriac also in abeyance.

ARRAKAN.—A letter has been received in town from Arrakan, giving the most deplorable account of the sufferings of the troops there, for the want of the last half year's provisions, which were to have been supplied from this presidency. The hospitals, it is said, are crowded with sepoys labouring under dysentery, the effects of the Arrakan rice, which, in the absence of their ordinary provisions, they were obliged to resort to. The distress was becoming so alarming that the winter was feared the most serious consequences would result from further delay.

21TH APRIL.—The consequences of the departure of the frigate Conway and the other men of war have been severe on some poor Beogallees residing there, who, the moment the men-of-war were out of the river, were imprisoned in irons, and fined the large sum of 150 Rs. for having supplied 11. M. ships with bullocks during their stay there.

AMARAPPOORA.—The following is an account of a severe earthquake, by a resident. On the morning of the 23d March, at about 2 A. M., we were awoken by an awful, unearthly sound. Our houses rocked in a most terrifying manner; tables and chairs were overturned, glasses and bottles broken, and it was with the greatest difficulty that we could keep our legs, and feel out of doors. Two severe shocks caused all this, but we had a succession of concussions till 8 o'clock. In the morning we found the plain between us and the river, under water; large fissures in every direction, which had thrown out the water that flooded the plains, and earth forced up in many places. Not a pagoda was to be seen whole; all are more or less broken down. All brick houses, three or four excepted, are thrown down, and many unfortunate persons crushed under their ruins. A large house that stood as a kind of land mark, is down, and twelve persons buried under the ruins. Two were dug out unhurt, two much injured, and the rest dead. Amongst the houses that stood, were those of Messrs. Spiers and of Mr. Sarkies, though much injured. The town of Ava has suffered more than this city. The old palace is nearly destroyed, as is every brick house, and several huge fissures in the ground are still open. At Tsagain not a pagoda is standing entire.

Mr. Haraput, an Armenian merchant, when dug out from under the ruins of his house, was found with his legs and arms broken, and chest crushed in.

SIAM.

The following is an account of Dr. Richardson's audience with the King of Siam.

"On the 17th February, as had been arranged, I had my audience. I was said to be highly honored by the unusual style in which I was received. At 10 o'clock the King's boats arrived, when, accompanied by Mr. Hunter, Captain Brown of the ship W. F. Hamilton, Messrs. Smith and Hayes of Mr. H.'s house, and an officer of H.'s ship, we started and were met by some Portuguese officers in the Siamese service, at the landing place. Mr. Hunter and myself had each a sort of swinging conveyance like a hammock, and horses were furnished for the other gentlemen; a small detachment of cavalry and elephants, and 200 foot soldiers, were drawn out in lines on the road, through which (after entering a gate, which we did as usual by a circuitous route). When we got out of the conveyances, we passed to the Prak-langs Hall of Justice outside the Palace: at this place we waited 45 minutes, with some Siamese officers, till the Princes had all arrived, when we proceeded to the royal presence. An uncommon crowd of people were collected, who were quiet and orderly throughout; outside the gilt-door, which was shut, and where we waited just long enough to have it opened, the people who had accompanied us, prostrated themselves as often as they had time. When the door was opened we walked in, and seated ourselves behind the presents, (which had been sent a day or two previous,) on a carpet which covered the floor. The King called us to come nearer him and we went before the presents and sat down again, making 3 salaams to His Majesty. The interpreter had been taken ill just before we entered the hall, and Mr. Hunter, whom they took as a Siamese officer, was obliged to officiate; the usual questions were put and answered. At the close of the audience, the King said that if I had any thing to say on business. Chow Coon Budeen and the Pra Klang would attend to me, and so strong was his friendship for the English, that any wish of the Governor-General, should be considered the same as if the wishes were his own. The audience lasted about one hour and forty minutes. The questions were put in the usual round about way. The King spoke to Phis-piput the second Pra-Klang, and he to Radsthe, who again communicated with Mr. Hunter, and he with me. The King's titles were repeated before and after each of my answers, which I could understand were modified a little to meet the royal ear, though I believe no change was made in the meaning of what was said. The hall is about 100 feet by 60, and except a small place in the centre, was crowded with the officers of the Government in their robes of state. The King was seated on his highest gold or gilt throne, raised about 15 feet above us; the lower stories on which he has usually received missions from the neighbouring states, had been removed. In his personal appearance, His Majesty is exceedingly stout, and is said by every one to be perhaps the most intelligent and sensible man in his kingdom. To all business he himself attends, and he often surprises the Government officers by his knowledge of transactions; it was not supposed necessary to acquaint him with. After the curtain of heavy cloth of gold, which crosses the Throne before the Hall was down, Coon Tait, the Pra-Klang's brother, who speaks English intelligibly and whom I had often seen, came over to us and introduced to me the Chaw Coon Budeen, who said he would be happy to see me at his house. This chief, who is the first minister, sat on the King's right of the Hall, and the Pra Klang on the left, the Princes of the blood before them near the foot of the Throne. Not one of the very numerous assembly, till after the curtain was drawn, ventured to raise his head from close to the ground where their grovelling position on their elbows and knees placed it. After the audience, we went the usual round of the boats, (some of which are very costly and splendid,) and white elephant, which is a good deal like the one at Ava, except that this one from vice has broken his tusks almost off. From the elephant shed which is on the banks of the river, we returned home at a little past two.

SINGAPORE.

The Singapore journals to the 4th of April state, that our good friends the Dutch, at Batavia, had been squeezing. Capt. Hutton, of the Mercury, and making him disgorge seventy-five guilders, for not intuitively knowing the port regulations, and the petty chief of Ilalam, has been levying contributions on our subjects, and detaining them as prisoners of war. A Siamese force, it was said, was approaching Quedah, and that several hundred women and children had consequently quitted the fort and taken refuge on the Hyacinth. The insurgents, it is stated, wished to get clear of Quedah, without further fighting; but the authenticity of this report is not to be relied on.

Singapore journals to the 26th of April intimate that Quedah was again in the possession of the Siamese; and pirates had been seen in the neighbourhood of Pulo Tingy.

CHINA.

Letters from China to the 15th March, have been received at Madras, by the Maitland from Singapore.

The Opium Commissioner from Peking had been for some days at Canton; fresh edicts against the trade had been issued. Dent and Co., Jardine, Matheson and Co., and Mr. Innes, have been ordered to leave Canton. The drug was not saleable at any price. Patna offered at Sp. Dirs 230, Benares at 220, and Malwa at Sp. Dirs. 210, but no buyers. Exchange on London 5d. The Company's Treasury had been closed for Bills on Bengal, Freights declining, and shipments of teas and silk going on very slow. Up to the middle of March only 2000 bales of Silk had been purchased, of which a moiety had been exported; it was supposed that the whole supply would not exceed 5,000 bales. All the clippers had arrived, Rob Roy, Nymph and Ann.

News has been received during the month, from China, to the 10th of April, of a very important nature. The Chinese authorities seem determined to put the opium trade down.

A certain number of chests sent annually on account of the King of Siam, on the junk conveying the tribute of the latter potentate to the Celestial Empire, and which have hitherto been permitted by the mandarins to be landed and sold, were this year refused admission; and a letter of advice returned with them, suggesting that the Siamese Court should follow the example of the Emperor, and in future interdict the use of the drugs among its subjects. The consequence had been, the relanding of all the opium on board the junks in the Singapore roads, the sale thereof at reduced prices, and the investment of the proceeds in British and India manufactures.

The British trade had been stopped in toto. The factory had been surrounded by the Chinese troops, and no food nor water permitted to enter.

At first Mr. Elliot thought of resistance, and directed all the British vessels to proceed to the rescue; but was told by the Chinese authorities, that they would hold the Europeans as hostages and hang them all if a gun were fired.

The Principal Hong Merchants were taken in chains to the Factory, and said, unless the whole of the opium at Lintin and elsewhere was delivered up, the Government had ordered their immediate execution. Pressed by these circumstances, the Superintendent knocked under, and in the name of the British Government ordered the delivery of all the opium, 20,000 chests, to the Chinese guaranteeing to the British Merchants its value, the price to be fixed by Her Majesty's Ministers. This was done in three instalments. On the first being made, provisions were permitted entre into the factory; on the second, the general trade was re-opened; and on the third, things reverted to the former footing; but doubts were entertained respecting the continuance in safety of the British in China. The following proclamations were issued on the factory being surrounded:—

PUBLIC NOTICE TO BRITISH SUBJECTS.—I, Charles Elliot, Chief Superintendent of the trade of British subjects in China, presently forcibly detained by the Provincial Government, together with all the merchants of my own and the other foreign nations settled here, without supplies of food, deprived of our servants, and cut off from all intercourse with our respective countries, (notwithstanding my official demand to be set at liberty so that I might act without restraint,) have now received the commands of the high commissioner, issued directly to me under the seals of the honorable officers to deliver over into his hands all the opium held by the people of my country.

Now I, the said Chief Superintendent, thus constrained by paramount motives effecting the safety of the lives and liberty of all the foreigners here present in Canton, and by other very weighty causes, do hereby in the name and on the behalf of Her Britannic Majesty's Government enjoin and require all Her Majesty's subjects now present in Canton, forthwith to make a surrender to me for the service of Her Majesty's government, to be delivered over to the Government of China, of all the opium under their respective controul, and to hold the British ships and vessels engaged in a trade of opium subject to my immediate direction; and to forward to me, without delay, a sealed list of all the British owned opium in their respective possession. And I, the said Chief Superintendent, do now, in the most full and unreserved manner, hold myself responsible for, and on the behalf of Her Britannic Majesty's Government, to all and each of Her Majesty's subjects surrendering the said British owned opium into my hands to be delivered over to the Chinese Government. And I, the said Chief Superintendent, do further especially caution all Her Majesty's subjects here present in Canton owners of or charged with the management of opium, the property of British subjects, that failing the surrender of the said opium, into my hands at or before six o'clock this day, I, the said Chief Superintendent, hereby declare Her Majesty's government wholly free of all manner of responsibility or liability in respect of the said British owned opium.

And it is especially to be understood that the proof of British property and value of all British opium surrendered to me agreeably to this notice, shall be determined upon principles, and in a manner hereafter to be defined by Her Majesty's Government.

Given under my hand and seal of Office, at Canton, China, this twenty-seventh day of March, one thousand eight-hundred and thirty-nine, at six o'clock in the morning.

(Signed) CHARLES ELLIOT,

Chief Superintendent of British trade in China.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO BRITISH SUBJECTS.—The undersigned has now to announce that arrangements have been made for the delivery of the opium lately surrendered to him for her Majesty's service, by which His excellency the high Commissioner has stipulated, that the servants shall be restored after one-fourth of the whole be delivered, the passage boats be permitted to run after one-half be delivered, the trade opened after three-fourths being delivered, and every thing to proceed as usual after the whole be delivered, (the signification of which last expression, the undersigned does not understand.)

Breach of faith, (and His Excellency, not unnaturally is pleased to suppose that breach of faith may be possible,) is to be visited after three days of loose performance of engagements with the cutting off of supplies of fresh water, after three days more with the stoppage of food and after three days more with the last degree of severity on the undersigned himself. He passes by these grave forms of speech without comment; but with the papers actually before him and all the circumstances in hand, he is satisfied that the effectual liberation of the Queen's subjects, and all the other foreigners in Canton, depends upon the promptitude with which the arrangements are completed.

The maintenance of the national character, and the validity of the claim for indemnity, depend upon that scrupulousness of fidelity with which he is well assured his countrymen will enable him to fulfil his public obligations to this government. As soon as the whole of the opium surrendered to him is delivered over to the Chinese officers, it will be the duty of the undersigned to communicate with his countrymen again. But it is a present relief to him to express to the whole foreign community, his admiration of the patience and kindly feeling which have uniformly distinguished this community throughout this trying circumstance; and he offers his own countrymen his grateful thanks, for their confidence in his sincerest efforts to lead them out of their actual strait.

The ultimate satisfactory solution of the remaining difficulties need give no man an anxious thought. The permanent stability of British trade with this empire, with honor and advantage to all parties, rests upon a firm foundation—upon the wisdom, justice, and power of Her Majesty's government.

CHARLES ELLIOT,

Chief Superintendent of the trade of British Subjects in China.

PERSIA.

A Mugul letter from Bombay, dated 17th instant, states, that a boat had arrived there from Muscat, bringing intelligences of the arrival of a British man-of-war at Bushire, which had taken off the Resident and all British property to Karrack, which henceforth to be the only port of the Persian Gulf which English ships are to touch, Bushire, and all Persian ports, being strictly prohibited. Bussorah, course, remains open at present.

A letter from Tehran, of undoubted authority, received by the Hurkura on the 2nd instant, states, that Mr McNeil left that city on the 2nd January to proceed homeward via Russia. Colonel Sheil removed with the Mission to Erzerum, where they will remain, until instructions are received for future guidance. The detachment is moving to Bagdad. The correspondent adds, "you must be in a great state of excitement with all your warlike preparations. I confess I should like to see the employment of larger force of Europeans in Afghanistan than the papers announce; and also a little more expedition used. The Shah is now very quiet at Tehran, but I cannot answer for the nature of his meditations. He is, (whatever else he may be) a man of great firmness of character, and does not seem at all abashed by the result of his expedition to Herat."

WITHDRAWAL OF THE RESIDENT FROM BUSHIRE.—Advices from Karak of the 7th instant, state the circumstances that led immediately to our Resident quitting Bushire. It would appear that certain supplies for the Admiral's ship were being embarked from the beach opposite the Residency, when an objection was made by some local authority and a list of the articles demanded; but upon the matter being represented to the Resident, the articles were passed without any list or further objection. The Governor had called upon the Admiral the same morning, and next day the latter returned his call. After the usual salaams the Admiral stated, that he had been much surprised to learn that his supplies had been stopped, and a list of them demanded the day before, contrary, as he understood, to former usage, and that in his position he could not allow such a matter to pass unexplained; whereupon the Governor replied, that it was usual to send a list, and that the Residency was not the proper place for boats either to land or embark, though all the English present knew that such had been invariably the practice. The Admiral then stated, that he had no wish to infringe any rules of the Port, nor at the same time to be treated differently from those who had been there before him, and as the practice could not be disputed, he gave the governor to understand, on leaving, that he would embark the following day from the Residency, and if any opposition was made, he had force sufficient for his protection, and that it would be at his, the Governor's, peril if mischief ensued. Accordingly next morning, the 25th, the boats of the Wellesley followed by those of the Clive and Elphinstone, pulled for the shore, and on Capt. Maitland nearing it in his jolly boat, a man presented his matchlock at him and called to him to keep off. The Admiral, who was standing near, turned away the muzzle of the piece, a scuffle ensued, and at length, after receiving a blow from a stick, the man dropped his piece. Meantime, however, the Wellesley's boats pushed forward to the Admiral's protection, his position being apparently one of danger, and the men were preparing to act on the offensive, when perceiving their intention, he called to them not to fire; but in their confusion, mistaking the order, a volley was fired, which killed one of the Bu hires and wounded another. No more shots were fired, but enough had been done to make it necessary to remove the Residency immediately, so all hands went to work, and with great exertions from Monday to Friday, the whole bag and baggage were at length embarked, no opposition being offered to their proceedings, although the people threw up some breastworks near the Flagstaff, and about 1000 men were got collected together in the town. The Elphinstone took up to Karak no less than 33 female children to its shore.

The Clive remains before Bushire, but nothing is said of any blockade or stoppage of the trade. The Wellesley's movements were uncertain; some said that she would remain at Bu-hire, others that she was gone over to the Arabian coast.

The following is from a letter from the Gulph dated the 14th ultimo:

Ali Pacha of Bagdad is at present at Mossoul, where great preparations are being made to join the troops that the grand Seigneur is assembling against Mohammed Ali; Kourschid Pacha has remained stationary for a long time, but having lately received a reinforcement of 2000 men, and the money that Selim Pacha brought him, he is gone at the head of 500 Cavalry against a Sheikh of the Aunesse tribe. Achmed Effendi, his Agent at Cowal, is busily occupied purchasing provisions there, and towards the end of the month it is announced, that the Army is to march against Bussorah. The news from Bushire present little of interest. A Persian General, Mahomed Hussein Khan, has been sent by the Prince of Shiraz to adjust the differences between the Resident and Mirza Asadowlah, Governor of the City. A conference took place on board the Admiral's ship, and the results, which are not known, have been referred to Shiraz and to Bombay. Bushire is in a state of great agitation; an attempt was made to assassinate the Armenian usually employed by the British shipping, afterwards about 500 persons waited upon the Cadi to ask his permission to pillage all the Armenians. These poor people when apprised of the dispute between England and Persia, hastened to implore the English protection. They said that they could not remain in Persia, because as Christians, they would be believed to be English: they asked that, in case of any difficulty or dispute, intimation might be given them so as they might fly from Persia in time. The Government of Bombay had left their case to the discretion of the Resident, who gave them neither protection nor advice. The Resident occupies himself with matters that more nearly concern the interests of himself and his family. When it is recollected what the Russians in these latter times, have done for the Christians of the East, and we see the conduct of the English at Bushire, one need no longer be astonished that the preference is given to the former.

Some letters have been interchanged with the chiefs of Bahrein, protection accorded to Sheikh Abdallah and a proposal made to occupy an Isle, but all as yet without consequence.

The Egyptian army is still at Lahra. All the tribes of the Arabs are represented as having laid aside their private feuds and entered into a general league to defend Bahrein against the Egyptians, and the signal of a movement of the latter at Bahrein will be a general rising and attack upon the Egyptian troops by every tribe.

Kourschid Pacha marched his troops, about 6,000 across from Medina to Katg, without any difficulty, and he has established a line of Posts to Medina, with which, a safe communication is now open, and where there now are 30,000 Egyptian troops. The country the troops passed, between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulph instead of a Desert, is represented, by a French Apothecary who had visited the Wellesley, as a finely cultivated country with no want of water.

Kourschid Pacha is much liked, and is stated to be most friendly disposed towards the English. Wherever he has gone he has made the Arabs his friends, and a more active, or better qualified Officer, Mahomed Ali could not have selected for this service. He offered to secure to Captain Edmonds a safe journey across to Medina if he would like to go.

The officers in the Egyptian Army make no secret of Mahomed Ali's great desire and ambition to annex to his dominions the Pashalic of Bussora and Bagdad. The Persians are thought to view the Egyptians as friends, and it was believed there that Russian counsels guided both at present.

The inhabitants of Ras El Kymah, and of the adjoining coast, have expressed their anxiety to be received under British protection. It is also said that the British authorities are about to remonstrate with the Egyptian Commanders, relative to their progress along the Western Shores of the Gulph.

BOMBAY COMPUTATION OF THE TON.

No 58 of 1839

To W. LIMOND, ESQUIRE,

Secretary Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta.

SIR,—As requested in your letter of the 18th instant, I have the pleasure to enclose a statement of the computation of the ton of various articles which are shipped from our port.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Yours most obedient Servant,

(Signed) JOHN E. BURNAN, Secretary.

Bombay Chamber of Commerce, May 1, 1839.

[illegible]

CAMERONIAN BAND THEATRE.

This "Theatre Royal," for it is conducted by "Her Majesty's servants" in the strictest sense, opened, we hope we may say for the season, on Tuesday evening, to an extremely full and fashionable audience. The performances were the melodrama of "The Warlock of the Glen," the domestic drama of "Maurice the Wood-cutter," and the laughable farce of "The Irish Tutor." It was not our good fortune to be present during the first piece, and this was owing to two circumstances, to which we beg to call the attention of the "Managing Committee." In the first place, half past seven is too early an hour for the curtain to be drawn up; eight o'clock would be more convenient for the public. In the second place, it would be very desirable that the Theatre should have some outward and visible sign of its locality. We, in common with several others, were poking about in the dark for some time, vainly seeking the hall of entrance, as there was not a single light to guide us. We have another preliminary observation to make. As the public, on mounting the stair case, pass the stage before entering the Theatre, the door, or doors, that open into the sanctum, should be kept closed or screened off, so as to prevent the uninitiated from becoming familiar with the mysteries of the green room. Fancy having our delicacy pre-shocked by seeing Adela, Countess of Glencairn, or Morria, or some other feminine creature, smoking a cheroot! The remainder of our say will be unqualified praise. In almost all amateur performances that we have ever had anything to do with, one of the most difficult accomplishments, has been perfectness in the various parts. Here all were perfect, and though on one occasion, in the Wood-cutter, there was, or appeared to be, a little hitch after a gentleman had been murdered in the forest, creating doubts whether it was not intended to leave him there, yet we are not sure, but that, after all, murdered gentlemen generally are, even less speedily attended to, Maurice, the Wood-cutter, was extremely well played by P. Glasgow. He lack'd neither energy nor feeling, and was deservedly much applauded. If he will be careful not to "o'erdo. Termination" and can rid himself of the bad habit of toning too much the last word of his sentences, he will be an excellent actor. We don't think we can give him higher praise than by saying, that if he negatived the game laws in a rural district in England, with half the earnestness he did the other night, he would assuredly tread some other boards under a Magistrate's certificate. Domini Sebastian, the village Schoolmaster, was, upon the whole, the best piece of acting in the Wood-cutter. T. McKechnie has the real comic stuff in his composition, and he proved himself "a fellow of infinite jest." His re-assuming the calling of his earlier life, and coming out before the Court-Martial as Counsel for Maurice, was capitally done, though we don't think the military cloak was a fitting attire. It was a fine opportunity for any one to judge of the effect of the new Bill, the Prisoner's Counsel Bill; and we are very strongly of opinion that if Mr. McKechnie were to make his appearance in the Supreme Court, it would cause some of our more legitimate actors to look about them. The performance of Maria deserves most favorable mention. D. Marrs—we could almost have fancied him Mademoiselle Marrs—acted with a most touching fidelity to nature, and looked as like a Wood-cutter's wife, as if he had really been "A guileless girl,

Woo'd to the music of the cooing dove
In pathless Woods."

There was but one thing wanting, that was a little more violet-powder on his chin. The lad, Anderson, who played Finty, has every requisite for a good actor, that a mere youth can exhibit, good figure, good face, good voice, and perfect self-possession. In the Irish Tutor, Paddy O'Rourke, was entrusted to W. Cousins, and he played the character well. His brigue was good, and all that he wants, is a little more knowledge of the by-play of the character. He might have introduced some Irish song, say the Groves of Blarney, while brushing his pupil's coat. It is an approved custom which Power never omits.

There were several songs between the pieces. A Scotch one, in character, by (we believe) J. Young, was encored. We have no doubt the wauls were good, that at any rate they were pure Scotch, is more than probable, as to us they were thoroughly unintelligible. The humorous acting of the singer proved, that they were nuts to him, and the applause negatived them being "caviare to the general."

We hope that similar performances will be frequent at this Theatre. We have a double interest in them now, that our better half is buried, and which, like a great many other better halves, that are gone, is better spoken of than she was treated. We said, in commencing these remarks, that the performances commenced too soon; in concluding them we say, that they were protracted too late. Two pieces would, we think, be sufficient. It was past twelve o'clock before the curtain fell. But for the late hour we should have noticed these performances yesterday.—Hulk. June 6.

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.

MAY 31, 1839.

About 150 gentlemen assembled on the above occasion. The Rev. Mr. Boaz, who occupied the chair, opened the proceedings, by stating that this meeting had been called in order to afford to the Members generally an opportunity of obtaining such information from the Committee as they wished, and to obviate the necessity of resorting for explanation on such points to the newspapers, through which channel that object could not be properly accomplished. The present meeting was an ordinary monthly meeting of the society similar to those of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, which was considered the best means of doing away with every erroneous impression regarding the proceedings of the Committee. The Secretaries, he said, were ready to answer any question concerning the acts of the Committee which might be put to them. He then read a statement of the funds of the Institution, by which it appeared that the receipts had been as follows:—

Subscriptions from 393 Members,....	1,966	0	0
Donations,.....	5,386	0	0

Total	7,352	0	0
--------------	-------	---	---

The expences had amounted to,.....	314	12	11
------------------------------------	-----	----	----

And there was now a balance at the Union Bank to the credit of the Society of,	7,037	3	1
--	-------	---	---

The Chairman then stated that lectures which, although highly amusing, edifying and calculated to make the institution popular, were not the only object in view. The great end of the Society's labors was to train up young men to the pursuit of useful occupations and to make them valuable members of society. This it has not been in the power of the committee yet to put in operation, owing principally to the want of proper accommodations. Four sub-committees have been appointed; a committee of papers to look after the records of the institution, to put in books, instruments, apparatus, &c.; a committee of finance to conduct with economy the pecuniary concerns of the institution, a committee of lectures to arrange with those gentlemen who were so kind as to offer their services in this department, about the getting up of the lectures, &c., and a building committee to procure suitable accommodations for the Society's operations. The last of these objects had occupied the greatest share of the committee's attention. They had looked out for any piece of ground belonging to the Government, with the view that if one could be found in an eligible locality, they might obtain permission to erect a building thereon for the Society, but none was found. Two other houses had offered themselves to rent, one of them was the old Masonic Hall on the Dharmatollah road, for which 6000 rupees had been asked; but it might be obtained for less. But then the fitting up of the house, the purchase of instruments and apparatus, &c. would require nearly all the balance now at the disposal of the Society; a distinct fund, therefore, appeared to be required for a suitable building. There were now about 400 members, who, with their friends and families might amount to 5 or 600. To accommodate these, and for the other operations of the Society, a suitable building, with ground, might cost 10,000. If each of the 400 subscribers obtained a donation of 25 rupees only, the required amount would be realized, but as all could not pay even this sum conveniently, it would be better to leave it optional with every one, to contribute what he liked towards this object. He would therefore suggest the propriety of raising a distinct fund for the building, which the sooner it was done the better, considering the Society now paid 40 rupees a night for the accommodation afforded in the Town Hall. Mr. Boaz concluded by inviting suggestions and reiterating the readiness of the committee to afford every information.

The Rev. Mr. Atkins, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, moved that a distinct fund be raised for the erection of a suitable building.

Upon this question a very angry discussion took place in which Mr. Roger Dias, the Revd. Mr. Morton, the Revd. Mr. Atkins and some others took part. Several amendments were proposed, and a good deal said on each of them, and on various matters quite irrelevant to the motion before the meeting, and calculated to produce discord: all which we suppress, though we have notes of nearly the whole, because we are persuaded that no useful purpose will be answered by their publication.

The business of the evening concluded by adjourning the discussion on the question of raising a new fund for a building to another evening which is to be advertised. —Hark, June, 3.

MR MIDDLETON'S SECOND LECTURE ON ASTRONOMY, 10TH JUNE, 1839.

After a brief introduction, the lecturer stated, that the figure and motions of the earth would form subject of his present discourse, which he had selected, in consequence of the great interest it possessed, as being the globe we inhabit and the point from which we must start on our voyage of Astronomical discoveries. He then entered on a consideration of the state in which the mind must be to profit by the demonstrations on which the science of Astronomy was based. It must be free from the bias of preconceived notions open to conviction. In point of fact it must listen to arguments with patience, and examine the doctrines proposed critically, but not captiously. He then entered upon the history of the science, and having dilated on the erroneous notions which had existed in former times regarding the figure of the earth, he traced the first discovery of its roundness to the Egyptians, who had found it out by observing the Eclipse of the Moon. This doctrine was then introduced into Greece, and much improved upon by Pythagoras, who taught the roundness of the Earth, and that the Sun was the centre of the planetary system. The terrestrial Globe and the Moon were then shown to us, and we were informed, that the former was the figure of the earth and the latter an attempted representation of the planetary system. The lecturer then acquainted us with the peculiarities of the different planets and of the Earth. The erroneous system of Ptolemy, which made the Earth the centre of the universe, next came under consideration, and was explained at some length, with the aid of the auxiliary sphere. This erroneous system was generally held to be the correct one for about fifteen hundred years, at the termination of each, the Pythagorean system was revived by Copernicus who, after a study of some twenty years was enabled to publish his new system. This eminent Philosopher was followed by Galileo of Florence, but their doctrines met violent opposition from the prejudices of the people who, adverting to the command of Joshua in the Old Testament, for the sun to stand still, argued that it was the sun and the other heavenly bodies that went round the earth, East to West, instead of the Earth turning on its axis from west to east.

After this, we were entertained by a theological scene, in which the Pope of Rome, with the Inquisition at his heels, enacted a principal character in the persecution of Galileo. We had a confession of faith, made by this Astronomer before his father confessor, read for our information in the science of Astronomy, and our edification in that of Theology. This part of the science called forth several hears from various sides, at which the lecturer returned from Theological digressions to the consideration of the earthly object on which we had come to be informed.

The lecturer then entered upon the subject he had proposed at the commencement, viz. the figure of the earth; but he was again driven off from this point, by a centrifugal force to the consideration of the doctrine of inertia, explained at length in his former lecture, and after a continuation of arguments, informed us, that this Globe, no more than the other planets, requires any pedestal for its support. The proofs of the rotundity of the earth, were then entered into at great length; but as they must be familiar to every school-boy, we omit to mention them. He also met the objections, which he said some had taken against the roundness of the earth from the inequalities of its surface. The axis, the pole, the polar star, &c., &c. were each fully explained, and the oblate spheroidal form of the earth demonstrated by the experiment made on the axis of the meridian at different latitudes, as also by the changes in the vibrations of the pendulum. The annual revolution of our globe next came under observation, and was explained by diagrams drawn on a board and by the Orery. The doctrine of the antipodes, or what may be termed the philosophy of Zenith and Nadir, or up and down, on which the whole fabric of the Newtonian philosophy rests, was cursorily alluded to at the close of the lecture, and two little figures (of wax we believe) being stuck up on each side of a globe, were left to explain, as well as they could, the doctrine most difficult of comprehension to the unphilosophical mind.—Hurk. June 12.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

A special Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was convened yesterday, (Tuesday, June 4,) to reconsider the propriety of forwarding to the Board of Customs, the following letter expressive of its unwillingness to offer, as it has been regulated by the Board, any remarks on the proposed abolition of the drawback system.—

W. R. YOUNG, Esq., Secretary,

Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, Fort William.

SIR,—I had the honor to receive your communication of the 4th instant, furnishing an Extract from a letter from Government, relating to the proposed abolition of the drawback system now under consideration; and intimating that the Board are ready to "receive any remarks which the Chamber may desire to make on the subject."

I am instructed to inform you, that, at a general meeting of the Chamber, convened for the purpose of discussing this important question, it was resolved that, as so great a difference of opinion prevails among its members on the contemplated measure, the Chamber do abstain from offering an opinion thereon; and that it be left to the merchant separately, according to their different views, to make their own representations to Government on the question submitted.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedt. servt. vant,

(Signed) W. LINDSAY, Secy

Bengal Chamber of Commerce, May 27, 1839.

At a former meeting it had been deemed inexpedient for the Chamber collectively to offer any opinion on the subject, as it was one on which it was much divided. They therefore thought it better that each, individually, should have an opportunity of laying before the Government any suggestions they might have to make with respect to the proposed measure.

The letter had been drawn up in accordance with a resolution of the last general meeting, but it subsequently appearing that a number of the members who had not attended that meeting, were desirous of expressing their opinions on the subject, the letter had been recalled to await the decision of a special meeting.

The meeting yesterday was most numerously attended, R. H. Cockerell, Esq., in the Chair.

The Chairman opened the proceedings by reading the minutes of the last meeting, with the letter to Government, which had then been determined upon, and a letter from several members, in accordance with which the present meeting had been called.

The following resolution was then proposed by Mr. Fergusson and seconded by Mr. Deare.

Moved by Mr. Fergusson, seconded by Mr. Deare.

That the Chamber views with satisfaction any proposal to reduce the burdens on the trade of the port, and therefore approves of the abandonment of the one eighth of the duty hitherto reserved on re-export.

That if it be desirable to confine this to goods which may have been bonded, or which may have been shipped without being removed from the Custom House, within the three months at present allowed for payment of duty, the Chamber desires, that it be left optional with Importers to land their goods and thus lose the privilege of free Export or to pay the duty and receive it only on re-export, because it will be more advantageous to many parties to adopt the latter course, even with the forfeit of one eighth of the duty, and loss of interest than to be compelled to use the Bonded Warehouses.

A lively discussion then took place, as to whether the proposed measure of Government was to be considered as a boon to the mercantile interest, or as a precaution. Any arrangement for the protection of the Revenue. In opposition to the latter view of the case it was asserted, that under the present system the only possibility of fraud, was between the Custom House and the ship and that the contemplated alteration would not lessen risk in that quarter.

Several members disapproved of the withdrawal of the letter to Government which had been voted by the former meeting, and requested to be informed by what authority it had been withheld.

The Chairman again explained the reasons which had led to the measure, and read the requisition which had been received from some of the members on the subject.

Mr. Cullen then moved as an amendment on Mr. Fergusson's motion.

That the proceedings of the last General Meeting of the Chamber on the Drawback question, be confirmed by this meeting and that the letter to Government connected therewith, and dated the 27th ultimo, be immediately sent into the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium.

Another amendment was then proposed by Mr. Kettlewell, to the effect:—

That a letter (the draft of which he read) disapproving of the abolition of the drawback on re-export; and recommending the continuance of the double system of Bonding and Drawback, be adopted by the Chamber and forwarded to the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium.

According to form this last amendment was first put to the meeting when it was negatived by a small majority.

Mr. Cullen's amendment was then put and the meeting divided upon it, when there appeared for the amendment 30, against it 29.

The original letter to Government was therefore adopted and forwarded to the Board of Customs.—Hurk. June 5.

UNION BANK.

A Special Meeting of the Proprietors of the Union Bank, was held yesterday, (June 5, 1839) for the purpose of adoption, or otherwise disposing of, the alterations in the Bank Deed, as provisionally approved at the General Meeting of the 4th ultimo, and for considering the propriety of increasing their capital to one crore of rupees.

On the motion of T. Dickens, Esq., William Young, Esq., was called to the Chair.

The following resolution was then proposed by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by Dwarkanuth Tagore, Esq., and carried unanimously.

1.—That the new Bank Deed, as provisionally approved at the Special General Meeting held on the 4th May last, be, and the same is, hereby finally adopted.

The second resolution was moved by Wm. Bruce, Esq., seconded by Mr. T. H. Gardiner, and also carried unanimously—

2.—That in pursuance of the resolution just carried, the Directors be instructed to take immediate measures to have the new deed engrossed, and signed by the proprietors, and that they do also cause a sufficient number of copies to be printed.

Mr. Dickens then, after a few words on the generally admitted expediency of the projected increase of capital, proceeded to read to the Meeting a series of resolutions, in which was embodied the plan by which he proposed that the additional fund should be raised. He mentioned an alteration which he had been induced to make in one of these resolutions, as originally drawn up, and which provided for the payment of the additional shares intended to be raised, proposing that the proprietors of the new shares should have the option of paying the price in two instalments, at intervals of six months, or at once and immediately, in which latter case they were to receive dividends from the date of payment. On this point it was suggested by several proprietors, that the purchases of the new shares, who might adopt the first mode of payment, should be allowed interest on their first instalment. Some conversation took place on this subject, Mr. Dickens observing, that he intended his proposed arrangement to act as a bonus on prompt payment.

Mr. Dickens then proceeded to put his resolutions separately, and proposed—3d.—That it is expedient to increase the capital of the Union Bank to one crore of rupees.

Seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., and carried unanimously.

4th.—That the additional Capital be raised by the creation of 2,000 new shares of 1,000 each.

Seconded by Baboo Dwarkanuth Tagore, and carried unanimously.

5th.—That such new shares be disposed of as follows: viz., each holder of four shares on the day of the next Half Yearly Meeting in July 1839, to be entitled to one new share at par.

Seconded by Wm. Bruce, Esq., and carried unanimously.

Mr. Cragg suggested, that a surplus fund should be created for the purpose of rendering the dividends as nearly as possible equal at all times, an arrangement which was of very great importance to many whose chief dependence might be upon the shares they possessed in the Bank. He, therefore, proposed the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Turner, and, after some discussion, carried by a considerable majority.

6th.—That it is expedient to create a reserved fund to meet casual losses, instead of trenching upon the dividends.

Mr. Cragg then proposed, that this reserve fund should be raised by placing a premium of 50 rupees on each of the new shares. On this proposition one or two amendments were suggested, and an animated discussion ensued, which was cut short by Capt. F. J. Taylor, who expressed his opinion, that the question of raising the surplus fund at all not being mentioned in the advertisement, by which the meeting was called, was altogether informal. He therefore proposed the following, which was seconded by Mr. Kemiry, and carried.—

7th.—That resolution No. 6, be rescinded, and that the subject be reserved for consideration at the next Half Yearly Meeting.

It was then proposed by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., and carried by a large majority.—

8th.—That such shares as cannot be taken off in the manner provided for by the next foregoing and 10th following resolutions, because many shareholders hold numbers of shares not divisible by four, be put up at par and sold by Auction and the profits of premium, applied for the exclusive benefit of those proprietors not enabled for the cause above mentioned to obtain new shares at par.

Proposed by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by Wm. Bruce, Esq., and carried—9th.—That the shares be paid for as follows; viz., one half for each share in each six months from the next Half Yearly Meeting in July 1839, and the remaining half in six months from the 1st January 1840.

Proprietors who prefer it may pay up in cash in full at once and previous to January 1840, and thereupon they shall be entitled to receive dividends from date of payment. Those who pay up one half shall receive interest at the rate of 4 per cent., or whatever may be the rate of interest given on fixed deposits.

Proposed by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., and carried unanimously.—

10th.—That the period within which absentee proprietors, meaning thereby those out of India, must pay up for their additional stock, be six months in addition to that allowed to residents in India and for those in India above 15 days' date from Calcutta, a reasonable period, to be fixed by the Directors, in addition to that allowed to residents of Calcutta.

Proposed by T. Dickens, Esq., seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., and carried unanimously.

11th.—That all shares not taken up and paid for pursuant to the foregoing resolutions, by wilful neglect of the Proprietors, be sold for the benefit of the Proprietors at large.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman, and the meeting dispersed.—Hurk, June 6.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Committee held at the Society's office, on Monday the 17th instant.

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were unanimously elected.

The following gentleman was proposed a member of the Society :—

Proposed by G. Vint, Esq., and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.—John Calder, Esq., of Calcutta.

Read a letter from John Crawford, Esq., Society's Agent in London.

Read a letter from Baboo Tarucknauth Sein, offering himself to undertake the translation of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut's circulars, which he thinks will be most convenient for the use of the native judges and Amildars of the Dewanny Courts, and requesting the Society to submit his application to Government for the purpose of procuring its permission.

Resolved. That an answer be written to Baboo Tarucknauth Sein, explaining to him that the objects of the Society are not such as can properly permit their interference in the matter.

Chunder Mitter, a Member of the Society, on the subject of an Oordoo translation of the papers of the Society from the English and Bengally languages.

Read some propositions from certain zemindars of, Hooghly, connected with policearrangements.

Resolved, that the Society will take the above into consideration at the next meeting of the committee—

WM. COBB HENRY,

P. TAGORE,

[Hurk. June 21.

Honorary Secretaries.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

LUCKNOW PROCEEDINGS.

In consequence of an intimation that a meeting would take place on the 17th instant, at Dr. Stevenson's house, at 10 o'clock A. M., to take into consideration the proposed Steam Communication between England and Calcutta via Suez, a number of gentlemen, Native as well as European, met, and, after conversing at some length on the subject, the following gentlemen were proposed and elected as office bearers, viz. Major Wilcox, Chairman, and Dr. Stevenson, as Secretary and Treasurer.

The Chair having been taken, Lieut. Colonel Caulfield proposed the following Resolution, which was seconded by Dr. Stevenson, and unanimously agreed to—

That this meeting convey to the Committee of the Bengal New Steam Fund, the satisfaction it derives from contemplating the exertions making for the completion of such arrangements as are calculated to forward the best interests of our country, and develop the extensive resources of British India, in conjunction with those of Central Asia. That this meeting takes a deep interest in the success of such measures as are calculated to promote the prosperity of such parts of Europe and Asia, as lie within the influence of Commercial enterprise, the acknowledged harbinger of civilization.

Proposed by Dr. Stevenson, seconded by Colonel Caulfield, and unanimously agreed to—

That as communication by Steam is eminently calculated to reduce the difficulties, delays, and dangers which distance naturally interposes between individuals and nations, and must tend to promote community of interests and secure the benefits which necessarily flow from amicable communication, it is proposed to open a subscription for shares in the capital, which the Company now under organization in Calcutta have proposed to raise; that intimation be given to the Secretary of the Calcutta Committee of the number of shares required, and that the funds subscribed be forthwith remitted.

Proposed by Major Wilcox, and seconded by Mr. Wilkie, and unanimously agreed to by the meeting—

That this meeting request the Calcutta Committee, to take such measures as will secure a frequent communication of the proceedings of the Company in England, with the view of keeping alive and increasing the interest now so universally felt in the question.

Proposed by Dr. Stevenson and seconded by A. De Casonova, Esq., and unanimously agreed by the meeting—

That, as many native gentlemen have attended the meeting and taken an interest in its proceedings, the same shall be translated into Hindoostanee and circulated for their perusal.

Proposed by Lieut. Wilkie and seconded by Capt. Sinclair, and unanimously agreed to by the meeting—

That the proceedings at this meeting be communicated to the Secretary of the Bengal Steam Committee, with a request that they be published for general information in the principal newspapers.

(Signed) R. WILCOX, Chairman.

Lucknow, May 17, 1839.

List of Subscribers.	No. of Shares.	Amount of Shares.	Amount of 1st Instalment at 10 per cent.
		Rs.	Rs.
Nabob Munneerondowla, Minister to the King of Oude	5	2500	250
J. M. Sinclair, Esq.,	2	1000	100
D. Wilkie, Esq.,	1	500	50
Col. Caulfield, C. B.,	5	2500	250
Dr. W. Stevenson,	2	1000	100
Major R. Wilcox,	2	1000	100
Captain J. Paton,	1	500	50
Badoo Dhyrhub Chunder,	1	500	50
Sba Raghburdial and Mackun Loll,	4	2000	200
Gungaram Juggernaut,	3	1500	150
Prang Dosa Sheo Goolam, ...	1	500	50
Chundun Loll & Chootah Loll, ..	1	500	50
Manuck Chund,	1	500	50
Total, ..	29	14500	1450

W. STEVENSON.

Hurk. June 15.]

Secy, and Treasurer.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, the 1st June, 1839.

Drs. Hermont and Fairbridge, proposed at the last meeting, were duly elected,

The following gentlemen were proposed as Members.

K. W. Kirk, Esq., M. D., by Dr. Martin, seconded by Dr. Colvin.

—Eddin, Esq., M. D., by Dr. Brassey seconded by Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy.

A paper upon Tic Doloroux, by Mr. G. Dundas Michel, of Calcutta, was presented through Dr. Goodeve.

This paper was read and discussed.

Some discussion subsequently ensued, upon the propriety of Medical men sanctioning the use of Morriison's Pills for their patients. It was contended that being unacquainted with their ingredients, no one could safely recommend his patients to take them; and many instances were related of the dangerous consequence of taking them in large doses. It was shewn that individuals sometimes take as many as hundred per diem, and that the uncertain and irregular manner in which these pills are made, often causes the more powerful ingredients to be all collected in one box and the milder articles in another, so that people taking these enormous doses with comparative safety from one parcel, might be destroyed by the violence of a similar quantity taken from the next parcel they purchased. Instances of this kind were related. It was also shewn by many of the members present, that the continued use of such powerful purgatives, tended at length to produce great irritability, and finally, inflammation of the intestinal canal and often established inveterate and fatal bowel complaints of various kinds.

Dr. Goodeve called the attention of the society to a native managogue of great power, which had lately been brought to his notice.—Hurkaru, June 12.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 12th June, 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

(TWENTY-FIVE MEMBERS PRESENT.)

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were first read and confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.*

The gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members; viz.

Messrs. Chan, Fraser, Geo. Remfry, J. H. Ferguson, H. G. French, Owen Potter and Major Halliide.

FOR ELECTION.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election at the next Meeting.

W. F. Stewart, Esq., of Mirzapore—proposed by Mr. W. Storm, seconded by Mr. D. W. H. Speed.

J. W. Laidlay, Esq.,—proposed by Mr. Robt. Watson, seconded by Dr. Spry.

A. K. Lindesay, Esq., (Civil Surgeon, Benares,)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

H. Falconer, Esq., M. D., (Supt. of the H. C. Botanical Garden at Saharunpore,)—proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Lieut.-Colonel D. Pregrave, proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. W. Storm.

Archd. Sconce, Esq., (Collector at Chittagong,)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. Jas. Colquhoun.

L. J. H. Grey, Esq., C. S., (Berhampore,)—proposed by Mr. W. G. Rose, seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

R. C. Halkett, Esq., (Magistrate and Collector of Dinagpore,)—proposed by Mr. Jas. Grant, seconded by Dr. Spry.

GRANT OF FIVE HUNDRED RUPEES FOR THE PROMOTION OF THE USE OF ERI SILK IN THE ARTS.

The Society first entered into the consideration of the motion made at the last Meeting by Mr. Watson relative to the propriety of adding the sum of 500 rupees, to the contribution of a similar sum by Captain Jenkins, for the purpose of encouraging, by money prizes, the best means of promoting the use of the Eri Silk in the Arts.

Mr. Robison and Dr. Spry severally addressed the Meeting, and the motion was carried unanimously.

VOTE OF A GOLD MEDAL TO HIS EXCELLENCY M. BÉDIER,

The proposition made by the President at the last Meeting, to mark the sense which the Society entertains for the valuable services of M. Bédier in assisting the efforts of the Society to introduce the Cochineal insects into Bengal that the Society's Gold Medal be awarded, was carried unanimously.

LIBRARY.

1. A History of English Gardening, Chronological, Biographical, Literary and Critical, tracing the progress of the Art in this country from the invasion of the Romans to the present time. By George W. Johnson, 1 vol. 8vo. Presented by the Author.

2. A Pamphlet on the use of crushed Bones as a Manure. By Cuthbert William Johnson, Barrister at Law, Corr. Member of Maryland Hort. Society.

3. A Pamphlet containing Observations on the Employment of Salt in Agriculture, with directions for its application, founded on practice, By Cuthbert William Johnson.

4. A Pamphlet on Liquid Manures. By Cuthbert W. Johnson, Esq.

The three foregoing brochures were presented by George W. Johnson, Esq.

5. Proceedings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras. By the Society.

